The Social Realm.

When Freedom, from her mountain height,
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there!
She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
And milky baldric of the skies,
And striped its pure, celestial white
With streakings of the morning light,
Then, from his mansion in the sun,
She called her eagle-bearer down,
And give into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chozen land!

VERY INFORMAL.

Reception to Lieut. Gov. Guild and Wife.

Historic Points Were Visited.

Delighted with Birthplaces of the Presidents.

Quincy was honored yesterday by a visit from Lieut. Gov. and Mrs. Curtis Guild. To the guests it was a day of rare enjoyment. Freed from official duties, and no address to keep in mind and deliver he gave himself up to the full enjoyment of the occasion.

Although having been in Quincy many times, he had never visited its spots that have been the scenes of history making, and he expressed himself to the newspaper men, with whom he chatted socially, as being glad of this opportunity as well as to be free for the time being from political cares.

The distinguished visitors came as guests of Mrs. N. V. Titus, regent of Adams chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. They arrived on the 1.23 train from Boston and were met by Mrs. Titus, who took them for a short drive about the city. The old Dorothy Q house on Butler road was first visited. From there a call was made at the First church, where the Adams shrine beneath the stone steps was visited. Next came the cairn on Penns hill, which marks the spot from which Abigail Adams watched the smoke from the battle of Bunker Hill.

Then came the houses in which two Presidents of these United States were born. The John Quincy Adams birthplace was first visited and then the birthplace of John Adams. At the latter house Gov. and Mrs. Guild received informally.

A large number of invitations to this reception had been isued by Mrs. Titus and they were generally accepted.

In the receiving party were Lieut. Gov. and Mrs. Guild, Miss Abigail Adams and Mrs. N. V. Titus.

The reception was at first held in the parlor, but as the day was warm, an adjournment was made to the lawn, beneath the shade of a tree, where the air was much cooler.

The ushers were Mrs. Eugene Dyer, Mrs. Charles Wilson, Mrs. Frank Brewer, Mrs. F. G. Mayo, Mrs. Charles Belcher, Mrs. Frank F. Prescott and Mrs. Susan Wilde.

Punch was served by Miss Hattie B. Pierce and Miss Annie L. Prescott, who were assisted by members of Adams Chapter.

While the larger part of these present were ladies, there were quite a few gentlemen present, most of whom had a personal acquaintance with the Lieut. Governor.

These included Mayor James Thompson, President Walter F. Nichols of the City Council, ex-Mayor John O. Hall, Lieut.-Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Gov. Douglas' staff, Henry H. Faxon, Esq., Frank F. Crane, Frank F. Prescott and Postmaster Hammond.

Shortly before 5 o'clock the carriage was taken and the guests driven to Mt. Wollaston. Later the train was taken at Wollaston for Boston.

It was a delightful informal gathering, and was equally as pleasant to the guests as to those who had the privilege of meeting one who will probably be the next Governor and his charming wife.

Personal.

The Fayetteville Daily, of Fayetteville, Arkansas, has this reference to a son of Mrs. E. F. Carr, of this city, who recently went west:

Mr. Wallace B. Carr, who graduated this year at the University left Wednesday June 28, for Dallas, Texas, where he will spend the summer. Mr. Carr is a relative of Dr. J. W. Carr, and is perhaps the youngest graduate who has ever completed the course in the University. He is a bright and vigorous young man and is sure to make a success of whatever he undertakes. He holds a B. S. degree. Mr. Carr will be in the employ of the Dallas Telephone Co. He expects to return to the University next fall as a senior in the electrical engineering course.

Five shots fired in quick succession were heard about 2 o'clock this morning in the vicinity of South street. It was probably some one celebrating the wedding of John Hynes which took place earlier in the evening.

HABEAS CORPUS.

Effort to Get A. A. Linscott Out of Jail.

An unusual legal case came before the district court this morning, when Lawyer Cassidy applied for a writ of habeas corpus to get A. A. Linscott out of Dedham jail.

Linscott was arrested yesterday by Constable George W. Taylor for not paying his personal tax of 1904, amounting to something over $60 and taken to Dedham jail.

This morning Lawyer Cassidy applied for a habeas corpus, and notice was served on Constable Taylor, requiring him to bring Linscott before the court this afternoon, at which time Judge Avery will give a hearing on the matter.

If the habeas corpus is granted, Linscott will be released, and must take the poor debtor's oath.

In order to take this oath twenty-four hours' notice is required. The government may, however, waive this notice, in which case the oath will be administered.

On the other hand, should the government stand for its rights, Linscott must go back to jail until Monday morning.

The case is an interesting one, for it shows what may happen to any one who does not pay his personal tax.

New City Hall Rule.

A new rule goes into effect at City Hall today, and it is a good one. It is, that hereafter all doors are locked after office hours, and unless one is possessed of a key entrance cannot be obtained. Ever since the remodelled hall has been occupied it has practically been open. After the offices were closed it was only necessary to slide the main front door back to gain admittance, or to go to the rear door which is always unlocked.

From now on, however, both of these doors will be locked, and entrance after hours can only be had by the rear door, and not then unless possessed of a key.

Commissioner Burke has had keys made for this door, and this morning they were given to the different officials who have occasion to visit the hall after hours.

Against the Merger.

Dr. William Everett is on record relative to the proposed Harvard-Technology merger. In a letter on Friday to the Boston Advertiser, he said:

"In the very first article in The Advertiser today, it is stated that William Everett was defeated for election to the Board of Overseers of Harvard college. I was not a candidate, having declined to allow my name to go on the list for reelection. Being entirely opposed to the merger, I must object to my name being grouped with those of Mr. Wigglesworth and Mr. Fish. May I ask you to make this correction?"

Teachers Salaries.

Teachers salaries in Quincy do not compare very favorably with those of Malden. Under a recent order of the Malden city government, salaries of school teachers are increased as follows: Ninth grade, from $650 to $700; eighth grade, from $625 to $675; lower grades, from $600 to $650. The primary principals are raised to $750, an increase of $50. Supt. Hervey gets an increase from $2600 to $2700, and another $100 for secretary of the school committee. Several of the teachers in the high school also receive an increase.

Hynes—Sherriff.

There was a grand wedding at Doble's hall last evening. The groom was John Hynes, son of Councilman Hynes, and the bride, Miss Annie E. Sherriff. The ceremony which was performed by Rev. N. J. Sproul, was followed by a reception that lasted until midnight. There was a wedding supper, dancing and a general good time. Mr. and Mrs. Hynes were showered with congratulations and received many handsome and valuable gifts.

—There is much concern in orthodox circles in Germany over the decreasing numbers of divinity students. There has been such a marked falling off in the last few years that it is feared there will not be ministers enough to go round before long. The trouble is ascribed to the growth of liberal ideas and the poor financial returns offered by the ministry.

Henry L. Kincaide & Co. have the largest and best assortment of fireworks in Quincy, at their 5 and 10 cent store.

COURAGE FAILED

Unconditional Surrender of the Kniaz Potemkine's Crew

NOT A SHOT WAS FIRED

Citizens of Odessa Expected to See Great Naval Battle--The Nearest Approach to a Fight Was Clearing Decks For Action

Odessa, July 1.—Without firing a gun the mutineers on the Kniaz Potemkine hauled down the red flag and surrendered the battleship to Vice Admiral Kruger's squadron, which arrived here at noon yesterday.

It was an anxious moment for Odessa as the squadron of five battleships and seven torpedo boats, with their crews at quarters and their decks cleared for action, steamed within range of the Kniaz Potemkine, the flagship flying signals which read "Yield or be sunk."

The display of force was too overwhelming for the mutineers and all thought of resistance was abandoned. Admiral Kruger ordered the Ekaterina II to place a crew on board the Kniaz Potemkine, and the other vessels of the squadron immediately sailed away.

The mutineers will be transferred to the Ekaterina II, which is now lying alongside the Kniaz Potemkine, and will be taken to Sebastopol.

Exactly what happened during a day of dramatic surprises is to a great extent a matter of conjecture, aided by binoculars. After the shots the Kniaz Potemkine fired before midnight Thursday, nothing further happened. Anxious Odessa awoke early to find the Black sea squadron lying off Langeron point and everyone was expecting a naval fight. The city was like an armed camp. Troops barred all the approaches to the harbor and were bivouacking in tents in Cathedral square, and four batteries of artillery were supplied with ammunition and placed in the park and at Langeron.

The populace, astir at dawn, rapidly availed itself of every house top or eminence commanding a view of the harbor. The Kniaz Potemkine was soon seen steaming to meet the squadron, exchanging signals as she steamed ahead.

Then, to the astonishment of all, Admiral Kruger's five battleships steamed away out of sight and the excitement of the town grew more intense. At noon the squadron returned in line abreast and was now accompanied by several torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers.

Again the Kniaz Potemkine started to meet the vessels and another rapid exchange of signals took place. The Kniaz Potemkine was seen to be clearing for action and the squadron to be maneuvering in battle array, continually signalling until the rebel battleship lay midway between the shore and the squadron, with her broadsides pointed respectively toward the town and the squadron, as if threatening to shell Odessa should she be attacked by Krüger's ships.

In addition to his seeming reluctance to destroy so fine a battleship, Admiral Kruger was apparently animated by a desire in case he should be compelled to open fire to fight further seaward. Later the squadron was observed to send 10 boatloads of marines towards the Kniaz Potemkine, apparently to take possession of the mutinous ship, for it soon became known that she had surrendered unconditionally after, it is said, vainly demanding amnesty.

All the hotels are guarded by troops and further reinforcements have arrived. All reservations on outgoing trains have been taken four days ahead.

During a demonstration after the funeral of the sailor Omiltchuk four persons were killed and several wounded. Many arrests have been made.

With the surrender of the Kniaz Potemkine the immediate danger of the situation seemed to collapse, the 5000 bluejackets at Libau who followed the example of their comrades on the rebel battleships having earlier in the day yielded to the military, by whom they were surrounded in a wood near the port, after a promise that better food would be given them.

What seemed like an extension of the mutiny to the sailors at Cronstadt also proved to be short-lived, although all the regular workmen in the port are still on strike and reports of coming trouble both there and at St. Petersburg are rife.

Martial Law Proclaimed

St. Petersburg, July 1.—Martial law has been proclaimed in the governments of Sebastopol, Nicholaieff and Erivan.

An imperial decree confers on the viceroy of the Caucasus the rights of a military commander with special powers. The same powers are bestowed on the commander of the Black Sea fleet so far as the districts of Sebastopol and Nicholaieff are concerned.

The governments of Sebastopol and Nicholaieff adjoin the government of Kherson, in which Odessa is situated and where martial law has already been declared.

Erivan is a government of Trans-Caucasia, where most serious disturbances have occurred.

Terek Out of Commission

Amsterdam, July 1.—A dispatch from Batavia says that the Russian cruiser Terek has been disarmed and interned because of her inability to take on sufficient coal within the prescribed time.

The Terek is the vessel which sank the British India Steam Navigation company's steamer Ikhona on June 5.

Nothing Known About Armistice

Washington, July 1.—Members of the diplomatic corps are for the most part uninformed regarding the negotiations for an armistice and inquiry at the Russian embassy and the Japanese legation brought the reply that there was nothing to be said on this subject for the present.

Disturbance at Cronstadt

Cronstadt, July 1.—Hundreds of workmen paraded here and roughly handled several police officers and a naval officer. The workmen were finally dispersed by troops, who arrested 35.

Shields, Eng., July 1.—During a fog the British steamer Kildona was in collision at the entrance to the harbor with the British steamer Petroleum. Both steamers were extensively damaged.

STRICT CENSORSHIP

Russian Public In Ignorance of Actual Occurrences

St. Petersburg, July 1.—The first news from Odessa of the surrender of the Kniaz Potemkine to Vice Admiral Kruger's squadron reached here through the press dispatch from Washington, conveying the text of a cablegram sent by the American consul at Odessa, Mr. Heenan, as with the declaration of the martial law. General Kabanoff had shut down on all dispatches. Even the foreign embassies here were without advices during the day. The press dispatch announcing the surrender of the battleship was held up until 2 o'clock this morning.

At the ministry of the interior the press had been informed yesterday afternoon that the Kniaz Potemkine, with a mutinous crew, probably drunk, and without a man on board capable of navigating the ship, had weighed anchor and started seaward. The presumption is that the battleship met the squadron before the latter reached the offing and, under the frowning guns of Kruger's warships, concluded that it was better to surrender than to fight.

Reports received by the ministry of the interior give an entirely different version of the origin of the mutiny, which is attributed to a deliberate plot organized by 20 sailors belonging to the revolutionary organization. These reports placed the number of killed during the rioting on shore at 300 and the wounded at twice that number.

ANOTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE.

Biology has Proved that Dandruff is Caused by a Germ.

Science is donig wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since Adam lived, the human race has been troubled with dandruff, for which no hair preparation has heretofore proved a successful cure until Newbro's Herpicide was put on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp to get at the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality; causing itching scalp, falling hair, and finally baldness. Without dandruff hair must grow luxuriantly. It is the only destroyer of dandruff. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

M'Graw And His Troubles

Manager of New York Nationals Finds Life Is Not One Long Sweet Dream --- Unusual Phases of His Complications.

John ("Mugsy") McGraw is having his share of troubles these days. The job of managing the New York National league champions is supposed to be sufficient to keep an ordinary man very busy, but John Mugsy has been picking up a few added complications on the side.

In Philadelphia recently McGraw and several of his players were mobbed by irate Quakers who considered the Phillies ill treated. On returning to New York McGraw bucked up against the Pittsburg Pirates, and the story of his clash with President Dreyfuss is well known throughout the country. The subsequent action of President Pulliam of the National league in suspending McGraw and fining him $160 because of the Dreyfuss affair aroused McGraw's ire to such an extent that in Boston he asked for an injunction to prevent Pulliam's order from continuing in effect. It seemed the National league directors in clearing McGraw of blame in the Dreyfuss matter did not apply sufficient salve to the manager's wounds.

Luckily for McGraw, he has a big bank account and is well able to pay lawyers' fees, which in these days are no small sum.

The McGraw-Dreyfuss-Pulliam case gave rise to several unusual features. In the first place, it was almost unprecedented for the manager of a major league team to be publicly disciplined, fined and suspended. Then, again, the fact that the board of directors of the National league publicly censured the president and owner of a club was remarkable.

The language used by the board in exonerating McGraw and censuring Dreyfuss was as follows:

"First.—That the charges as made by President Dreyfuss are not warranted by the evidence submitted, and Manager John McGraw is hereby exonerated.

"Second.—The board, with much regret, expresses its disapproval of the undignified course of President Dreyfuss in indulging in an open controversy with a ball player on the grounds of a National league club. It sincerely hopes that no other club owner in a moment of excitement will so far forget the dignity that attaches to the presidency of a National league ball club."

To cap the climax of his recent troubles McGraw after receiving notice of his suspension was handed a telegram from his sister, Mrs. Bowker of Fulton, N. Y., to the effect that his father, who is sixty-six years old, was dangerously ill and probably dying at the home of his daughter. McGraw at once started for his sister's home. Happily his father's illness did not result fatally.

Bondsmen Superseded

The personal bondsman is fast becoming obsolete; the risk to private fortune is too great.

The corporate bond is just as rapidly supplanting the old form; and, in time, men will marvel that they were ever called upon to incur the danger of personal suretyship.

In point of safety, convenience and propriety, there can be no comparison between the two; the one is just as weak and perilous as the other is strong and safe.

The time is near when it will be thought as reasonable to borrow the key of a friend's safe as to borrow his name for surety purposes.

CHICAGO'S GREAT PROBLEM

Can the Hustling Western Metropolis Run Her Surface Railroads Now That She Has the Opportunity?

Dalrymple, the Man Trained For Years In Municipal Ownership and In Absolute Charge of Glasgow's Famous System, Studies the Situation.

Convinced That "Something Ought to Be Done," He Does Not Say What. Will Send His Conclusions to Mayor Dunne In Writing.

Chicago, Realizing That She Is Committed to an Experiment That Is Worldwide In Interest, Says She Can and Will Succeed.

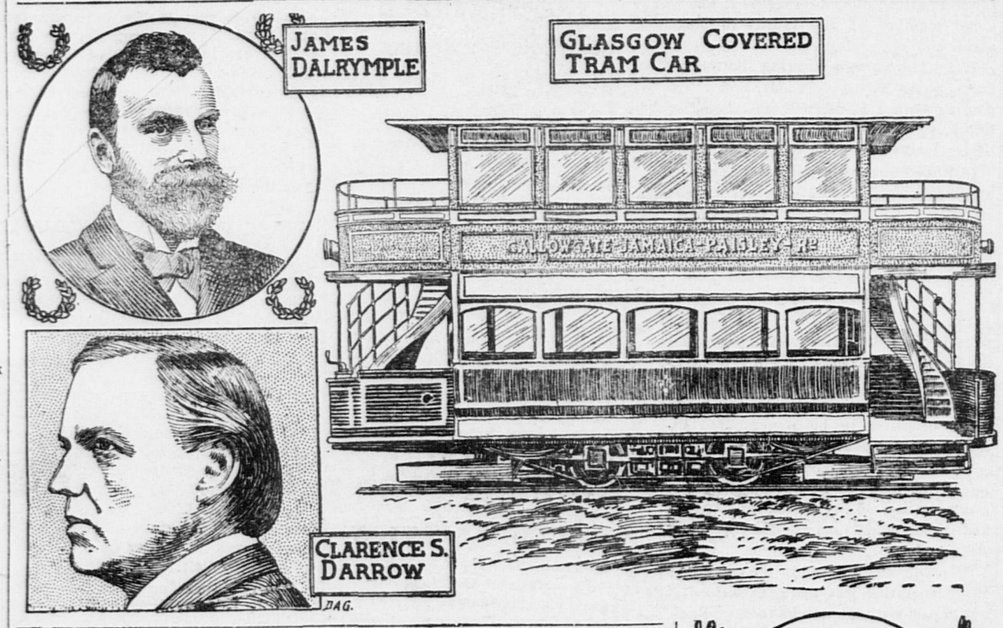
When Solomon said, "There is nothing new under the sun," he had not even a glimmer of the problems that confront modern civilization. Otherwise he would have had so many new perplexities before him that he would have had no time for making proverbs. Solomon of course had nothing to do with municipal ownership of street railways, though he did have minor difficulties, such as managing 300 wives, building a temple and ruling a kingdom. Now, Mayor Dunne of Chicago has but one wife to look after, lets his building department attend to the temples, skyscrapers and the rest, while he only has a latter day, roaring, hustling, jumping city to govern. Still, he could doubtless give Solomon pointers on the fact that there are many new things under the sun, not the least of which are new kinds of trouble.

Glasgow Most Famous In City Control.

Americans have scarcely realized that a wonderful thing is taking place in Chicago, or, rather, is about to take place, a new thing in our history, for outside of a few small towns city ownership and operation of street railways have been unknown on this side of the water. In Great Britain over forty municipalities run their own transportation, and, stimulated by their example, the system is spreading on the continent. Practically the first of the British cities to introduce municipal ownership was Glasgow, Scotland, and her example is still the most famous. This doubtless accounts for the fact that when last fall Judge Edward F. Dunne received such a sweeping majority for mayor of our second city, and that on the issue of the immediate municipal ownership of the street railways, he cabled to Glasgow to ship over an expert with whom to advise. Glasgow graciously responded by sending the manager of her tramway system, Mr. James Dalrymple, whose sojourn in America has just come to an end. Mr. Dalrymple spent several weeks in studying the situation in American cities and promised to write out his conclusions on his way home, to be sent to Mayor Dunne as soon as completed. It may be said in passing that the widely published interview with Mr. Dalrymple, sent out from Philadelphia, in which he is made to advise American cities against municipal ownership because of our political machines and spoils system, he has denied almost in toto, merely remarking that politics and municipal ownership must be utterly divorced. His real views on the question will only be known finally and authoritatively when he sends them officially to Mayor Dunne.

Surface Lines Electrified In Three Years.

Mr. Dalrymple while in America gave several very lucid talks and interviews as to the development of municipal ownership in Glasgow. It seems that the city built its own lines in 1871, but leased them to a private company to be operated. The lease extended over a period of twenty-three years, and at the end of that time conditions were so unsatisfactory that the city refused to extend the lease, but decided to adopt the then innovation of operating the roads herself. This was in 1894. At that time there were only horse cars, the employees were uncivil, incompetent and for the most part unfit persons, a strike was threatened, cars were not in good condition and complaints from the citizens were going up on every side. The companies, Mr. Dalrymple said, thought that the city could not operate the lines and therefore would make no promises of improvement, believing that they had a practical monopoly. Glasgow soon showed them their mistake. The city councils appointed a standing committee of twenty-five to take charge of the lines, a general manager was appointed and from that time conditions constantly grew better. In three years the lines were electrified, fares were reduced, wages increased, more competent and civil men were placed in charge, business picked up, new lines were built, the cars were kept cleaner, no more passengers were taken than could be seated, sufficient cars were put on to handle the traffic easily and comfortably, strikes disappeared and reforms of all sorts were inaugurated. So successful did the experiment prove that other cities in England and Scotland bought and operated their lines until the system has extended practically all over Great Britain, is being introduced on the continent and is being discussed in America. The average fare in Glasgow at present is under 2 cents, according to Mr. Dalrymple. Of course the distance traveled is shorter than in America, and yet Glasgow is a city of nearly a million inhabitants. The fares are graded according to distance, running from 1 cent to 6, and no transfers are given. Total fares of over 4 cents, however, are rare. In fact, the Glasgow manager asserts that he could do away with all fares in excess of 3 cents without appreciably diminishing the revenues.



Cars Kept Clean and Neat as a Pin.

The tram cars in Glasgow and many other British cities are double deckers, thus having twice the seating capacity of ordinary cars. This necessitates somewhat greater height, but otherwise these two story trams are very convenient and comfortable. The Glasgow cars are kept as clean and neat as a pin. At the slightest scratch they are run into the repair shop. There is no watered stock in the capitalization of the Glasgow lines. The total capitalization is $15,000,000 and the debt is $8,500,000. A sinking fund of 2 per cent per annum is provided to reduce this debt. There is no attempt to make money by the system, but a large tax is paid yearly to the city.

An old age pension is provided for employees. Part of the fund for this is furnished by the city and part by a subscription of the employees themselves. Nobody is discharged because of age, but when too old to attend to their duties the men are retired on this pension. The general manager has absolute control of the hiring and discharging of men. Politics is not allowed to enter into this, but only the question of fitness for duty. The employees seem perfectly contended, have refused to organize themselves into a labor union, have never struck or even discussed a strike and receive in wages about the same as that paid to mechanics and artisans. The wage level is not quite so high as on this side the water, but neither is the expense of living so high, so that comparatively the scale is just as good if not better for the men there than here.

Mr. Dalrymple, although he has had a training of years in municipal government, has only been manager of the Glasgow tram system since last October. The man who organized the system and was general manager of it from its inception to the time that Mr. Dalrymple took charge was John Young, who is regarded as one of the most competent street railway men in Great Britain. So great is the reputation of Mr. Young that when Yerkes, the American millionaire, began the development of his tube system in London he called on the Glasgow man to be his general manager, offering so much larger salary that the Scotchman accepted.

After riding about Chicago for two days on the cars there, hanging on to straps, being jerked by the cables, jolted by the surface cars and generally sharing the street car inconveniences known to the American urban public, Mr. Dalrymple was given a banquet in Chicago. In responding to his toast the Scotchman confined himself to describing the excellencies of his home system. When at the close of the talk Mayor Dunne pulled the Glasgow manager's coat tail and asked him to say something on the Chicago situation Dalrymple hesitated and, with Scotch carefulness and shrewdness, only permitted himself to say that he was convinced that "something ought to be done." The guests, most of whom were Chicago people, appreciated the delicious humor of the remark and greeted it with roars of laughter.

An Economic Revolution.

The remarks of Mayor Dunne at the same banquet show not only his thorough determination to carry out the reform for which he was elected, but throw an interesting side light on the character of the mayor himself.

After referring at length to the Glasgow system Judge Dunne said:

"The citizens of Chicago feel that what Glasgow has accomplished Chicago can accomplish; that, without disparagement to the citizens of Glasgow, we are just as courageous, just as honest, just as intelligent as the citizens of any other city in the civilized world." And for proof he added: "We know that this city has successfully managed its waterworks for nearly half a century. We know that it is selling water today as cheaply as any great city in the western world. We know that for several years past Chicago has been rapidly developing a magnificent municipal electric light plant and that the cost of electric light under public management has been cut in two." The mayor then went on to point out the steps that had been taken in the direction of municipalizing Chicago's street railways, stating that one line had been secured and that other lines could be built over the western half of the city, so that there was no longer any doubt that municipal ownership would be undertaken. Cases had been started in court to test the validity of the franchises of the private companies and if necessary condemnation cases would be started to secure all the lines. And he finished this part of his talk with this determined sentence: "There must be no flinching, no hesitation, no backward step. If Chicago accomplishes—as she will accomplish—what she has set out to do it means an economic revolution in America."

A man that talks like that is in earnest. It is safe to say that the city back of him is just as earnest as he. The motto of Chicago is, "I will." She has declared by a great majority for immediate municipal ownership of street railways, and her history as well as her motto shows that she will accomplish the thing on which she has set her heart. It is a radical step, and all American cities will eagerly watch the result.

One of the men who has been largely instrumental in bringing about this revolution in the public sentiment of the Lake City is Mr. Clarence S. Darrow, the noted labor lawyer and former partner of the late Governor Altgeld. Two years ago Mr. Darrow was himself labor candidate for mayor, but withdrew in order to combine the municipal ownership sentiment. He is an eloquent speaker, and his voice and pen have been enlisted in this cause for many years.

"I Will," Chicago's Motto.

Mayor Dunne himself belongs to the best type of American citizenship. Clean, high minded, upright, able and careful, his face shows that he is endowed with sufficient will power to carry out any purpose to which he sets himself. He was a judge before being elevated to his present position and enjoys the confidence and respect of all classes and parties. He is in the vigor of middle age, and his heart is thoroughly in the work to which he has set his hand.

Behind him stands Chicago, holding aloft that motto now so fraught with meaning, "I will."

A CITY OF LIGHTS.

Plan to Make Denver Best Illuminated of All Cities.

A movement is on foot to make Denver the best lighted city in the world, says the Chicago American. Already counted the cleanest, its power to attract the tourist is to be increased by a lighting system that will make its streets at night resemble the courts of a world's fair and make it famous as "the City of Lights."

It is, in fact, from the wonderfully beautiful effects secured at the Chicago, Buffalo and St. Louis expositions that the idea of lighting the streets of the city has been derived, and the man who planned these effects has been brought to Denver to undertake to do for a city's lighting that which he accomplished for the fair grounds.

The first step toward the big plan for Denver will be the erection of thirty-three steel arches to span Sixteenth street, the principal thoroughfare of the city, each arch to carry 220 incandescent electric light bulbs. The arches will reach from curb line to curb line and from them will also be suspended the trolley wires of the tramway line, and so all other poles along the street will be removed and full sweep given the eye in the view of the glowing arches of light. The arches are in themselves ornamental and in replacing ordinary poles will even in the daylight add to the beauty of the street. It will all be in a measure theatrical or circusy, but is considered desirable in a city so much sought by the tourist and sightseer as is Denver. At the same time the service result is expected to be much better than is secured from the arc lights on which the public lighting of the city at present depends.

WHAT THE SIMPLON MEANS.

New Tunnel Will Efface a Romantic and Historical Path.

Deshler Welch in his article, "The Piercing of the Simplon," in the June Century says:

But the piercing of the Simplon will, unhappily, bring with it the final effacement of one of the most romantic and grandly historical paths in human expedition—the closing curtain in the most picturesque drama Europe has afforded. The Napoleonic spectacle was full of surprises. Its argument narrates the complications of society and war; its complexities detail the enthrallment of personal magnetism and force.

The superbly built road over the Alps has remained one of the most fascinating diversions for the thoughtful tourist and has been fraught with memorable experiences. From the moment of embarkation in the yellow diligence, when the whip was cracked over the heads of the post horses at Brieg, until the arrival in the gorge of the Gondo at Iselle it was a continuously unfolding tableau of grandeur and charm. The overture had begun back in the Rhone valley with the castles of Sion and Sierre, the towers of Loueche and Martigny at the foot of the Great St. Bernard. But when the ascension of the Simplon began it became a long series of windings through fortified defiles leading around terrifying abysses and through the wildest of mountain recesses. One was awed by the splendor and stirred with conflicting emotions. It was indeed a refuge—the hospice of the Augustine monks. Who that has experienced it will ever forget the welcoming hospitality of the four secluded brethren in that desolate spot?

A Japanese Move In Korea.

The Japanese government has decided to issue a copper coinage for Korea. It is thought that the product of the Japanese mines will be required for this purpose, which will insure the continuance of the Chinese buying in the American copper market.

A Barber's View of Far East War.

Tonsorialist Nagle of Big Rapids, Mich., ascribes the defeat of the Russians to their wearing whiskers, says the Big Rapids Bulletin. No nation, says he, can be successful in war unless its fighters are smooth shaven.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Summer has just begun. Previous hot spells must be accepted as were practice games.

"New styles in fireworks" are being advertised. What the older generation really wants in fireworks is a noiseless firecracker.

Kaiser William, on a recent Sunday, preached a sermon, attended a horse-race and started for a yacht race. We are not the only people who understand strenuousity.

The jury which sentenced a negro to "1,000 years and a day" for assault ran the risk that the defendant would take an appeal on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction in the hereafter.

Lieut. Gov. Guild inquired for Miss Julia E. Underwood yesterday, while a guest at the birthplace of the Presidents. He had heard of her great success as a vote getter, her vote being even larger than his own in the last election, and he thought that while other parts of the State were endeavoring to secure the nomination of Goetting, Hall or Draper, that Quincy was after all the place which could furnish one who would be elected.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ "Make everybody disgorge" is given as Mr. Paul Morton's battle cry to the lawyers whom he has employed to enforce retribution by the Equitable's officers. If the same command had been issued by Mr. Paul Morton's successor in the Santa Fe Railroad Company, it is believed the Morton family disgorgement in the Hutchinson Salt Trust case would have amounted to some $20,000.—Hartford Times.

☞ The President sets a good example to other college graduates in returning to alma mater for this reunion. It does a man no harm to go back to college every few years and rehearse the pleasant memories of his undergraduate career. There is hardly a better way of keeping young in spirit than to revert from time to time to our salad days, when we were green in judgment, but rich in joy.—Providence Journal.

☞ The American people, whether they appreciate the source of the reform or not, have an outspoken and courageous press to thank for the great public hue and cry which is at present hounding scores of grafters, boodlers, bribers and corruptionists to the penitentiary in many parts of the Union. Doubtless the public conscience prompted the press to raise its voice with no uncertain sound for uncompromising honesty in civic and corporate affairs, but until the press spoke the public conscience was without adequate articulation.—Atlanta Constitution.

☞ Why should the United States pay tips? The Navy Department has recognized tipping as a legitimate expense to be incurred by its officers when engaged on official duty. It is a bad policy, first to recognize tipping, and also to allow it as an expense and tempt officers to tip themselves by inserting tips in their vouchers when they successfully evaded the graft. The people pay the bills and why should they be asked to meet this expense which every American naturally abhors?—Lynn Item.

☞ The average American would not drive a horse as hard as he drives himself. The laws would not permit it; his own sense of humanity would not permit it.

If your horse drops dead of heart disease induced by overwork there is raised a great hue and cry and the whole community is aroused. If you drop dead yourself from the same cause nobody cares anything about it. You contribute just a little to dull death statistics and are forgotten.

Is it worth the strain and stress? Are your ambitions or indulgences worth such a cost as this?

Is your aim—wealth, position, fame, or whatever else—worth the wearing out of your health or the straining of your heartstrings until they suddenly snap?—Beverly Times.

PORTLAND FAIR.

Attendance Surprisingly Large and on the Increase.

Portland, June 24,—During the first week of the Lewis and Clark Exposition there was a daily attendance averaging more than 10,000. This average does not include the attendance of 39,577 on the opening day. The attendance during the second week was considerably larger than that of the first week, the admissions on one day falling but a few short of 20,000.

This is considered a very gratifying attendance. As time goes on the admissions increase from day to day, which shows that the people of the Pacific Northwest are taking a patriotic interest in their big show. But there are many visitors from far eastern states and even from Europe, while the hotel bookings show that in the weeks to come the attendance from far-distant points will be very much larger than it is at present.

One reason assigned for the satisfactory attendance during the early days of the fair is that things were ready when the gates opened. While some late exhibits have been installed since June 1, the exposition has been in full swing from the start.

During the past two weeks there have been special days in honor of various Oregon towns, these towns turning out in large force to see the exposition and assist in exploiting their home places. Every night there are fireworks displays, the Trail is thronged with lively crowds, and social functions at the state buildings follow each other rapidly. The Portland Fair is climbing to the height of its season, and will remain on the height until the closing day, October 15.

Reduced railroad rates are offered by the Boston & Albany, the New York Central, the Wabash, the Wisconsin Central, the Northern Pacific and the Union Pacific railways.

World's Fair City.

A trip to the Pacific coast at this time has great attractions and Miss Underwood is envied by many. A writer of the Herald says:

If Portland, the lovely city of the Pacific slope impresses these Herald visitors as it did me on my first visit they will feel at home at once. It has so much the flavor of a Massachusetts town. It has a "settled" air that the newer towns lack. There is about it a substantial look, a sort of "come to stay" atmosphere that is grateful to one long used to the cities of the extreme East, after a series of "booming" western towns.

The town sits, green-like and reposeful, on either side of the picturesque Willamette river, just above its confluence with the Columbia. On the west side of the river, which is the most beautiful and the most finished, the city rises gradually to "The Heights," where is one of the most beautiful parks of which any city may boast. In many respects "The Heights" strongly suggests Mount Royale, the famous park of Montreal. It overlooks Portland as Royale overlooks the Canadian city; the town slopes down from the crest of the hill to the waters of the Willamette, which girdles the city like a broad blue belt, just as the St. Lawrence girdles Montreal.

But it has one beauty that is all its own, undisputed and unchallenged. A little distance beyond the river rises the snow-capped dome of Mt. Hood, which stands like a guardian of the beautiful Columbian valley. Mt. Hood is a perpetual delight in the silver of the morning or flushed with the rose of of evening; it is always beautiful, always new. It changes, its moods with the days, its beauties with the hours. It is graceful and symmetrical in shape, no matter from which side you view it, and, out of that wonderful group of the Sierra crests, Olympia, Baker, Tacoma, it is next in beauty to peerless, incomparable Shasta. Yes, I can almost find it in my heart to envy the fortunate ones who are to see all this, which I love still in grateful memory.

—Here and there and everywhere are to be found the man and the woman who "never have time." They would read good books if they had time. They would visit the sick and needy, but somehow they have not the time. They would call on their friends, cultivate good fellowship and add to the comforts of living, but they have so many other things to do that they can find no time for this. They deceive themselves and think they are deceiving others. They are not. "Never have the time" simply because they do not take the time. Doers always have the time to do. Busy men always find time to complete their tasks.—Gloucester Times.

—One of the progressive agencies that are bringing town and country nearer to each other daily in various of their sympathies is the ever-increasing rural free delivery. With five thousand petitions for its extension throughout the country now before the post office department, it will not be long before the most isolated farms will have very nearly the advantage of the city suburbs.—Boston Courier.

VISITING NURSING.

The Rules Which Will Govern Service to Patients.

The work of visiting nursing will begin on Wednesday next, the day after the Fourth. Mrs. May W. Hatch, the nurse, has established herself at the Jeffrey R. Brackett homestead, the headquarters of the Quincy Women's Club, and will be prepared to answer promptly all calls for her services. Rules have been printed and distributed among the local physicians, and a copy will be taken to every house visited.

Mrs. Hatch is a graduate of the Quincy Hospital, and was very popular at the institution. She is highly endorsed by Fr. Johnstone for her work among people of his church, and by Mrs. C. F. Carlson for work among our Swedish residents.

Visiting Nursing aims to provide nursing service for patients in Quincy who need the short call of a nurse. These calls are to be made on patients who cannot afford a nurse's whole time, or who cannot pay at all. The following rules have been adopted:

(1.) The service of the visiting nurse can be secured only at the request of the physician in charge of the case, the preference being given to the patient in greatest need.

(2.) The nurse shall not attend contagious cases.

(3.) The nurse cannot attend the first call of obstetrical cases, except in extreme emergency. The after calls will be attended to as far as possible.

(4.) The maximum duration of a visit shall not exceed 45 minutes except in extreme cases.

(5.) The patients are expected to make some payment for the nurse's service to the Women's club when it is possible, the maximum charge being 50 cents a visit.

(6.) The nurse will not only care for the patient but endeavor to instruct some member of the family in such service.

(7.) The nurse's working hours are from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M., and calls coming after 1 P. M. will be taken the following day except in cases of emergency.

(8.) No new calls will be taken on Sunday except in cases of great necessity.

(9.) As far as practicable the nurse shall collect her fee at each visit.

Press Outing.

The annual outing of the Massachusetts Press Association was enjoyed the first part of this week, for a few days, at Nantucket. The party was not large but a happy, congenial company made it an occasion to be remembered by those who composed it.

This "Gem of the Sea" is a cool and refreshing place to go during the summer months, and the railroad and steamboat accommodations are delightful and reasonable.

So much was enjoyed in the three days the Association was there, that it could not depart without thanks to Bro. R. B. Hussey, (proprietor of the Nantucket Inquirer and Mirror), in making the trip to 'Sconset so interesting, with introduction to the Marconi wireless station, and reception at his cozy summer home; to Mr. Thomas Tierney, in charge of the station, for explanation of the wireless system and demonstration of its workings; to the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co. and the New Bedford, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket Steamboat Co. for favors; to the Nantucket Central R. R. Co. for free use of its lines, tendered through General Manager Weeks; to the Nantucket Historical Society (of which Bro. Alexander Starbuck of Waltham is president) for admission to its very interesting museum; to the trustees of the manual training school (founded by Admiral Sir Isaac Coffin in 1827) for invitation to an exhibition of its work extended by president Defreiz; to the Athletic Club for opening its beautiful rooms to members of the party; to Messrs. Covil & Pease for their excellent carriage service on rides about the island; and finally to Mr. Bracey Curtis, proprietor of the "Point Breeze" for his admirable provision for the care and comfort of the Association at his exceptionally fine and well managed hotel, which we heartily commend to all who go to Nantucket.

Mimic Ships on a Mimic Sea.

Dexter Smith, a brother of Mrs. George H. Wilson of this city, contributed the following poem to the Transcript this week, suggested by seeing boys sailing toy ships on the Frog pond, Boston Common:

Sail, sail, your tiny boats on mimic sea
With favoring breeze to waft them safe to port;
To them may no winds bring calamity
Or dim the pleasure of your boyish sport.

What mystic spell Imagination lends
To bring your spoils as from the Indian isles;
The size and beauty of your crafts transcends
The armored fleet on which a monarch smiles!

As you shall guide your barque upon Life's seas
O'er which the winds of bliss and grief are bent,
'Mid all the world's most splendid argosies
The ship that brings great happiness is called "Content!"

—Harold L. Chase, 15 years of age, was graduated this week from the Malden High.

Grocers' Picnic.

The thirteenth annual picnic of the Old Colony grocers' and provision dealers' union will be held Wednesday August 2 and a special train from Boston will convey the party to Fall River stopping at the stations between Quincy and Whitman about the same time as last year. At Fall River the chartered steamer Mount Hope will proceed to Crescent Park arriving about eleven o'clock.

A special dinner will be served in the large dining hall near the wharf at 75 cents each, or you may get your dinner where you wish. Dinner over, a ball game will be enjoyed between the married and unmarried men.

At four o'clock a delightful trip down Narraganset bay to Newport is planned and the boat is scheduled to arrive at Fall River at seven o'clock where the special train will be in waiting.

The association will have an orchestra accompany the excursionists and efforts will be made to make this the best picnic of the series.

Fare round trip is only $1.50 each, not including dinner. The picnic is not given as a money making scheme and the friends of the association are cordially invited to accompany them.

Y. M. C. A. Camp.

On the passenger list of the steamer "Bay State" of the Portland Division of the Eastern Steamship Company last night were the names of one hundred Y. M. C. A. boys from all parts of the State. They were en route for Friendship, Maine, where Camp Durrell, one of the outing places owned by the State Executive Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Massachusetts and Rhode Island is located. About the same number journeyed by rail to Camp Becket in the Berkshires.

ANECDOTES ABOUT GOMEZ.

How the Famous Cuban General Disciplined an Officer.

Typical of the character of the late General Maximo Gomez, the famous Cuban soldier and leader of revolutions, was the manner in which he disciplined an officer for selling sugar cakes to the Spaniards during the Cuban war of independence, says the New York Times. The man had taken $400 from the Spaniards for the cakes. He was summoned before Gomez, and the general said to the members of his staff:

"You see before you a man who has been a brigadier in the service of Cuba. He has sold himself for $400. He is hereafter to be known only as 'Brigadier Sugar Cakes.' If any man in Cuba addresses him otherwise he disobeys my express orders." Then, turning to the culprit, the Cuban commander said: "Tear off those stars. Give them to me. You are not fit to command men. You can be bought for a cake of brown sugar. Down to the ranks with you, and try to do your duty as a private soldier and be thankful if my soldiers will march with you. See that you behave yourself hereafter."

There was a Frenchman who once visited the camp of General Gomez during the Cuban revolution and said: "I am an officer of the French army. I hold the rank of lieutenant and come to offer my sword and my life to the cause of Cuban independence."

Gomez sized up the young man and said, "You are a captain in the army of liberation." The Frenchman drew himself up haughtily, as became a soldier of Gaul, and replied: "I demand the commission of a general. Any lieutenant of the French army is equal to a general in the Cuban army."

"Do you think so?" said Gomez. "Do you know that there is only one general in the world? I am that general. I am greater than Saussier—than any general that you ever had in your whole service. Young man, when you first landed on the shores of Cuba you should have learned your first lesson. Maximo Gomez is the only general, and Maximo Gomez regards the lowest private in the ranks of the army of liberation above all the French that ever existed. Here are your letters. Get back to France, where you may be of some use. You are of none here. Adjutant, see that this man has safe conduct to the coast. Good evening." And the viscount went back to France.

PRIZE POEM BY A WOMAN.

Mrs. A. A. Lindsley's Ballad on "The Trail" at Lewis and Clark Fair.

Some time ago I. N. Fleischner, chairman of the publicity committee for the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Me., offered a prize of $100 for the best ballad on "The Trail," says the New York Post. The honor was accorded to "John Malcolm Graham," but for the moment no such name could be found in the Portland city directory. It now appears that John is a lady, who is known to her friends as Mrs. A. A. Lindsley, the wife of a former state treasurer of Washington. Her stanzas are better than such contests often elicit:

The call comes, strong and insistent,
Out of the west—oh, hark!
"Follow through hail and sun the trail
Blazed by Lewis and Clark!"

On with the blanket and saddle,
Ride like the devil possessed,
Swift on the way night and day,
Hit the trail to the west!

Sting of the wind in our faces,
Crunching of hoofs on sand—
Whate'er betide, pause not, but ride
Straight to the promised land.

Whiteness of sails on the ocean,
Gleaming of gold in the hills,
Glory of grain on the harvest wain,
Curling of smoke from the mills.

Off with the saddle and blanket,
Kindle our heart fires' spark—
Here's all hail to the westward trail
Blazed by Lewis and Clark!

When Is the Real Fourth of July?

Those impatient small boys who begin celebrating the Fourth before it actually arrives are not so far out of the way after all. Paul Leland Haworth tells the story of "The Real Fourth of July" in Harper's for July. He quotes from John Adams' letter to his wife, in which he said: "The 2d of July will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival," for it was on the 2d of July that the final vote was taken on the momentous resolution of the colonists to separate from Great Britain, as embodied in the draft of the Declaration of Independence drawn up by Thomas Jefferson. The debate after the vote lasted until the afternoon of the 4th when it was brought to a close, largely on account of the oppressively warm weather and because "hungry flies swarmed thick and fierce, alighting on the legs of the delegates and biting hard through their thin silk stockings."

War Veteran's Suggestion.

Ambrose Hammond, an ex-sergeant of the Fourth Michigan volunteer infantry, has written to President Roosevelt, asking him to take charge of a ceremony that Mr. Hammond assures him will furnish lasting pleasure to thousands of old soldiers of the civil war, says a Washington special to the Boston Herald. The old wooden bridge across the Potomac at Washington is soon to be taken down, and Hammond suggests that it be cut up into pieces and given to the old soldiers. Mr. Hammond says that in all probability a million men of the north marched over the bridge going to the front and that to thousands that crossed it on the return in 1865 it was a glad sight.

CITY BREVITIES.

July.

Roy Cobb of Weekhaukin, N. J., is spending his vacation in Quincy.

Peter Sullivan has accepted a position at the Washington street market.

A new board fence is being built on South street, near the Fore River house.

George H. Wilson advertises several bargains in store furnishings, wagons, etc.

John McGowan of the Quincy postoffice is enjoying a fortnight's vacation.

Letter Carriers Loud and Gragg commence their fifteen days' vacation today.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Co. closed at noon today until Wednesday morning.

Arthur A. Richardson has gone to visit his brother in Providence for a few days.

Edward Menhinick is erecting a house at the corner of Elm and South Walnut streets.

Dr. Edwin E. Davis of Chestnut street leaves today for a cruise along the coast, returning about the first of August.

People in some parts of Quincy Point began last evening to celebrate the Fourth. On one street, the noise continued until nearly midnight.

The F. D. Fellows Co. should not ask us to "get busy" because hot weather is here, but it is a fact that they have a large line of hot weather goods.

Puritan Lodge of Braintree.

At the regular meeting held Tuesday evening the election of officers took place. Joseph Bailey was elected Noble Grand and Harry L. Chase Vice Grand.

About a month ago a committee was appointed to look into the advisability of Puritan lodge having an excursion. The committee appointed were Past grand Harry Tobey, Brothers H. S. Bates and F. M. Buzzell. The committee are of the opinion that it would be a grand occasion and the lodge has decided to have the excursion. It will be held sometime the latter part of August. It is thought now the trip will be to Canobia lake, Salem, N. H.

The Odd Fellow lodges of Randolph, South Weymouth, Quincy and Wollaston have been invited to join with Puritan lodge to make this occasion a grand success. The resident Odd Fellows are also cordially invited to attend. The expense, while it cannot be exactly fixed at this time will be about $1.75 for the round trip including dinner.

Canobia lake is a beautiful sheet of water inside a park containing 48 acres. There is a ball ground where the different lodges can show their skill at the national game.

Fifty-four Years a Teacher.

Braintree has a lady who has taught even longer than Miss Underwood of this city, and the latter is much younger. Miss Harriet M. Faxon was 76 years of age yesterday. Miss Faxon is one of the oldest school teachers in New England and has been a teacher in the Cook primary school in Roxbury 54 years. She has her home with her nephew on River street, Braintree. She has just completed her school year and is now preparing to enjoy the vacation.

Miss Faxon is a native of Boston and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Faxon. She was educated in the Franklin school of Boston and has taught in that school district ever since. The Cook school has been her only school. She has returned to Braintree every afternoon. Miss Faxon says there have been many changes since she began to teach. When asked if she thought the modern methods the best, she replied:

"Well, in some ways, yes, but still there were some good ideas in the old days."

The New Haven Railroad.

The current earnings of the New York, New Haven & Hartford system, including rail and boat lines, together with the trolley roads, are surpassing all previous records. The company's gross earnings for the month of April increased about $190,000; expenses were reduced by over $210,000, so that the net receipts showed an increase of over $400,000 over April, 1904.

The month of May will show a net increase of $500,000, and June should equal the record of May, so that the current quarter, ending June 30 and completing the fiscal year, will show a net increase of approximately $1,400,000. These results are due to a very large tonnage and passenger movement over the company's lines, in fact, the largest in the company's history, and to the operating economies resulting from a freer movement of cars.

Bar Association.

A meeting of the Quincy Bar Association was held at the Court room this morning, when resolutions were adopted on the death of William W. Jenness.

It was also voted to release the members from the agreement to close their offices Wednesday evening.

GRAND OUTING.

Hospital Aid Association Guests of the President.

Those unable to be present Thursday at the meeting of the Hospital Aid Association held at Rose Cliff, the summer home of the president, Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, will be interested to hear about it.

The weather was perfect, the location charming, and Mrs. Morse and her assistants devoted themselves to making the day one to be put on record. Thirty-seven ladies were present.

While sitting upon the wide veranda enjoying sea and country views, small tables were placed in front of the guests upon which lunch was served. The hostess contributed hot coffee and a refreshing lemon sherbet.

After lunch sewing was resumed and a business meeting held, Mrs. Morse presiding. The report of the treasurer, Mrs. Thomas Fenno, showed cash on hand, $366.55; part of this being the endowment fund of $292. The regular secretary, Mrs. John W. Sanborn, being absent, Mrs. W. T. Babcock was made acting secretary and gave a resume of the Hospital Aid meeting of May, at which 18 members were present, and the question discussed was the building of a cottage for the matrons and nurses, upon the grounds of the Hospital. These devoted women have put up uncomplainingly with crowding and inconvenience, and are in need of a home of their own. Through the personal efforts of Miss Beale of Adams street a fund of $800 has been put at interest for this worthy purpose. Discussion of this object, and plans for a gathering of old and new members made up the business of the May meeting.

After this report was finished the unanimous vote of thanks was given Mrs. Helen Bass for her untiring efforts which made the recent dramatic entertainment such a success. By motion of Mrs. Theophilus King, it was unanimously agreed that each member present should bring a new member to the September meeting. In this connection it was also voted to give a careful report in future, to all the local papers of each monthly meeting, with the names of new and renewed members as fast as secured. Attention was called to the fact that the list appearing in the annual report of the Hospital is made of names of the incorporators, and has no connection with the Hospital Aid association, which is an independent organization, and until it publishes its own independent annual report, cannot give a list of its members.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a motion needing no seconding was made by Mrs. D. L. Jewell, thanking Mrs. Morse for her hospitality which had made the delightful day possible.

Those attending were:

Miss Kate Raycroft, Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. Frances A. Dalrymple, Mrs. John Shaw, Mrs. Fred L. Jones, Miss Gertrude Sampson, Mrs. Albert Keating, Mrs. Charles R. Sherman, Mrs. George Newcomb, Mrs. Annie E. Faxon, Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, Jr., Mrs. M. S. Seavey, Mrs. Charles H. Burgess, Mrs. David Jewell, Mrs. C. W. Guy, Mrs. George Macfarlane, Mrs. George W. Morton, Mrs. Francis Corey, Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop, Mrs. C. H. Richardson, Mrs. W. E. Blanchard, Mrs. A. E. Sproul, Miss Amy Newcomb, Mrs. M. S. Wilbur, Mrs. J. Q. A. Field, Mrs. Helen Bass, Mrs. J. Henry Emery, Mrs. Relief Floyd, Miss L. M. Jillson, Mrs. Horace F. Spear, Mrs. Albert M. Parker, Mrs. Joseph G. Spear, Mrs. E. G. Pratt, Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, Mrs. Walter T. Babcock and Mrs. Thomas Fenno.

Raspberry and Strawberry Jams Colored by Coal Tar Dye.

ONLY SAFETY IN EXTRACTS IS TO USE ONLY FOSS'

Of the 32 samples of canned fruits, jellies, flavoring extracts and jams examined, 91 per cent. were found by the New Hampshire Board of Health defective, preserved by benzoate or colored by aniline dyes.

The only security from all such harmful adulterants in flavoring extracts is to take advice of such authorities as Mrs. Lincoln, author of the Boston Cook Book, and the professional cooks at all the leading hotels along the coast and at the mountains, who publicly state that they use nothing but Foss' Pure Flavoring Extracts, for the simple reason that they are sure of getting simply the fruit in liquid form.

Only a few years ago it was very difficult for the most painstaking woman to be sure that she was using a natural flavoring extract. The demand for extracts at soda fountains and in ice cream especially tempted manufacturers to use substitutes and adulterations for quicker and larger profits.

The imitation became so crude and deleterious that many persons ate sparingly of all flavored desserts. It was proved that it was the impure flavoring that made pies, cakes and ice cream disagree with a grown-up person as well as with the children, and an urgent demand arose for a pure, reliable, natural fruit extract. A wide market wus assured for such a wholesome flavoring and from the first appearance of Foss' Extracts, which are simply the fruits in concentrated, liquid form, hotel chefs, cooking school teachers and thousands of plain housewives entirely discarded the use of artificial extracts and began to stock their pantry shelves with nothing but Foss'.

Families that had been using flavoring extracts that were clever imitations of the true fruit, were delighted and surprised at the delicacy, purity and wholesomeness of the new flavoring. They found in addition to a daintier flavoring imparted to desserts that it did not require so much of Foss' to get the proper flavor as it did of the old, dishonest kind, that it was, therefore, more economical.

All grocers sell Foss' Pure Extracts in Quincy. Wollaston, Braintree, Weymouth, East Weymouth, South Weymouth, Atlantic and Norfolk Downs.

Supt. W. E. Maybury promised to have about 500 water meters in service at this time, July 1, and from indications they are in, and today will commencing their registering. We have not heard that the system was over taxed last night, but it was rumored that some people who had been favored with meters would see that their families took baths before July first, and make sure that the lawns were thoroughly soaked.

SECRETARY HAY DEAD

End Came Suddenly This Morning at His Summer Home

Newbury, N. H., July 1.—Secretary of State John Hay died at 12:25 this morning. The signs immediately preceding his death were those of pulmonary embolism. Mr. Hay's condition during all of Friday had been entirely satisfactory.

JOHN HAY IN STREET ATTIRE.

The bulletin of Secretary Hay's death was signed by Charles L. Scudder, M. D., and Fred T. Murphy, M. D.

Mrs. Hay and Drs. Scudder and Murphy were with the secretary when the end came. The secretary bade good night to his wife and to his attending physicians about 10 o'clock last night at the close of one of the best days he has had since his illness. The local trouble was clearing up satisfactorily, according to Dr. Scudder.

The secretary suffered none of the old pains in his chest which characterized his earlier illness. He had been perfectly comfortable all day and happy in the anticipation of leaving his bed for the greater freedom and comfort of a couch. At 11 o'clock he was sleeping quietly. A few minutes after 12 he called the nurse, who at once summoned Dr. Scudder.

Both Dr. Scudder and Dr. Murphy hastened to the bedside. The secretary was breathing with difficulty and expired almost immediately afterward at 12:25.

A Mother's Brave Rescue

Colebrook, N. H., July 1.—A 5-year-old child of Alonzo Heath, a farmer, went into his father's barn and, while playing with matches, set fire to 20 tons of hay. Mrs. Heath heard the child calling for her from the burning building. She rushed into the basement and, climbing up to the level of the floor, literally pulled the boy out of the fire. The lad was perhaps fatally burned. The mother was slightly injured. The barn was destroyed.

MONEY OF AMERICA

Austro-Hungarians Get It and Then Return Home

AN UNDESIRABLE CROWD

Urged by Their Government Not to Become Citizens of United States-- Steamship Lines Subsidized to Make Low Rates

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 1.—Marcus Braun of New York, the United States immigration inspector who, while on a special mission in Europe recently, caught an official of the Austro-Hungarian government in the act of tampering with his mail, visited Oyster Bay to have a talk with Secretary Loeb about some official matters.

Inspector Braun returned from Europe on Wednesday last after an absence of several months. He declined to discuss his experiences while abroad. A full report of them has been made to the department of commerce and labor, and it is known they were sensational.

The work of Braun was of a confidential character and it is likely, therefore, that the reports on it may not be made public. It can be stated, however, that the reports show, not only through the personal statements of Braun himself, but also through official documents of the Austro-Hungarian government and through affidavits of responsible persons, that the Austro-Hungarian government is fostering and encouraging the immigration to the United States of its people, and at the same time urging the immigrants not to become citizens of this country, but to get together all the money they can earn here and then return to their own country.

In the fostering of this immigration it is charged that the Austro-Hungarian government subsidizes one or more steamship lines with the result that they carry the immigrants to the United States at a notably low rate. By this means the Austro-Hungarian government rids itself, temporarily at least, of some residents who are now specially undesirable, and many of this class succeed in landing in this country, despite the rigidity of the immigration laws.

In this connection there are societies in this country whose members work in conjunction with the Austro-Hungarian government, bringing all sorts of influence to bear to secure the landing of certain immigrants who come here. The situation presented is regarded by the immigration authorities as serious, although, in the absence of legislation bearing directly upon it, nothing can be done, except to enforce the law, as it now stands, firmly and effectively.

An Unconcerned Murderer

New York, July 1.—George Granger, 19 years old, wanted in Pawling for the murder of Henry Lutz, a farmer of that place, who was killed yesterday, is under arrest here. Granger, while waiting to see Captain McCauley, to whom he made a full confession, spent his time whistling and singing. When searched $75.85 was found on his person, beside the silver watch which he had taken from Lutz.

A $10,000,000 Rockefeller Gift

New York, July 1.—Ten million dollars as an endowment for higher education in the United States has been given the General Education Board by John D. Rockefeller. The interest is to go to collegiate institutions, may be used anywhere in the country, and is available for any purpose for which it is needed. None of it will go to save decadent schools.

Bullet In Baseball Player

Troy, N. Y., July 1.—Alexander Hardy, one of the pitchers of the Troy baseball club, was shot and possibly fatally injured last night by Charles Thero, who alleges that Hardy had been paying attention to Thero's wife. Thero met Hardy in a gangway and shot him in the back. Hardy denies Thero's accusations.

In a Lynching Mood

Scottsdale, Ky., July 1.—A desperate attempt has been made to lynch seven young negroes in jail here, charged with arson and several other crimes. Cool-headed citizens persuaded the mob to wait, saying there were others who had not been apprehended. The feeling against the negroes is very bitter.

Striking Farm Laborers Killed

Budapest, July 1.—A serious strike of farm laborers has broken out in Hungary. In some sections little work is being done and as a result the crops are suffering. There have been riots in many places and a number of strikers have been killed by gendarmes. Military assistance has been called for.

Thurston Pleads For Mitchell

Portland, Or., July 1.—John M. Thurston, in his argument in the defense of Senator Mitchell, said that he knew in his heart that the senator was an honest man. He alleged that the mass of testimony introduced by the government did not substantiate the counts of the indictment.

Bonaparte Takes Oath of Office

Washington, July 1.—Paul Morton has relinquished the duties of secretary of the navy. This morning Charles J. Bonaparte took the oath of office as Morton's successor and assumed the duties devolved upon the civilian head of the navy.

Delphine's Choice

By INA WRIGHT HANSON

Copyright, 1905, by I. W. Hanson

Throwing down my paper, I started in search of Delphine. She was getting into her auto car with Jerry, the crooked backed. He was of no more consequence than a pet dog, except that his mind in his poor ugly body was like the pearl in the oyster shell, so he was more entertaining, and, besides being a mental genius, Jerry could sing. The powers! How he could sing!

"Delphine," I began abruptly, "in Holland they have four Sundays in November"—

"You don't say!" raising slender hands in exaggerated surprise. "Do you suppose they ever have five?"

"Listen. Four Sundays, known as Review, Decision, Purchase and Possession. On Review Sunday all the unmarried men and women go to church, look at one another, but don't speak."

"How silly!" remarked Delphine.

"On Decision Sunday each man who wants a wife bows low before the maiden of his choice, and by her response he judges of her feelings toward him."

Delphine tittered.

"On Purchase Sunday he askes her parents' consent, and on Possession Sunday they appear as actual or prospective brides and grooms. I am telling you because I was once foolish enough to promise not to ask you to marry me. I beg to remind you that next Sunday is Decision Sunday the second in November; also that there is more than one way to kill a cat."

Delphine regarded me with amusement. "Dick, I think you are the silliest ever," she laughed as she and the auto and Jerry went speeding away.

I looked after them, the girl's thin young figure, with the blue veil streaming out in the stiff sea breeze, and Jerry's pathetic form beside her. Jerry's voice was music itself, and Jerry's handsome eyes could speak more eloquently than a hundred tongues. But what had I to fear from a crooked back?

That evening my egotism was slightly jarred. Hathaway of the bald head and the big heart joined me on the porch. Hathaway was bubbling over with something too good to keep. After five minutes' conversation I learned that Miss Delphine had once more made him promise that he should not court her and that today she had told him an interesting tale of how the men of Copenhagen or South Africa or some other darned place get their wives. And why should she tell him all that unless she was hinting to him of an honorable way to break an unwilling promise?

Why, indeed? I thought wrathfully and later and alone I brooded over the matter, leaving Hathaway and a dozen others to dance with Delphine at the casino. I had other fish to fry, and I was going to fry them good and brown too. At last my plans were perfected. Hastening to the casino, I buttonholed the reluctant Hathaway and finally cajoled him into doing what I wanted. Then we hunted up and explained to ten other fellows, who, with one exception, entered merrily into the scheme.

"But, hang it, Dick," protested the exception, "I'm already engaged!"

"Don't worry, Jenkins," consoled Hathaway. "She will accept Dick or me, I know."

"It won't be Hathaway, I am sure," I said, shamming a confidence I did not own.

On Sunday morning, when Delphine and her father came out of church, their astonished eyes beheld twelve men lined up near the red auto. Twelve? Aye, thirteen, for Jerry, with smiling lips and weary eyes, stood with us. We bowed as one man before her, and, unmindful of the staring congregation, the girl responded with a quaint little courtesy.

"Delighted to see you," she said cordially. "Papa, will you invite the gentlemen to dine at the hotel with us?"

Bewildered looking papa complied, and Delphine motioned Jerry to enter the car.

"Don't see that anybody gained more than anybody else," grumbled Hathaway as we followed the auto's wake.

"Except Jerry," grinned Jenkins.

At the dinner's close Delphine's father told us that they were going home. They were tired of the gay resort.

"You fellows come over and dine with us at The Oaks next Sunday," he said genially.

We accepted with alacrity, glad to carry out the remainder of the programme in the confines of a home instead of a hotel, and every mother's son of us was at the gate of The Oaks at 1 o'clock on the next Sunday—Purchase Sunday, the third in November. We decided that after dinner would be the best time to approach Delphine's father.

"You have to go first, Hathaway; you're the biggest," said one of the boys.

"Let's draw lots for our places," suggested Jenkins.

"I did draw number one, darned if I didn't!" exclaimed the big fellow. 'Seven is the best. Who has the lucky seven?"

The crooked backed held up the magic number.

"Don't lose any sleep over it, boys," he said mockingly. "You never for a moment supposed that I was in the running, did you? I followed along at first just to see the fun, but I'm out now."

Going up the palm lined drive, he and I fell behind the others.

"Don't desert us now, Jerry," I said absently, my mind conning my request before Delphine's father.

"Do you think I'd have the face to ask her to burden her splendid young life with me?" he demanded fiercely.

"She seems to favor you," I ventured, feeling that I had to say something.

"The sweet, tender pity of her would give more attention to the wounded dog than the well bodied one," he answered, with infinite pathos. "I did know a man once whose body was as bad as mine, and he was married to a saint and the father of lovely children. I couldn't dream of burdening Delphine, though, even if"—

My pity for poor Jerry was forgotten at Delphine's welcome. Surely there was an answer to my warm pressure of her little hand; surely her dark eyes held in their roguish depths a gleam of love. I sat beside her at the table, too, with Hathaway at her left. I remember what he had said—"It will be Dick or me." Hathaway looked too complacent for my comfort, though.

Delphine's father took the conversation pretty much into his own hands. As we ate our soup he talked of a Dyak or Borneo's betrothal customs; then he went from one foreign people to another, Jerry meanwhile helping him out with a gay suggestion or a witty remark. The rest of us had little chance for speech. We didn't crave it. We would rather look at Delphine, gray gowned, with a crimson rose at her throat and a chaplet of autumn leaves in her hair.

As the coffee was served her clear voice took up the conversation.

"You left out the prettiest of them all, papa," she said, smiling at him—"the custom of the Yao Midas, a Burmese-Tartar people. They woo only by music. The suitor sits under a desire tree and plays his favorite instrument. As the girl of his choice approaches he plays louder and with more feeling. If she pass by he realizes that she will have none of him, but should she stop and lay a flower upon whatever instrument he is playing he knows that he has won her."

"Hum!" grunted her father as we rose from the table. Delphine and her guests went to the veranda, while the man in whose hands lay our fate went to his library.

Presently Hathaway, with a very red face, slipped in. He came out with a swagger that made me want to punch his blond head. Next was Jenkins, who came out looking scared.

"I don't see how she can accept more than one of us," I thought.

When my turn came—the twelfth—I found Delphine's father looking exceedingly bored.

"Permit me to say that I think you fellows are a pack of fools," he remarked pleasantly. "However, I am instructed to say that you may have her, and bless you, my children."

Dizzy with joy, I was staggering from the room when he observed dryly:

"Each of you has the same answer, so you're welcome to what encouragement you can get."

A hard slap, sure enough. What next?

After I joined the others Jerry, out under the great oaks, began to sing."

"See the Yao under his desire tree," remarked Jenkins nervously.

The song was a love song of renunciation with weird words and wild melody. Ye lovers, how that cripple sang! As the marvelous voice died away Delphine, sobbing, ran down the steps. Snatching the crimson rose from her throat, she knelt before Jerry and held it to his lips. We heard the boy's exclamation; then Delphine cried out something and put her own sweet mouth in the place of the rose.

It was Hathaway who broke the spell.

"We've lost, fellows," he muttered huskily. "Jerry was in the running after all.

"Wouldn't It Jar You?"

Once W. C. Gibson, then editor of Puck, took luncheon with Opper, the cartoonist, at his home in Bensonhurst. The host and his guest were smoking postprandial cigars on the veranda when Mr. Opper became convulsed with laughter at the sight of one of his puppies tearing to pieces Mr. Gibson's hat. Gibson was inclined to harsh measures, but Opper reminded him that the dog was only a puppy that knew no better, and the editor became resigned. When Gibson rose to leave Opper offered him the choice of all his hats.

"I don't need one," returned the guest. "It was your hat, not mine." The humor of the situation did not strike the comic artist at once, but later he made use of the incident in one of his celebrated series, "Now, Wouldn't It Jar You?" the question being, "If your dog tore up what you thought was your neighbor's hat and you found it was your own, wouldn't it jar you?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Sindbad's Alleged Prototype.

The story of Sindbad the Sailor is believed to owe a good deal to the legend of St. Brendan, the Kerry saint, whose day is May 16. According to the legend, St. Brendan sailed the ocean for seven years in search of the island that had once been Adam's Eden. During that time he regularly revisited the island of Sheep, where the sheep are as large as oxen; the island of Birds, that are really fallen angels, and another island which is really a big fish named Jasconi trying to get his tail into his mouth. St. Brendan used to encamp on the fish on Easter day and go on to the birds on Easter Monday. He found the Eden island at last, but no one has seen it since, though it appeared on seventeenth century maps and in an eighteenth century treaty between Spain and Portugal. Probably Irish monks took this legend with them to the east in the ninth century.—London Chronicle.

CANAL ENGINEER

Position Offered to and Accepted by John Stevens

IS AN OLD RAILROAD MAN

Will Not Be a Member of the Commission--Shonts Refuses a Big Offer to Leave Canal--Wallace Takes Exceptions to Taft's Statement

Washington, July 1.—John F. Stevens, who for 14 years was connected with the Great Northern railroad in various capacities and who built the Rocky Mountain division of that road, has been appointed chief engineer of the Panama canal to succeed John F. Wallace.

Mr. Stevens was until recently second vice president of the Rock Island system. He resigned that position a little while ago. He is now in Chicago, where he expected to join Secretary Taft's Philippine party and proceed to Manila. He had been retained by the government to supervise and have general control of the construction of the proposed new Philippine railways. Because of his selection for his new post another man will be secured for the Philippine railway job.

Mr. Stevens' salary will be $30,000 a year, and he is not to be a member of the isthmian canal commission. His proposed trip to the Philippines with Secretary Taft as a government railway expert has been abandoned.

The soundest opinion here is that Taft's bitter arraignment of Wallace for what must be called his desertion is only what the former chief engineer of the canal deserved, and that the administration will be upheld by the country. Wallace has neither the sympathy of his associates on the canal commission nor of many of his former friends in the railway world.

Since Wallace was drawn away from the government service by an offer of more money it has been learned that two offers have been made to Chairman Shonts of positions carrying a salary of $100,000 or more. Both offers were declined. Shonts declares that he has no intention of leaving the canal work until it is finished or until his period of usefulness is at an end

Good may come of the flare-up following Wallace's resignation, in drawing general attention to affairs on the isthmus and calling a close public scrutiny to the conduct of the canal commission and its employes.

John F. Wallace, who resigned as a member and chief engineer of the Panama canal commission, and whom Secretary Taft charged with leaving the canal work at a critical moment, gave a statement to the press last night, replying to Secretary Taft. After making the statement public Wallace left the city. He said he was going to take a much needed rest and vacation and did not expect to return during the summer.

Mr. Wallace would not make public any of his future plans, and said that the work he is to take up will be announced by the officials of the organization with which he is to become connected when they deem it proper. He emphatically resents the charge that his motive for leaving the work was a financial one.

"If the secretary understood me to say that I had accepted a position in New York," says Wallace, "he labored under a misapprehension. I did state to him that I desired to accept one, but under such circumstances and conditions and at such time as would cause the least embarrassment to the administration and the least injury to the work, and that I was even willing to go to the extent of remaining for an indefinite time on the commission should he desire my counsel and advice.

"Much to my surprisbe he indignantly spurned my suggestion and took the position that I was compelled under what he called my contract to remain in charge of the isthmian canal, regardless of circumstances or conditions, until the completion of the work, and spoke in such a manner as to outrage my feelings to such an extent that further discussion of the reasons for my action was out of the question.

"I did not seek the position of chief engineer of the isthmian canal commision and my financial condition was not improved by my acceptance of the position, and it was with the greatest reluctance that I did so.

"Despite all of the discouragement and obstacles which have surrounded this work, I endeavored to faithfully and vigorously perform the duties of my office and have never complained or criticised my superiors or anyone connected with the work. I have never requested additional emoluments or asked any favors of a personal nature, and any suggestions which I may have made have been made because I considered them necessary for the increased efficiency of the work.

"I emphatically disclaim all responsibility for the various statements recently published, alleged to have been made by so-called friends."

Germans May Lose Contract

Fez, July 1.—Since it became known that an international conference to consider the subject of Moroccan reforms is practically assured, the Moors have been showing considerably less dependence on the Germans. The signing of concessions for the building of harbors at Tangier and Saida, which were promised to German firms, will be delayed until after the conference has been held.

DEMAND REFUSED

Mill Owners Will Not Restore Former Wages to Weavers

Fall River, Mass., July 1.—The Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' association voted to refuse to grant the demand of the weavers for a restoration of wages to the basis which prevailed prior to last July, when a cut of 12½ percent was made. The date set by the weavers for the new rate to begin was July 17.

The manufacturers' position is that the condition of business does not warrant an increase, as the margin between the cost of raw material and the selling price of finished goods is below a figure set by Governor Douglas as referee between the striking operatives and the manufacturers at the conclusion of the six months' strike which followed the reduction. The weavers claim that the improvement in business warrants their demand.

There is much speculation over the question of a strike. Many believe that, in view of the governor's decision bearing upon the matter made last April and the contention of the manufacturers, the operatives will not at this time force an issue which may result in another protracted contest.

Start on Philippine Trip

Washington, July 1.—Secretary of War Taft, accompanied by a distinguished party, including members of both houses of congress, army officers, Miss Alice Roosevelt and others, began their journey to the Philippine Islands at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The party embarked in two special cars. At the station to say goodbye were numerous friends of the party. The trip is one of official inspection by Secretary Taft and many matters of the administration will be considered. Three months are to be consumed in the trip.

Believers In General Strike

Chicago, July 1.—The general strike as the only means by which unions can hope to win concessions from employers was advocated in a resolution introduced in the convention of the "Industrial union," in session here. The resolution declares that the history of the American Federation of Labor and of the labor movement generally proves that the strike of a single trade is not a success.

Many Lives Barely Saved

Chatham, N. B., July 1.—Captain Burke, his wife and child and crew of six men of the schooner Minto were rescued by the bark Telefon and brought to this port. The Minto, when nearing the Newfoundland coast a week ago, began leaking. She was waterlogged when the Telefon came along and with some difficulty rescued all hands, just before the schooner went to the bottom.

Usual Midsummer Dulness

New York, July 1.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Commercial conditions seldom change at midsummer, and quiet markets usually prevail unless there is a movement at the commodity exchanges in response to crop reports. The past week has proved no exception to the general rule.

Temporary Chief Engineer

Panama, July 1.—W. E. Dauchy, who has been the engineer in charge of the Culebra division of the canal work, has been appointed acting chief engineer. The resignation of Chief Engineer Wallace caused a disagreeable surprise, principally among the employes of the canal commission.

Norway Does Not Contemplate War

Christiania, July 1.—The Norwegian war department says there is positively no truth in the report published by The Jamtlands Posten of Stockholm to the effect that Norway is arming for a conflict with Sweden. The Norwegian troops, it is explained, are merely undergoing their usual training.

Watermelon, Chase and Death

Ansonia, Conn., July 1.—Thomas Green, colored, 8 years old, and several companions were eating watermelons which they had taken from a freight car when they were discovered by a policeman who chased them. Green jumped into the Naugatuck river and was drowned.

To Bring Jones' Body Home

Cherbourg, July 1.—The American squadron which is to escort to the United States the remains of Admiral John Paul Jones has arrived at this port, where the remains will be embarked. All the vessels were granted pratique by the French authorities on their arrival.

Railway Merger Planned

Indianapolis, July 1.—The News says: Plans for an immense holding company which will take over all the electric traction lines centering in Indianapolis are understood to be approaching completion by the Widener-Elkins syndicate of Philadelphia.

Great Atlantic.

Story of Winner of Kaiser's Yachting Trophy, Her Owner and Designer.

The victory of the three masted schooner Atlantic in the recent international race for the kaiser's cup has given still greater glory and prestige to American yachtsmen, yacht builders and yacht designers. The Atlantic's record breaking run, with Captain Charley Barr at the wheel, was even more notable than the winning of the German ruler's $5,000 trophy. In addition to establishing a new record—341 miles—for a day's run, she broke the world's record for five days' sailing.

Wilson Marshall, the owner of the victorious yacht, is young in years, but a veteran of the sport. He has been a member of the New York Yacht club since 1880 and in this time has owned many vessels, the one preceding his present craft also bearing the name Atlantic. Born in New York not more than thirty-four or thirty-five years ago, he has from youth been fascinated with the pleasures and possibilities of yachting. As he grew older the size of his boats increased until he was induced through the gradual development of his love of the sport to order the schooner that has given all connected with it worldwide fame. Mr. Marshall lives on Long Island sound in the summer time at his palatial home, Marina, near Bridgeport, Conn., and off it in deep water his ocean racer and cruiser was anchored for days just before the start of the international contest.

The elder Marshalls will be recalled by New York's oldest citizens, as they were identified with its stages and stage routes, giving to the people the transportation from point to point in Gotham now so much improved by the trolley and subway lines.

The Atlantic was completed in the last days of 1903 and in the early winter made her maiden cruise to the West Indies and the Caribbean sea. She was gone for months, and upon her return to New York her interior decorations were completed. She appeared on the cruise of the New York Yacht club squadron last summer, and her performance was watched with the keenest interest. She won several runs and the cups called for and also added to her silver collection of the prizes offered by the flag officers.

Mr. Marshall challenged for the Brenton's Reef and Cape May cups (offered by the N. Y. Y. C.) and won them both. In the former, 298 miles, the Atlantic required 40 hours 30 minutes and 25 seconds, beating the schooners Resolute and the Endymion as named. In the latter, 212 miles, she took 38 hours 33 minutes 16 seconds, defeating the Endymion, while the other starter, the Vergemere, gave it up after turning the Cape May mark.

The Atlantic has the complete propelling machinery of a steam yacht and, her designer says, has made eleven knots an hour under steam. The propelling machinery consists of a triple expansion engine of about 800 horsepower, two boilers and a feathering screw, which fills completely her aperture when feathered for sailing.

The sails are ordinarily raised with steam. The yacht is lighted with electricity and has one large dynamo and engine and capacious storage batteries. She has also an acetylene gas plant, a two ton refrigerating machine and tiled ice boxes, with a capacity of 800 cubic feet. There are three skylights, three companion hatches and a large skylight over the engine and boiler room.

Steering is done from the raised quarter deck aft. The stack is telescopic. The accommodations consist of a large saloon, five staterooms, chart and gun room and three bathrooms, which are porcelain lined. The deck house is used as an observation room and is connected with stairs to a spacious lobby below.

William Gardner, the Atlantic's designer, has long been known to yachtsmen and has their confidence. He is still on the bright side of life in the matter of years and has been a member of the New York Yacht club since 1890. Like the Atlantic's owner, he was born in New York state, his hailing place being Oswego. He was graduated from Cornell, whose students nowadays are astonishing the world by their athletic prowess, and following his graduation he passed five years in Great Britain in the practical and theoretical study of naval architecture.

Mr. Gardner began the business of designing yachts in 1889.

What It Costs

... AND ...

What It Pays

are two values of newspaper advertising that the merchan has to consider. But the most important thing is

WHAT IT PAYS.

The merchant can get space in papers of small circulation and little influence for a little less money than the same size space would cost in the DAILY LEDGER and the QUINCY PATRIOT.

DOES IT PAY

to throw away the certainty of the profitable returns which are sure to LEDGER and PATRIOT advertisers, because it costs less to advertise in cheaper paper?

SINGING FLAMES.

Two Little Experiments That Are Curious and Interesting.

Did you ever hear of "singing" flames? Here are two little experiments showing how sensitive a flame may be to sharp sounds and how it may be made to "sing."

Nail together two blocks of wood, A and D, as shown in the picture, and at the top of A fasten a piece of wire, B, with a ring about five inches in diameter at its other end. Over this ring place a piece of wire gauze, C.

Get a piece of glass tubing about a quarter of an inch in its outside diameter and have a jet made at one end, as shown in the cut. It can then be fastened to the block of wood, E, with a little wax so that its tip is about two inches under the gauze. To the other end of the glass tubing fasten a piece of rubber tubing and connect it with a gas jet.

Turn on the gas and light it above the wire gauze, and it should burn there with a thin conical flame about four inches long. Let it burn a moment steadily, and then if you suddenly make a hissing sound the flame is so sensitive that it will shrink at once to a small blue flame.

Again let it burn up quietly and then suddenly whistle or clap your hands or jingle some coins or make a rapping noise. Again the flame will shrink, and it will act in the same way at any sudden loud noise.

Now get a glass tube, T, if possible, twelve inches long and an inch and a quarter in diameter, but any size will do from seven inches to two feet in length and from three-quarters of an inch to an inch and a half in diameter.

Rest the tube lightly on the gauze, covering the flame with it. If now you will lift the gauze and the tube from the ring and raise them very carefully the flame will shorten and then suddenly begin to "sing." Now lower the gauze and tube to just the point where the flame ceases to sing, and it will be so sensitive that the lightest high, sharp sound will set it to singing, but it will cease the moment the sound stops.

The flame responds very quickly, as you may prove by saying a word like "secede" or "sensitive." The flame will sing twice in each case—in the first word for the hissing of the s and c, in the second for each s.

Make these experiments. They are very curious and interesting.

Game of Castle King.

Choose your king by some counting out rhyme. Then he must stand on a high place and shout defiance to his foes. He taunts them with abusive epithets as:

I'm the king of the castle;
Get down, you cowardly rascal!

He is then assailed by the other players, every one a claimant for his position of eminence, and alone he must try to maintain it.

Fair pulls and pushes are allowed, but the clothes must not be pulled under penalty of being set aside as a prisoner of war, which really means expulsion from the game.

Sometimes the king is permitted to have an ally, who merely stands by, to see fair play and to capture any one breaking the rules.

The odds against the king, beset by so many enemies, are so great that he does not long retain his position, and the one who dethrones him takes his place and possession of the "castle."

Conundrums.

Why should a housekeeper never put the letter M into her refrigerator? Answer—Because it would change ice into mice.

How many soft boiled eggs could a giant eat on an empty stomach? Answer—One, for after that his stomach wouldn't be empty.

Which would you rather, that a lion ate you or a tiger? Answer—Why, you would rather that the lion ate the tiger, of course.

Your Doll's Head.

If the new head of the doll is filled with cotton before being attached to the body the eyes will not fall in, and the danger of breakage from falls will be reduced.

Good Hints.

Here is a hint for every girl
Who hopes to be a belle:
Don't let your tongue too loudly ring
And learn to chime in well.

Small boys who think that some fine day
They will be rich and wise
Must read their book and must not spend
Their cents for cakes and pies.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the best summer vaudeville shows of the entire season is announced from Keith's Theatre for the week of July 3. One of the principal features of the big bill is to be presented by Nina Morris, Arthur Hoops and company, entitled, "A Friend's Advice," which is the best comedy sketches now being offered in the varieties. Included in the surrounding program are several newcomers to Boston and others who have been absent from the city for longer or shorter periods. The list includes, Cheridah Simpson, a talented prima donna, late of the "Woodland" company; Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, eccentric dancers and acrobats; Tom Moore, a strenous singer of "coon" songs; Hickman brothers, a trio of clever acrobatic comedians; Will Rogers, wonderful manipulator of the lasso and Dave Nowlin, mimetic comedian and vocalist. The Fadettes woman's orchestra will begin the fifth week of their summer engagement and will make an entire change of selections. A new list of comedy and interesting motion pictures will be shown in the biograph.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

"The Telephone Girl" a musical comedy in two acts, written by Hugh Morton, with music by Gustave Kerker, will be presented at the Empire Theatre, Boston, for a brief revival beginning Monday, July 3, by the Empire Musical Comedy Company, under the general direction of Adolphe Mayer. "The Telephone Girl" is one of the most successful and popular of the numerous New York Casino productions, and it has always enjoyed a great vogue with Boston theatre goers. This will be the first time "The Telephone Girl" has ever been presented in Boston at summer prices, and this fact, with the exceptionally strong cast which will be offered, will make the forthcoming performances noteworthy. The role of Hans Nix, inspector of telephones, will be assumed by Will H. Sloan, already to be credited with two hits as a polite lunatic, in "The Belle of New York," and as Old King Cole in "Jack and the Beanstalk;" and Edith Yerrington will sing the role of Estelle-Coocoo, the telephone girl.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The numerous requests received by the Castle Square Theatre management for a revival of "Audrey" have led to the announcement of this fascinating drama as next week's attraction at the Castle Square. It will be remembered that Mary Hall made the success of her engagement during the summer season two years ago in this play and its revival will be a source of unmixed pleasure to those who saw her remarkable impersonation of Darden's Audrey. The play will be given a very elaborate production in this revival with unusual care in reproducing the home life of old Virginia and the costumes of the period will add a distinct charm to the stage pictures. The present membership of the Castle Square company makes it justifiable to anticipate a most satisfactory presentation of the leading characters. The usual free distribution of souvenir boxes of choice bon-bons will be made at the Monday matinee.

"The Pearl and the Pumpkin."

Klaw and Erlanger, whose great theatrical attractions have become wonderfully popular in New England because of their merit and magnitude, will present an entirely new production at the Colonial Theatre in Boston Monday evening, July 17th. It will remain for several weeks. This piece is an extravaganza called "The Pearl and the Pumpkin." It will be presented by a company of 300 people, headed by a corps of the best known comedians and players on the American stage. From the standpoint of scenery and costumes, this production will far eclipse any ever made in this country and will set up a new standard in spectacular art in America.

The book was written by Paul West, a young Lawrence, Mass., journalist, who is now one of the editors of the New York World, and W. W. Denslow, author of "The Wizard of Oz." The story of the piece is founded on that of the little book of the same title lately published by these writers, profusely illustrated by Mr. Denslow. These drawings serve as types for the characters in the stage version. The music was written by John W. Bratton, who has more popular successes to his credit than any other American composer.

The story of the piece is remarkably entertaining. The characters are well selected and strongly contrasted and many are so unique that they will furnish much humor from the very oddity of their personalities. In this respect the new extravaganza will display unusual originality. The lyrics are described as the best heard in a musical production in many a day. Herbert Gresham and Ned Wayburn are staging the play.

The scenes will be strikingly effective and will represent the home of the fairies; a Hallowe'en party in Farmer Pringle's barn in Vermont; a lonely road leading to a cornfield; the magic cornfield at midnight; Davy Jones' locker beneath the sea; Mother Carey's fairy palace; Ike Cannem's factory in Bermuda; a lily field and a beach in Bermuda.

FOURTH OF JULY.

An Institution of the Quincy President.

John Adams Never Despaired.

For the Independence of These United States.

If every citizen of the United States were asked why he or his children celebrate the Fourth, almost everyone would say, "It is Independence day. On July 4, 1776, the United States became an independent nation. Only a few knowing ones would be found to say that our independence day is really July 2 instead of the 4th, but these few are right according to the facts.

Most of us are accustomed to think also that our independence was achieved by a happy thought one July day — the 4th — and that it came almost solely through the efforts of Thomas Jefferson of Virginia. Yet from the beginning of the war there had been a large party of men who had fought in congress to have the colonies declare themselves free from the mother country, and this party had a hard row to hoe.

The strength of the resistance made to the declaration is now very little understood.

Nevertheless, there were many who all along had opposed it in a half-hearted sort of way, because they did not believe in a decisive step. Among these were delegates Dickinson, Wilson, R. R. Livingston and E. Rutledge. Among those on the other side were Jefferson, Wythe, R. H. Lee and John Adams.

Many excellent persons opposed independence on doubts whether the country was provided sufficiently with the means of supporting it, whether the minds of the people were yet prepared to receive it, etc.

The man to whom the country is most indebted for the great measure of independence was John Adams of Quincy.

It was John Adams who never despaired during the long years of preparation, and he it was who sustained the debate when the question finally came up, and by the force of his reasoning demonstrated not only the justice but the expediency of the measure. He was the pillar of its support on the floor of congress, its ablest advocate and defender against the multifarious assaults it encountered.

The subject had been in contemplation for more than a year, and frequent discussions have been had concerning it, when the first active steps were taken on Friday, June 7. On this day certain resolutions respecting independence being moved and seconded, it was "Resolved, That the consideration of them be referred until the following morning, and that the members be enjoined to attend punctually at 10 o'clock, in order to take the same into consideration."

On the next day the only thing that was done was to have the resolutions referred to a committee of the whole congress. It was then, on Monday, June 10, 1776, that, after consideration by the committee of the whole, Mr. Harrison, the president of the body, reported a resolution which had been agreed to. It read as follows:

"Resolved, That the consideration of the first resolution be postponed to the 1st day of July next, and in the meantime that no time be lost, in case the congress agrees thereto, that a committee be appointed to prepare a declaration to the effect of the first resolution, which is in these words, 'That the United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance of the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is and ought to be, totally dissolved.'"

This is the first time the resolution is mentioned.

On Tuesday, June 11, it was: "Resolved, That the committee for preparing the declaration consist of five," and the members chosen were Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Mr. Sherman and R. R. Livingston.

Of this committee the natural chairman was John Adams, but for various reasons he was not given the honor. Jefferson was chosen because of the respect it was felt ought to be shown to the great state of Virginia, as well as because of the ability of the state papers which Jefferson had already drawn up for Virginia. Besides this he had the general favor which follows merit, modesty and a sweet disposition. In other words, as John Adams put it "he had the most votes."

Nevertheless the greatest credit is due to Jefferson for his masterpiece. From the fullness of his own mind, without consulting one single book, Jefferson drafted the declaration, submitting it separately to Franklin and to John Adams, accepting from each of them one or two verbal, unimportant corrections, and on June 28 reported it to congress.

On Monday, July 1, the great question of independence came up for its first real consideration. The final test was at hand.

The instructions which Maryland had given to its delegates to vote against independence were recalled and the delegates were authorized and empowered to concur with the other colonies, or a majority of them, in declaring the united colonies free and independent states. The first step was to pass the resolution that congress resolve itself into a committee of the whole, to take into consideration the resolution respecting independence.

At one time and another all the arguments for independence and against it had been exhausted, and were become familiar. It was therefore expected that no more would be said in public, but that the question would be put and determined.

Mr. Dickinson of Pennsylvania, however, was determined to bear his testimony against it with more formality. He had prepared himself with great labor and ardent zeal, and in a speech of great length, and with all his eloquence, he combined together all that had before been written in pamphlets and newspaper, and all that had from time to time been said in congress by himself and others. He conducted the debate with great ingenuity and eloquence, with equal politeness and candor.

For a few minute perfect silences prevailed; every one felt the responsibility of acting finally on the most important question ever agitated in the assembly. In the absence of the mover of the resolution the eyes of everyone turned to its seconder, John Adams.

He had made no preparation for that morning, but for many months independence had been the chief object of his thoughts and his discourse, and the strongest arguments ranged themselves before his mind in their natural order. Of his sudden, impetuous, unpremeditated speech no minutes ever existed and no verbatim report was ever made.

It is reported, however, that he began by saying that it was the first time of his life that he had ever wished for the talents and eloquence of the ancient orators of Greece and Rome, for he was sure that none of them ever had before him a question of more importance to his country and to the world.

Then he set forth the justice, the necessity and the advantages of a separation from Great Britain; he dwelt on the neglect and insult with which their petitions had been treated by the king, and on that vindictive spirit, which showed itself in the employment of German troops, whose arrival was hourly expected, to compel the colonists to unconditional submission. He concluded by urging the present time as the most suitable for resolving on independence, inasmuch as it had become the first wish and the last instruction of the communities they represented.

When the time for voting came the resolution for independence was sustained by nine colonies—two-thirds of the whole number. The committee rose and reported the resolution, but at the request of Edward Rutledge, on behalf of South Carolina, the determination upon it was put off till the next day.

On July 2, then, 12 colonies, New York alone dissenting, passed the resolutions.

It remained now only to set forth the reason for the act, and the principles which the new people would own as their guides.

During the remainder of that day and the two next, the language, the statements and the principles of the paper were closely scanned, and in the evening of July 4, New York still abstaining from the vote, 12 states, without one negative, agreed to the final draft of the declaration of independence as it has come down to us.

From this it will be seen that the declaration was not signed by the members of congress on the day on which it was agreed to, but it was duly authenticated by the President and secretary, and published to the world. July 2 is really independence day.

The nation, when it made the choice of a day for its great anniversary, however, selected not the day of the resolution of independence, which closed the past, but that of the declaration of the principles on which it opened its new career.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

SAIL ON PACIFIC

Included in the Teachers' Itinerary.

Also Day for Sightseeing at Montreal.

Miss Underwood's Party Will Start Wednesday.

The itinerary of the Teachers' party of which Miss Julia E. Underwood will be a member, has been changed and greatly improved. While the party are going and coming by the Canadian Pacific, the schedule is now arranged so that the excursionists will see most of the territory traversed by daylight, either when westbound or eastbound.

As first arranged the party will leave Boston at 8.30 P. M. on Wednesday of this week, but instead of leaving Montreal the next morning they will not leave until 9.40 P. M., on the Imperial limited or Dude train. This will give a day for sight seeing on Thursday in Montreal, the chief city of Canada.

Instead of stops over night at Banff and Glaciers, the excursionists will push through to the Pacific. An addition to the original trip will be from Mission Junction by rail to Vancouver, and a half day's sail from that city to Seattle, where their private car will be in waiting. They will arrive at Portland on Thursday morning, July 13.

The party will start on the return trip on Saturday night, July 15, making two stops for the night on the homeward journey, one at Glacier, and one at Banff. They will reach Boston as originally planned at 7.30 A. M. Monday, July 24.

The thirty teachers composing the party will be the guests of the Herald at the Bellevue, Boston, on Wednesday afternoon, and will go from there to the North station by auto. Many friends of Miss Underwood will go to the station to see her off.

Floating Hospital.

The Boston floating hospital will make its initial trip for the season July 6, and trips down the harbor will be made daily, whether permitting, to a date in September, to be determined upon later. Up to 8 o'clock in the morning patients will be admitted to the hospital at the station, Pickett's wharf, New street, East Boston, near North ferry.

The daily trips will be made from City wharf, South ferry, Eastern avenue, the hospital leaving at 9.30 A. M. and returning about 4 P. M. Patients will be received at these hours.

The management assures the public that all contagious diseases will be excluded from the hospital.

—A bound volume of the official program of the Lewis and Clark Fair has been sent to President Roosevelt at Washington by Albert Hess, the publisher. The volume contains the programs for the early days of the exposition, with room for the program for every day until the close of the fair, October 15. The programs are attractively gotten up, with an illuminated cover, and have proved popular, and useful.

—The Republican State Committee will meet in about two weeks to select the members at large on the committee on resolutions, and inaugurate the fall campaign.

—It has been remarked that when a man advertises his automobile for sale his friends wonder which of them is broke.

WON BY HUSTLER.

Club Race of the Quincy Yacht Club over New Course.

The postponed race under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club was sailed Saturday afternoon off the clubhouse, Houghs Neck, in a stiff southwesterly breeze. A comparatively new course was sailed which was hardly satisfactory.

But one class of sailing yachts participated. This was class B, and was won by Vice-Commodore Robbins' Hustler. The starting gun was fired at 2.55. The Hustler and Marvel, the two old rivals were jockeying for position and the Marvel, unfortunately, got across the line just as the gun sounded. She was therefore obliged to put about and cross again. This handicapped her somewhat. She sailed a fine race, however, and was but 37 seconds behind the Hustler, actual time, upon crossing the line at the finish.

The mainsail of Commodore Crane's Dorothy III did not draw well, and she was the last in the bunch to finish.

There were four starters in the motor boat class. W. J. Tilly's engine broke down during the race and he had to be towed in. The Iona won by 2 minutes, 23 seconds.

City Council Business.

The City Council will celebrate "the night before the Fourth" by holding a meeting tonight. While the meeting may not necessarily be a long one there is considerable business to come up in the way of committee reports.

The Committee on Streets will send in a large bunch of reports. These are in relation to petitions of the Electric Light and Telephone companies for location of poles, and attachments for the Telephone company.

The same committee will also report on the petitions for accepting Freeman, Holmes, Charles and Coe streets and Glendale road; on the order for raising the grade of Centre street, on the petitions for street lights on Centre, Winter, Robertson, Phillips, Willow, and Ridgeway streets, Wendall, Watertson and Franklin avenues; on the order for gravel sidewalk on Faxon road. On the petition of T. F. Mannex to run an air pipe across Willard street. On the petitions to accept Vershire street and Montclair avenue. Reports may also be expected from the Finance Committee.

Suspicious Fire.

The alarm from Box 72, at 6.47 Saturday night, called the department to a fire in an apartment house on Cleverly court owned by James R. Oxner of Wollaston and occupied by James P. White and David A. Haley. The fire started from some unknown cause in the upper tenement. The White family had their household effects all packed ready to move and the fire was discovered among them in the hallway. It had made good progress. The loss will not exceed $150. Chief Williams will order an investigation to determine the cause of the fire.

Lawn Party.

The Rosebud club of West Quincy held a matinee lawn party at the residence of Miss Isabel McGilvray, Thursday, June 29. It was a very successful affair. A hurdy-gurdy entertained the children and games were enjoyed.

The winners of the potato race were Beatrice Morrissette, Annie Sullivan and Mary Saville. The three-legged race was won by Early Martin and Henry Desmond. The ice cream table was in charge of Susie Hayes and Louise Dunn, the fancy work table in charge of Katherine Hussey and Christine McInnes, and Lillian Rogers presided over the candy table. Marie Magee and Isabel McGilvray dispensed the lemonade, and Annie Sullivan and Lillian McGilvray had charge of the peanut grab and plum pudding.

Quite a sum was realized, which the young ladies propose to donate to the City Hospital.

Shipyards Busy.

The bureau of navigation of the department of commerce and labor at Washington, made public on Saturday its annual shipbuilding returns for the year ending June 30, 1905. One thousand and fifty-four sail and steam vessels of 263,064 gross tons were built in the United States and officially numbered in the year.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Can it be the same James W. Alexander who a few days ago "coughed up" some $60,000 he had put into his pocket while president of the Equitable Assurance Association, who was saying in his address at Yale University one year ago that one of the greatest clogs upon the proper conduct of the important enterprise of life insurance is the interference of ignorant people who have for one reason or another a temporary opportunity to exercise power or influence, including the editor who, with "his theoretical knowlege and his vast confidence in himself," distorts "the minds of a considerable portion of the public on questions which to be decided correctly required the experience of years?" Mr. Alexander went on to say that life insurance was not a business or a money-making enterprise, but a noble and unselfish "cause." "Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander," muses Hamlet, "till we find it stopping a bunghole."—Boston Transcript.

☞ Superintendent Hendricks of the New York insurance departments finds as one of the lessons of the Equitable affair that the state should regulate the investments of the life insurance companies. It is a suggestion which has been made before, and had such a regulation been in force it would have prevented a considerable part of this Equitable scandal. It is opposed as being unwarranted interference with private affairs of the insurance companies, and yet it is nothing more than the state has assumed to be properly within its power in regard to its savings institutions and the regulations in that field has the endorsement of everyone. The insurance companies are fond of telling the people that they are as good as savings banks, if not better. Now let them submit themselves and their business to the same regulations and supervisions as are required of the savings banks and carry out the parallel.—Haverhill Gazette.

NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grief.

What a fortunate provision of nature it is, that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable store-house of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her aid. In the years gone by falling hair and grayness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Secretary Hay's Body Journeys In an Express Wagon

RAIN FELL IN TORRENTS

Undertaker and Coachman Composed Procession on Way to Railway Station--Special Train Carries Remains to Cleveland

Newbury, N. H., July 3.—A special train, bearing the body of Secretary of State John Hay, who died suddenly early Saturday morning at "The Fells," his summer residence on the shore of Lake Sunapee, left Newbury yesterday for Cleveland, where the interment will occur. The funeral party consisted of the widow, Clarence Hay, the son; Dr. Scudder of Boston, who attended Secretary Hay during his last illness; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mather of Cleveland, the latter a sister of Mrs. Hay, and S. A. Raymond, also a relative of Mrs. Hay. The casket was enclosed in a polished rosewood box, in which it will repose until the funeral next Wednesday afternoon.

Early in the day the skies became overcast and a drenching rain began to fall. The narrow, winding mountain road was turned into channels of mud and was in a fearful condition. At 9:40 o'clock an express wagon was driven to the front door of the house, and the casket was borne out and placed in the vehicle. Then the trip to the railroad station at Newbury began.

The journey from "The Fells" to the station was 2½ miles. The rosewood box, covered with a rubber blanket, was lashed to the wagon, the steepness of the hills making such a precaution necessary. The body was attended only by the undertaker and Walter Grout, Secretary Hay's coachman. Both men walked, the coachman leading the horse, while the undertaker followed behind.

Not a person was met along the lonely mountain road. The window shades of the few scattered farm houses along the route were drawn. The rain fell in torrents as the funeral party trudged through the muddy road. The trip to Newbury station occupied nearly an hour. Nearly all the residents of the little hamlet were assembled at the station awaiting the arrival of the funeral party, and when the wagon with Mr. Hay's body neared the station, the crowd on the platform stood with heads bared as a silent tribute of respect.

The special train, consisting of a combination baggage car, a sleeping car and funeral car, was standing on the siding. The wagon was driven to the rear of the funeral car and several Newbury citizens assisted in transferring the casket. At the moment when the casket was placed on board the train there was a rift in the clouds and for the first and only time during the day the lofty hills were bathed in sunshine. Less than five minutes later the rain began to fall again.

Shortly after 11 o'clock a closed bus, in which were Clarence Hay, Mr. and Mrs. Mather, Mrs. Hay, Dr. Scudder and Mr. Raymond, arrived at the station. Mrs. Hay walked unaided to the train. Entering the sleeping car she was shown into the stateroom, where she was quickly joined by her son. The other members of the party occupied a portion of the car. The train left on its westward journey at 11:20 o'clock.

In response to an invitation from the officers of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, the body of the secretary will repose in the Chamber of Commerce building from the time it reaches Cleveland until the hour of the funeral on Wednesday. The body will not lie in state.

The Hay residence at Cleveland has been rented, and Mrs. Hay accepted the invitation of the Chamber of Commerce rather than have the body of her husband remain in a receiving tomb. President Roosevelt, it is expected, will join the funeral party at some point between Buffalo and Cleveland.

The funeral services will be held in the Wade Memorial chapel on Wednesday, although the exact hour has not been determined. The services will be conducted by Rev. Hiram C. Hayden, pastor of the Presbyterian church which Mr. Hay attended in Cleveland, and he will be assisted by Rev. Dr. Tennis Hamlin, pastor of the Church of the Covenant in Washington.

The President's Proclamation

Washington, July 3.—President Roosevelt's proclamation announcing the death of John Hay was promulgated today in Washington. Following is the full text of the announcement:

"John Hay, secretary of state, died on July 1. His death, a crushing sorrow to his friends, is to the people of this country a national bereavement, and in addition it is a serious loss to mankind, for to him it was given to stand as a leader in the effort to better world conditions by striving to advance the cause of international peace and justice.

"He entered the public service as the trusted and intimate companion of Abraham Lincoln, and for well nigh 40 years he served his country with loyal devotion and high ability in many positions of honor and trust; and finally he crowned his life work by serving as secretary of state with such far-sightedness of the future and such loyalty to lofty ideas as to confer lasting benefits not only upon our own country but upon all the nations of the earth.

"As a suitable expression of national mourning, I direct that the diplomatic representatives of the United States in all foreign countries display the flags over their embassies and legations at half-mast for 10 days; that for a like period the flag of the United States be displayed at half-mast at all forts and military posts, and at all naval stations and on all vessels of the United States. I further order that on the day of the funeral the executive department in Washington be closed, and that on all public buildings throughout the United States the national flag be displayed at half-mast.

"Done at the city of Washington, this third day of July, A. D., 1905, and of the Independence of the United States of America the One Hundred and Twenty-Ninth."

Messages of Condolence

Washington, July 3.—The high esteem in which Secretary Hay was universally held at home and abroad is manifested by the messages which have been received by the government and by Mrs. Hay since his death. They have come from sovereigns, from foreign offices, from officials in the diplomatic service and from men in public and private life throughout this country.

Doesn't Expect to Succeed Hay

Omaha, July 3.—Secretary of War Taft and party, bound for the Philippine Islands, passed through here yesterday. Secretary Taft said: "I do not expect to become secretary of state. I telegraphed the president for instructions when we heard of Secretary Hay's death and he ordered us to proceed. That does not look as if I am to be secretary of state."

Confidence In His Fairness

Tokio, July 3.—News of the death of Secretary of State Hay was received in Japan with universal regret. Hundreds of expressions of sorrow from prominent officers and others are reaching American Minister Griscom. Secretary Hay's prominence in Oriental diplomacy in recent years had made his name familiar to those people who had the highest confidence in his fairness.

Interest as to Hay's Successor

London, July 3.—All the London newspapers print extended obituaries of Secretary Hay and editorials lamenting his death, eulogizing his statesmanlike qualities and expressing a sense of deep regret that so warm a friend to Great Britain has passed away. There is exhibited a keen interest as to who will be his successor.

RUSSIAN NAVY IN FULL REVOLT

Euxine Fleet's Fires Drawn and Machinery Ungeared

HER SAILORS NOT LOYAL

Admiral Kruger Permits All Disaffected Ones to Go Ashore at Sebastopol--No Attempt to Suppress Mutiny on the Kniaz Potemkine--The Same State of Affairs May Exist In Army Should the Occasion Arise to Employ Troops Against Internal Uprising--The "Pirate" Ship In a Roumanian Port

St. Petersburg, July 3.—The unprecedented spectacle of a powerful modern battleship cruising around in the Black sea in the hands of a crew who, under the rules of international law, cannot be regarded as other than pirates, and of the admiral in command of the rest of the Euxine fleet frankly confessing his inability to cope with the situation and ordering the fires of his warships to be drawn, has stupefied the Russian admiralty.

The errant battleship Kniaz Potemkine is now at Kustenji, Roumania. No plans for capturing her have been devised and the policy of non-interference seems to be at present in vogue. The situation would furnish a libretto for a comic opera were not the elements of the plot so serious.

Dispatches from Odessa and Sebastopol, which are confirmed by the admiralty, clear up fully the present situation. The crew of the Kniaz Potemkine, reinforced by sympathizers from shore, is still in control of the vessel.

On the Georgi Pobiedonosetz, which cast in its fortunes with the Kniaz Potemkine after it arrived at Odessa and landed its officers, the more loyal or more timorous portion of the crew again gained the upper hand and agreed to surrender and disarm the ship. The rest of the squadron returned to Sebastopol without venturing to take up the gauntlet thrown down by the mutineers on the Kniaz Potemkine, and Admiral Kruger, after a council of war, finding that he could not depend on his crews, ordered the fires drawn beneath the boilers of his ships and gave permission to all the disaffected officers and sailors to quit the vessels and go ashore.

The proclamation attached to the dead body of the Kniaz Potemkine's sailor, Omiltchuk, at Odessa, the text of which was received yesterday, confirms the statement of the authorities that the revolt was engineered by Social revolutionists. The proclamation terminated with the slogan of the party: "One for all and all for one." This makes the situation more serious than would have been the matter of simple disaffection, and gives rise to the greater apprehension that the revolutionary organization may have conducted an equally successful propaganda among the soldiers, the results of which will be suddenly manifested when the army is called upon in some internal emergency.

Though no permission was given to print the details, the latest developments are now known to all circles in St. Petersburg.

Situation Could Not Be Blacker

London, July 3.—The dispatch from Sebastopol telling of the action of Vice Admiral Kruger in ungearing his machinery and authorizing his officers and men to go ashore, is regarded by the London papers as a full explanation of the mystery surrounding recent occurrences at Odessa. It is held that there is no longer any doubt that Russia is confronted with serious disaffection in the remnant of her navy and that this knowledge actuated Admiral Kruger in refraining from any attempt to suppress the mutiny on the Kniaz Potemkine. The question is asked how far the same state of affairs may exist in the army should occasion arise to employ the troops against a serious internal uprising.

Though for the moment the danger threatening Odessa itself has been averted, it is considered that the situation could hardly be blacker. The history of the past few days inclines the public here to regard with suspicion most of the reports emanating from Russia, and the tendency is to believe that the condition of affairs at Odessa, Libau, Cronstadt and elsewhere is much worse than has been represented, and no surprise will be expressed should the alleged surrender of the Georgi Pobiedonosetz turn out to be no better founded than was the reported surrender of the Kniaz Potemkine.

The presence of the battleship at Kustenji is considered to place the Roumanian government in a very delicate and difficult position.

Got Supplies From Roumanians

Kustenji, Roumania, July 3.—The commander of the Roumanian fleet boarded the Kniaz Potemkine upon her arrival here and gave her permission to take water and provisions pending instructions from Bucharest. The battleship has anchored within the three-mile limit. The Russian gunboat Pseuoupe is also here, but has not communicated with the Kniaz Potemkine.

MOVE FOR PEACE

Long Step Forward by Formal Naming of Envoys

ARE GIVEN FULL POWER

Japan's Demand That They Be Clothed With Ample Authority to Conclude Trea y Endorsed by President Roosevelt

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 3.—Official announcement has been made by President Roosevelt of the names of the Russian and Japanese envoys to the Washington peace conference. The character and ability of the men selected by both belligerents is an earnest of the desire of their respective governments to conclude, if possible, the tragedy being enacted in the far east. By direction of the president, Secretary Loeb made the formal announcement in the following statement:

"The president announces that the Russian and Japanese governments have notified him that they have appointed the plenipotentiaries to meet here (Washington) as soon after the first of August as possible. The two Russian plenipotentiaries are Ambassador Muravieff, formerly minister of justice, and now ambassador at Rome, and Ambassador Rosen. The Japanese plenipotentiaries are Baron Komura, now minister of foreign affairs, and Minister Takahira.

"It is possible that each side may send one or more additional representatives. The plenipotentiaries of both Russia and Japan will be entrusted with full power to negotiate and conclude a treaty of peace, subject, of course, to ratification by their respective home governments."

A day or two ago the Russian and Japanese governments formally communicated to President Roosevelt the names of the plenipotentiaries they respectively had selected. Acting as an intermediary, the president communicated the names of the Japanese envoys to the St. Petersburg government, and those of the Russian representatives to the government at Tokio. Having received from both governments assurances that the selections were satisfactory, the president, according to his agreement with the belligerents, authorized the public announcement of the envoys.

Some delay was occasioned in the selection of the plenipotentiaries by the insistence of Japan that the envoys of both governments be clothed with full power to conclude peace and to negotiate a permanent treaty. The Japanese government indicated pointedly that the emperor would not permit his envoys to enter upon a tentative conference in which Japan was to define its terms and then let Russia decide whether the conferees should proceed with their deliberations. The Tokio government insisted that the plenipotentiaries should have conferred on them treaty-making powers, and that the negotiations should be entered upon in a spirit of perfect sincerity.

Such, too, was the position taken by President Roosevelt. He maintained that only by clothing the envoys with ample authority to act for their respective governments could a lasting peace be achieved. He strongly urged the St. Petersburg government to accede to what was regarded as a reasonable proposition of Japan. That he was successful n his presentation of the matter to the Russian emperor is indicated clearly in the statement which he has just issued.

The president's announcement practically concludes the preliminary negotiations for peace. Minor details remain yet to be arranged, but the conference now seems to be assured.

For the purpose of organization the plenipotentiaries will first meet in Washington, but it is regarded as highly probable that at an early date thereafter they will adjourn to hold the business sessions of the conference in some city on the north Atlantic seaboard. In this connection the word "here" in the official statement is likely to be misunderstood. It meant Washington, or in this country, and not at Oyster Bay, as a casual reader might infer.

The sessions of the conference, of course, will not be held in Oyster Bay, although it is expected now that the envoys of the two conferring powers will come here to pay their respects to President Roosevelt, and to receive his greetings to the United States. The trip of the plenipotentiaries to the president's home will probably be made in two warships, the Mayflower and the Dolphin being under consideration for the mission.

Delighted at Roosevelt's Success

London, July 3.—A dispatch from The Associated Press at New York was the first intimation London had of the definite appointment of the Russian and Japanese delegates to the peace conference at Washington. When the news was communicated to the foreign embassies and the officials here everyone expressed great delight at the successful issue of President Roosevelt's efforts.

They were surprised that the delegates were empowered to conclude a treaty of peace, as it was feared that Russia would hold out for ratification by the government. One diplomat said that it was a great diplomatic achievement, and if President Roosevelt succeeded in inducing the belligerents to agree to an armistice before another great battle was fought his triumph would be complete. He felt that the selection of Baron Rosen as one of the delegates was a happy choice, as the Japanese have great respect for him. The diplomat pointed out that at the breaking off of diplomatic relations by Japan and Russia the whole Japanese nation expressed its sympathy with Baron Rosen, who was then minister to Japan, and during his progress through the streets of Tokio, when he was leaving for Russia, the people bared their heads and stood in silence.

Armistice Negotiations On

St. Petersburg, July 3.—Negotiations for an armistice between the armies of Russia and Japan, it can be definitely stated, are now in progress, presumably at Washington, but they have not reached a stage where any further announcement can be made. The decision seems to rest with Japan, which country is weighing the relinquishment of the prospects of bettering her present advantageous position against the enormous cost in lives and money of another great battle.

Advance of Japanese

St. Petersburg, July 3.—The emperor has received the following telegram from General Linevitch: "On the morning of June 29 our outposts retreated before a vigorous advance on Beihe, but on the arrival of our reinforcements the enemy retired. On the same morning the Japanese advanced from Nanshanchensi to Loguchan and from Julantsi to Wanheku."

Japs Threaten Vladivostok

London, July 3.—The correspondent of The Morning Post at Shanghai says that the Japanese are advancing on Vladivostok and that a battle is imminent near the Tumen river.

Flatiron Knocked Ont Stabber

Boston, July 3.—After Mrs. Fred Rankin had received five knife wounds from Henry M. Pascal, because she interfered in a labor dispute between him and her husband, she struck Pascal on the head with a flatiron, disabling him so severely that the police had no difficulty in arresting him on a charge of an assault on the woman with intent to kill. The woman's wounds are not considered serious.

Grand Jury Indicts Beef Trust

Chicago, July 3.—Twenty-three individuals and four corporations have been indicted by the federal grand jury, which has been investigating the methods of the beef trust. Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Nelson Morris & Co. and the Cudahy Packing company are indicted under the Sherman anti-trust law as corporations, for operating an illegal combination in restraint of trade.

Old Man a Wife Murderer

Cleveland, July 3.—That he had grown tired of supporting his old wife, who had become an invalid, was the excuse for killing her which August Otto, 68 years old, gave the police last night when he confessed the crime. The woman's head was almost hacked to pieces with a hatchet. The man is supposed to be mentally deranged.

Elements on the Rampage

Elmira, N. Y., July 3.—This city and immediate neighborhood was the centre of a terrific electrical storm last evening which did great damage. Lightning struck a dozen buildings. Rain washed out Tuttle avenue, destroying one home and damaging about 20 others. Near Pine City Miles Adle was drowned.

Two Young Men Drowned

Weston, Mass., July 3.—Michael Gogilina and Frank Lanzilo of Boston, each 20 years old, were drowned while canoeing with three other young men on Nonesuch pond. They were out on the pond in a large canoe and one of them undressed and jumped overboard for a swim. In doing so he upset the canoe.

Preparing to Start Toward Pole

New York, July 3.—Steamer Roosevelt, on which the Peary Artic club expedition, headed by Captain Peary, will seek to penetrate the frozen north, has arrived here from Portland, Me. Captain Peary expects to remain here about 10 days taking on supplies before starting on his journey.

Perhaps a Thousand Drowned

Mexico City, Mex., July 3.—Reports are current here that from 100 persons upward, with one report claiming even 1000, have been drowned in a great flood at Guanajuato, a mining city. The wires are down and the roads are impassable. No news has been received directly.

Boycott Movement Subsiding

London, July 3.—The correspondent of The Times at Pekin says: The movement for the boycotting of American goods is subsiding, owing to the action of the authorities, whose desire to prevent the impairment of the American good will is, beyond question, sincere.

Magoon Is Minister to Panama

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 3.—President Roosevelt has appointed Charles E. Magoon as United States minister to Panama. Judge Magoon is at present governor of the canal zone in Panama and a member of the executive committee of the isthmian canal commission.

DELUGE IN VERMONT

Crops, Railroads, Bridges and Dams Receive a Hard Blow

St. Albans, Vt., July 3.—A heavy storm which swept over northwestern Vermont for 24 hours caused much damage in this city and in the country districts. Cellars and basements of stores and residences were flooded, the streets were badly washed out and the telephone system was injured by lightning. Stevens brook, a small stream which runs through the city, became a raging torrent. The water in the stream rose at the rate of three feet an hour, and reached the highest point known for 36 years.

On the Central Vermont railroad the rails and roadbed near Cambridge Junction were washed out, and trains were cancelled. The country roads in Franklin county were severely washed, and crops throughout this section were badly damaged.

The storm was very severe in Lamoille county, the hay crop in the lowlands being ruined and many bridges and dams being washed away. At Morristown more than four inches of rain fell in 24 hours. At Stowe a mill dam was carried away, and nearly all the roads on the side of Mount Mansfield were gullied so as to be impassable.

A train which left St. Johnsbury Saturday afternoon was stopped by a washout at Hardwick. The officials decided to return to St. Johnsbury, but before the train had gone half a mile another washout occurred which blocked the road and the passengers were taken to St. Johnsbury on handcars.

Cocking Main Interrupted

Braintree, Mass., July 3.—The shrill crow of a cock from a wagon early Sunday led to the discovery and partially successful raid several hours later of a cocking main in a barn. A large body of officers from Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook and Weymouth approached the barn, but their coming was discovered and at least 100 men fled from the scene, leaving 12 wagons and a dozen birds at the barn. Two men were captured and locked up. The bodies of three dead birds were found on the floor of the barn.

Sunday Amusements Checked

Lawrence, Mass., July 3.—There was unexpected action directed against the Sunday amusements at Canobie Lake park Sunday afternoon, when the New Hampshire state authorities ordered the closing of the various amusements at the park on the Sabbath. General Manager Woodman of the Southern New Hampshire Traction company evinced a willingness to be held responsible for all upon whom warrants were served and submitted to arrest.

Never Spoiled by Wealth

Boston, July 3.—"President Roosevelt, the man unspoiled by circumstances," was the subject of Rev. W. W. Bustard's discourse at the Dudley Street Baptist church last evening. "All the wealth with which President Theodore Roosevelt was endowed when a young man utterly failed to entangle him in its meshes," said the preacher. "Riches was his great disadvantage; he was badly crippled with wealth, but he was never spoiled by it."

Domestic Bliss Destroyed

Taunton, Mass., July 3.—Alleging that false representations and malicious allegations estranged her husband so much that he barred her from her home late at night when she was only scantily clad, Mary E. Harlow of this city has brought suit for $40,000 against Abbie Hathaway for destroying her husband's affections, and she has also brought suit against her husband, Walter Harlow, for separate maintenance.

Little Rhody Gets Bristol Trophy

Bristol, R. I. July 3.—The sloop Little Rhody, owned by Commodore Tillinghast of the Bristol Yacht club, won her second ocean race within a year, when she captured her club trophy for the 88-mile race to Montauk point and return against 17 competitors, all under 31 feet waterline. The Priscilla was awarded the second cup, while the Bambino took the third.

Flat Refusal to Weavers

Fall River, Mass., July 3.—Will the weavers of this city, 10,000 in number, back up their demand for an increase of wages by striking on July 17? Such is the momentous question facing Fall River. The weavers issued their ultimatum last Wednesday evening and the manufacturers have rendered their decision by mail, flatly refusing the demand of the union.

Crushed to Death by Car

Methuen, Mass., July 3.—Henry Heiner, aged 52, a Haverhill barber, was struck by an electric car here last night and crushed to death. Heiner stepped on the track and was endeavoring to hail the motorman when the accident happened. Heiner was caught by the front truck of the car, rolled a distance of 125 feet, and was mangled by the rear truck.

Head-On Collision of Trolleys

Saugus, Mass., July 3.—Two open trolley cars crashed head-on at North Saugus at 9:45 last night. Four passengers were badly injured, one perhaps fatally, and the rest of the occupants of the two cars were badly shaken. The accident is attributed to slippery rails. At the point where the collision took place the road is single-tracked.

Paper Business Is Poor

Lee, Mass., July 3.—The W. C. Benton paper mill has closed for an indefinite period. About 50 hands are thrown out of employment. The closing of the factory is ascribed to poor business. High grade paper was the product.

MERRYMOUNTS

Defeat the Quincys by One Run.

The Copeland Club Wins.

Other Saturday Games on Local Diamonds.

The Merrymounts won from the Quincys at Merrymount Park on Saturday by the score of 4 to 3.

Kolson had the better of the pitching end of the game, holding the Quincys down to five hits, three of which were made by Dunn. Donaher did the best stick work for Merrymount. A feature of the game was Mullane's work at third for Quincy.

In the first inning the Quincys started off like winners. Eldredge hit the first ball pitched for a single, and Dunn followed with a smash into the street for three bases. Kolson threw low to catch Dunn off third and he ambled home. Dorley was thrown out by Kolson, Duffy fanned and Mullane was out on a fly to Baker.

For Merrymount, Taylor fanned, Donaher and Baker singled, Drake hit to Mullane who threw out Donaher at the plate. Baker was caught napping off third, Welch to Mullane.

In the second, Quincy went out in order. For Merrymount, Kapplar got a life on Duffy's error. Osgood singled. Kappler scored on Atkins' grounder. Granahan struck out. Atkins was caught off second and run down by Welch, and Osgood was thrown out attempting to get home.

In the third with two down, Dunn singled but was thrown out by Drake in trying to steal second. Kolson and Taylor were called out on strikes. Donaher hit safely but was left.

In the fourth Dorley fanned, and Duffy and Mullane were thrown out by Kolson.

Drake hit a bad one to Dunn that he failed to get. Kappler was thrown out by Mullane. Osgood was safe on a fielder's choice. Atkins hit to Mullane who threw to Dunn on third, forcing Drake. Granahan was thrown out by Welch.

Quincy failed to reach first in the fifth but Merrymount scored one on Taylor's hit and steal, and Donaher's double that bounded over Eldredge. Baker was safe on Welch's muff of a high fly, but Drake went out on a line fly to Dunn who threw to second in time to double Donaher.

In the sixth with two out Dunn hit safely but was left.

Merrymount went out in order.

In the seventh, Mullane got to first on Kolson's fumble and took second on Drake's poor throw to Taylor but was left. There was nothing doing for Merrymount.

It was one, two, three for Quincy in the eighth. For Merrymount, Baker was thrown out by Welch. Drake singled, Kappler's fly was caught by Eldredge, Osgood was passed, Atkins smashed the ball over third scoring Drake. Granahan was thrown out by Mullane.

In the ninth Dunn flied out to Baker, Dorley hit to Kappler who threw low to first and Dorley was safe. Duffy singled, and Mullane was out on a grounder to first, Dorley scoring the tieing run. Rooney struck out.

For Merrymount, Kolson got his base on four bad ones, Taylor bunted, and Welch threw high to first, Kolson going to third. A wild pitch let Kolson in with the winning run.

Sudden Illness.

Ex-Councilman Joseph C. Morse, who is passing the summer at Rose Cliff, North Weymouth, was taken suddenly ill Saturday morning while at the Quincy depot waiting to take the train for Boston. He was put into a depot carriage and taken to the residence of Dr. Hunting, who ordered his immediate removal to the City Hospital.

It was decided that he had an attack of appendicitis and that the only thing that would save his life was an operation. A specialist was summoned from Boston and he was operated upon at 10 o'clock Saturday night. He came out of the operation all right and is now reported as doing as well as could be expected.

Geddes—Phelps.

Miss Nettie Mae Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Phelps, of Prospect avenue, was united in marriage to Mr. George Geddes, Jr. at Rochester, N. Y., Saturday, June 24. Mr. Geddes is employed by the United Machinery Co. and has recently been transferred to the Rochester office. Miss Phelps was employed at the Boston office. Both are very popular young people and were well remembered by the company and their friends.

A Hot Time.

Two Fore River employes, Edward J. Kilcourse and George A. Wuest gave the Boston police considerable trouble Saturday night before they were locked up. Kilcourse was arrested for drunkenness and put up a stubborn fight, and while the crowd tried to rescue him it is alleged that Wuest struck the officer. The officer held onto his prisoner and cracked Wuest's head with hisclub. Wuest got away but was later arrested and locked up. Kilcourse was also locked up. Both are known to Quincy officers.

Mrs. H. E. Ricker will entertain the Friday afternoon whist club, at her summer cottage, Post Island, on Friday afternoon.

LEAGUE GAMES.

The Makarias and the Athletics Were Victorious.

The standing of the Granite City league, including the games of Saturday, is as follows:

Athletics	4	0	1.000
Victors	2	1	.667
Makarias	1	2	.333
Orients	0	4	.000

Athletics vs. Victors.

In the most wretched game of baseball, probably ever exhibited in this city, the Athletics defeated the Victors on the Ward 3 playground last Saturday, putting the former in the lead of the Granite City League. There was one exception in the person of Smith, the Victors second baseman, who played a brilliant game, accepting thirteen chances without an error. The batting of both teams was lamentably weak, the runs being scored on errors.

SHOCK TO CITY.

Sudden Death of Joseph C. Morse.

Member of First City Council.

A Successful Leather Merchant of Boston.

The sudden death of ex-Councilman Joseph C. Morse early on Fourth of July morning, was a shock to a wide circle of friends. Monday's Ledger reported his sudden illness, and the fact that he had been operated upon at the Quincy Hospital for appendicitis. The attack came on Saturday without warning, and was very acute.

He was taken sick on the car while en route from North Weymouth to the Quincy depot. At the station he was in great pain and was driven to the residence of Dr. Hunting, and thence to the Hospital, where an operation took place Saturday evening.

At the time of his death at 4 A. M., Tuesday, Mrs. Morse was with him, the conditions on Monday not being favorable.

Mr. Morse was born in this city, Sept. 5, 1855, the oldest son of the late Stephen Morse. He entered the employ of the leather firm of E. B. Pratt & Co. of Boston in 1870. In 1879 he became a member of the firm and, in 1895, on the death of Mr. Pratt, succeeded to the business, changing the firm name to J. C. Morse & Co. He was especially prominent in the leather trade of Boston, having headquarters at 72-76 High street. He was connected with the New York house of Fayerweather & Ladew and was vice president of the J. H. Ladew company, tanners of New York.

Mr. Morse was a member of the first city council of Quincy, but repeated offers of high political honor failed to tempt him. He was a man of sterling worth, quiet in manner but firm in conviction, and had a most charitable disposition. He was married in 1880 to Miss Ethel E. Seavey of Boston. Four sons were born to them, of whom Joseph C. and Edwin M. Morse are living. His wife survives him.

Mr. Morse was a member of Rural lodge, F. and A. M., St. Stephens' chapter, R. A. M., De Molay commandery, K. T., and the Granite City club.

Many will recall several brilliant social events, recently, by Mr. and Mrs. Morse. In November last, over 500 were entertained at their beautiful residence on Goffe street at a wedding reception to their son Joseph C. Morse, Jr., and his wife. In January last Mr. and Mrs. Morse celebrated their silver wedding, and only last week, Thursday, Mrs. Morse entertained the members of the Hospital Aid Association at her summer residence at Rose Cliff.

In Septemper last Mr. and Mrs. Morse participated in the pilgrimage of Knights Templar to the Pacific, and Mr. Morse contributed a letter to the Daily Ledger telling of the "delightful trip" and the "most cordial reception everywhere."

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon. Services for the family will be held at his late residence on Goffe street, and will be followed by public services at the First church at 3 o'clock. These services will be in charge of the Masonic bodies. The burial will be at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

THE FOURTH.

How It Was Celebrated in Quincy

Several Fire Alarms the Night Before.

Strenuous Hours for the Police and Firemen.

No attempt was made to keep the lid down the night before in Quincy and as a result Young America had full sway. The boys were out early in the evening and there was an almost constant explosion of fireworks all night. Crowds of young people both young men and women were on the streets until late at night. They were armed with tin horns, flags and firecrackers and they made Rome howl. At the Council chamber where a meeting was in progress it was next to impossible at times to hear what was being said. Every now and then some remark would be punctuated with a loud report from exploding fireworks and at one time it became necessary for President Nichols to request the City Messenger to close the windows in order that he might hear what was being said.

It was the most quite night before the Fourth in Wollaston for several years. During the day in many localities, with the exception of the occasional snapping of a cracker or the toot of a horn, a Sunday stillness prevailed. In the evening there were many fireworks although less than in previous years.

It was an unusually noisy Fourth at Quincy Point. People began to celebrate early Monday evening and continued until the last thing Tuesday night. A few tried to prevent the young people from having their good time; but did not succeed and were just reminded that it was the Fourth.

Fire Protection.

Chief Williams took extra precautions to cope with any fires that might occur the "night before" and all the call men as well as the permanant men were retained at the several fire stations. In addition to the regular apparatus he had several hose wagons in readiness to respond to still alarms and to put out bonfires. In all there were about 35 men at the Central station, and the business men of City square saw to it that they had plenty in the way of refreshments to help them pass the night.

Some days ago C. C. Hearn and D. E. Wadsworth made a canvass among the business men with the result that quite a sum was raised. Monday night in the vicinity of 11 o'clock Messrs. Hearn and Wadsworth put in an appearance at the Central station and prepared a supper for the men, which they greatly appreciated upon their return from answering an alarm. These two gentlemen served the lunch and when they departed, a box of cigars was on the table for the firemen. On the afternoon of the Fourth they sent up several gallons of ice cream for the firemen. The men at the station desire the Ledger to express their thanks to the men for their thoughtfulness. During the night another lunch arrived that had been ordered by the city. A lunch was also sent by the city to the other stations of the city.

Police Protection.

Chief Burrell of the Police department had a large force of men on duty the night before. In addition to the large number of men on the street he held quite a reserve force at the police station in case their services should be required to quell any unusual disturbance. In addition to this he had the regular patrol wagon and a three-seated automobile which he procured in Boston, and it was frequently used during the night to transport drunks and others to the police station. The station was filled up several times as many arrests were made. Many of these were for drunkenness but there were others who were arrested for assault and for setting fires in the street.

On the whole the night was quiet compared with the scenes of a year ago. The crowd which created the disturbance at South Quincy last year were not in evidence this year, having got enough last year to last them some time. Many of the drunks were released in the morning. Those arrested for other offenses appeared in court.

Many Fire Alarms.

The firemen had an easy time this year compared with a year ago. The record at the Central station showed nine calls for the night. The first alarm came at 10.17. This was a still alarm and was for a slight fire in Delorey's barn on North street.

The first bell alarm came from Box 49 at 10.36, but was a false alarm.

At 11.43 Box 121 was sounded which was also a false alarm.

At 12.39 there was a still alarm for a bon fire.

At 12.41 an alarm was sounded from Box 25. This was for a fierce fire in a large barn on the Mt. Wollaston farm. The fire, which was undoubtedly of incendiary origin, destroyed the barn causing a loss of about $5,000. The firemen did well to save the larger barn and other buildings.

The barn was 110 feet by 45 feet and was built about 100 years ago. It contained 20 tons of salt hay, also hay wagons, tip-carts, pungs and tools. Mr. Dennen expected all the barns would be destroyed when he was aroused from sleep by passengers on the Houghs Neck car. He estimates the loss at $5000.

Box 36, which sounded at 1.05, was a false alarm.

Box 62 was sounded at 1.36, and was a false alarm. It was while responding to this box that the accident happened to the combination Hook & Ladder and Chemical from the Wollaston house an account of which will be found elsewhere.

At 2.48 the apparatus was called on a still alarm for a bonfire at Liberty square.

The last alarm of the night was from Box 67, and sounded at 2.55. This was a false alarm.

Tuesday night an alarm was sounded at 7.03 for a fire in A. Keating's furniture store house off Washington street. An upright piano stored there was ruined, but otherwise the damage was slight.

The Atlantic fire department was called out on a still alarm about 10.15 Tuesday evening. Boys had set a barn adjoining the large double house on Hancock street, corner of Old Colony street, and when the apparatus arrived it was burning briskly. They soon had it under control. The barn was badly burned and is almost an entire loss.

Two Carriages Smashed.

There was a lively runaway through City Square this noon. While no one was injured, two carriages were smashed. The runaway team was that of William H. Doble. It came down Granite street minus a driver and turned into Chestnut street. On the street were several carriages, among them that of Dr. Gordon. The runaway cleared part of the carriages but locked wheels with that of the doctor, smashing one of the rear wheels. The horse then went across the street and the carriage, striking a lamp post, was overturned and badly smashed.

Boat Swamped.

Several boys had a narrow escape from drowning in Town river on the afternoon of the holiday. They started from Germantown in a row boat to cross to Quincy Point. There is a very strong comment here, and when half way across the boat was swamped. Fortunately all of the boys could swim and they struck out for the Quincy Point shore. They reached the shore all right but were pretty well exhausted. The boys were George Armstrong, George Coots, James Coots, Roy Prout, Victor Prout, Frank Prout and George Prout.

Louis Weston of Newport avenue begins his vacation this week. He joined his family at Island Creek, Tuesday afternoon.

ONE DEAD.

And Another Not Expected to Live

Wollaston Fire Team in Collision.

Several Firemen Injured While Responding to Alarm.

It was a sad holiday for the firemen at Wollaston and in fact of the whole city. As a result of an accident one of the firemen, Robert Fisher, lost his life and Albert Kingsley had his left leg amputated Tuesday afternoon at the City Hospital. Other members of the company and some volunteers are still at the Hospital with fractured limbs.

The accident happened, while the apparatus was responding to an alarm from Box 62 at 1.37 A. M. Frank Genero was driving and riding on the apparatus were Robert Fisher, Albert Kingsley, Fred Nelson, Miles Creamer, Fred Bent, Richard Colbert, Parker Sheldon and George Baker.

The apparatus crossed the railroad bridge and started down the long hill on Beale street. At the foot of the hill the driver turned out to pass an autobile and the apparatus struck a tree.

Driver Genero was thrown a distance of thirty feet, and was badly shaken up and bruised, and was unconscious for some time.

Fisher was on the running board and received the full force of the shock, being caught between the apparatus and the tree. Both his legs were broken, one being crushed, and he was unconcious when picked up.

Kingsley's left leg was fractured in two places, both above and below the knee, and it was found necessary on Tuesday afternoon to amputate it.

Nelson had his nose broken and his right ankle fractured.

The firemen riding on the truck had no warning of the accident and the first thing they knew was the crash and the flight through the air. The tree struck truck just inside the forward wheel. The forward truck was crumbled and the apparatus settled down at the head. Fortunately it did not overturn else the result would have been still more serious than it was.

Several of the trees along the north side of the street have marks where the wheels of the truck hit them, and the driver must have been nearer to the side than he thought.

The street at this point is lined on both sides with large shade trees and besides being very dark it is on a down grade.

The wheels of the truck are rubber tired and runs very smoothly. The driver was well over to the north side of the street and the wheels may have slewed.

As soon as the accident happened Lieut. McKay hastened to the scene and took driver Genero in his auto to the police station, where he revived and was later taken to the Hospital.

A crowd soon collected on the scene and the injured men were laid out in the side of the street, where they were attended by Dr. Record. The injuries

PREMATURE EXPLOSION

Two Soldiers Badly Hurt and One of Them May Die

Boston, July 5.—During the ceremony of firing the national salute of 45 guns at Fort Warren, located in Boston harbor, the charge of the 16th round exploded prematurely, injuring two of the soldiers, one probably fatally.

Private J. J. Buckley, who was placing the blank shell in the breech of a six-pounder, was frightfully injured. The explosion tore his left arm nearly to the shoulder and the flying particles struck him in the face, shattering the bones of his chin. His face and other parts of the body were bruised and burned by the powder.

Private Hector McNeil was severely burned and some of the powder grains lodged in his eyes. Both men were removed to the post hospital, where Private Buckley's shattered arm was amputated. McNeil's sight, if saved, will be seriously affected.

An investigation was immediately made to determine the cause of the accident, but nothing in the appearance of the gun disclosed it. It is supposed that there was an accumulation of powder in the breech from the previous shots.

Independance Day Fatalities

New Haven, July 5.—The celebration of the fourth of July was marked by fewer serious accidents than usual in Connecticut. In Torrington, Louis Menke, 7 years old, was killed almost instantly by a stone which had been placed in a cannon by boys. When the explosion occurred it was hurled 50 yards with great force, striking Menke in the face. Philip Bennett of Hartford, aged 10, was accidentally shot and killed by a playmate and died in a hospital. Two Portland boys were frightfully burned by the explosion of a pound of gunpowder, but it is thought that both will recover. In New Britain, John Murray, 12 years old, is believed to be fatally injured by the bursting of a cannon, a part of his head being torn away.

Authorities Fear Foul Play

Island Falls, Me., July 5.—The town officers of Patten are investigating the death of John Wadsworth, aged 26, of Mt. Chase, whose body was found in the woods near his home with a bullet hole in the head. It was supposed at first that he had committed suicide. No weapon was found.

Killed by Exploding Cannon

Randolph, Mass., July 5.—The explosion last evening of a 15-inch iron yacht cannon, which had been fired frequently all day, resulted in the death of Henry Aldrich, 20 years old, who was struck behind the ear by a fragment of the piece and died within a few minutes.

Record For Loading Coal

Newport, R. I., July 5.—It is announced at the government coaling station at Bradford that the cruiser Pennsylvania established a record while coaling there for her four days' sea trip. She loaded 848 tons of coal from four barges in six hours and 20 minutes.

Demented Man Killed Himself

Webster, Mass., July 5.—George Reibe, who shot himself in the head while temporarily insane, died at the city hospital. Reibe's suicidal act followed his attempt to burn his house and his firing several revolver shots at his son, who prevented the arson.

Engineer Had Narrow Escape

Lowell, Mass., July 5.—A freight train from Boston was derailed at the North Billerica station. The tender of the engine was wrecked. By jumping a second before the tender crashed into the engine, Engineer Martin saved himself, with slight injuries.

WAR IS DECLARED

Mutinous Russians Issue a Proclamation

GOING FOR CZAR'S SHIPS

Neutral Territory and Foregin Shipping Will Be Respected by the Potemkine--Mutineers Seize a Transport--Linevitch Reports Victory In Manchuria

Bucharest, Roumania, July 5.—Before the Kniaz Potemkine sailed from Kustenji a delegation from the crew handed the prefect a proclamation, addressed to the representatives of the powers in Roumania, formally declaring war on all Russian vessels which refuse to join the mutineers. The proclamation says the Kniaz Potemkine will respect neutral territory and foreign shipping. The delegation requested that the proclamation be forwarded to the powers.

A Talk With Rosen

Boston, July 5.—Baron Rosen, the new Russian ambassador to Washington, and one of the peace envoys, arrived in Boston last evening on the Merchants' Limited from New York, where he arrived yesterday on the steamer Wilhelm II. When seen by a reporter the baron's first words were a request to deny for him the interview attributed to him a few days ago regarding Russia's peace terms.

"I wish you to deny that I have ever given out any interview or expressed publicly any opinion of a political nature," he said. "Please say that and nothing more, and I will be much pleased."

The ambassador was asked what he thought of Washington in August as a place of meeting for the peace conference, and he replied that it would be most uncomfortable; that almost any northern point would be more comfortable and more acceptable. He did not know officially, however, where the conference would be held if Washington was found to be out of the question.

The baron and party will go to Manchester-by-the-Sea today.

Mutineers Sieze Transport

St. Petersburg, July 5.—The minister of marine has received the following telegram from Admiral Kruger:

"The crew of the transport Prout, when leaving Budrovo bay, mutinied, arresting the captain and other officers. Second Lieutenant Nestertzeff and Boatswain Kozlitine were killed. The Prout has arrived at Sebastopol and the crew is now repentant. The officers have been released. The Prout has been ordered to anchor at Kamesheval bay and an inquiry into the affair has been opened."

Japanese Battalion Annhilated

St. Petersburg, July 5.—General Linevitch reports: "On July 1 our force assumed the offensive against the enemy occupying a position near the village of Sauvaitse, 16 miles south of Liaochoupen. At 7 in the evening after the artillery had prepared the way the enemy's fortified positions were stormed and we pursued him for three miles. One Japanese infantry battalion was destroyed."

Bomb Throwing Continues

Bielostok, Russia, July 5.—There was sporadic fighting in several streets here and a bomb was thrown in the centre of the town. It is reported that several persons were killed.

Union Button Not Universal

Chicago, July 5.—In support of their contention against their drivers wearing union buttons the Employers' association issued a table showing the percentage of teamsters in the large cities of the country who do not wear any insignia of their organization. The statistics revealed the fact that Boston, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Des Moines and New York are the only cities where the cutton is known.

Japanese Battleship Launched

London, July 5.—Princess Arisugawa of Japan launched the Japanese battleship Katori at Barrow. The Katori is one of the most powerful battleships launched in this country. Her tonnage is 16,400 and her contract speed 18½ knots. The side armor of the Katori is nine inches thick. Pigeons were liberated from a balloon on the ship's bows as an emblem of peace and good will.

Meagher Statue Unveiled

Helena, Mont., July 5.—An equestrian statue of General T. F. Meager, leader of the Irish brigade in the Civil war and later secretary and acting governor of the territory of Montana, was unveiled in the capitol grounds. In July, 1867, Meager fell from a steamer into the Missouri river and was drowned. His body was never recovered.

If YOU Were Called upon to Give a Bond at a Moment's Notice, What Would You Do?

It is increasingly difficult to find friends who are willing to become personal sureties.

What would you do?

You would seek corporate security, which is fast superseding the personal kind. You would go to the nearest office of the American Surety Company and obtain the necessary bond, quickly and without red-tape.

FUNERAL OF HAY

Services at Cemetery Chapel of Simplest Description

Cleveland, July 5.—Guarded by soldiers around the bier, while the halls of the Chamber of Commerce were patrolled by police, the body of John Hay lay in state throughout the national holiday. In accordance with the proclamation of Acting Mayor Lapp, the public in general remained away from the vicinity of the Chamber of Commerce.

There were but few visitors at the Chamber of Commerce during the day. The information had been widely spread that neither the casket nor the room in which it lay were to be viewed and the guardians of the building passed a quiet and uneventful day.

Mrs. Hay spent the day quietly at the home of Mr. Mather at Glenville. Many visitors called, but to the majority of them she denied herself, the strain of the last few days rendering rest imperative.

President Roosevelt arrived at 9 o'clock today and was met at the depot by the members of the citizens' committee. Escorted by a troop of the Ohio National Guard, the president and members of his cabinet were driven directly to the Chamber of Commerce.

The funeral cortege departed from the Chamber of Commerce at 10 o'clock for the drive to the cemetery, five miles away. The services in the chapel were of the simplest description. A quartette first rendered the favorite hymn of Mr. Hay, Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," a selection from the scriptures was read by Rev. H. C. Haydn, who also offered prayer after the choir sung "For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest."

The body was then removed from the chapel and the funeral procession passed up the hill to the family lot, where the interment was made. At the grave the quartette sang "Still, Still With Thee," and the services were concluded by a brief prayer and the benediction.

Soldiers Mutilated by Explosion

New York, July 5.—By the premature explosion of a shell in the open breech of a five-inch gun, while a fourth of July salute of 45 guns was being fired at Castle Williams, on Governors island, Private Cornelius Harrington was so badly injured that he may not recover. One arm was torn off, his right eye blinded and he was terribly burned. Sergeant Webb was also badly hurt and it is feared that he will lose the sight of one of his eyes, though he is expected to recover.

Double Canoe Fatality

Providence, July 5.—While attempting to change places in a canoe on the Pawtuxet river, three young men were thrown out by the tipping over of the canoe and two of them, Frank Riley and Daniel J. Sullivan, though fair swimmers, grappled with each other as they struck the water and were drowned in about seven feet of water. Riley and Sullivan were nearly 30 years of age and unmarried.

Novoe Vremya's Sorry Croak

St. Petersburg, July 5.—The press continues to pay tributes to the late Secretary Hay. The Novoe Vremya expresses the only unkind note regarding the deceased statesman, saying: "As 'China's wet nurse,' as the enemy of Russia and as the encourager of Japan, he was mainly responsible for the check administered to Russia's dream of empire in the Orient."

Endeavorers In Convention

Baltimore, July 5.—All the railway trains and coast steamers arriving here brought delegations to the 22d annual Christian Endeavor convention, which was formally opened in this city today, and it is estimated that 20,000 visitors are here. To accommodate this multitude the capacity of the hotels and boarding houses has been tested to the utmost.

Will Be a Rush of Settlers

El Reno, O. T., July 5.—The half-million acres of Indian pasture reserve lying southwest of El Reno has been ordered by Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock opened to settlement. The opening means the furnishing of 3125 more homes to settlers and another tide of emigration to southwestern Oklahoma.

Schooner Rammed by Steamer

St. John, July 5.—Steamer Calvin Austin, which rammed and sunk the little schooner Chromo outside Boston light, has arrived here, having on board the four men who were saved from the sinking vessel. The fifth member of the Chromo's crew, Fred Toomey, was drowned.

Fifteen Houses Swept Away

Pierre, S. D., July 5.—Half the people of Pierre are without homes on account of the flood which has been raging in the Bad river. The crest of the flood swept 15 houses into the swollen waters of the Missouri and many narrow escapes from death are reported.

Crowd Went Down With Stand

Findlay, O., July 5.—A band stand, from which several hundred persons were viewing fireworks, collapsed last night, throwing nearly all the spectators to the ground. Several persons were trampled upon and were severely injured.

Escape of Federal Convicts

Tacoma, Wash., July 5.—Eight convicts escaped from the federal penitentiary on McNeill's island, leaving the island in two small boats. They are being pursued.

CITY BREVITIES

Everybody who owned a flag displayed the national colors on the Fourth.

Flags are at half mast on City Hall and elsewhere for Secretary John Hay.

Little Marian Adlene White of Union street is visiting relatives in Wilton, N. H.

Arthur Keith of Washington, D. C., is a guest of his brother George at Hudson.

Rural lodge of Masons will attend tomorrow the funeral of Mr. Joseph C. Morse.

Miss Etbel C. Weld, of San Antonio, Tex., is the guest of Dr. Ross K. Whiton.

The City Council will probably adjourn July 17, until the last Monday in August.

The holiday weather for the Fourth of July was ideal; seasonable temperature and no rain.

The Granite City club kept open house the night before the Fourth and entertained a number of guests.

Auctioneer Johnson sold two house lots on Hancock street, at auction Saturday, to T. J. Golden for 8 1-2 cents per foot.

Comparatively few accidents were reported as a result of celebrating with fireworks. There were some burnt fingers, however.

Delcevare King is one of the promoters of the Eureka Silk Manufacturing Company incorporated in Maine last week for $400,000.

The Herald teachers with Miss Julia E. Underwood, as the Quincy representative, will leave the North Union station, Boston, this evening at 8.30.

The Fourth was an unusually hot day, and thousands sought the cool breezes at the beaches. The electric cars did an immense business, and every car the company could get was put in use.

Cards are out for the marriage reception on Wednesday evening next of Miss Ethelyn Letticia Jameson, of this city and Mr. Sylvester Parker Robertson, of Lexington, to take place in the Bethany church parlors.

On Saturday the Merrymounts will begin their games with teams outside of Quincy. The first game will be at the park and they will be matched against Hurley's strong Neponset team, which has Hawkins and Murphy for a battery. The schedule for the remaining July games is as follows: July 15, West Roxbury; July 22, Boston Union; July 29, Dewey Club of Weymouth.

In the Machinery building at the Lewis and Clark fair, a spool of wire about the size of an ordinary spool of thread has attracted considerable attention because of the legend on the card beneath it. This states that the wire is one-thousandth of an inch thick, one-third the thickness of human hair, and that a pound of such wire would be sixty-four miles long. A pound of the wire is worth $40.

—A house of twine forms part of the display made in the Palace of Manufacturers of the Lewis and Clark Exposition by a rope firm. The house is as large as a small cottage, and is composed entirely of twine balls and hemp. The roof is thatched with hemp and hemp curtains hang over the windows. The structure is surrounded by a lawn made of rope, and a rope fence completes the design.

GUILTY OF A CRIME

Jury Returns Verdict of Guilt In Mitchell Case

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

Aged Senator Receives the Bad News With Fortitude--The Charge of Conspiracy to Defraud Is Still Pending

Portland, Or., July 5.—The jury in the case of the United States against Senator John H. Mitchell of Oregon returned a verdict of guilty as charged. The charge was that Senator Mitchell, while occupying his public position as senator, accepted a pecuniary compensation for practicing before the federal departments at Washington, which, under the federal statutes, constitute a crime.

A few minutes before 11 o'clock at night the bailiff, as he had been a number of times before, was summoned to the jury room. A moment later he reappeared and communicated to those in waiting the news that the jury had agreed. Judge De Haven, the attorneys and the aged senator were summoned and quickly appeared. Judge De Haven ascended the bench without removing his overcoat and the jury was brought in.

Clerk of the Court Slayden received the verdict from the foreman and read it amid the crash and rattle of fireworks exploding in the streets on all four sides of the courthouse. Slayden spoke low and because of the din without only two sentences of the verdict were audible: "Guilty as charged," and "recommended to the mercy of the court."

Senator Mitchell received the verdict with fortitude. Severe and evidently unexpected as it was, he showed by no outward sign, save the ghastly pallor of his face and the nervous stroking of his beard, that he felt the blow.

Clerk Slayden polled the jury and Judge De Haven declared that it be discharged. When these proceedings were completed Judge Bennett arose and, on the part of Mitchell, moved a new trial. Judge De Haven directed that the motion be continued until next Monday and declared the court adjourned.

It is stated that the jury took six ballots before arriving at a verdict. Five ballots showed 11 jurors for conviction.

It is expected that the indictment pending against Mitchell, charging conspiracy with Puter and others to defraud the government of public lands, will be dropped. What penalty will be imposed by Judge De Haven can only be conjectured. The statute provides for both imprisonment for not more than two years and for a fine of not to exceed $10,000. Since the trial began Mitchell has been at liberty on his own recognizance and this will be continued until after sentence is pronounced, at least.

Vespers Make a Good Start

Henley, Eng., July 5.—The crew of the Vesper Boat club of Philadelphia celebrated Independence day in England by winning its heat against the best university crew competing at Henley this year and by making the best time of any eight. The great contest between the Vespers and the Leanders will unquestionably be the most intensely interesting event ever contested at Henley.

Gave Poison to Sons

Doylestown, Pa., July 5.—Gustave A. Closson of Norrisville, aged 60, has confessed that he poisoned one of his sons and attempted to kill the other in the same manner. He says he wished to poison the boys because they were not very bright and that there was no chance that they would ever be of any use to him. There is an insurance of $300 on the life of the boy whom he attempted to kill.

Freed of Bribery Charge

Little Rock, July 5.—A verdict of not guilty was returned last night by the jury in the case of State Senator Covington, who was tried on a charge of accepting a bribe of $6000 in connection with the bill appropriating $800,000 for the completion of the state capitol.

Too Free Use of Pistol

Cincinnati, July 5.—The dead body of William Gander, who shot his wife, his brother-in-law, another man and one of the policemen who tried to arrest him, was found near his home on Linwood heights. None of the persons whom he shot will die.

Practiced Fraud For Years

Fulton, Mo., July 5.—James R. Penn, a real estate and insurance agent, committed suicide by taking poison. He had confessed that for the past 15 years he had been securing money fraudulently by illegal manipulation of mortgages, notes and deeds.

Flood Killed Five Hundred

Guanajuato, Mex., July 5.—The number of dead in the recent flood here is now estimated at 500. More than 200 bodies have already been recovered. The property loss will exceed $1,500,000. Railroad connection is completely destroyed.

Chinese Boycott Continues

Hongkong, July 5.—Placards are posted throughout Canton urging a boycott of American goods. Native Christians in Canton are being intimidated by the police.

Put to the Test.

There is one man in Atlantic who lives by principle. It is his belief that if a man does not plant fruit trees he should not receive donations of fruit from men whose yards offer all the season's productions even though that fruit is hanging idly for want of picking. A neighbor of this exact person could not be convinced of his hardness of heart and he determined to try him. It happened that the neighbor was extremely fond of cherries, and in the coverted yard grew a great tree laden with the red fruit to the tip-top branch. It would have been an impossibility for one family to make away with so many cherries in the time allotted for them to keep. So the neighbor found a modest little basket, and one evening when the owner of the tree was engaged in plucking his produce, a timid request was sent over the fence to buy a quart of cherries.

From the branches the "monarch of all he surveyed" glanced down on the fruitless man below. That man has since become a cynic, for he returned to the house with an empty basket and an overflowing vocabulary.

—"Great Homes of Titled American Women" is the title of an article which will appear in the Country Calendar for July. It will be profusely illustrated with charming photographs of every American girl who has married a nobleman, from Lady Curzon to the Duchess of Manchester.

—A small car, which contains 2,000 pounds of copper from a Wyoming mine, is exhibited at the Lewis and Clark Fair to show the great richness of the Wyoming ores. Beside the car is a pyramid of copper metal which weighs 900 pounds, and which was obtained from 2000 pounds of ore. A card attached to the car declares that fifty cars of ore of the same quality were obtained consecutively from the mine, which is located at Rambler, Wyoming.

TO MOBILIZE ARMY

Sweden Intends It to Be an Object Lesson to Norway

A TALK WITH KING OSCAR

Insists That He Acted Within Norway's Constitution In Vetoing Consular Bill--Norwegian Cabinet Is at Fault

Stockholm, July 5.—An order for the mobilization of the Swedish army has been issued and a proclamation to this effect will probably be issued within a week.

The mobilization is intended as a means of giving added force to any proposal for settlement which the special committee appointed by the riksdag may make to the Norwegian storthing.

King Oscar yesterday afternoon granted a private audience to a press correspondent at the royal palace. In a lengthy conversation the king expressed his views on the present situation and said emphatically that he would never allow any of his sons or grandsons to accept the Norwegian throne.

In speaking of the attitude of Norway, the king displayed deep emotion and expressed his heartfelt sorrow at Norway's treatment of him after 32 years of unceasing labor for its happiness and prosperity.

In the course of the conversation King Oscar reiterated his official utterances regarding his position on the consular bill passed by the storthing and the events which followed his veto of it, and said:

"When the King of Norway considers that the welfare of the country demands that he shall veto a bill passed by the storthing his right to do so is unconditionally shown in Norway's constitution and he would be false to his oath if he did not exercise this right in accordance with his conscience.

"The constitution gives the storthing the power to pass a measure over my veto, prescribing, however, that this can only be done by the bill being passed by three consecutively elected storthings. The consular bill was only passed by one storthing.

"As King of Norway it was of the utmost necessity that I should always keep before my eyes the first article of the Norwegian constitution, which reads: 'The Kingdom of Norway is a free, independent, indivisable and inalienable country united to Sweden under one king.' Therefore, it was imperative before approving a bill separating the consular systems of Sweden and Norway that I should consider the welfare and interests of both countries, and I had a perfect right as King of Norway to refuse my sanction.

"The refusal of the Norwegian cabinet to countersign my veto was inexcusable, as the constitution prescribes that the king may decide according to his judgment and that all his orders must be countersigned by the cabinet.

"Thus the Norwegian constitution, my own conscience and my consideration of the welfare of both kingdoms were the guide to my action in vetoing the consular bill."

The king had been advised not to talk for publication and every effort was made by his entourage to prevent access to him. The press correspondent, however, received a communication Monday evening summoning him to a private audience yesterday.

NOTES ABOUT TOWN.

George W. Hayden of Newport was in town for the holiday.

The Unity club of Quincy Point had open house Monday night.

Judge Cook was on the bench at the district court this morning.

The funeral of Miss Marion Carver will be held tomorrow morning.

The two cars which ran every half hour on the Squantum line were crowded every trip yesterday.

Mrs. George Daragh and children are visiting her mother, Mrs. Fred Nelson of Old Colony street.

Joseph Bartlett and his friend, James Chandler of Willow street, Wollaston, are at "Camp Bartlett," Westfield.

The only son of Henry F. Arnold, of Braintree, was operated upon Monday evening for appendicitis, and his case is serious.

Mrs. Amelia Hall of Stanton street, is quite seriodsly ill, suffering from injuries received by falling from the steps at her home, several days ago.

Friends of Mr. I. W. Fannce of Wollaston, will be glad to hear that he is gaining strength every day, and it is hoped that he will soon be able to get out again.

Many friends were hospitably entertained on the Fourth at the Webber mansion on Independence avenue, which was decorated with Chinese lanterns. In the evening there were fireworks.

The funeral of Miss Margaret Garrity was held this morning from St. Johns church. The services were conducted by Rev. John J. Coan. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

The police hurry-up auto broke down on Sea street on the afternoon of the holiday, while returning with a prisoner, and the officers were obliged to continue the journey on an electric car.

Bicycle Record Lowered

Chicago, July 5.—The motor cycle record for five miles was broken here on the Garfield park track by George H. Curtis of New York. Curtis made the distance in 5:25.

ONE DEAD.

were very painful and Dr. Record worked heroically by the dim light, shed by lanterns, to ease their suffering.

The sight was one that beggars description, and was one that would make the strongest heart quake. The bones of Kingsley's leg protruded through the flesh and the pain must have been intense.

As soon as possible the ambulances arrived and the injured firemen were taken to the hospital.

The firemen on the truck at the time besides Fisher and Kingsley were: George W. Baker, of 270 Safford street; Frederick Nilson, 16 Old Colony avenue; Frank T. Genereux, 37 Deldorf street; Myles Creamer, 23 Sagamore street; Frederick L. Bent, 9 Pierce street; Richard Colbert, 123 Winthrop street. All of these men were more or less bruised and shaken up and were either removed to their homes or the hospital.

Fisher, who was riding on the running board, died Tuesday noon. Besides having both knees dislocated and his left leg lacerated, his arm was broken and he sustained a concussion of the brain.

No one deplores the accident more than Chief Williams. He has made an investigation of the cause, and to a representative of the Ledger this morning he related the story of driver Genereux. When coming down the hill, he said, Lieut. McKay of the Police department was just ahead of the apparatus in an automobile. Lieut. Mc Kay drew off to the right side of the road and he pulled his horses to the left in order to pass. As he did so the horse shied at the auto and the next thing he knew he was flying through the air.

Fireman Colbert, who saw the whole affair corroborates driver Genereux's statement.

Lieut. McKay disclaimes all responsibility for the accident. He says that he was on Beal street when the alarm sounded, and knowing that the apparatus would come that way he turned into Standish avenue, and remained there until after the apparatus passed and that the truck had gone by him when the accident happened. As he watched them he saw the truck suddenly pull to the left, and the next instant he heard the crash as the apparatus struck the tree.

RELIEF FUND.

Ex-Councilman Poland and others have acted promptly, and are raising a relief fund in Wards Five and Six for the injured firemen and their families. It is a movement which should be encouraged, and subscriptions will be acknowledged in the Daily Ledger.

The business men of Ward One have also become interested in the raising of a fund for the firemen, and steps toward that end have already been taken. Messrs. Wadsworth and Hearn raised $35 to provide a supper for the men at the Central Fire station the night before the Fourth. They did not expend the whole amount however, having $12 or $15 left. This they propose as a starter for the fund. Both Mr. Wadsworth and Mr. Hearn will make a personal contribution to this fund and the business men and citizens generally will not be slow in doing their part toward helping the matter along.

LATEST.

At the City Hospital this noon it was said that the condition of fireman Kingsley, whose leg was amputated Tuesday, was about the same as last night. If anything he showed a slight improvement this noon. Whether he would recover could not of course be told, but while there was life there was a chance for him.

The only other fireman now at the Hospital is Fred Nelson, who is suffering from a broken ankle and nose. He was reported this noon as resting comfortably.

TODAY'S COURT.

CHAMPIONSHIP.

Won by the West Quincys in Game with Merrymounts.

It was an off day on the Fourth for the Merrymounts, and the championship of Quincy was won by the West Quincys, by the score of 9 to 3.

It looked at one time as though the Merrymounts would be whitewashed, but in the seventh Taylor broke the ice. He reached first on balls, and was advanced to second on a blocked ball; he stole third and scored on a long fly to left before it could be fielded in.

In the ninth Kolson drove a good one to right field which looked safe, but Duggan made a dandy catch. Atkin hit safely, and Taylor fanned. Then Donaher knocked one into the street and easily made the circuit, bringing in Atkin. Baker was third out.

The fact that Patterson struck out 16, while Kolson struck out only 2, almost tells the whole story.

The score by innings:

West Quincys,	0	0	4	0	0	2	3	0	0	—9

Used the Brush.

On the afternoon of the holiday on the Ward Three playground the South Quincys defeated the Atlantics in a well played and interesting game. Although Atlantic got the same number of hits as South Quincy, Patterson kept them well scattered. Marion being a trifle wild, combined with errors behind him, gave South Quincy the majority of its runs.

Duggan played a brilliant game at short and scooped in balls that were labelled for base hits, one time running clear back of second base getting the ball with his ungloved hand, and while off his balance throwing to first base and getting his man. He received much applause for his fine work.

Duffy, Birnie and Patterson also played well for South Quincy, while Jackson, Leach and Doyle excelled for Atlantic.

Other Games.

At Atlantic on the Fourth of July the Sacred Heart team defeated the Athletics 4 to 2. Sacred Heart made five singles with a total of seven, while the Athletics made only three with a total of five. Five errors were credited to the winner and eight to the losers. Leach of the Sacred Hearts and Hill of the Athletics each made three base hits.

In the afternoon the Sacred Hearts were to play a team from Newton but the latter did not put in an appearance. Many people were in waiting and were disappointed not to see the game. A scrub team was gotten up and they had a little practice for an hour or so, when everyone left the field sadly disappointed at not witnessing a good game as was expected to be.

The Majestics of West Quincy suffered their first defeat on the holiday at Hull, when the Hull team won 12 to 5. The Majestics will play at Hanover July 22d.

Before starting on your vacation you should order the Quincy Patriot to be sent regularly to your vacation address.

Field Day at Atlantic.

The annual field day of the Atlantic Athletics was held at Reeds field on the Fourth and many of the crack local athletes participated in the games.

The rivalry in the events was keen and the competitors were encouraged by the cheers of a large and enthusiastic crowd of interested spectators.

Ralph Read was the star athlete of the day and was awarded a beautiful silver cup for having won the highest number of points. He was closely followed by Harry Arthur, who was but one point behind him, and particular mention must be made of Arthur by the way in which he distinguished himself in some of the leading events.

Willie Duggan, the well known young sprinter carried off first honors in the initial event, the 40-yard dash, and would have made a better showing in the sprinting line had he not stumbled in the start of the 440 yard dash. He redeemed himself however in taking third place in the shot put.

Laurie Bean made things quite interesting in several of the events and great things are expected from him in future meets.

The novel feature of the day was the tug of war between the married and single men. The married men had weight to their advantage, but after a hard fight had to surrender to their more youthful rivals.

The three-legged race afforded a great deal of amusement and some of the small boys entered. Little Kenneth Gay and Dennis Lablanc came in third. First honors went to Geekie and Burdett and second place to Colman and Arthur.

The order of events and successful contestants were as follows:

40 yd. dash,—won by Duggan, time 5 seconds; 2d A. Arthur and 3d H. Arthur.

Shot put—won by Read, distance 29 ft. 1 in.; 2d John McClure and 3d Duggan.

High jump—won by H. Arthur, 5 ft. 1 in.; 2d Read and 3d Hill.

100-yd. dash—won by Read, 11 second; 2d H. Arthur and 3d Geekie.

Running broad jump—won by A. Arthur, 16 ft. 5 in.; 2d Bean and 3d Read.

Base ball throw—won by Ewing, distance 285 ft.; 2d Bean and 3d McClure.

Standing broad jump—won by Read, 8 ft. 6 in.; 2d Duggan and 3d Hill.

440 Yard Dash—Won by H. Arthur, 59 seconds; 2d Burdett and 3d Read.

Hop, Step, Jump—Won by Bean, 35ft. 2 1-2 in.; 2d Burdett, and 3d Geekie.

Mile Run—Won by H. Arthur, time, 5m., 57 sec.; 2d Bean and 3d Burdett.

QUEEN OF PARTY.

Miss Underwood Off for the Pacific.

Enthusiastic Send-Off for Teachers.

Many Surprises Planned for Them. Good Time Assured.

Miss Julia E. Underwood and the Herald party of teachers are today in Montreal, where they have over thirteen hours to see the Canadian metropolis. They arrived shortly after 8 A. M. and will leave at 9.40 P. M. for the Pacific. The points of interest in Montreal include Mount Royal park, several cathedrals, colleges, public buildings and historic spots.

About a score of people went to the North Union station last evening to wish Miss Underwood godspeed, and hundreds of friends were there to see the party off. It was a good-natured animated crowd and when cheers were proposed, Quincy was always heard from.

The Herald entertained the teachers at Hotel Bellevue in the afternoon, serving a grand dinner. The picture of the party at the tables printed in the Herald shows Miss Underwood prominently.

The Herald presented each of the teachers a gold badge, and Miss Brinkhaus instructed them relative to plans and rules.

The party then boarded one of the large sight-seeing automobiles and made a triumphal tour of the city. When a Quincy man helped Miss Underwood off the car at the North station, she said that was her first automobile ride. She will have many new experiences during the next three weeks.

It was noted that everyone in the party was showing special consideration to Miss Underwood. They all seemed to know her, and to respect her for the fifty years she has taught school, an honor to the profession. When the picture of the special Pullman palace car Arden was taken, just before the train started, Miss Underwood was given the central position in front. The car accompanies them for the entire trip.

Miss Underwood was surprised to learn that she was to have close friends on the train, for Miss Mary E. Dearborn recently principal of the Coddington school, and Miss Grace Lingham a former teacher, both started by the same route for Portland and California.

There are many other surprises for the teachers in the party. At the suggestion of Miss Gertrude L. Brinkhaus, the chaperon, letters were secured from friends of the excursionists, so that each will receive one daily.

Miss Grace T. Pratt of Somerville, one of the party, is a sister of Rev. F. W. Pratt, formerly of Wollaston, and he was present to see her off.

Among those who gathered to see the teachers off were the two pupils who collected the largest number of coupons in the "Greater Boston grammar district," viz: Esther Joel, a little miss of six years, of Everett, and Henry C. Prescott of Quincy, who were introduced to each other.

The party will stop at Banff over night Sunday, and will reach Portland, Oregon, at 7 A. M. Wednesday, July 12.

Letters mailed to Miss Underwood at Portland, Oregon, either today or tomorrow, should reach her before her departure for home July 14. They should be directed in care of "Boston Herald Educational Party, at Massachusetts Building."

KINGSLEY DEAD.

Second Fatality in the Wollaston Accident.

Funeral of Mr. Fisher Held Today.

Condition of Other Firemen Is Still Serious.

Albert D. Kingsley, another of the firemen injured Tuesday morning, while responding to an alarm from Box 62 on the Wollaston truck, died at 8 o'clock this morning at the City Hospital.

His injuries consisted of a fracture of the left leg in two places, both above and below the knee. They were of such a nature that the physicians found it necessary to amputate the leg. The operation was performed Tuesday night. On Wednesday his condition was pronounced as critical, although it was said at the Hospital, that if anything he appeared a little better.

The shock to his system was too severe, however, and he passed away this morning. He was 34 years of age, a moulder by trade and resided at 36 Freeman street. He was a skilled mechanic, an efficient fireman, and a good fellow.

There are still two firemen at the Quincy Hospital, George W. Baker and Frederick Nilson. The cases of both are regarded as serious.

Driver Genero is at his house at 37 Deldorf street and is reported as comfortable, but feels sore yet.

F. L. Bent is able to be about the house, while Myles Creamer and Richard Colbert are able to be out.

FUNERAL OF VICTIM.

The funeral of Robert Theodore Fisher, who lost his life at Wollaston Tuesday morning while responding to an alarm from Box 62, was held this morning at 11 o'clock from his late residence on Franklin avenue, Wollaston Park.

The services were very impressive and were largely attended. Among those present were Chief Engineer Peter J. Williams, Assistant Engineers Frank C. Packard and Daniel J. Nyhan, several members of the Fire department, a delegation from Quincy lodge, New England Order of Protection, of which he was a member, and John Hancock lodge, I. O. O. F.

The burial service of John Hancock lodge was performed by Noble Grand Thomas F. Mitchell and Chaplain David Brown.

The regular services were then held and were conducted by Rev. Henry G. Megathlin of the Park and Downs church, who spoke eulogistically of the life of the deceased fireman.

After the services the body was taken to Stoughton for burial in the Evergreen cemetery.

During the noon hour the bells and whistles on the fire alarm circuit tolled the age of Fireman Fisher at half-minute intervals while the body was conveyed from the house to the depot.

There were many beautiful flowers. Aside from those of the family and friends, there were:

A pillow of roses, carnations, sweet peas and fern from the Quincy Fire Department.

A six-pointed star from the New England Order of Protection.

A pillow of roses, and carnations from John Hancock lodge, I. O. O. F.

A wreath and lyre of roses and carnation from the Heeder department, employes of the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co. of which the deceased was foreman.

A pillow of roses ferns and sweet peas from the Wollaston fire station.

A wreath of ferns, roses and carnations from Hose 1 and Ladder 1.

A wreath of carnations, hyacinths and sweet peas from the engineers of the Fire Department.

A broken column from the employes of the Old Colony Street railway, where the deceased was employed as an extra conductor.

S. Y. C. MUSICALE.

Enjoyable Entertainment at the Clubhouse for Yachtsmen.

A large number of yachtsmen with their ladies were present at the Squantum Yacht club house Wednesday evening, and listened to a delightful musical entertainment.

A musical evening was the name given the affair. It was by Willis Clark and a number of his pupils, assisted by Miss Edith Barnes Arey, reader, and Miss Dorothy A. Burbank, pianist.

The program was a varied one, and the applause that followed each number told how well it was appreciated and enjoyed. The audience would have been glad to have had each number repeated. Mr. Clark thanked the audience for their appreciation, but said that as the program was a lengthy one it would be necessary to refuse encores.

This did not prevail however, in all numbers, for the chorus and Miss Arey were obliged to respond to some of their numbers.

The program opened with a chorus by the pupils, fourteen in number. The pupils also gave two plantation melodies, one with a solo part by Peter Mahn.

Miss Arey was down for two numbers and gave "A sisterly scheme," "Mrs. Casey on Lawn Tennis," and for an encore "Sarah Ellen's Photographs."

Miss Nellie M. Clark, Miss Bertha Robbins, Miss Lillian West, Miss Margurite Ferrall and Mrs. Carl H. Clark all gave solos. The ladies have rich voices and their numbers were very fine.

Miss Burbank, who acted as accompanist, also gave a piano solo, which left no doubt but that she was a master of the instrument.

There was one duet entitled, "The Master and Scholar." This was a humorous selection and was rendered by Miss Clark and Mr. Clark.

There was to have been a violin solo, but it appeared that the gentleman had been yachting the Fourth and his arms were so badly burned that he was unable to be present.

It is understood that this concert was but one of a series of entertainments to be given during the season by the Squantum club.

FIREMEN'S FUND.

Subscriptions Will Be Acknowledged by Daily Ledger.

Men who brave dangers to protect property from fire should have the assurance that their families and those dependent on them should not suffer, should they meet with accident. The city has been shocked by the sudden death of two firemen while in the performance of their duties, and the serious illness of others, and there should be a prompt response to a relief fund which has been started by Messrs. Wadsworth and Hearn. Their letter below is self explanatory:

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:

Of a fund collected from the business men in the centre of the city for the purpose of giving the men at the Central Fire Station a lunch during their 4th of July duties, there remains unexpended $6.79. Though collected and willingly given for that purpose we do not think any giver will be offended if that balance be diverted from the use originally intended in view of the shocking and sad accident at Wollaston Monday evening.

We, therefore, take it upon ourselves to tender you that balance, together with our personal checks for $5 each, to be added to any fund, which it is our earnest hope may be started, to help alleviate the wants of those so sorely afflicted.

D. E. Wadsworth,
Chas. C. Hearn.

The Daily Ledger acknowledges the receipt of the following sums:

Balance from Fourth of July,	$6.79
D. E. Wadsworth,	5.00
Charles C. Hearn,	5.00
Geo. W. Prescott & Son,	5.00
Total	$21.79

CAN YOU SOLVE THIS?

A Problem That Seems Simple, but That Will Invite Discussion.

How much greater than three-fourths is four-fourths?

At first sight it seems an easy question, but put it to your arithmetical friends and you will probably find that it will divide them into two parties, one contending that the answer is one-fourth and the other as positively affirming that it is one-third, while both will be ready to prove the accuracy of their respective solutions.

The party of the first part (to use a legal phrase) may argue their point in this way:

Five shillings is the fourth part of a pound. If you have 15 shillings, or three-fourths of a pound, and somebody gives you another fourth part you have a sovereign—ergo, your four-fourths is one-fourth greater than three-fourths.

But this will not suit the other party at all, and they will proceed scornfully to point out that the argument is all wrong, since if you have 15 shillings and somebody is generous enough to add 5 shillings to it the donor is only giving you one-third of the amount you already possess (5 times 3 equals 15), therefore your sovereign is only one-third more than your 15 shillings.

It is a pretty problem, and expert accountants have been known to wrangle over it for hours.—London Answers.

SCIENTIFIC FARMING.

The Way Long Tongued Bees Saved Australian Clover.

A clerk in the department of agriculture said:

"So you think that scientific farming is a bluff? You demand some illustrations of the good that is accomplished by the scientific method? Very well.

"When clover was first introduced into Australia it grew there beautifully, but it never seeded. The soil was all right. The climate was all right. What, then, was the trouble?

"A scientist studied the matter, and this is what he found:

"He found that the native Australian bees had tongues too short to reach the clover's pollen forming organs. These organs in red clover are hidden deeply in the heart of the tubelike petals and they can only be fertilized by the long tongued bumblebee. If red clover is not visited by bumblebees, who bear the golden pollen grains from one blossom to another, it never seeds—it cannot be grown. The scientist, aware of the fact, soon put his finger on the barren Australian clover's trouble. He imported a lot of long tongued bumblebees. These bees flourished, and immediately Australian clover, which had promised to be a failure, became one of the country's richest and finest crops."—Chicago Chronicle.

GOLDFISH IN JAPAN.

The Demand For Them Appears to Be Almost Without Limit.

Although the goldfish occurs in a wild state in Japan, it is probable that China some 400 years ago furnished the stock from which the wonderful varieties of Japanese goldfish have been bred. It is reported that in feudal days, even when famine was abroad in the land and many people were starving, the trade in goldfish was flourishing.

The demand at present appears to be without limit, and the output shows a substantial increase each year. Many thousand people make a living by growing goldfish for market, and hundreds of peddlers carry the fish through the streets and along the country roads in wooden tubs suspended from a shoulder bar.

The leading goldfish center is Koriyama, near the ancient capital of Nara. Here are 350 independent breeding establishments, whose yearly product runs far into the millions. One farm which I visited was started 140 years ago. At first it was conducted merely for the pleasure of the owner, but it eventually became a commercial enterprise and is now very profitable.—National Geographic Magazine.

Express Freight and Coal Train Met Near Fitchburg

THREE TRAINMEN KILLED

Both Locomotives Destroyed and Loaded Box Cars Piled on Top of Wreckage--Accident Due to Misunderstanding of Signals

Fitchburg, Mass., July 6.—Three railroad employes were killed and two injured and thousands of dollars' worth of property destroyed by a head-on collision late yesterday afternoon between an east-bound express freight train and a west-bound coal train near the Wachusett station of the Fitchburg division of the Boston and Maine railroad. The wreck blocked all traffic on the main line the greater part of the night.

The names of the killed are: S. M. Kendall, engineer of east-bound train, buried under engine; Head Brakeman Dehm of east-bound train, buried under wreckage and body cut to pieces; Clifford Smith, engineer of west-bound train, instantly killed. Fireman Cox of the east-bound locomotive was severely injured and removed to a hospital.

A coal heaver, who is known to the railroad officials by number only, sustained a fractured leg by jumping. He was not otherwise injured. Fireman Cox will recover. His left arm was injured and he sustained severe contusions in many parts of his body.

The trainhands on both trains resided in Boston and Somerville. The accident was due to some misunderstanding regarding the signalling of the east-bound freight. The coal train was distributing several cars at sidings at Wachusett station, which is 2½ miles west of Fitchburg. The engine and several cars were moving from a siding onto the main line, when the east-bound train, known as the Cheshire division express freight, and consisting of scores of heavily loaded cars, suddenly came in sight.

The freight was running at a high rate of speed, and before Engineer Kendall could materially reduce it the ponderous locomotives came together with a terrific crash, which was heard a mile away.

Engineer Smith of the coal train was pinned under his cab, but Fireman Flood, who was in the cab, jumped and escaped unhurt. Kendall stood by his engine and was buried under the mass. Fireman Cox was not killed, but was badly hurt. Head Brakeman Dehm of the freight was crushed to death, and it was necessary to dismember the body before it could be extricated.

Both locomotives were destroyed and 14 loaded box cars were thrown from the irons, half a dozen of them piling up on the wreckage of the locomotives and completely filling the deep, narrow cut through which the tracks run at that point.

The body of Smith was the first to be taken from the ruins. It was not badly disfigured. Kendall's body was buried deep under the remains of his engine and a number of cars. It was several hours after the accident before it was found.

The main line tracks were blocked all night, but the wreckage was removed and the roadbed repaired by this morning. Wrecking trains from this city, Somerville and Greenfield brought 100 men and a large quantity of apparatus.

The railroad authorities are not prepared to announce the exact cause of the collision until they have investigated thoroughly. The financial loss to the railroad will reach $40,000.

Miners Victims of Explosion

Bluefield, W. Va., July 6.—By an explosion in the Tide Water coal mine at Vivian, nine miners, all of whom were Italians, were injured, and two of them died later, while three more are in a precarious condition, with slight chances of recovery. Mine officials claim that the explosion was caused by a very heavy shock in robbing the pockets and that the dust ignited.

Albany, July 6.—Attorney General Mayer has received a letter from Senator Brackett, in which the latter, as a policyholder and attorney for other policyholders, asks that the state bring action against and oust any director of the Equitable Life Assurance society who does not own the five shares of stock required by the rules of the society.

Telegraphers May Strike

Minneapolis, July 6.—Telegraph operators on the line of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads have issued an ultimatum and if their demands relative to salaries and hours are not acceded to before that time a general strike will be called July 8.

ACTION POSTPONED

Fall River Weavers Await Reply From Leading Manufacturer

Fall River, Mass., July 6.—The executive committee of the Weavers' union voted last night to postpone action for one week upon the reply of the manufacturers in refusing to grant an increase in wages. The committee announced after the meeting that the reason for the postponement was because no reply to a similar request for an increase had been received from M. C. D. Borden of New York, the owner of the Iron Works mills.

Upon being asked if the present high price of cotton would not prevent the weavers from pressing their request, the secretary of the committee stated that it lay entirely with the weavers what action should be taken. He admitted, however, that the government crop report was not very satisfactory to the weavers.

Sixty-Five Hundred In Camp

Westfield, Mass., July 6.—The whole of the Massachusetts militia, with the exception of the naval brigade and the First regiment of heavy artillery, is encamped on Hampton plains. More than 6500 men are performing their tour of duty. Never before have so many Massachusetts militiamen been assembled at a state camp. Lieutenant General Miles, the military adviser of Governor Douglas, is in command. The camp is known as Camp Bartlett, in honor of Major General Bartlett, a native of western Massachusetts who won a hero's fame in the Civil war.

Bluffed by Holy Ghosters

Durham, Me., July 6.—No action on the question of the support of public schools in the colony of the Holy Ghost and Us society at Shiloh was taken at a town meeting called to consider the matter. The citizens of this town have objected to paying for the support of the schools at the Shiloh colony. A large delegation from the Holy Ghost society was present at the meeting. It was understood that they proposed to take an active part in the meeting, and accordingly the Durham voters carried a motion to adjourn.

Skull Fractured by Hawser

Provincetown, Mass., July 6.—While two launches of the north Atlantic squadron were trying to float a launch of the battleship Alabama, aground at the railroad dock, a hawser parted and Mail Messenger Brown of the Alabama was struck on the forehead and sustained what is believed to be fatal injuries. The force of the blow crushed his skull and knocked him into the water.

A Tropical Phenomenon

Boston, July 6.—Officers on steamer San Jose, from Jamaican ports, state that on the morning of June 29 they witnessed a sight which none of them had ever seen before in the tropics, viz., the sun illuminating the eastern horizon, while to the westward the moon and stars were shining brightly. The chief officer says that he has seen a similar sight before in the Arctic region.

Passengers Got Shaking Up

Portland, Me., July 6.—Several persons were slightly injured by the breaking of a truck on the smoking car of a passenger train just as it was approaching the city. The engineer brought the train to a standstill just as the locomotive reached the approach to a high bridge. The car did not leave the rails, but the bumping of the truck shook up several passengers.

Struck by Observation Engine

Westboro, Mass., July 6.—Edward J. Pichetson and a pair of horses he was driving were instantly killed at a crossing in a deep cut near the Grafton insane colony by a Boston and Albany observation locomotive. The engine was traveling fast with officials of the road and could not be seen from the crossing because of a curve.

Shonts Arrested For Speeding

Stamford, Conn., July 6.—T. P. Shonts of Chicago, president of the Panama canal commission, was arrested here for violation of the automobile speed law. He had a party of women with him. He put up a bond to secure his appearance in court. He was on the way to his summer home at Greenwich at the time.

General's Eyes Trouble Him

Boston, July 6.—Major General Wood, U. S. A., who has arrived here from Manila by way of the Pacific coast, is receiving treatment by a specialist for an eye trouble. He is understood to have suffered from the glare of the sun in the Philippines. He proposes to spend several weeks on Cape Cod before returning to Manila.

Rosen Installed at Manchester

Boston, July 6.—Baron Rosen, the new Russian ambassador, who arrived in this city Tuesday evening, went to Manchester-by-the-Sea last evening to take possession of the house which he has leased for the season. It is understood that the ambassador will soon leave for Washington to report at the Russian embassy.

Badly Burned at a Dance

Jamaica, Vt., July 6.—Hulda Howard, 16 years old, was probably fatally burned while attending a dance in this village. An oil lamp fell from its hangings and burst into flame as soon as it struck the floor. Some of the burning oil splashed upon Miss Howard, setting her clothing on fire.

Embezzler Trying For Release

Boston, July 6.—A petition has been filed with Governor Douglas asking for the pardon of Joseph A. Iasigi of this city, formerly Turkish consul here, who was sentenced to state prison in 1897 for not less than 14 nor more than 18 years for the embezzlement of $170,000 of trust funds.

An Ideal Summerland.

Nowhere upon the coasts of the United States are seashore attractions more abundant, or in finer quality, than in southeastern Massachusetts, or from Boston away round to the Narragansett waters and the islands and borders along the entrance to Long Island Sound.

Beginning with the islands and shores of Boston harbor and Dorchester bay the fascinations are multiplied as the tour of the coast is made—Quincy, Houghs Neck, Nantasket, the South Shore, Plymouth, Cape Cod, the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, Buzzards Bay and the Elizabethan Islands, Newport, Narragansett Pier, Watch Hill, Block Island—the list is never-ending in the presentation of enchanting resorts.

The twistings and turnings of the shore lines for all this section of coasts involve scores of miles of travel in their exploration; there is not an uninteresting, scarcely an unimproved mile in the whole extent. Watering-places are plentiful hereabouts, and for camping, sojourning, or genuine communion with Nature the region has few rivals and no superiors.

HAD A GRAND EFFECT

Native Airs of Far-Off Countries Introduced In Christian Endeavor Convention Chorus--Message of Love to "Father" Clark, Who Is Sick

Baltimore, July 6.—Without doubt most of the 20,000 people gathered in Armory hall will carry away with them the conviction that in the "international festival of praise," rendered last night under the direction of Rev. Carey Bonner of London, has been brought forth the choicest flower that will blossom in the garden of the 22d international Christian Endeavor convention, which is already declared by those who have attended all of its predecessors to be the greatest in the history of the society.

While almost entirely musical, it was in every sense a meeting for worship, and the bowing of the 20,000 heads in prayer, preceded by momentary silence, was wonderfully impressive. So, too, was the congregational singing, and Mr. Bonner, by whom the festival was arranged and partly composed, gave expression to intense admiration of the manner in which the chorus handled his creation.

The regular convention chorus of 2400 voices was reinforced by 400 of the junior chorus, making a grand total of 2800 voices. It is said that the largest chorus heard at any Christian Endeavor convention hitherto was composed of 1200 voices.

Briefly described, the "international festival of praise," which was rendered for the first time last night, illustrates the world-wide praise to God of the nations, and the music of the several parts is typical of times and nations, from "The Lord Bless Thee and Keep Thee," sung to what is said to be one of the oldest Hebrew airs known, to the most modern evangelical music. Native airs of China, India and other countries are introduced with remarkable effect.

Preceding the festival, by a unanimous vote, the following telegram was ordered sent to Rev. Francis E. Clark, who is ill at Pine Point, Me:

"Fifteen thousand Christian Endeavorers from many lands send sympathy and love and pray for your speedy recovery. We pledge anew loyalty to Christ, fidelity to his church, and fellowship with his people. The greatest meeting in the history of our conventions."

No announcement will be made here as to where the convention of 1907 will be held. At an adjourned meeting of the board the matter was referred back to the executive committee, with instructions to secure further information and report to a meeting of the full board, which will be held sometime during the winter. Not until after that meeting will the name of the chosen city be known.

The formal opening of the convention took place in Armory hall with about 8000 delegates present and nearly all of the 16,000 seats in the auditorium occupied. In the absence of President Clark Rev. Howard B. Grose of New York presided and opened the proceedings with brief remarks.

A letter from President Roosevelt was read, expressing regret that it had been found impossible for him to accept an invitation to address the convention

After the singing of the doxology by the audience and a prayer by Dr. Floyd Thompson of Philadelphia, there were devotional exercises, including a brief memorial service for the late Secretary of State Hay, and the Christian Endeavor rally song was sung by the chorus as a welcome to the visitors.

In the absence of Dr. Clark, Rev. Dr. Baker, pastor of the "Mother Society church," Williston Congregational church of Portland, Me., responded to the addresses of welcome in behalf of the delegates. This was followed by the anthem "The Heavens Are Telling," rendered by the convention chorus with splendid effect. The annual review of the Christian Endeavor field was then read by General Secretary Vogt. The convention then took a recess until 7:30 p. m., when the festival of praise occurred.

Leanders Too Fast For Vespers

Henley, Eng., July 6.—The Leander crew defeated the Vesper Boat club crew in the second heat for the Grand Challenge cup in the Henley regatta on the Thames river. The English crew took the lead at the start and was never headed, winning by a length in the fast time of 7 minutes and 1 second.

San Francisco, July 6.—Two hundred printers and 100 pressmen, it is said, have been locked out by the employers in the conflict between the Typothatae and the union. The question at issue is whether the men shall work nine hours a day.

PERHAPS SIXTY KILLED

Tornado Sweeps Over a Large Portion of Lone Star State

Fort Worth, Tex., July 6.—A tornado which struck Texas in the upper edge of Montague county, coming from the northwest tnd swinging far to the southeast, cost, it is believed, over 40 lives, injured a large number of people and did untold damage to growing crops and cattle.

Fortunately the tornado missed the small towns in the section through which it swept, but it zig-zagged in such a way as to take in the homes of many farmers and stock-raisers in the section.

At Jacksboro the force of the wind was terrific. The Baptist church and 20 other buildings were blown off their foundations and a number of buildings destroyed.

At Montague no lives were lost in the town, but in the country great loss of life is reported. Owing to the fact that wires are down in all directions it is difficult to get particulars. Ten persons are known to be dead in that neighborhood and unconfirmed reports are to the effect that the list of dead will go as high as 40. Most of those killed lived on Salt creek, along which the tornado swept with terrific force.

From Nocona the tornado passed a few miles to the south and the latest reports give the dead at 14 and place the number of injured at 41.

Many farmhouses were blown entirely away. The Long Branch schoolhouse was destroyed and the Baptist and Methodist churches at Belchor were practically destroyed.

A reliable man at Nocona who has been over the scene says that reports were being received of the dead when he left there. He places the loss of life at 60.

Owing to the widely separated homes and the fact that in many instances whole families were wiped out, details and names are hard to get.

The country through which the tornado passed is one of the richest farming sections of Texas, lying along the northern border of the state.

Americans Made Poor Showing

Laschamp, France, July 6.—France again established her supremacy in an international automobile contest over the Auvergne course, Thery, the French champion, winning the race after an exciting contest with the Italian champion, Lancia. Thery finished in 7 hours and 10 minutes. There was considerable surprise at the poor showing made by the Americans. Lytle, who was placed 12th, was the only American to finish.

Woman Suspected of Poisoning

Lake City, Ia., July 6.—A coroner's jury which held an inquest into the death of Josiah M. Pratt, who died after a brief illness, held that the cause of death was poisoning by arsenic administered in small doses, and implicated the man's widow and his hired man, William Persing. Mrs. Pratt had purchased arsenic twice, ostensibly to kill mice, it is said.

Jap Trade Invasion Feared

Berlin, July 6.—An article in a semi-official Tsingtaue newspaper printed here calls upon Germany to take a firm and vigorous course in checking trade invasion of the Shangtung province by the Japanese, who, the paper affirms, are establishing themselves in the capital and lesser cities of the province, while Japanese make articles in the shops in every place.

Admit Guilt In Land Frauds

Portland, Or., July 6.—In the matter of the indictment and trial of S. A. D. Puter, Marie Ware, Emma L. Watson and State Senator Mays, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government, the first three named have agreed to plead guilty. Cases in which Senator Mitchell is involved are near the foot of the court calendar.

Baltimore Has a Flood

Baltimore, July 6.—The lower lying sections of the business district of this city are under water, the result of a cloudburst and the backing up of the waters of the harbor by recent southwest winds. Street car travel on all lines running through the central part of the city is paralyzed.

Germany Loses Torpedo Boat

Berlin, July 6.—Battleship Woerth rammed torpedo boat S.124 in the harbor of Rekenforde, cutting her completely in two. Three firemen in the boiler room were scalded to death by escaping steam. The S.124 was of 420 tons displacement and had a speed of 30 miles an hour.

Partner Charges Embezzlement

Chicago, July 6.—The brokerage firm of Frazer & Co. has suspended business. The whereabouts of S. L. Frazer, the active member of the firm, is unknown. Thomas Medill, an associate, has secured a warrant for Frazer's arrest, charging embezzlement.

Richmond, July 6.—This year for the first time in the history of the institution Lee camp, the Confederate Soldiers' home, near this city, flung to the breeze from its flagstaff the Stars and Stripes in honor of the Fourth.

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.
When It Is Free of Dandruff, It Grows Luxuriantly.
Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally, luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ; and, so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Herpicide—absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye matter or dangerous drugs. It allays itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Leader of Mutineers Took Due Precautions

ISSUANCE OF MANIFESTO

Intended to Show That They Do Not Desire to Be Classed as Outlaws--Expected to Go to the Caucasus and Stir Up a General Rising

St. Petersburg, July 6.—While no official confirmation is obtainable, it is stated by an authority usually reliable that the admiralty has received news that the Kniaz Potemkine, after shipping coal, provisions and medicines, is again at large in the Black sea and that her destination is unknown.

Whether the report of the sailing of the battleship be true or not, the crew took a remarkable step yesterday when, with all the solemnity of a provisional government, it issued a manifesto addressed to the powers announcing that civil war had begun against the existing regime in Russia and pledging the inviolability of foreign shipping and foreign ports.

This action doubtless was taken to quiet the apprehension of foreign powers and to leave no excuse for the sending of warships through the Dardanelles to effect the capture of the battleship, which until now Russia's Black sea fleet has not dared to attempt. It is considered a shrewd move on the part of the mutineers and stamps the commander of the crew as a leader far above the class of the ordinary sailor and strengthens the opinion that he is not a member of the original crew, but one of the revolutionaries who went on board at Odessa.

The issuance of the manifesto lends a certain dignity to the mutiny and proves that the crew and their commander have no desire that the world should believe them to be mere outlaws.

According to a rumor printed in an afternoon paper, the ship's strong box contained $375,000 and the mutineers would therefore be well supplied with money.

In circles closely in touch with the revolutionists it is regarded as a foregone conclusion that the commander of the Kniaz Potemkine, knowing the situation in the Caucasus, will head for Poti or Batoum, where the revolutionists are exceedingly strong, in the hope of producing a general rising. With the authorities in the Caucasus almost powerless to prevent it, such a contingency is by no means impossible.

Dispatches from Tiflis say that reports of the rioting at Odessa and the action of the Kniaz Potemkine have aroused the most intense interest and the wildest joy among the revolutionists. The receipt of the reports was followed immediately by a complete strike, even the lamp-lighters quitting work. The inhabitants generally are fleeing to the northward.

The Emperor Nicholas II. the crew of which is reported to have mutinied at Constantinople, is a Russian merchantman.

Considerable anxiety is felt because the cruiser Chernomoretz, which was due at Sebastopol Monday, has not yet arrived.

Order has not been restored at Bielostock. A censored telegram received last night reports that shooting has been heard, that crowds are fleeing and that wild excitement prevails.

Powers Consider Russia's Feelings

London, July 6.—It is understood that the movements of the Kniaz Potemkine are engaging the serious attention of the powers, who are exchanging views on the possible necessity of taking joint measures to protect neutral commerce in the Black sea. According to a press dispatch from Vienna, however, nothing will be done even in the shape of joint representations to the Russian government except in the last extremity, it being desired to avoid wounding Russia's susceptibilities.

Special dispatches from Constantinople give an unconfirmed report that the Kniaz Potemkine engaged two British officers at Kustenji.

Threatened Bombardment

Theodosia, Crimea, July 6.—Summoned by the Kniaz Potemkine, representatives of the town council went on board the battleship and were received in the admiral's cabin by the commission commanding her.

The commission demanded the delivery of 500 tons of coal and provisions of various kinds within 24 hours and threatened in the event of non-compliance, after due warning to the inhabitants, the town would be bombarded.

The commission also proposed that the mayor should transmit to the population a proclamation demanding the termination of the war, a convocation of the zemstvos, etc.

Learning of these demands many inhabitants fled the town. The workmen insisted that the demands be granted.

A special meeting of the municipal council was called and the council consented to deliver the provisions, but refused to comply with the demand for coal for the reason that the town had none.

Mutineers Imprisoned

Odessa, July 6.—Sixty-seven of the mutineers from the Georgi Pobiedonosetz, including the ringleaders, have been imprisoned. It is expected that all of them will be shot.

England's Tribute to Hay

London, July 6.—England paid to the memory of Secretary Hay a tribute seldom accorded to a foreigner, when solemn memorial services were held in St. Paul's cathedral on the burial day of the late secretary of state. The immense edifice was crowded. The service was fully choral, the hymns being sung by a surpliced choir of 100 voices. The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dean Gregory and Archdeacon Sinclair took part in the services. Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney (Helen Hay), in deep mourning, attended the services.

Rome, July 6.—A memorial service for the late Secretary Hay was held in St. Paul's (American) church here. The Military Order of the Loyal Legion, of which Mr. Hay was a member, was represented by Dr. Nevin, rector of the church, who conducted the service.

Deluge at Washington

Washington, July 6.—One of the heaviest rainstorms ever experienced in Washington occurred last night. Between 7:22 and 8:40 p. m. the rainfall amounted to 3.11 inches. It was very hot and oppressive during the day. At various places in the south there was also unusually great precipitation.

Prosperous Times In Norway

Christiania, July 6.—The political crisis has had a remarkably small influence on the general condition of the country. The tourist traffic is excellent. The harvest promises to be good and this helps to stimulate business. The customs revenue for June shows a great increase.

Porto Rican Labor Trouble

San Juan, P. R., July 6.—There is a strike of longshoremen here and the cargoes of vessels are being unloaded by laborers brought from interior towns to the island. It is feared that the trouble may extend to other ports, and shipping interests are greatly disturbed.

Martial Law Slightly Relaxed

Odessa, July 6.—The city continues under martial law, but some of the regulations have been slightly relaxed. It is now possible to go to any part of the city or harbor without a military pass.

—The President sets a good example to other college graduates in returning to alma mater for this reunion. It does a man no harm to go back to college every few years and rehearse the pleasant memories of his undergraduate career. There is hardly a better way of keeping young in spirit than to revert from time to time to our salad days, when we were green in judgment, but rich in joy.—Providence Journal.

DRY SHAMPOOS.

Fragrant Powders That Will Cleanse the Hair and Scalp.

Dry shampoos are efficacious in cleaning both the scalp and hair, and the following powders for this purpose are fragrant and delicious.

Take white cornmeal as fine as can be ground. Perfume with a little powdered orris root and rub a quantity of it dry into the hair near the scalp. Massage well and bring the powder through the long part. Then with a long fibered brush remove all the meal. This is not a difficult thing to do if the brush has long fibers. The strokes need not be hard, and, indeed, should not be, or the hair will be pulled out. The best way of brushing is to hold the hair out in one hand and brush through each strand, beginning near the hand and working down close to the head.

A powder that is delicious for the same purpose is made of one-fourth of a pound of powdered orris root, one and one-third drams of bergamot rind, the same of cassie flowers and one-quarter of a dram of coarsely ground cloves. Mingle and put through a fine sieve. The best way of using is to rub into the hair at night and let it remain until morning. Then brush out. This will perfume the head deliciously. A cheaper preparation made in the same way is composed of a half pound of cornstarch, the same of orris root powdered and five drops of oil of rhodium. These three are specially suited to oily hair, as the powders will absorb much of the moisture.

A GRACEFUL CARRIAGE.

Practice Correct Sitting and Rising Before a Mirror.

To rise gracefully draw one foot back a little and rise with the chest and the crown of the head leading upward, not forward. Practice sitting and rising before a mirror, using a straight backed chair. Do not run to extremes and sit bolt upright on the edge of the chair. Let the erect body be supple and ready to sway in any direction—led always by the chest. If you want to lean against the back of the chair there can be no harm in you doing so, provided that you sit in such a way as to allow the "small of the back" to rest against the back of the chair.

Do not lean shoulder blades against the chair back and hollow the "small of the back" while sitting. Such a position is injurious to health and fatal to beauty. If persisted in it will result in prominent shoulder blades and will induce curvature of the spine.

If you would avoid round shoulders and a forward stoop of the neck do not use a high pillow when lying down. It is better to sleep without a pillow. If custom has rendered a pillow necessary you can gradually decrease its size until it becomes a very small one. Then you will come to wonder how you ever slept comfortably in the awkward position necessitated by a high pillow, and you will be pleased to find that your prominent shoulder blades are retreating and that your back and neck are assuming symmetrical lines.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Save your tired feet on ironing day by standing on a cushion.

In hanging clothes to dry always hang the stockings by the toes, nightdresses from the shoulders and skirts from the hem.

When hanging wet blankets or white spreads on the line to dry put a small square of cloth under each clothespin to make sure there will be no stain from a dusty pin.

Carbonate of lime, better known as Spanish chalk, used in the proportion of two to one of starch, will render all light stuffs such as muslin incombustible yet not hurt the material itself in any way.

To give linen a gloss pour a pint of boiling water on two ounces of gum arabic, cover till next day, then strain it carefully and put it in a clean bottle. Two teaspoonfuls of this stirred into a pint of ordinary starch will give collars and cuffs an appearance of newness.

To Test Tea.

To test tea put a pinch in a glass, pour upon it a little cold water and shake it well up. Pure tea will only slightly color the water, while a strong infusion is quickly got from the adulterated leaf. Now boil both separately and let them stand till cool, and the difference between them will be most marked. The false tea will become still more strong after long standing, but will remain transparent, whereas the pure tea will become muddy or milky. This last appearance arises from the tannic acid, which is a natural property in pure tea, but which in artificial tea is entirely absent.

Thin Silks and Laces.

A good gum arabic mixture to keep on hand for stiffening thin silk or laces is made by putting one ounce of gum arabic in a wide mouthed bottle and covering it with a cup of cold water. Place the bottle in a kettle of cold water over the fire until the gum arabic is dissolved. Strain through a piece of cheesecloth. If this is to be all used within a few days it needs no other treatment, but if to be kept some time add a cup of alcohol and cork tightly.

New Women In the South.

The southern woman of affairs really antedates the "new woman" of America, about whom we have heard so much in recent years. The training of southern women for the practical supervision of large undertakings began during the war of 1861-65, when they were left in entire charge of a very considerable percentage of the southern plantations.—Macon Telegraph.

An Alien Heir

By FRANCIS A. COREY

Copyright, 1905, by F. A. Corey

Throwing a fresh stick on the fire, Dick Vance gazed approvingly about him. The room which the dancing flames lighted up had a cozy, homelike air delightfully in contrast with his cheerless lodgings in Paris. At last he had one little spot within four walls that he could call his own.

As he stretched his legs comfortably to the blaze he was still tingling with the thrill of amazement he had felt when informed by the village Lawyer during their brief interview that afternoon that he was Robert Chilton's heir.

"The estate consists of this old house, which has been in the Chilton family for a hundred years, and $50,000 in stocks and bonds," Mr. Blackstone had said.

"And it's mine, really mine, to do what I please with?" Dick asked eagerly.

"Nobody can dispute your legal right to it," was the stiff response. "Chilton took care to make a will that would hold. The justice of the bequest is quite another thing."

Although three hours had gone by since then, Dick still almost doubted his great fortune. How often he had gone with empty pockets and nothing to eat!

One blissful thought made his heart leap. He could marry Alice Dale! They had waited two years because of their poverty. There was now no occasion for delay.

The wind whistled around the house, driving great gusts of snow against the windows. Dick laughed at its futile rage and stirred the fire afresh. In fancy he saw Alice sitting on the other side of the hearth, one pretty pink cheek in her palm. How graciously she would rule over the house! He would hasten to her the first thing on the morrow with the wonderful news.

The doorbell rang. Mr. Robbins, the gray haired minister who had officiated at Robert Chilton's funeral that day, was ushered in. Shaking the snow from his great coat, he sat down heavily before the fire, his face wearing a stern expression.

"Mr. Vance, how long had you known the deceased?" he abruptly inquired.

"About six months, sir."

"You met abroad?"

"Yes, sir—in Paris. Mr. Chilton fell seriously ill at one of the hotels. He was alone, and I took care of him. He was pleased to think that my nursing saved his life."

"You traveled with him afterward?"

"I did. I was a poor medical student. I had just taken my degree. I could act as courier and also keep careful watch over his bodily health."

Dick smiled pleasantly, but the clergyman's face grew harder than before.

"Did he ever speak to you of his family?"

"Only once—just before he died. He said they had betrayed, forsaken him; that he was worse than alone in the world. He made me promise to bury him from his old home, never intimating that I was to be his heir. That came as a complete surprise. Oh, sir," Dick added, with kindling eyes, "this legacy means everything to me—success, happiness, a prosperous career."

Looking at the young man over his spectacles, Mr. Robbins said gravely:

"Then you are not aware that Mr. Chilton left a daughter and a grandchild?"

Dick turned pale, and all at once there was a curious pounding in his ears.

"No! It simply can't be! He would have told me"—

"It seems that he did not. His daughter married against his wishes and he never forgave her. She is now a widow, a confirmed invalid, and very poor. Her child, a girl of twenty, is working beyond her strength for the bare necessities of life. I sent word to them, but it appears they did not receive it in time to come."

There was a silence which neither of the two seemed disposed to break. Dick's forehead glistened with perspiration. He swept a shaking hand across it.

"Of course I understand why you tell me this," he cried huskily. "You think I have no right to the property and should give it up."

The old minister frowned, and was silent. Dick glanced lingeringly around the room.

"I won't do it!" he cried, with half angry vehemence. "If Mr. Chilton had wanted his daughter to have it, he would have left it to her. It's mine—mine! I intend to keep it!"

Mr. Robbins rose and picked up his hat from the table.

"I regret exceedingly your decision," he said coldly. "Frankly, I'm disappointed in you. Good night, sir." And he walked out of the room.

Dick sat for a long time gazing into the fire. His cheeks were flushed. The discarded daughter was nothing to him. He would be a fool to abdicate in her favor. No doubt she deserved all that had befallen her, and even worse.

Presently his thoughts turned to Alice. She had forbidden him to write to her. He should be free, she had said, since they would be unable to marry for years, if ever. Not a line had passed between them for months. But he felt no misgivings. She loved him; she would remain true.

"How I wish it were morning that I might go to her," he said aloud.

He smiled, and yet a heaviness lay on his heart. The sad face of the woman whose birthright he had stolen seemed to stare at his reproachfully from the corners of the room. It even framed itself in the smoldering logs as they blazed up fitfully and fell apart.

The doorbell rang again. After a long delay the door opened to admit Mrs. Burke, the old housekeeper. She was pale with suppressed emotion.

"Another visitor?" he exclaimed with annoyance. "Who is it?"

"Mr. Chilton's granddaughter, sir," was the startling response.

Dick sprang to his feet.

"The poor child did not learn of her grandfather's death until today, sir. The storm delayed the mails. She came at once—and alone, because her mother is ill."

"What does she want?" His voice had a strangely harsh, unnatural sound.

"She hoped to be in time for the funeral, but her train was stalled. She is going right away again. I thought, sir," hesitatingly, "you might like to see her first."

See her! Dick felt a sick shrinking through all his being. Of course it was a game to wheedle some concession from him. But it would be churlish to refuse.

"Where is she?"

"In the kitchen. She would come no farther."

As Dick started in that direction Mrs. Burke laid her hand upon his arm.

"One moment, sir. I'd like to tell you something. The girl loves a worthy man as poor as herself. They can never marry now. I'm sorry for them both."

She turned half fiercely, but before he could speak his anger was swallowed up in pity. The case appealed to him strongly. Was the structure of his happiness to be built upon the ruin of two lives? If he robbed this girl of her inheritance what was left to her?

With these thoughts whirling in his brain he started on again, with heavy, shuffling steps. The girl sat before the kitchen fire, her face in her hands. Dick saw the drooping figure as through a red mist. He began speaking rapidly, in a tense voice, as if half afraid to trust himself.

"I'm a selfish brute. At first I didn't realize the injustice of accepting a legacy that means everything to you"—At his first word a tremor had shaken the bowed figure. She lifted her head suddenly with a startled exclamation.

"Dick! Dick!"

He stood staring. All at once the mist seemed shot through with a dazzling light. He leaned nearer, like one half blinded, and brushed his hand across his eyes.

"Alice! It is Alice!" he said incredulously.

She, the quicker to grasp the situation, looked up at him with a happy laugh.

"Dick! Oh, Dick! Nobody told me the name of the man who had robbed me of my birthright. I never dreamed it was you. I thought it was some adventurer. That is why I meant—to go away—without seeing you"—

The words died in an inarticulate murmur. Her blushing face was pressed against his heart.

The Slavery of the Match.

To a nonsmoker a match is a small sulphur tipped stick, useful for lighting the gas. It is kept in a holder on the wall and is no more important than ice water or slippers. To a smoker a match is one of the currencies of comfort. It is indispensable, precious and exceedingly scarce. To him the man who always has a match to lend is a friend worth having—a chronic borrower of matches is a public nuisance. The smoker's life is divided into periods of affluence when his vest pocket is full of matches and of poverty when he has but one match and is not sure that it will light. He dreams at night that he is on a vast prairie, miles from home, with a pipeful of tobacco and no match. He knows every vantage point where matches can be had. He is always greedy for them—always suffering for them. He envies the man who always has two matches left. Try as he may, he can't do the trick himself.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Original Natural History.

The Rev. Samuel Peters was the man who made Connecticut's blue laws famous by their publication in his history of that state. In that interesting volume the following original bit of natural history is to be found: "In the Connecticut river, 200 miles from Long Island sound, is a narrow of five yards only formed by two shelving mountains of solid rock whose tops intercept the clouds. Through this chasm are compelled to pass all the waters which in the time of floods bury the northern country. Here water is consolidated without frost, by pressure, by swiftness, between the pinching sturdy rocks to such a degree of induration that an iron crow floats smoothly down its current. Here iron, lead and cork have one common weight; here, steady as time and harder than marble, the stream passes irresistible if not swift as lightning."

An Indian Fable.

A woodman entered a wood with his ax on his shoulders. The trees were alarmed and addressed him thus: "Ah, sir, will you not let us live happily some time longer?" "Yes," said the woodman; "I am quite willing to do so, but as often as I see this ax I am tempted to come to the wood and do my work in it, so I am not to blame so much as this ax." "We know," said the trees, "that the handle of the ax, which is a piece of a branch of a tree in this very wood, is more to blame than the iron, for it is that which helps you to destroy its kindred." "You are quite right," said the woodman. "There is no foe so bitter as a renegade."

NOTABLE FUNERAL

Host of Friends at Bier of Joseph C. Morse.

Clergy Pay High Tributes of Esteem.

Masonic Bodies as Escort to Church and Grave.

Seldom has there been a larger attended funeral at the First church than that of Joseph C. Morse which was held Thursday afternoon. The pews on both sides of the church were filled with business and personal friends while in the centre aisle, aside from the mourners were DeMolay Commandery, Knights Templar, Rural lodge A. F. and A. M., St. Stephen's Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and the Granite City Club.

Previous to the services at the church prayers were said for the family at his late residence by Rev. E. C. Butler and Rev. D. M. Wilson, pastor and former pastor of the First church.

De Molay Commandery arrived from Boston on the 2.19 train and were met in City Square by Rural Lodge and St. Stephen's Chapter. The Masonic bodies then marched to the house via Granite street and escorted the body to the church, via Dimmock street.

The interior of the church especially about the pulpit was one huge array of flowers sent by the fraternal and social organizations of which the deceased was a member, as well as a large number of bouquets and other pieces from personal friends and the family. At each window was a bouquet of nasturtiums or sweet peas, which came from his flower garden at Fort Point, and which he had reared with his own hand. On pew 17, that which he occupied, was a large wreath of laurel and sheath of white roses.

The ushers at the church were Harry W. Kimball of De Molay Commandery, J. A. Ferguson of the Round Table, Edward B. Marsh and Charles H. Johnson of Rural Lodge, Emery L. Crane and Ex-Mayor John O. Hall of St. Stephen's Chapter, and Herman F. McIntire, George P. Mead and Albert Bruff of the Granite City Club.

The body reached the church a little after 3 o'clock and it was borne down the centre aisle preceded by Rev. Mr. Butler and Rev. Mr. Wilson, the former chanting "I am the Resurrection and the Life." Following the casket containing the remains were the bearers, all of whom were from De Molay Commandery and were as follows: R. H. Simms, James A. Towle, W. H. Whicher, O. A. Sheppard, George W. Waldron and John Chapman.

The remains were encased in a black broadcloth casket. On this were wreaths of ivy and the sword and chapeau of the deceased and his photograph. It was placed in front of the pulpit, a Sir Knight standing guard at either end during the services.

The services were opened by the Albion quartet who sang "Lead Kindly Light." Then came the scripture reading by Rev. D. M. Wilson.

Rev. E. C. Butler then spoke briefly of the departed friend. He said in part: "When a child dies we say his life is cut off. When an old man dies we say his life has been filled out. When one like our friend dies in the middle of life we say, what a pity it is. He had fully attained his desires and got that for which man most desires, a wife, children, home and friends far and wide. What more could a man have? Why must he go then? He had lived the way a man should live. His word was as good as his bond. His handshake firm and friendship strong. He has done his work and his time has come. Oh, let me go while I am strong. Let me in my mercy go before the evils of life come to me. Just a little pain, met as he met the enemy every time. That is the way he lived, that is the way he died. He was a kind and good man. No darkness lingered on his name or in his heart which was bright as sunlight. We commit it to its mother dust, to the memory of the merciful God and say, Good Comrade, hail and farewell."

Rev. D. M. Wilson also spoke briefly. He said in part: "Here he sat and worshipped man and boy. No more will that dear friend be with us on earth. We are amazed and overcome. In the days that are to come we must adjust ourselves to life without the assistance of our dear friend. He was a man who could be depended upon. A dear friend whose confidence was a blessing. Such a man was prepared to pass to the great beyond. How courageous he was. Looking into his eyes so fearless you knew he was a man you could trust. He was a man ready to do his part. Accepting responsibility thrust upon him, or which he was asked to fill. He was friendly, kindly, generous and companionable. He was just to others before he was just to himself. His life has not been confined to himself, it has gone out to others. He built up his business and while he built up his business he built up himself. All honor and praise for such a man as that. Let us cherish his memory for the stimulation of the best that is in us."

A prayer by Rev. Mr. Butler closed this part of the services.

The burial service of the Knights Templar were then performed by Em. Commander C. T. C. Whitcomb and Prelate Sir E. A. Ladd. During the services the quartette sang "Lead Kindly Light," "O Love Divine," "Some Time We'll Understand," and "Face to Face."

An opportunity was then afforded to take a long last look of him who in life had been a friend to all.

The remains were escorted to Mount Wollaston cemetery by the Masonic bodies who marched to the muffled beat of the drum. At the grave the Masonic committal service was performed by De Molay commandery and the quartette sang "No Shadows Yonder," and "Emmanuel." Evergreen was deposited in the grave by members of Rural lodge and St. Stephen's chapter.

Several members of the first City Council and of the present City Council were present as well as ex-Mayors Porter, Hall and Bryant and Mayor Thompson. Out of respect to his memory City Hall was closed during the funeral services.

The arrangements at the church were in charge of Past Master Dexter E. Wadsworth of Macedonian lodge A. F. and A. M., and a close, personal friend of Mr. Morse.

The flowers were many and beautiful. There were scores of bouquets and sprays from his neighbors and family friends as well as beautiful pieces from the immediate family. Aside from these there were:

A standing cross and crown from De Molay Commandery.

A square and compass from Rural lodge.

A pillow of white pinks from the Granite City club.

Standing anchor from neighbors at Rose Cliff.

Wreath of crimson roses from friends in car Victor in which Mr. Morse made the pilgrimage to the Pacific.

Mound of American beauty roses from the Round Table club.

Basket of crimson roses from Mrs. James Thompson, Mrs. Wilson Tisdale, Mrs. Geo. E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. John Shaw and Mrs. J. L. Whiton.

Wreath of roses and lilies of the valley from Edward Keller & Co.

Pond lilies and galaxy from J. H. Penniman & Co.

Standing crescent of white roses and pinks and crimson star from Julius Johnson.

From his firm these flowers were sent: a spray of crimson roses from James S. Whiting, a spray of pinks from Henry Pratt, and a spray of white pinks from Charles M. Poor.

As noted above there were scores of other floral tributes which completely hid the front of the pulpit, and later covered the entire lot at the cemetery.

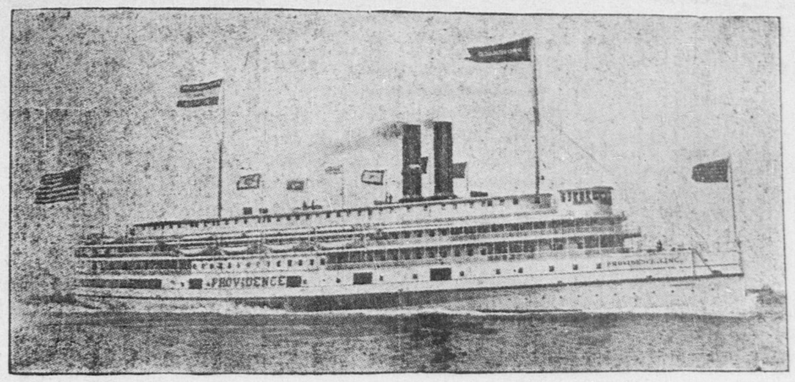
STEAMER PROVIDENCE BREAKS SHAFT.



The new steamer Providence is disabled, having broken a shaft early Thursday morning. She was towed to New London by the steamer City of Taunton, and the passengers and freight transferred. It will probably require three weeks to make repairs.

☞Eyeglasses fitted scientifically. No guess work.—Williams.

The contract for repairing the damage to the steamer Nantucket, which was in collision early on the morning of the Fourth in Vineyard sound with pig barge 101, has been awarded to the Fore River Company at Quincy, and she was towed to Quincy on Thursday.

Steamship Contract.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company has been awarded the contract for a large ocean steamer for the Southern Pacific Railroad. It will be 360 feet long.

Many are having the Daily Ledger sent to their vacation address.

Well on the Way.

Saturday morning, at 8.30, the Teachers' party of the Herald are due at Winnipeg, the capital of the Province of Manitoba, north of Minnesota and the Dakotas.

They left Montreal at 9.40 P. M. on Thursday, after a day of sight-seeing. The party made a tour of the city in a large motor car, visiting Mount Royal, the Notre Dame Cathedral, and other points of interest, being escorted by Mrs. Simpson Hayes, the secretary of the Canadian Women's Press Association.

During the night the train passed through Ottawa and at daylight was to the north of Lake Huron. Today the trip will be to the north of Lake Superior reaching Nipigon about sunset, and Port Arthur a little later.

Winnipeg is 1420 miles from Montreal and 1761 miles from Boston. It is, however, 1482 miles from Vancouver on on the Pacific.

A STATE FUND.

For Firemen Killed While on Duty.

Massachusetts Pays $1000 to Each.

Meanwhile the Local Fund is Growing Rapidly.

The families of Robert T. Fisher and Albert D. Kingsley, the two Wollaston firemen killed while on duty on the Fourth of July, evidently have claim for $1,000 each against the State of Massachusetts, under Chapter 32 of the Revised Laws.

The Legislature of this year, early in the season appropriated $10,000 for this purpose as will be seen by Chapter 32, which is printed in full:

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

Section 1. The sum of ten thousand dollars is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of the treasury of the Commonwealth, as authorized by section seventy-seven of chapter thirty-two of the Revised Laws, for the payment of such claims as may arise in consequence of the death of firemen belonging to the regularly organized fire department of a city or town, or of members in active service of any incorporated protective department, or of any person doing duty at the request of or by order of the authorities of a town which has no organized fire department, who are killed or who die from injuries received while in the discharge of their duties at fires, during the year ending on the thirty-first day of December, nineteen hundred and five.

Section 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage, [Approved February 2, 1905.

The Local Fund.

Generous contributions are being made to the local fund for the injured firemen and the families of those killed.

The Ledger acknowledges the receipt of the following sums:

Balance from Fourth of July,	$6.79
D. E. Wadsworth,	5.00
Charles C. Hearn,	5.00

T. L. Williams,	5.00
P. J. Williams, chief engineer,	10.00
George H. Brown,	10.00
Wollaston subscriptions,	47.00
Mrs.—(a friend)	20.00
Total	$113.79

Other funds are solicited and will be acknowledged as received.

The Second Victim.

The funeral of Albert D. Kingsley, the second victim of the Wollaston accident, will be held Saturday afternoon from his late residence on Freeman street at 2.30 o'clock. The burial will be at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Not until the fire bells tolled Thursday noon did Driver Genero know that any firemen had been killed in the accident. It had been kept secret from him. When the bells were tolling he made inquiries as to the reason. He was told it was a fire alarm, but it is not easy to fool a fireman. He called for his watch, and when he realized the truth he threw the watch with force across the room, and was visibly affected.

Fred Nelson one of the firemen hurt at Wollaston, July 4th, was removed from the Hospital to his home on Old Colony street, Atlantic, Thursday afternoon.

BRAINTREE FIRE.

Dr. C. M. Marstin, Formerly of Quincy, the Loser.

Thursday evening at 9.15 o'clock, fire was discovered in Dr. C. M. Marstin's barn in the rear of his home on Washington street, Braintree. Considerable difficulty was experienced in pulling in an alarm because the key to box 34 was removed to to Mr. F. A. Smith's drug store Monday, before the "Fourth," and had not been returned to its proper place.

After the alarm was given the department responded in short order and did good work. Although the barn and contents were a total loss the nearby houses were saved by constant streams of water. The roofs of many buildings in the neighborhood caught fire from sparks and were promptly wet down.

The fire burned to death a valuable horse, and completely destroyed an automobile, two buggies, sleigh, hay, grain, etc. The horse was about twenty years old and Dr. Marstin has owned him sixteen years. It was the same horse the doctor used for his practice when living in Quincy. The family was very much attached to the animal for he was exceptionally intelligent.

It is thought that the barn took fire from a spark from a bonfire nearby in Mr. Studley's yard.

The barn was insured for $300, by C. H. Hobart & Son, fire insurance agents, in the Home Insurance Co. of New York.

TODAY'S COURT.

Alfred Mattson, Ernest Olson and Charles Archibald were arraigned for assault on Officer Johnson at Quincy. Cases continued until July 14.

Charles Alborn, Peter Carlson and George Johnson were arraigned for setting a bonfire at Quincy, July 4. Cases continued until July 14.

John Henry and Ami Simmons were arraigned for assault on Carl Foss at Quincy. Simmons was discharged and Henry was fined $7.

Charles W. B. Tucker of Holbrook was arraigned for non support of his wife. Case continued until Monday, July 17.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Young man, brace up and tackle the first job that offers you a living. Never mind if you have no money to start with, but just remember all the great multi-millionaires were born without a cent in their pockets.—Gloucester Times.

☞ Some of the newspapers say that John Hay sacrificed himself to the demand of public life in America, as many another noted man has done in the past. And elsewhere in their columns these same papers say that his life was sacrificed to rich eating, close confinement to official and social requirements and too little exercise. If public life in America requires this sort of a programme—and it is surely killing—it would seem as if it were possible to achieve a reform without much sacrifice, on the part of the service, at least.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ It is the opinion of Dr. Clifford Mitchell of Chicago that busy people ought to take two vacations a year or sleep more. However, he is against too much sleeping; he thinks that in addition to a fair amount of relaxation and rest the busy human ought to get out into the open air and exercise plentifully. He says that the change from a life of agriculture to one in which the millions are working in factories has caused an alarming increase in insanity, which is a natural consequence of nervousness and the diseases which it induces. If anybody can find it possible, the best daily program is likely to be that found in a change of occupation and of scene. Get out of the rut if possible; better still, don't get into the rut! Work so long, get out so long, see as many people as you can, drop work and all thought of work, if you can, for a few hours each day. Take time for your meals. Get all the air you can every day. Change your reading occasionally; don't get into the habit of reading only one kind of matter every day; read a newspaper, and also an occasional book and an occasional magazine. You need a varied line of reading as you need a varied menu at your table. We can't all follow these ideas; but if we follow even a few we may help ourselves. And the greatest thing of all is to keep out of the rut; dodge the treadmill—Brockton Enterprise.

How to Swim.

To learn how to swim is not difficult, says the Boston Advertiser. Self-confidence and the realization that the water is very buoyant, and with little effort will sustain the weight of the body, is three-fourths of the task. The first concern of one who wishes to learn how to swim is to become acquainted with the waters beneath the surface rather than to learn simply to keep above it.

To most people who cannot swim it is an overwhelming thing to have their head and shoulders or whole body beneath the water.

They will, when they find themselves going down and the head sinking, first, struggle and pitch about, filling their lungs with water, merely from the horror of going down.

The first thing the beginner should do is to enter the water gradually, first to their knees, then to the waist and shoulders, finally stooping until entirely submerged and staying so for a few seconds. After having become acquainted with the element and thoroughly convinced of its friendliness, the pupil is ready to learn to swim.

The first movement is the breast stroke. The beginner should wade out until shoulder deep, then turning round and facing shore, join the palms of the hands together at the chest.

The hands should then shoot straight out in front a little lower than the chin. When the arms are straight out in front the palms of the hands should be turned almost horizontal to the surface of the water and the arms make a semi-circle of the fullest extent.

The hands should be kept as near the surface as possible without splashing. On the return of the hands to the first position the angle of the palms must be changed in order not to give a retarding stroke.

The second stroke—the leg stroke—is more difficult to master.

PAUL JONES' BODY

France Transfers It to Our Representatives

CEREMONY IN A CHURCH

Imposing Procession, In Which Many Notables Were In Line, Escorted Remains to Railroad Station--Americans Applauded

Paris, July 7.—In the presence of the highest dignitaries of France, the diplomatic representatives of many foreign governments and civil and naval officials of the United States, the body of Admiral Jones was formally delivered to the United States government. The ceremony was one combining impressive dignity with military and naval pomp, in which the soldiers and sailors of France and the sailors of America united in rendering honors to the founder of the American navy.

The occasion was unique and probably without parallel, as the funeral was that of a revolutionary hero whose body had lain neglected in a foreign grave for over 100 years.

Seldom has an event awakened such widespread interest in the French capital. Dense throngs packed the principal thoroughfares to witness the imposing cortege which, for the elaborateness of its military feature, equalled the martial display on the occasion of the visit of King Alfonso.

The ceremony of delivering the body was held in the American church at 3:30 in the afternoon. The interior of this gothic edifice was beautifully decorated with plants and flowers. At the foot of the chancel rested the casket, wound in an American flag and literally buried in masses of floral emblems. The French government had taken charge of the arrangements and huissiers of the foreign office acted as ushers.

After brief religious services General Porter, wearing evening dress, according to the French custom, with the red sash of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor across his breast, advanced alongside the casket and formally delivered the body to Mr. Loomis, as the representative of the United States government, who accepted it in the name of the government and commissioned Admiral Sigsbee to transport it to the United States.

As the surpliced choir took up "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," the entire assemblage rose and joined in the strains of the patriotic hymn. Eight sailors from the Brooklyn then stepped forward and, raising the casket on their shoulders, bore it slowly from the church to the waiting gun carriage. This was draped with the national colors and was drawn by six black horses. The casket was covered with flags and flowers and took the place of the unlimbered gun.

The cortege was now formed and proceeded to the Esplanade Des Invalides. Republican guards lined each side of the avenues, holding back the dense throngs, while all the converging streets were closed by barriers to prevent a crush.

Heading the procession came a squadron of cuirassiers in glittering helmets and breast plates, stretching from curb to curb, with a division of infantry. After them rumbled the gun caison, bearing the flower-laden coffin, with guards of American sailors on either side. Back of the coffin was a long line of distinguished officials, headed by Ambassador McCormick, Special Ambassadors Porter and Loomis, Premier Rouvier and his cabinet, the foreign ambassadors and French generals and admirals, all walking, according to the French custom. The appearance of the detachment of 500 American sailors and marines was the signal for expressions of enthusiasm all along the line. Another French division composed of infantry, cavalry and artillery closed the cortege.

Arriving at the Esplanade Des Invalides an imposing picture was presented. The French government had erected a large pavilion in which to deposit the coffin. The pavilion was richly hung with crimson velvet, with martial emblems and battle axes, entwined flags and a row of brass field pieces along the front. Nearby rose the gilded dome of the tomb of Napoleon.

The casket was deposited in the centre of the pavilion while the cortege passed, rendering military honors. Later it was born to the Invalides railroad station and placed in a funeral car where, guarded by French and American sailors, it started for Cherbourg at 10 o'clock last night.

Cleveland, July 7.—The reading of the Bible in the public schools was denounced in the report of the committee on sectarianism of the central conference here of American rabbis.

NIP IT IN THE BUD.

First Appearance of Dandruff a Forerunner of Future Baldness.

That such is the case has been conclusively proven by scientific research. Prof. Unna, the noted European skin specialist, declares that dandruff is the burrowed-up cuticle of the scalp, caused by parasites destroying the vitality in the hair bulb. The hair becomes lifeless, and, in time, falls out. This can be prevented.

Newbro's Herpicide kills this dandruff germ, and restores the hair to its natural softness and abundancy.

Herpicide is now used by thousands of people—all satisfied that it is the most wonderful hair preparation on the market to-day.

WAGES INCREASED

Departure From Scale Prices In Fall River Mills

Fall River, Mass., July 7.—Manufacturers interpret postponement of action by the weavers' committee on the wage question as a forerunner of an indefinite postponement of further agitation of the question until trade improves permanently. They have no expectation that M. C. D. Borden will advance wages. It has been necessary in many mills to advance wages because operatives could not be secured at the prices offered. That this revision has extended to nearly every department is acknowledged by manufacturers and by most of the labor secretaries.

Some manufacturers who have been comparing notes on wage costs say that a virtual advance of 5 percent in wages has been made in the local mills in six months, and there has been a radical departure from the scale prices in the past six or seven weeks.

It is not improbable that a consideration that had some effect in influencing the labor committee to delay action is the sensational advance in the price of cotton. This rise has come since the request for the restoration of wages was made and has strengthened the position from a statistical standpoint of the manufacturers.

A Foolhardy Experiment

Holden, Mass., July 7.—The explosion of an improvised cannon made from the box of the hub of an old express wagon wheel caused probably fatal injuries to Harold Holmberg, 18 years of age, and Arthur Peterson, 12. Holmberg drove a hardwood plug into one end of the hub, inserted a dynamite cap, poured in the powder of three large dynamite crackers and added gravel and wads of paper. Then he pounded the entire charge with a hammer.

Mysterious Shooter at Large

Rockland, Mass., July 7.—Two boys, Samuel and William Williams of Boston, who are staying with Joseph Studley at Hanover Centre, report that they were shot at by an unknown man while passing through a lonely wood. As reports of a mysterious man seen in that vicinity have been received quite frequently, the town authorities organized a searching party, but the man has not been apprehended. A reward of $100 has been offered for his capture.

Troops Put In a Busy Day

Westfield, Mass., July 7.—The first complete day at Camp Bartlett on Hampton plains, where the state militia has been mobilized, was a hard one. There were long drills in small squads and companies in the morning, a sham battle in the afternoon, and towards evening a review before the commander-in-chief of the camp, with dress parades as a windup. As the afternoon was hot and sultry, the troops suffered considerably.

Small Towns Lose Inhabitants

Boston, July 7.—Returns from the Massachusetts state census show a decrease in the population of the small towns since the census of 1895. Returns from 91 small towns show a decrease of nearly 3 percent. In some instances, as that of North Brookfield, the loss has been nearly 44 percent. The cities, however, will show a proportionate increase.

Shoe Workers on Strike

Brockton, Mass., July 7.—There is a general cessation of business at the shoe factory of the D. W. Field company, owing to a strike ordered by the local Joint Shoe council. The factory has been run on a non-union basis and it is said that the object of the council in ordering the strike is to "organize" it. The factory employs over 400 hands.

Suicide of Millionaire

Winsted, Conn., July 7.—The body of Winthrop Turney, a millionaire owner of a mine in Sonora, Mex., was found in a pasture in the town of Colebrook. There was a bullet wound in his head and his hand clasped a revolver. It is supposed that despondency due to poor health led him to commit suicide. He was 40 years old.

Sentenced For Perjury

Providence, July 7.—George K. Moore, convicted of perjury in connection with alleged naturalization frauds, was sentenced to serve 2½ years in state prison and to pay a fine of $100. After sentence a petition for a writ of error was filed by Moore's counsel and granted by Judge Brown.

Cake of Ice Crushed Skull

Naugatuck, Conn., July 7.—The fall of a cake of ice which was jolted from its place at the top of a load instantly killed William Fowler, aged 6 years, who was riding on the rear step of the wagon. The cake, weighing 306 pounds, struck the boy on the head, crushing his skull.

Lineman Met Instant Death

CITY BREVITIES

Little Albert Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hill of Billings street, very nearly lost one of his fingers by shutting it in the door the morning of the Fourth. The injured member had to be sewed up and Master Albert was an invalid all during the holiday.

The funeral services of Miss Marion Carver of Billings street were held at her home Thursday morning at eleven o'clock. A number of Woodward classmates sang some of the school songs, accompanied by Miss Florence Buxton. A profuse display of floral tributes expressed the deep sympathy of the many friends who attended.

Joseph Clark of Squantum street is still receiving compliments on his patriotic flower garden. Up to the Fourth of July his sweet peas had refused to blossom, but on that morning, before the sunrise gun had sounded its welcome, three flowers appeared on Mr. Clark's hitherto green stalks, only three, and they were red, white and blue.

Gone Abroad.

Mr. Alan A. Claflin, a native of this city, who resided for many years at Wollaston, sailed on Tuesday for England. Mr. Claflin is chemist-in-chief of the Avery Chemical Company, of Boston, and has gone to Europe to attend the annual general meeting, in London, of the Society of Chemical Industry. The latter organization was founded in London in 1881 for the advancement of the study and practice of applied chemistry; for the discussion of all matters connected with the chemical industries, and for the diffusion of information on the applied chemistry and chemical engineering among its members. It now numbers more than 4200 members in all parts of the world.

Local sections of the society have been formed in various countries, and Mr. Claflin has recently been appointed secretary of the New England section, taking the place of Dr. W. H. Walker, who lately resigned.

Mr. Claflin has in recent years read several papers before the New York section (prior to the organization of the New England section,) and his choice for the important post of secretary is regarded as a well deserved recognition of his capacity in his profession.

Extension of Time Wanted.

A petition is pending before the railroad commissioners from the Fore River Ship Building Company for an extension of the time for the operation at grade of the company's private railway between Quincy and East Braintree. When the line was constructed, in 1903, the commissioners issued an elaborate order, permitting the construction at grade until September 1, 1905, but saying that on such lines the railway should go either over or under the highway. For sufficient reason, exception was made in the case, with the understanding that the grades would be separated before September 1st next. But the company is not in position to do the work and so an extension is requested. The commissioners will probably not have a public hearing, but settle the matter by private consultation with parties interested.

FORCIBLE ACTION

Will Be Exercised by Russia Hunting Mutineers

FLEET GOES AFTER THEM

Men on Rebel Ship Backed by Workmen and Joined by Crews of Several Ships--An Alarming State of Affairs In Crimea and the Caucasus

St. Petersburg, July 7.—No report has been received from Theodosia of the arrival there of the squadron from Sebastopol, commanded by Admiral Chouknin, and it is not known whether an encounter with the Kniaz Potemkine has taken place or whether the battleship executed its threat to bombard the city last night unless furnished with the supply of coal demanded.

The latest dispatches from Theodosia received here, timed 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, reported that the Kniaz Potemkine was cruising off shore in sight of the town, but it is possible she may have left that vicinity.

A press dispatch from Sebastopol gives a rumor that the Kniaz Potemkine went seaward late yesterday afternoon. If the squadron arrived before her departure either the surrender of the battleship or a battle is regarded as certain, as Admiral Chouknin, it is believed, would not have dispatched his ships in search of the mutinous vessel unless sure that there would be no repetition of the Odessa fiasco.

Such news as came from the Black sea and Caucasus during the day was extremely alarming. The whole Crimean peninsula is on the verge of revolt, and anarchy reigns in the mountains of the Caucasus from Batoum to Baku. Only brief details are available on account of the rigorous censorship established by Admiral Chouknin, commander of the Black sea fleet. Even foreign embassies having consuls at Theodosia, Crimea, have not received any word.

At Theodosia the workmen are backing the mutineers. The crews of several ships in the harbor have joined the mutineers and the well-to-do class of the population has fled in panic.

Telegrams from the Caucasus say the news of the mutiny on board the Kniaz Potemkine made an electric impression and was the signal for a general movement with which troops and police are absolutely powerless to cope. Railroad traffic in all directions has ceased and the people are fleeing on horseback and all kinds of vehicles over the mountain roads and trails. Utmost consternation prevails in official circles here.

According to reports current in St. Petersburg, four torpedo boats with volunteer crews on board have sailed for Theodosia to sink the Kniaz Potemkine, but the reports lack confirmation and must be accepted with reserve.

Several boats which Lewis Nixon built are at Stbastopol completed and might be used. Nixon himself has not been heard from, and telegrams dispatched to him remain unanswered. This does not indicate cause for alarm so far as he personally is concerned, but is probably due to the censorship.

Story of Bombardment

London, July 7.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Odessa says it is reported there that the Kniaz Potemkine is bombarding Theodosia, that the town is burning and that the soldiers of the garrison are engaged in looting. He says it is also reported that another torpedo boat has joined the mutineers.

Linevitch Reports Jap Disaster

St. Petersburg, July 7.—General Linevitch, in a telegram to the czar dated July 5, and confirming the defeat of the Japanese at Sanvaitse, when a Japanese battalion was annihilated, says that after the flight of the Japanese the latter were reinforced and resumed the fight, but all their attacks were repulsed. The Russians captured a considerable quantity of supplies and held the position until ordered to retire. The Japanese losses, Linevitch adds, were enormous. Many Russians were wounded in such a manner as to prove that the Japanese were using dumdum bullets.

Czar Will Hold the Reins

St. Petersburg, July 7.—The Novosti prints what it claims is the actual text of the final draft of Minister of the Interior Bouliguin's program for the formation of a representative assembly. The classes absolutely debarred are Jews, the nomadic races, persons not of Russian nationality, governors and other imperial and local administrators and all persons connected with the police. The czar possesses the right of absolute veto as well as the power to prorogue the assembly.

American Sympathy Appreciated

Tokio, July 7.—The Perry memorial relief fund for sufferers in the war, contributed by Americans and Japanese, realized 10,300 yen. The mikado enthusiastically expressed his warm appreciation of American sympathy.

Denial of Trouble on the Lena

Vallejo, Cal., July 7.—The officers of the interned Russian cruiser Lena deny that there is trouble aboard the warship. The men have been denied shore leave during the present unsettled conditions in Russia. There are no weapons on the Lena.

ROOT SUCCEEDS HAY

Former War Secretary Selected For State Department

New York, July 7.—President Roosevelt has offered the position of secretary of state to Elihu Root, and Mr. Root has accepted. While no official confirmation is obtained here, Mr. Root's acceptance of the proffer is believed to be without reservation.

The duties of secretary of state appeal strongly to Mr. Root. On two or three occasions, notably during the Boxer revolt, he attended, in the absence of Secretary Hay from Washington, to many of the details of the state department work, in connection with his duties as secretary of war, and he enjoyed the experience.

Kidnapper Tarred and Feathered

Ogdensburg, N. Y., July 7.—Masked men entered the home of Antonio Raggazinc, an Italian, and, after beating him into a semi-conscious condition, poured hot tar over his naked body and then applied a quantity of feathers. Raggazino had but lately returned from serving eight months in prison for abducting two little girls and it has been claimed that he had again been attempting to get the children away from their home. He will recover.

To Wire the Philippines

Manila, July 7.—The Philippine commission has passed an act granting to John I. Sabin and Louis Glass a franchise to construct telephone and telegraph systems throughout the Philippine Islands. Sabin is the president and Glass vice president and general manager of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph company, the head office of which is located in San Francisco.

An Engineering Oddity

New York, July 7.—The first electric car to pass under Harlem river, in the new subway from the Bronx to Manhattan island, was run with a small party of officials aboard. Instead of being bored under the river, the tunnel was built outside the water and lowered into place in sections. There is a separate tube for cars running in each direction.

Jumped From Roof to Street

Providence, July 7.—Actuated, it is supposed by a sudden and uncontrollable impulse, Peter Krug, a jewelry worker, 38 years old, climbed out of a window at his place of employment onto a narrow roof adjoining and then fell or jumped to the street, receiving internal injuries which will result fatally. He is married and has a family.

"Black Pietro" Gets Just Dues

New York, July 7.—"Big Pietro," a member of a self-styled "Black Hand society" of three men who had attempted to collect $100 from Pietro Caputon, a saloonkeeper of Mamaroneck, was shot and instantly killed by Caputon, who was himself fatally injured. Pietro's two companions, though wounded, managed to escape.

Noted Financier Bankrupt

Topeka, July 7.—C. J. Devlin last night filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. This action was decided upon because it would centralize the handling of all his properties and make easier the settlement of all his obligations, the principal one of which is to the First National bank of Topeka. The liabilities will reach nearly $3,000,000.

Approval of Hawaiian Bonds

Washington, July 7.—President Roosevelt has approved the issue of $600,000 of bonds by the territory of Hawaii, to refund the gold bonds of the republic of Hawaii, issued under an act of the legislature of June 13, 1896. The new bonds will be floated, probably in New York, by Governor Carter, now on his way east.

Receiver For Indiana Bank

Richmond, Ind., July 7.—J. A. Speckenlier has been appointed receiver of the Commercial bank of Hagerstown, on application of President Mason. The liabilities exceed $100,000, while the assets are given as much less. The cashier, John Bowman, committed suicide last Monday.

Standard Oil Puts Up a Fight

Topeka, July 7.—The Standard Oil company has filed an answer in the supreme court to the ouster suit brought against the company by the state of Kansas. The answer denies everything alleged by the state and attacks the validity of the Kansas anti-trust law.

Independent Telephones Shut Out

Hartford, July 7.—By a vote of 105 to 99, the bill to admit independent telephone companies to do business in this state was rejected in the house after much discussion. This is regarded as a victory for the Southern New England Telephone company.

Roosevelt's Restful Day

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 7.—After his return from Cleveland President Roosevelt passed an unusually quiet afternoon and evening at Sagamore Hill. He took a horseback ride and played tennis, but received no visitors.

Alleged Murderess Collapsed

Richmond, July 7.—Mrs. Shepard K. Smith, on trial for beating to death her 7-year-old son, collapsed when an effort was made to place her on the stand. She probably will not be able to testify.

Tokio, July 7.—Martial law was abolished yesterday over the whole of Formosa and the Pescadores islands.

SOCIALIST VIEWS

Germany Objects to Too Plain Expressions Thereon

JAURES' PROPOSED TALK

Chancellor Von Buelow Orders That It Shall Not Occur In Berlin and Gives His Reasons Therefor--Newspaper Criticism

Berlin, July 7.—Chancellor Von Buelow's telegram to Prince Radolin, the German ambassador at Paris, announcing that Jaures, the Socialist leader, would not be permitted to speak in Berlin next Sunday, is widely discussed in the press. The Liberal organs assert that it shows weakness and pettiness on the part of the chancellor. The Cologne Gazette regards it as a mistaken step, and several organs express amazement that Von Buelow allowed himself to be informed in the matter of foreign policy by the boasting of the Socialist organ, Vorwaerts. Some of the papers surmise that the action was dictated by consideration for Russia, since the ferment in that country would necessarily have played a prominent part in Jaures' speech.

The chancellor's telegram to Prince Von Radolin was in part as follows:

"The press has announced that Herr Jaures will appear before the Socialistic meeting here July 9. Against the personality of Jaures I have nothing to say. I respect his views on foreign policy and not infrequently agree with them. The personal value of Jaures is not considered, but the political role placed upon him. The leading organ of the Social Domocracy in Germany, The Vorwaerts, has announced that the assemblage planned is the beginning of the immediate influence of the Social Democracy on foreign policy and that a war of the classes will be promoted upon an international foundation. Still more clearly is the aggressive intention of the promoters of this meeting expressed in the organ of the so-called Scientific Socialism, the new society, which says:

"'The revolution has dynamited the Russian-French alliance. Now it becomes the historical task of the German Social Democracy to do for the French republic what the holders of power in Russia are no longer able to do—to protect them from exaggerated claims by the use of force as the result of imperialistic Germany's policy.'

"This is the out-spoken direction in which this demonstration leads. The German Socialists would use the presence of Jaures in Berlin to cover by his person their hostile endeavors against the state and national interests. The imperial government cannot refrain from using the means at its disposal to prevent the party from seeking to destroy the existing and constitutionally established order."

Paris, July 7.—Deputy Jaures, leader of the French Socialists, has been prohibited by the German government from speaking at Berlin next Sunday. Jaures' secretary says that Jaures knows nothing of the interdiction, but that if the report proves true he will go all the same and find a way of delivering a speech.

Rockefeller Made Investments

Boston, July 7.—H. H. Rogers was again a witness in the hearing before Causten Browne, as master, in the suit of Receiver Pepper of the Bay State Gas company against Rogers for $3,000,000 and interest alleged to have been illegally secured from the now defunct company. In the course of his testimony Rogers said that all the investments of the company were made by William Rockefeller.

Unwilling to Submit Books

Milwaukee, July 7.—Judge Seaman, upon petition of counsel for the General Paper company, has granted a request to appeal from the decision requiring the submission of books of the General Paper company as evidence in the hearing instituted by the federal government. The appeal will be decided by the supreme court of the United States.

Lawyer Gets Eighteen Years

New York, July 7.—James S. Alderdice, a lawyer, convicted of forgery, was sentenced to 18 years' imprisonment in Sing Sing by Recorder Goff. The forgeries were committed in efforts to obtain possession of the estate of Mary J. Oliver, who lived the life of a recluse. Alderdice was Mrs. Oliver's attorney.

Sleeping Almost a Week

Peoria, Ills., July 7.—Miss Nellie Koobs, a nurse at the Bartonville asylum, a state institution, has been lying in a profound slumber since Monday, from which apparently she cannot be aroused. She has sunk into a coma-like state and is lying as one dead.

Change of Climate For Jackies

Washington, July 7.—Rear Admiral Train, commanding the Asiatic station, has been authorized by the navy department by cable to proceed with vessels of his fleet to Chefoo. Train asked permission to go north so that the men might have a change of climate.

Caught by Elevator

Boston, July 7.—Thomas Conroy, 55 years old, was crushed to death last night by a freight elevator in the Sudbury building. He attempted to leave the moving elevator, but was caught between its floor and the wall of the elevator well.

To Dispense With Conning Tower

New York, July 7.—It is reported at the New York navy yard that the conning tower as is at present in use on United States warships will be discontinued or so modified as to cease to be central controlling station of the ship's movements In the recent naval battles the Japanese concentrated a heavy fire on the conning towers, the communication system was dislocated and some of the Russian ships rendered unmanageable. One of the alternative propositions is to reserve an armor protective space lower in the ship's structure than the conning tower, from which the officer in charge might direct the ship's movements.

Men Entombed In Submarine

Paris, July 7.—The French submarine boat Farfadet went down at the entrance to the port of Sidi Abdallah, Tunis. Commandant Ratier, at the moment of plunging, noticed that one of the doors was not closed properly and rushed to try to adjust it hermetically. He was too late, the water rushing in with force and throwing out the commandant and two men, the boat sinking and lying in the mud at the bottom. Twelve men are encased in the boat and powerful tugs are working in an attempt to bring up the boat. The entombed men are attempting to communicate with the divers.

Killed by New Automobile

Trinidad, Col., July 7.—Franklin D. Strong of Easthampton, Conn., was killed by plunging over a 12-foot embankment in an automobile which he had just bought and was using for the first time.

Easthampton, Conn., July 7.—Franklin D. Strong was formerly a member of the Connecticut legislature, and was for several years a selectman of the town. He was a contracting mason by trade. He was 70 years old.

A MYSTERY.

Mate of Yacht Romance Probably Drowned.

Last Seen in South Terminal Station.

But His Bundle Was Found in Small Boat.

Search with grappling irons is being made today by the police to recover the body of Douglas Mitchell, second mate of the yacht Romance, Capt. Frank Burgess, who is supposed to have been drowned off the Wollaston Yacht club house Wednesday night.

The facts of the case as related by Capt. Burgess are that Wednesday Mitchell went ashore from the yacht Romance which was moored off the club house. Mitchell first visited friends at Gloucester and then at Lynn and started from the latter place for the yacht in the evening.

He was seen in the South Terminal just before taking the 10.28 train. At that time he was perfectly sober. In fact he was not a drinking man. He had a small bundle with him in which was a light overcoat.

He evidently reached Quincy all right and the supposition is that he started out from the Wollaston clubhouse in the neighborhood of 11 o'clock, in a small tender for the yacht. Fastened to the stern of the yacht was a large tender and to this Mitchell made fast.

In trying to pass from one tender to another it is supposed that he lost his balance and fell overboard. He was unable to swim and being too far out to get hold of the boat he was drowned.

The first mate was asleep on the yacht at the time, but heard nothing. In the morning, however, he saw that the small tender was there and in it a bundle which proved to be Mitchell's coat.

Efforts were made on Thursday to recover the body with grappling irons and by firing a cannon over the water but were unsuccessful.

This morning Chief of Police Burrell and Inspector Bradley went to work with grappling irons, but up to noon had been unsuccessful.

Capt. Burgess says that Mitchell was 23 years of age, unmarried, and that his home was in Nova Scotia.

He was a sober, industrious man but unfortunately could not swim.

DID JOHN HAY WRITE "BREADWINNERS?"

Authorship of Anonymous Novel Attributed to the Statesman.

WHY HIS NAME WAS WITHHELD.

Late Secretary of State, It Is Said, Could Not Have Admitted Authorship When Alive, as the Work Was Directed Against Labor Unions—Epigrams Which Reflect Author's Views on Life, Politics, Labor Unions and Society.

Semiofficial announcement was made recently that the late Secretary of State John Hay was the author of "The Breadwinners," the mysterious and much discussed novel which twenty-three years ago was the reigning literary sensation, says the New York Herald. Its authorship has been a puzzle to the world of letters ever since its publication, and every few months the question has been raised anew. Those who were in touch with the publishers of the work, both as a serial and in book form, have never denied that Mr. Hay was the author.

Remarks of Henry M. Alden, the veteran editor of Harper's Magazine and one of the foremost authorities on American literature, leaves no question as to the authorship. Mr. Alden has for many years been connected with the firm of Harper & Brothers, the publishers of "The Breadwinners."

"I have not," said Mr. Alden the other day, "the absolute evidence at hand to show that Mr. Hay wrote 'The Breadwinners,' but I think that the Herald can make no mistake in saying that he did. For several years I have understood so, and I think there can be no question of it."

Colonel George B. M. Harvey, the head of the corporation of Harper & Brothers, is in Europe. Frederick A. Duneke, the manager of the house, was out of the city, and it was impossible to communicate with him.

Intimations were given a few months ago that an edition of the book which Mr. Hay would father and revise was to be published. There was a story to the effect that his literary executors might direct the publication under his name.

From the nature of its theme it was hardly to be expected that Mr. Hay, while in political life, would consent to be identified with "The Breadwinners," which sharply criticises the methods of the labor unions. The work appeared in the latter part of 1883 in serial form in the Century Magazine, and the editor at that time, Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, is on record as saying that the name of the author was withheld from him. "The Breadwinners" was published early in January, 1884, in book form, and the Harpers paid the royalties to an attorney whose name and address have also been kept secret.

Especial timeliness was given to the book because it appeared shortly after a series of strikes and labor troubles. The city in which the action is laid in Buffland and the characters portrayed in such a lifelike manner have been identified as living in Cleveland and Buffalo. In view of the fact that Mr. Hay knew Cleveland thoroughly and married a daughter of Amasa Stone, a wealthy resident of that place, it is likely that the Forest City was the original of Buffland.

The chief merit of the book is in its epigrams, which afford, in the opinion of many persons, indisputable evidence that John Hay was the author.

A reading of the much discussed novel shows scores of those ripples and flashes which give such an epigrammatical quality to the authorized writings of John Hay. Here are some of the things taken from "The Breadwinners" which have his hall mark:

"I do not care how they look," he would say. "They probably look as they talk, 'without form and void.'"

"She carries herself like a duchess," I was going to say, "but the only duchess I ever knew was at Schwalbach, and she was carried in a wicker handcart."

"The leader of the opposing forces was a butcher, one Jacob Metzger, who had managed the politics of the ward for years. He sold meat on business principles, so as to get the most of a carcass, and he conducted his political operations in the same way."

"She felt as though she had found her mission, her true trade, which was to walk in gardens and smell hothouse roses."

Here is the way the writer of "The Breadwinners" refers to Mr. Samuel Sleeny:

"Sam was such a nullity that she enjoyed his company almost as well as being alone."

"Sam smoked his cigar with the air of polite fatigue with which one listens to abstract statements of moral obligations."

"Sleeny, although a breadwinner (a member of a Socialistic organization of the name), was not sufficiently impressed with the wrongs of labor to throw down his hammer and saw."

Here is a sample of the author's opinions of labor leaders:

"There were fewer shops closed in the back streets; there were not so many parties of prowling apostles of plunder going about to warn laborers away from their work. Besides the agitators of the town, several had come in from the neighboring places, and they were preaching with fervor and perspiration from street corners and from barrel heads in the beer houses the dignity of manhood and the overthrow of tyrants."

Here are a few paragraphs concerning society and things in general:

"Age and wickedness are required to appreciate sherry."

"Spiritualism is one of the most convenient religions in the world. You can disbelieve two-thirds of it and yet be perfectly orthodox."

"There was hardly a millionaire on Algonquin avenue who knew where the ward meetings of his party were held. There was not an Irishman in the city but knew his way to his ward club as well as to mass."

"Shall I bring you back the loot of a temple or two? They say that the priests have become very corruptible since our missionaries got there."

"Perhaps the unhappy aspirant might infer that her heart was buried in the grave of Jairus. The sober fact was that she liked her breakfast at her own hours."

In his political convictions Mr. Hay was in the habit of expressing himself vigorously. This is one of the Breadwinner historical estimates which in itself is almost conclusive evidence of the authorship:

"He called himself Andrew Jackson Offitt, a name which in the west is an unconscious brand. It generally shows that the person bearing it is the son of illiberal parents, with no family pride or affections, but filled with a bitter and savage partisanship which found its expression in a servile worship of the most injurious personality in American history."

When seen at his summer residence in Tyringham, Mass., the other day in regard to the authorship of the story "The Breadwinners," which was published anonymously in the Century Magazine nearly twenty years ago and has been credited to Mr. Hay since his death, Richard Watson Gilder was sorry to say he had no right to divulge the name of the person who he believes was the author either by stating who wrote it or by denying, according to the twenty question plan, says a dispatch from Pittsfield, Mass. He says it was brought to the Century Magazine by a person who credited the story to another person.

A COUNTERCLAIM.

Uncle Sam Asked by Ex-Confederate to Practice Golden Rule.

The postal authorities recently found a southern postmaster short in his accounts in the sum of $3,940, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Tribune. They brought suit against his sureties and after a bitter contest obtained judgment for the full amount. As a general proposition boudsmen object seriously to settling up for the loose financial transactions of officials for which they are responsible, and a former Confederate soldier, who may be called Johnson because that is not his name, is no exception to the rule.

The department informed Mr. Johnson that a judgment for $3,940 had been obtained against him and suggested an immediate settlement. In reply he set up a counterclaim for $15,390, asking that the judgment be deducted and the balance sent on to him. He explained that he is now seventy-six years old and that he had been waiting ever since the close of the civil war for the government to square up the account. The duty of Uncle Sam, according to Mr. Johnson, is that he should do as he would be done by, but he expresses the fear, in somewhat vigorous language, that the practice of the Golden Rule is a lost art among government officials.

The following is an exact reproduction of Mr. Johnson's bill against the government:

Uncle Sam, Dr.
To Jeremiah Johnson:
One mulatter nigger blacksmith.....	$2,500
One black nigger, fourteen years old	800
One black nigger woman cook, cost me	1,500
One pare dark browne mulles, six and seven years old	500
One two horse waggon and harness.	150
Two milk cows	80
Household and citchen furniture taken by General Grant and burned and a factory building 40x80 ft. two storeys	3,000
More burnin' and destroyin' out of pure cussedness	1,350
Three iron laths	1,000
Four wood laths	1,000
Nine smith forges with tools	1,800
One full set buckette mashinery.....	750
Four milk cows	160
Smith shop and timber sheds	800
	$15,390

On the back of this bill was inscribed "U. S. America account with Jeremiah Johnson."

This account has been referred to the proper auditing officers for their consideration and report.

Origin of "Spotted Fever."

Professor Wettenhoffer, who was sent by the German government to Silesia to study the genesis of cerebro spinal meningitis and the best method of treating it, has issued his official report, says the Berlin correspondent of the London Telegraph. He comes to the conclusion that it is undoubtedly one of the diseases caused by inhalation, which first attacks the tonsils and is conveyed thus through glands to the brain. It only attacks where the glands have become weakened. In all the cases examined by him the tonsils show hypertrophy and are increased in size by inflammation. The professor is of opinion that the root of the disease is to be found in the insanitary conditions of dwellings and certainly not in the schools.

A Church That Bars Telephones.

The use of telephones in the home has been barred by the national conference of the Older German Baptist Brethren, says a dispatch from Flora, Ind. Foreman Michael Montgomery not only decided that members should not permit the use of a telephone in their homes, but ruled that any members now using a telephone should cause the same to be removed from their homes.

A Fair Advantage

By JOHN G. BOWMAN

Copyright, 1905, by John G. Bowman

The steamer Glenmont, in tow of a double raft, was churning its way down the Mississippi. Leslie Barnet was the pilot, and we, Barnet and I, were alone in the pilot house. Neither had spoken a word for half an hour or more when the captain of the steamer opened the door and said roughly:

"Barnet, that cursed mate took to the bank back there. The fool said he was going to get married. Tie up at La Cross."

The old pilot did not answer. He did not look at the captain, but remained motionless, tipped back in his high chair by the wheel, his eyes resting on the far water line beyond the raft. The captain slammed shut the door and walked heavily over the hurricane deck and down the steps to the deck below.

"That mate a fool?" Barnet reflected. "Well, maybe, and maybe not."

Barnet leaned over to the window for some tobacco, then began to fill his pipe. There was no sound but the regular breathing of the steamer and the wash, wash, wash of the big wheel at the stern. By and by the pipe was lighted.

"It's a common, uninteresting way folks got nowadays of getting married," the pilot began. "Don't you know it is? Common old prose from the beginning."

I made no answer.

"Do you know—well, it was back in '69. I was pulling an oar on an old floating raft. We didn't have steamers to push 'em then. A young fellow, you know—strong, good looking"— He turned to me with a grin and then watched some smoke curl over the pilot wheel.

"Times are different now. Well, there was only one town on the Mississippi them days—that was where she lived—the girl, you know. I reckoned the days by our coming to that town. Other towns were just sort of landmarks to tell us how far off we were. We went slow just before we got to it. She was always down on the sand to see us.

"Well, sir, there was another fellow on that raft, sort of a clerk and mate or steersman when the captain wanted to be lazy—sort of a general boss and important. You know, he figured on the same girl. Poor devil, I don't know what became of him! We were going down the river spring of '69—May; no wind; easy floating. The water was all like that out there." Barnet pointed to a broken bar of crimson and green in the water that ran from the boat to the bank. The sunset was above the hill beyond.

"The middle of the next morning we were coming to that only town I was telling you about. You know, that night I didn't sleep—no work to do, either. I dropped down between two big logs comfortable and listened to that raft pur. The waves, you know, rattled around soft between the logs. Hear that tree toad then, that 'chiwa, chiwa? Well, I heard them that night.

"Next morning the wind was blowing a gale to eastward across the channel. 'Right, right!' the captain kept calling in his deep voice. 'Right, right!' you know, that way. Good, rough old fellow; he's dead now. I'd like to hear him call them signals again. We were all at the sweep oars working—tired! Young fellow, you don't know what it is to be tired!"

The old pilot turned to me, then relit his pipe.

"No breakfast that morning," he went on. "I don't know why—guess the cook had to take a hand at the oars. That happened sometimes. Well, there was that town coming in sight, and I was working to keep the wind from blowing us right in on the bank in front of it. Pretty soon I see the girl—wore a white dress—no hat. Same time I saw that clerk I was telling you about. We had only one boat on the fleet, and there was that clerk, with a white collar on, making for to shove ashore in that boat.

He had a commanding voice. I began to pull again with the other fellows, about twenty of them. Pretty soon I see the captain coming down to the bow where I was. He was whittling a stick. The clerk was just about to shove off. Well, that captain—he was a good fellow—there ain't any more like him now on the river—he came down to me and stood quiet a minute, cutting that stick.

"'Leslie,' he says, 'what town's this we're coming to?'

"'Let me see,' I says, beginning to look around.

"'Never mind,' he returned. 'I see you don't know. The wind's getting high. We'll lay in a mile below,' he said soft. 'Leslie,' he says, 'don't be afraid of getting wet.'

"That captain didn't say another word. He went off whittling that stick. I see the girl wave to us. I see the clerk wave back and shove off in the boat. I didn't have time to wave—I jumped in and swam for it. The other fellows didn't make a sound. I thought they hadn't noticed.

"Pretty soon I see the clerk and the girl shaking hands. Then she was looking at me; then the clerk was. I told you it was May and the water hadn't heated up yet for summer. Next thing I was on the bank, shivering too much to talk. That girl came over and extended her hand to me.

"'No,' says I. 'I'm too wet to touch you.'

"'You're fool enough to half drown and lose your job, too,' put in the clerk.

"I didn't have much to say, waiting developments, you know. The clerk was looking mean. 'Barnet,' he says then, getting kind—that girl never could stand anything mean—'Barnet,' he says, 'I'll give you the boat so's you can get back to the raft and save your job.' He started for the boat. Well, I see he knew we were going to lay in a mile below, as the captain said. I'd be doing him a double favor taking that boat back and getting myself out of the way too.

"'Well,' says I, 'I come ashore to say a word with this girl and'—I could hardly talk—'I ain't said quite all of it yet.'

"That clerk—well, he went over and started to take the girl by the arm to walk off. His shoes were shined. You know, she wasn't in any hurry.

"'Look a-here. I didn't come ashore for nothing, as I explained,' I says. I was hungry and beginning to get mean inside like the clerk.

"'This man,' she began saying to the clerk, 'my brother's got some dry clothes,' she went on, 'and I'm going to take him up to the house and have him put 'em on. He'll catch cold. You,' she went on to the clerk, 'you can see me some other time.'

"She made a little sign, and, you know, that girl and me started off. I kept my eye on the clerk, though. Well, we hadn't gone three steps when, you know, the fellow on the raft let out a great yell. There they were, plump opposite now, drifting in. The captain was waving his hat to us. They all cheered again, and then they called something to the clerk. I don't know what it was. That girl waved back. Next thing they were all singing. I can hear 'em now. I didn't pity the clerk then, poor devil. I don't know what became of him."

Barnet slipped down out of his chair, sent the "slow bell" signal to the boiler room and walked over to me. His pipe was out. A lock of gray hair fell over his forehead. "Boy," he said to me, "I'll show you where that girl lives by and by—we're coming to it. We got the best Jersey cow in our pasture you ever saw."

Gave the Wrong Card.

The late Governor Russell was a fine conversationalist and always enjoyed talking. He was asked to address a meeting in one of the small cities of Massachusetts one evening and went by train. The cars were quite well filled when he got in, so he asked a gentleman if the vacant seat beside him was engaged and, receiving a negative nod in answer, sat down. Immediately he started a conversation, which he carried on until the city was reached, where both men alighted. Before they left the train they exchanged cards and shook hands cordially when they separated on the station platform.

Governor Russell arose to address the meeting and commenced by making flattering remarks on the city and people and said: "I met one of your citizens on the train coming here tonight, and we had a most enjoyable conversation—in fact, I don't know when I have had such a delightful talk as I had with him. By the way, he gave me his card," taking it from his pocket and reading the name on it.

At this the audience was convulsed with laughter. The governor was somewhat taken aback and failed to see the point and so asked a friend about it after the lecture was over. The friend said, "Why, that man is deaf and dumb."—Boston Herald.

The Past Recalled.

One of the charms of travel, particularly among historic scenes, is the privilege of realizing more fully that part of which we have read and thought and dreamed. But much reading and thinking need to be done before the traveler starts for a country so rich in memorials of the past as is Greece. The author of "Two Englishwomen In Greece" repeats a story which flings a stone at an American.

Of course the lover of art or of archaeology should avoid all miscellaneous alliances, and if he cannot fall in with those who know let him take a guide and worry it out by himself. Otherwise he will receive shocks such as greeted the ears of a party of enthusiasts who, steeped in classic lore, ascended to the Parthenon one moonlight night, when column and architrave, rock and ruin alike seemed wrapped in silvery silence.

Here, burning with religious ecstasy, pulse beating to throbbing thought, the deep stillness of the hour was cut by the shriek of Athene's owl, but the words it said were strange:

"There is a smell up here that puts me in mind of a bucketful of huckleberries!"

Buy Your Own Paper.

A man who was too economical to subscribe for his home paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a four dollar stand of bees and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and, failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a five dollar pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the wife ran, upset a four gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a twenty-five dollar set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled cream and into the parlor, ruining a twenty dollar carpet. During the excitement the eldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven sitting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts.—Kansas City Journal.

The Social Realm.

To one who has been long in city pent,
'Tis very sweet to look into the fair
And open face of heaven,—to breathe a prayer
Full in the smile of the blue firmament.
Who is more happy, when, with heart's content,
Fatigued he sinks into some pleasant lair
Of wavy grass, and reads a debonair
And gentle tale of love and languishment?
Returning home at evening, with an ear
Catching the notes of Philomel,—an eye
Watching the sailing cloudlet's bright career,
He mourns that day so soon has glided by:
E'en like the passage of an angel's tear
That falls through the clear ether silently.

TO FIX PRICE.

At Which New Stock May Be Purchased.

Hearing Given Electric Light Company.

The Improvement Proposed and the Cost of Same.

The Quincy Electric Light and Power Company was unopposed at its hearing before the State Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners at the State House in Boston yesterday on its petition for authority to increase its capital stock from $100,000 to $150,000. The company was represented by its president William G. A. Pattee, and its treasurer Henry M. Faxon.

They explained to the commissioners that the company was about to increase its plant as the present facilities were about required for the daily output, and left no reserve capacity for contingencies or for future growth.

The work of increase had progressed so far that it was safe to say that it would cost $50,000 to complete it. Accordingly the directors, and the stockholders in formal meeting had voted to ask the commissioners to authorize the company to raise the total of the capital stock to $150,000.

Contracts had already been let for a new engine of 1,000 horse power which would cost about $16,650; a generator to cost $12,000, and a new battery of boilers to cost something over $7,000.

The engineer employed by the company had estimated that a new condenser and air pump would cost about $2,275; that the foundations for the new machinery would mean an outlay of $3,500, that the engineer's services would be about $1,900, and that the incidental expenses would cost practically $1,500.

All the machinery already contracted for is to be delivered by September 15.

Besides allowing the new issue of stock the commissioners must fix upon the price at which the present stockholders may purchase it. This is the new provision of the anti-stock watering laws of the state. Before a prosperous company could increase its stock and the old stockholders had the privilege of buying at par when it might be selling in the open market at a much higher figure. In many cases where the stockholders did not care to purchase more stock their "right" had a market value and were sold like the stock itself.

Now the commissioners fix the price and if the present stockholders do not care to purchase provide that it shall be sold to the highest bidder. With this object in view they asked as to what price the stock had been recently selling.

Both Mr. Pattee and Mr. Faxon said they knew of no actual sales within three years. Of course in the settlements of estates there had been transfers of the stock but no actual sale in the open market. Some three years ago the company had some five shares remaining of stock that had been issued before the anti-stock watering law went into effect and by instruction of the gas and electric light commissioners it was sold in open market. These shares were bid up to $105.50 each.

As stated above no one appeared in the opposition and the commissioners closed the hearing. Their decision on the matter will be announced later.

Near the Top.

The Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railway companies have created the position of assistant general manager, and Henry E. Reynolds formerly of Quincy has been promoted to that position. Mr. Reynolds is 37 years of age, and has been connected with the Brockton Street Railway Company, and latter the Old Colony and Boston & Northern Street Railway companies for 21 years. Philip M. Reynolds has been appointed purchasing agent of both companies, succeeding Henry E. Reynolds.

Large Sum for Seals.

Seals tails were plentiful at City Hall yesterday. George W. Arnold was the first caller; he left one tail and received $3 from City treasurer. In the afternoon Joe Socbasin and Frank J. Francis appeared at the City Clerks office and left 75 tails, which they certified they took from seals killed in Quincy waters. They then walked into the City Treasurer's office and a few minutes later walked out with $225 stored away in their inside pockets.

Sudden Death.

Michael Meany, a well known resident of West Quincy, fell while coming up the cellar stairs at his home, 24 Centre street, last night, and died shortly after.

Mr. Meany had been to Boston during the day and it is thought that he had been somewhat overcome by the heat, for while walking home from the depot he fell.

During the evening a ainst the wishes of his family he went down cellar to get some wood. And it was while coming up the stairs that he fell over backwards striking his head on an ice chest.

Dr. Sargent was summoned but Mr. Meaney was dead when he arrived. The doctor said that he probably had a shock while coming up stairs and that his death was due to concussion of the brain. Mr. Meaney was 78 years of age and leaves a wife and several grown up children.

No Trace of Body.

Although search for the body of Douglas Mitchell, the mate of the yacht "Romance," was continued all day yesterday and last night, no trace of it was found. Parties are dragging the place today, but up to noon had met with no success.

As it was ebb tide at the time he was supposed to have been drowned, it is thought that the body may have been carried out to sea.

It is now absolutely certain that Mitchell left the Wollaston yacht club float at 11.30 Wednesday night in a tender for the yacht Romance, as he conversed with parties on the float at that hour.

☞Eyeglasses fitted scientifically. No guess work.—Williams.

A TRIBUTE TO HAY

President Says He Rendered Services as a True Patriot

PRAISES HIS SUCCESSOR

Examples of Men Willing to Serve Their Country at Great Pecuniary Sacrifice--Typical of Class of Men In Public Life

Asbury Park, N. J., July 8.—President Roosevelt paid an appropriate and eloquent tribute to the late Secretary of State Hay in his address before the National Educational association at Ocean Grove. He followed this tribute with an estimate of the personal sacrifice Elihu Root had made in becoming Secretary Hay's successor in office. The president said:

"Within a week this country has lost a great statesman, who was also a great man of letters, a man who occupied a peculiar and unique position in our country, a man of whose existence we could each of us be proud, for the United States as a whole was better because John Hay lived. John Hay entered the public service as a young man just become of age, as the private secretary of President Lincoln. He served in the war and was a member of the Loyal Legion. He was trusted by and was intimate with Lincoln as hardly any other man was.

"He then went on rendering service after service to the country until, as the climax of his career, the service as secretary of state under two successive administrations, and by which he did and by what he was, contributed in no small degree to achieving for this republic the respect of the nations of mankind. Such service as that could not have been rendered save by a man who had before him ideals as far apart as the poles from those ideals which have in them any taint of what is base or sordid.

"Now, I wished to secure as John Hay's successor the man whom I regarded as of all the men in the country that one best fitted to be such successor. In asking him to accept the position of secretary of state, I was asking him to submit to a very great pecuniary sacrifice, and I never even thought of that aspect of the question, for I knew he would not, either. I knew that whatever other considerations he had to weigh for and against taking the position, the consideration of how it would affect his personal fortune would not be taken into account by Elihu Root, and he has accepted.

"I am not thinking of Hay and Root as solitary exceptions. On the contrary, I am speaking of them as typical of a large class of men in public life.

"Even when we hear so much criticism of certain aspects of our public life and of certain of our public servants, criticism which, I regret to state, is in many cases deserved, it is well for us to remember that here in America we now have and always have had at the command of the nation in any crisis, in any emergency, the very best ability to be found within the nation, and that ability has been given with the utmost freedom, given lavishly and generously, although at great pecuniary loss to the man giving it.

"There is not in my cabinet a man to whom it is not a financial disadvantage to stay in the cabinet. There is not in my cabinet one man who does not have to give up something substantial, often very much that is substantial, sometimes what is a very real hardship for him to give up, in order that he may continue in the service of the nation and have the only reward for which he looks or for which he cares—the consciousness of having done service that was worth rendering.

"I hope more and more throughout this nation to see the spirit grow which makes such service possible. I hope more and more to see the sentiment of the country as a whole become such that each man shall feel borne in on him, whether he is in public life or in private life, and mind you, some of the greatest public services can be rendered by those who are not in public life, that the chance to do good work is the greatest chance that can come to any man or any woman in our generation or in any other generation, and to feel that if such work can be well done it is in itself the amplest reward and the amplest prize."

Root to Take Oath Soon

Oyster Bay, July 8.—Official announcement was made here that Elihu Root had been appointed secretary of state. The announcement was made on authority of President Roosevelt in a statement given out by Secretary Loeb: "Elihu Root has accepted the tender by the president of the secretaryship of state. He will take the oath of office in a couple of weeks, but it will necessarily be some little time before he closes up his business affairs. He will not go to Washington permanently until some time in September."

Ready For President's Signature

Washington, July 8.—Elihu Root's commission as secretary of state has been prepared at the state department and forwarded to Oyster Bay for the president's signature.

Government Monopoly of Salt

Washington, July 8.—Norman Hutchinson, American charge at Caracas, reports that the president of Venezuela has issued a decree practically making the salt industry of Venezuela a government monopoly.

CAUGHT AT BOSTON

President of Bank Charged With Illegal Loans

Boston, July 8.—Charged with misapplying over $50,000 of the funds of the Big Bend National bank of Davenport, Wash., now in the hands of a receiver, Charles C. May, president of the bank, was arrested in his office in the Old South building by Deputy Marshal Ruhl.

The warrant for his arrest was issued under an indictment of the federal grand jury of Washington, dated June 9, containing eight counts, chiefly for loans made in excess of the amounts allowed by the national banking laws.

The indictment also alleges that President May loaned his partner, Mrs. Kearns, $10,896.44 to promote the several gold mining corporations. Two counts are for false entries, and the last is for taking out a note for $5000 and substituting his personal note for $3000.

President May is a tall, big-framed westerner, carefully dressed, clean-cut, and a typical banker in appearance. He is 60 years old and unmarried.

Governor Reviews His Troops

Westfield, Mass., July 8.—Governor Douglas witnessed a spectacle that has not been witnessed by a governor of Massachusetts since 1870—practically the entire military strength of the commonwealth on parade at a state camp ground. From a spectacular point of view the review was a great success. Seated in an automobile, the governor reviewed the troops, while General Miles, who is in command at Camp Bartlett, and his staff reviewed the soldiers on horseback. Following the review the troops were required to work out practical military problems.

Drowned Himself Standing Up

Lynn, Mass., July 8.—George E. Lane, formerly a well known and successful book merchant of Exeter, N. H., was found drowned in Birch pond, part of the Lynn water supply. An investigation disclosed that Lane had drowned himself standing up. The water at that point was so shallow that he was obliged to bend his head forward in order to carry out his plan of self-destruction. Lane was 68 years old. His wife says that her husband had been despondent over recent business reverses.

Costly Fire In Lumber Yard

Boston, July 8.—Fire which started last night in the lumber yard district of the South End heavily damaged the yards and wharfage property of several firms. A high southwest wind carried brands to nearby wooden buildings and lumber piles. The loss will reach $210,000. How the flames originated in Lamb & Co.'s yards is not known.

End of Search For "Wild Man"

Rockland, Mass., July 8.—The citizens who have been looking for a strange man who shot at two boys in North Hanover Wednesday have abandoned the search. It is understood that the identity of the man is known and that he is mentally deranged.

Ready to Present Credentials

Washington, July 8.—Baron Rosen, who will succeed Count Cassini as ambassador of Russia to the United States and who comes to this country in the dual role of diplomatic representative and one of the Russian plenipotentiaries to the peace conference, has reached Washington. He will remain here for not more than two or three days, during which time an appointment will be made for the presentation of his credentials to the president.

Conservative View of Trusts

Ottawa, Kas., July 8.—District Attorney Jerome of New York, in an address to the Chautauqua assembly here, said: "The evil of trusts is greatly exaggerated in the west. Trusts have cheapened the articles they touch and are part of business evolution. Natural laws in business will regulate them and prevent extortion. But there is another view of the trust question. Trusts corrupt legislatures, buy courts and congressmen. Here is the real evil. The party machine is responsible for this."

Log Jam Threatens Disaster

Minneapolis, July 8.—With the water standing at 13 feet 2 inches, a current has begun moving through the mighty log jam at Camden, in north Minneapolis, and expert logging men now believe the jam will not break. Should it do so, the rush of the pent-up waters and the immense mass of logs, estimated at nearly 150,000,000 feet, may tear out every bridge in Minneapolis and destroy hundreds of houses along the Mississippi flats.

In Interest of Health and Science

Washington, July 8.—With the view to safeguard the public health and in furtherance of its scientific work, the bureau of forestry has begun a study of the conditions of the watershed of the Potomac river and its tributaries. The general plan will include a determination of all causes of contamination. The tributaries of the Potomac will be critically examined in four states.

Kentucky Negro Lynched

Shelbyville, Ky., July 8.—Lon Beard, a negro, who had been arrested on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Chester Crawford of Normandy, was being taken from Taylorsville to Shelbyville for safe keeping, but when the train arrived at Normandy a mob of about 25 men entered the coach and riddled Beard with bullets.

Eleven Log Drivers Drowned

QUINCY DAILY LEDGER?

A Hanlon Boom.

Young Corbett's Vanquisher In Line For Nelson and Britt.

The decisive defeat of Young Corbett by Eddie Hanlon, the rising young featherweight, has given the latter's stock a big boom.

Many experts believe that Hanlon is the lad who will defeat Battling Nelson and Jimmy Britt. Although he is lighter than either Nelson or Britt, Hanlon has a remarkably heavy punch and endurance to spare.

Eddie Hanlon fought Young Corbett to a standstill during the last few rounds of their twenty round contest in San Francisco and got a hard earned decision from Referee Homan at the end of the twentieth round.

The fight was an exciting one from start to finish. During the first part of the contest Hanlon had a slight advantage, but no harm was done to either man until the eleventh round. Then Hanlon rushed Corbett to the ropes, but the Denver man stalled Hanlon off and blocked a number of stomach punches. Corbett got to the center of the ring and in a mixup put left and right swings on Hanlon's jaw.

Hanlon went to his knees and took the count of nine. He came up fighting, and, in spite of Corbett's strenuous efforts to put him out, he finished the round strong. For the next four rounds Corbett went at his man and in the thirteenth had Hanlon very tired. Hanlon braced up in the fourteenth and seemed to have a slight margin over Corbett. The sixteenth round was Corbett's. The seventeenth was Hanlon's round. The eighteenth was about even, although Corbett had a shade the better of it at the end. The nineteenth and twentieth were all Hanlon's. All during the nineteenth he stood up close to Corbett, pounding away at the Denver boy's stomach. Corbett was tired and could not hit back.

They stood breast to breast, each with his head to the other's shoulder, and slugged for all that was in them. Hanlon was the stronger and forced Corbett around the ring, landing frequently on the stomach. He fought Corbett against the ropes and had him at his mercy. Corbett came very near going off the platform, but staggered back to the center of the ring. The round closed with both men on their feet, with Corbett all but out.

Abe Attell does not concur in the general opinion that Battling Nelson would have tenderly tucked him away in another round or two during their recent scrap. Attell says: "I tried to knock him out, but he outweighed me too much. But he never had me even on the outskirts of Slumber City. If Nelson thinks he has it on me, let him take me on for twenty rounds at 128 pounds, 3 o'clock, the weight he made for Young Corbett. I'll bet $1,000 on the result. He'll find out then whether I'm only a six round fighter."

SPALDING SCORES A HIT.

Young American Violinist Praised by the Paris Critics.

Albert Spalding, the young American violinist who has been talked of a great deal on both sides of the Atlantic, made his professional debut recently in the Nouveau theater, Rue Blanche, Paris. He scored what the Parisian critics pronounce "a decided success in a most difficult and classical programme."

Mr. Spalding rendered Saint Saens' concerto, Bach's chaconne, Beethoven's Romance and Sarasate's Zigeunerweisen with great sentiment and perfection of technique.

Mr. Spalding, who is a son of J. W. Spalding of New York city, studied with Professor Lefort of the Paris conservatoire.

At the age of fourteen Mr. Spalding was the winner of the title of professor in the well known Bologna Conservatory of Music.

Root Looked Upon as Good Presidential Timber

SHATTERS TAFT'S HOPES

Supreme Court Probably Now the Goal of War Secretary--Fairbanks May Soon Visit Oyster Bay to "Pay His Respects"

Washington, July 8.—It would not surprise the discriminating observers of national politics and affairs in Washington if Vice President Fairbanks did not feel impelled within the next few days to hasten to Oyster Bay to "pay his respects" to President Roosevelt. Reports coming from the west indicate that the reticent vice president, who conceals an eager and consuming ambition under a rather frigid exterior, has been deeply unsettled and somewhat shaken by the news of Root's appointment to be secretary of state. If the president's action has done nothing else, it has at least succeeded in creating what the higher politicians so like to call "an interesting situation."

Official Washington attaches but one meaning to Root's coming again into the cabinet: that he will be a candidate for the presidency in 1908, and that he will have behind him all the influence and patronage of the Roosevelt administration in attaining his ambition. It is a natural and obvious influence. On no other ground can anyone here account for Root's willingness to resign the acknowledged leadership of the New York bar and the handsome income from his law practice incident to that position, to assume again a position in official Washington which, his friends declare, both he and Mrs. Root found distasteful in a former residence here as secretary of war.

If Root has any desire to become the nominee of his party in 1908, and there is every reason to believe that he has, it is pointed out that the present sacrifice of income was necessary. Mr. Root's practice lies largely with the great corporations, and more and more he was becoming known to the country at large simply and solely as a trust attorney. In the present state of the public mind, in the opinion of political managers, this would have been an insuperable obstacle to high political preferment. Again, Taft was coming to occupy a large place in the public eye as a presidential possibility.

Mr. Root's supporters saw the necessity of bringing forward their champion before Taft's lead had become commanding. The feeling was growing here, until the Root appointment, that Taft stood a better chance for the Republican nomination at the next national convention than any of the known aspirants now in the field. It undoubtedly has been thought desirable to have Root disassociated with the great corporations and to give him a further opportunity to employ his undeniable ability in the public service before appealing to the electors for the highest office in their gift.

The political significance of Root's appointment has apparently overshadowed to some extent the great value he will have as a steadying and curbing influence in the Roosevelt combine. The president has rested heavily upon the advice and aid of Taft in solving most of the larger and more troublesome problems that have confronted him. The secretary of war is, if gossip that comes from the cabinet room may be relied upon, about the only one of the department heads who was able or willing to stand firm when the president's impetuosity seemed likely to override his discretion. But, again, some of the president's best friends and well wishers have thought that Roosevelt and Taft were too nearly alike in their temperament and viewpoint, and have spoken of the necessity of bringing into the cabinet a strong and cautious man. This element has received the news of Root's acceptance with unalloyed satisfaction.

Mr. Taft has had to stand much joking in the cabinet room about his ambitions. His colleagues have, in jest told him that he had one eye on the presidency and the other on the chief justiceship of the supreme court. The obvious retort to this was that to fill either place would sufficiently satisfy the ambitions of any man in public life.

It seems to be commonly assumed that Root's appointment practically eliminates Taft as a presidential possibility. It equally follows that he will be named to succeed Chief Justice Fuller, if the latter retires while President Roosevelt is in office. Indeed, some commentators, impatient of the progress of events, have declared that Root, in the event that he succeeds Roosevelt, will give Taft the sum of his desires should the naming of a chief justice be delayed until 1908.

The relations between the vice president and the secretary of state will be subject to close scrutiny this winter, as will all of the appointments of the president that may have any political significance. Just now the coming of Root to Washington is taken to be the first of the preliminary moves in the next national campaign.

Sweden's Warlike Move

Stockholm, July 8.—Sweden is taking precautionary measures on the frontier to offset the reported threatening attitude of Norway. The Swedish treasury has borrowed $6,500,000 to pay extraordinary expenditures. Prominent merchants confirm a report that capitalists are withdrawing their funds from Norwegian banks.

Mayor of Havana Suspended

Havana, July 8.—Governor Nunez of Havana province has suspended Mayor O'Farrill of Havana. The reason alleged is that the investigation of the mayor and aldermen has developed probable offenses by the mayor along the line of unauthorized and improper expenditures, permitting favored citizens to escape certain forms of taxation and loose conduct of municipal affairs. None of the aldermen was suspended.

Bank Involved In Oil Trouble

Charleston, July 8.—A special from Darlington announces the closing of the doors of the Darlington Trust company's bank, a notice posted by Cashier Lide informing the public that, owing to financial troubles involving the Independent Oil company, business would be suspended temporarily. Former President Darkan of the bank is president of the Independent Oil company.

Not Selling Racing Information

New York, July 8.—Superintendent Dealy of the commercial news department of the Western Union Telegraph company and Manager Mitchell of the special wire bureau of the same company have made affidavits, sworn to before a notary public, denying a published statement charging the Western Union Telegraph company with selling racing information to poolrooms.

The Business Outlook

New York, July 8.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that customary quiet commercial conditions at midsummer were augmented by the interruption of a holiday, except that warm weather gave impetus to the distribution of seasonable wearing apparel, sporting goods and outing supplies. There is no abatement of confidence in the future.

Will Crumple Up an Ironclad

New York, July 8.—That a 12-inch shell, loaded with only a small charge of dunnite, the world's most effective explosive, will crumble in the side of the heaviest armorclad vessel, though the shell fall short of its mark by 20 feet, has just been demonstrated at the beginning of a series of tests at the government proving grounds at Sandy Hook.

Shipyard Workers Lose Strike

New York, July 8.—The strike of the boilermakers and apprentices at the marine railway and shipyard of Robins & Co. in Brooklyn has ended, nearly all the original strikers being taken back at the same pay received before striking.

Lillian Blauvelt to Receive Half Million For Six Years of Comic Opera.

Lillian Blauvelt, the grand opera singer, has caused much comment by reason of her recent contract with Fred Whitney to appear in comic opera. It is a remarkable document indeed that has bound the singer to Mr. Whitney for six years, and it is the direct result of the financial success attending the comic opera ventures of Schumann-Heink and Fritzi Scheff.

It is almost impossible to credit the statement that Mme. Blauvelt will receive $504,000 for her six years' work, yet Mr. Whitney solemnly avows this to be the sum carried by the contract.

The total figures out at $2,000 a week, which is a rate exceptional even in these days of reports of stupendous salaries. Mme. Blauvelt will first be seen in "The Rose of the Alhambra," which is the work of Charles Emerson Cook, the Belasco right hand man, and Lucius Hosmer.

No details of the work have been given out, but it has been hinted that the story is exclusively romantic and that the score will make more pretense to artistic excellence than any yet heard on the comic opera stage.

Managers and players are now busily completing their plans for next season.

The late Kirke La Shelle's partners will continue "Checkers," "The Virginian," "Mr. Pipp" and "The Heir to the Hoorah." Whether or not they will mount Thomas' new play for D'Orsay remains to be decided.

Charles Frohman's plans will not be fully known until he returns from London at the end of July. So far they include Barrie's "Peter Pan" for Maude Adams, a new play by Thomas for John Drew, a piece by Ade for Joseph Wheelock, Jacob's play, "Beauty and the Barge," for Goodwin; a melodrama by Jones for Virginia Harned, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" for the road, with Fay Davis; "The Catch of the Season" for Edna May, the return of Wyndham probably and "Twelfth Night," "The Merchant of Venice" and "The Taming of the Shrew" for Sothern and Marlowe.

Daniel Frohman has a poetical play by Comyns Carr that tells once more the tragedy of "Tristan and Isolde" and a play of American life by Charles Klein. He has just bought also the American rights to the two plays that Pinero is writing.

Of the semi-independent stars Willard returns with a revival of "The

LILLIAN BLAUVELT.

Fool's Revenge," Viola Allen is hesitating, between "Cymbeline" and a play by Fitch, Mansfield is meditating over "King Lear," "Macbeth" and the dramatization of a novel, "Broke of Covenden;" Ada Rehan is planning an excursion into Shaw with "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," and Hackett will mount "The Walls of Jericho," "the play of the year" in London.

These are some of the dates already set for the beginning of the new season in New York:

Aug. 21.—The musical play by Bangs and Klein at Wallack's.
Aug. 28.—Robert Edeson in "Strongheart" again at the Savoy.
Sept. 2.—Warfield in "The Music Master" once more at the Bijou.
Sept. 4.—Drew in Thomas' new play at the Empire.
Sept. 4.—"The Rogers Brothers In Ireland" at the Liberty.
Sept. 5.—"The Prodigal Son" at the New Amsterdam.
Sept. 6.—Goodwin in "Beauty and the Barge" at the Lyceum.
Sept. 11.—Ade's "Bad Samaritan" at the Garden.

Robert Hilliard is to be a Belasco star. An interesting outlook beyond a doubt, especially as certain of Mr. Belasco's rival managers have failed in a similar undertaking. Ever since Hilliard came a cropper in "That Man and I" he has been dismissed in New York with the comment, "He'll never be a two dollar star." But we all know what happens when Belasco puts on his thinking cap and rolls up his sleeves for action.

Why should he not repeat with Hilliard the feat achieved with David Warfield? Belasco says he will, and as experience has set a valu on his promises there is no reason why we should be skeptical.

Now that Belasco has suggested it, the conclusion has been generally reached that it has not been Hilliard's fault that he has not been a recognized star long before this. He has been unfortunate in the plays provided for him, and that is the very thing against which Belasco will guard—depend on that.

ROBERT BUTLER.

PLAN TO SAVE GREAT ELMS.

Connecticut Will Have a Tree Warden In Every Town In the State.

The death of hundreds of fine elm trees in the cities of Connecticut during the last five or ten years through neglect or unskillful care led to the creation of a new office by this year's legislature, says a Hartford dispatch to the New York Press. It is that of tree warden. Each town in the state will have one, and he will be elected this fall for the first time. A previous act made it optional with the selectmen of the towns to appoint such an official, but the new law makes his election compulsory. The tree warden may appoint as many deputies as he sees fit and may remove them at his pleasure.

The famous New Haven green was the example of lack of care of the elms that induced the legislature to pass the bill. That once magnificent breathing spot which gave New Haven its famous sobriquet of the City of Elms is now only half shaded. Tree after tree has fallen down, cracked branches have been allowed to hang until the trunk was rotted into, bugs and tree troubles of all kinds have infected them undisturbed until the place is almost as unsightly as it once was beautiful. Dilatory in work that should have been done years ago, the people of New Haven are just now awakening to a realization of the terrible loss that the city has suffered.

The same thing is true of a dozen cities and towns throughout Connecticut. With rare foresight the forefathers laid out greens and parks in every village and planted them with elms and maples, intending that they should be beauty spots for all time. And the aged elms stood so long and strongly that later generations came to believe that they were imperishable.

The new law says that the tree warden shall have the care and control of all public shade trees in the town, except those in public parks or open places under the jurisdiction of park commissioners, and of these he shall take control if requested by the park commissioners. He shall expend all funds appropriated for the setting out and maintenance of trees, and may prescribe such regulations for the care and preservation of such trees, enforced by fines not exceeding $20 in any one case, as he sees fit, and such rules and regulations, when approved by the selectmen, shall have the force and effect of town laws. He shall enforce all laws for the preservation of trees, provided that such laws do not interfere with city or borough ordinances.

A USE FOR OVERFLOW LAND

Opportunity For Valuable Hardwood Forests Along the Mississippi.

One of the investigations with which the bureau of forestry has been engaged recently is a study of the tree growth along the Mississippi river from Cairo, Ill., to New Orleans, says a Washington dispatch to the Kansas City Star. Bordering the river is a strip of land about fifteen miles wide on either side, which is subject to repeated overflows; consequently a large proportion of the area is unavailable for agriculture.

Following the channel at a distance from one-eighth of a mile to two miles from low water line levees have been erected to control the stream. Between the levees and the river there can be no question of cultivation because of the certainty of overflow. The opportunity which the bureau finds is this:

On the narrow strip inside the levees cottonwood can be grown with almost no care and harvested when the trees are from thirty-five to forty years old. Behind the levees much of the land will undoubtedly be reclaimed for agriculture, but until that shall be done the opportunity to maintain a forest of valuable trees is too good to be lost. In this forest white ash is the most important species both because it grows more rapidly than oak and some other woods and because it is in constant demand and can be used in small sizes.

Were Boys Together.

It is not generally known that Dr. Gladden and John D. Rockefeller were country boys together in Tioga county, N. Y., attended adjoining district schools and frequently met in the rival spelling "bees" of the time, says the Columbus (O.) Dispatch. Another boy there was Benjamin F. Tracy. Out of that little valley came at the same time three boys destined to make distinct impressions in the world—Dr. Gladden in sociology, Rockefeller in business and Tracy in law and politics.

Marriages In Iowa.

One hundred and fifty-three couples in Des Moines, Ia., have fallen victims to the darts of Dan Cupid during the month of June just passed, says the Des Moines Register and Leader. These figures, taken from the license records at the office of the district clerk, show that the month passed has been more prolific of marriages not only of any month in the year, but of many years past.

Maple Sirup For Christening.

"Will it be a bottle of wine or a bottle of apollinaris that the Vermont sponsor will break over the new battleship Vermont at the launching on Aug. 31?" asks the Barre (Vt.) Times. It would be a great advertisement for one of Vermont's industries to substitute for wine a bottle of Vermont maple sirup, says the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, and the advertisement would stick too.

New Canadian Mint.

The Canadian government will soon open a mint at Ottawa, at which both gold and silver will be coined.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

Wait for the census returns of Quincy. There will be no loss to report.

It has been a week of sudden and unusually sad deaths, including four fatalities. May Quincy long be spared from another such week.

Senator Beveridge has returned from Europe and has passed through Washington, but he declined to be interviewed on his famous book, "The Russian Advance."

Almost daily, now, the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of this city is awarded a new contract. They are large ones too. Soon Quincy will have vessels in all waters, including warships, steamers and merchant vessels.

From the fact that Milwaukee was the first city to file an application with the State Department to be permitted to entertain the Russian and Japanese peace commissioners it would seem that Milwaukee wants to be made famous by something other than beer.

It is at this time of the year when there are hundreds of strangers in the city, that the churches should be particular to announce their Sunday services, but what a poor showing they make in today's paper. There is no charge by the Daily Ledger either.

It will probably take some weeks, perhaps months, for the State to pay the claims in consequence of the death of the two firemen. Meanwhile the people of Quincy are responding generously, and will relieve the families of the injured as well as the dead.

All envied Miss Julia E. Underwood her grand trip to the Pacific ocean at this delightful season, but now that she is travelling in a statesroom of a palace Pullman car with a chaperon and pleasant companions envy knows no bounds. She already has many souvenirs of the trip, but they will not be necessary to remind her in future years of the journey.

Improving Slowly.

Although somewhat better, George Gourley of Canal street, who was injured at East Weymouth two weeks ago, is still confined to his bed.

Gourley was driving one of W. G. Shaw's furniture wagons and was caught in a narrow street between another wagon and an electric car. His horse was somewhat frightened at the car and before he could check him a service car which was following struck him.

Mr. Gourley was thrown off and landed on the car fender. It was somewhat remarkable that he was not rolled beneath the car and crushed. The team was damaged somewhat.

Another Meet at Atlantic.

The Trimount A. A. of Atlantic, will have there first annual Athletic meet Saturday, July 15. Any person under seventeen years is invited to take part. The entering fee will be five cents for each event. The races will be in charge of Councilman W. G. Gassett and five judges who are competent. The races will begin at 1.30 o'clock at Read's corner, Atlantic. Those wishing to enter will kindly register with W. M. Coleman, No. 90 Atlantic street.

This association has about twenty of the Atlantic boys on its roll. Most of them are about sixteen years old. W. G. Geekie has been the president for the last year and appreciates all that the citizens have done to help make a success.

Dropped Dead.

Masaniello Collyer of East Weymouth, a cutter at the shoe shop of M. M. Arnold of North Abington, dropped dead of heart disease at work yesterday. He was a member of Crescent lodge 82, I. O. O. F., and Wessagusset colony, U. O. P. F. He was 63 years of age and leaves a widow and two sons.

NAVIGATING THE AIR.

Roy Knabenshue's Experience In Sailing Airships.

HOW HE WORKED OUT THE PROBLEM

Young Aeronaut at Toledo, O., Who Recently Made a Most Remarkable Flight, Says Submarine Boats and Airships Have Same Conditions to Contend With—Anxious to Meet Santos-Dumont In a Race.

A. Roy Knabenshue, the young aeronaut at Toledo, O., who recently sailed through the air a distance of three miles, landed on the roof of a ten story office building at Toledo and then returned directly to the exact spot from which he started, states his views on the future of aerial navigation as follows, says the New York World:

"To begin with, this subject has occupied the minds of scientists for the past 200 years, and every conceivable method of navigating the air has been invented and tried repeatedly, with practically no results. Santos-Dumont pointed out the way by taking the engine from his automobile and attaching it to his balloon. He is the first man to successfully navigate the air and should receive all the credit due him. He has had many followers, but they seem to have made failures of their attempts.

"My visit to the world's fair was for the purpose of studying this subject and to meet Santos-Dumont as well as any other competitors for the $100,000 prize offered for the successful airship. It was while there that I met Captain Thomas S. Baldwin, which meeting resulted in my riding the air in the California Arrow.

"I made five trips at the fair and five at Los Angeles, Cal., last winter. Each trip taught me more of nature's laws and what should be done to overcome the many obstacles connected with the successful navigation of the air, and now I have concluded the problem resolves itself thus:

"First.—The air itself has weight, and to ascend into it one must have a body much lighter than the air.

"Taking the theory that air has weight, then a complete vacuum would be buoyant. But as it is almost impossible to secure a complete vacuum we must then use other means. Air at the sea level weighs approximately seventy-two pounds per 1,000 cubic feet. Hydrogen, the lightest known gas, weighs approximately seven pounds per 1,000 cubic feet, leaving us a buoyancy of the difference, sixty-five pounds per 1,000 cubic feet. An envelope constructed of silk and thickly coated with a preparation of linseed oil will successfully hold this gas, and with a netting to hold this envelope we have the means of getting into the air.

"Second.—After securing the means of ascending into the air, we must then find a means of propelling and directing the course of the air vessel.

"The screw propeller at once appeals to us, and we then attach a perpendicular rudder for steering. So there is no secret connected with navigating an airship. One must first thoroughly understand the conditions under which he is working, and to my mind the rest is easy.

"A submarine boat and an airship have the same conditions to contend with. A submarine traveling against a swift current is capable of making as many knots per hour as is the difference between the speed of the boat and the velocity of the water.

"The same is true with an airship. For instance, if we have a wind blowing at the rate of fifteen miles per hour and the speed of the airship is twenty miles per hour in a calm, we would have when traveling against the wind the difference of five miles per hour. I speak of this merely to show the disadvantages of going against the wind, while with it the airship would make a speed of nearly thirty-five miles per hour.

"As we have the buoyancy, the propelling powers and the ability to steer, we then have aerial navigation, but we are limited as to speed and the amount of weight we can carry. We can increase our carrying power by adding more gas, but in doing this we add resistance to the air on account of bulk, and to overcome this difficulty we must add power.

"The problem then becomes a question of three things—weight, power and resistance.

"In my present airship I have built everything as light as possible consistent with strength and can handle it with perfect ease, going and coming at will.

"As to what will come from the airship in the future, it is hard to say. I have turned my entire attention to the subject and will continue to experiment as long as I can procure the means. I have associated myself with Mr. Charles J. Strobel of Toledo, who will manage the business end, and we will tour the country, giving exhibitions. I expect that the many ascents will teach us more and more about this all absorbing question.

"It is my one ambition to meet Santos-Dumont and try a race with him on our airships. This would no doubt bring out many points of interest and would possibly be the means of discovering new methods of propulsion."

Curious Result of Battle of Mukden.

Dr. Ignatius Much in a description of the battle of Mukden speaks of an intelligent soldier who was brought down by the fumes of a shell that exploded near him. When picked up he was found to have lost his sight, hearing and speech. He is now partly restored to health. He sees, hears and feels, but cannot speak.

NEW CONTRACT.

Quincy Shipyard to Build Steamer for Nantasket Line.

Contracts are coming frequently and for large sums at the local shipyard. The Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company awarded a contract yesterday to the Fore River Ship Building Company of Quincy, to build a big steel excursion steamboat at a cost of about $150,000, to be added to its already magnificent fleet of Nantasket Beach steamboats. The new boat will be completed in time to go into commission on the Nantasket Beach route next summer.

The new boat will have a steel hull and her dimensions will be as follows: 207 feet 6 inches overall, 200 feet water line, 56 feet breadth of guards, 32 feet 6 inches breadth of moulds, 12 feet depth of hold, 5 feet 6 inches draft.

She will have six water-tight bulkheads and seven water-tight compartments.

In general she will be modelled after the Old Colony of the company's Plymouth line, but will be 18 feet longer and will have some changes which are improvements over the Old Colony. The lunch room will be on the main deck forward and the ladies' cabin on the same deck aft. The saloon deck is patterned very nearly after the style of the Old Colony, as is the hurricane deck.

She will be equipped with two boilers each of 60 pounds pressure, and two simple incline surface engines with 38-inch cylinders and eight-foot stroke of piston.

The engine room will occupy less space than in the Old Colony, which will make more desk room for passenger accommodation.

When finished and furnished, the new boat, which has not yet been named, although it has been suggested that she be called the South Shore, will be the finest, stanchest and largest excursion boat engaged in the harbor service. Her carrying capacity will probably be 2300 passengers.

The addition of the new boat to the fleet will give the company four big boats with a passenger capacity of 8750, in addition to the two smaller boats.

Census Returns.

The census returns of four Norfolk county towns are reported. Sharon, Avon and Millis show gains and Dover a loss. Sharon has a population of 2,085; Avon, 1,901; Millis, 1,252 and Dover, 636. Several of the small towns of the State are not as large as fifty years ago. Truro, for example, being 1,917 in 1855 and only 743 now.

African Grosbecks.

The social grosbecks of South Africa live in large societies. They select a tree of considerable size and literally cover it with grass roof, under which their common dwelling is constructed. The roof serves the double purpose of keeping off the heat and the rain, and 400 or 500 pairs of birds are known to have the same shelter. The nests in this aerial dwelling are built in regular streets and closely resemble rows of tenement houses.

Talking Rock.

Australia has a postoffice named Talking Rock. The origin of the name is thus stated: Some one discovered in the vicinity a large stone upon which had been painted the words, "Turn me over." It required considerable strength to accomplish this, and when it was done the command, "Now turn me back and let me fool some one else," was found painted on the underside of the stone.

THE SCHOOLMA'AMS.

Miss Underwood Favored — Birthday Observed.

Miss Underwood writes from Montreal Thursday morning. She says she is fortunate because she shares with Miss Brinkhaus, the chaperon, and Miss Spaulding of Everett, the stateroom of the "Arden." She slept well the first night, but not quite as well as at home. Was up soon after crossing the Canadian line.

She says Miss Spaulding and I receive considerable attention, probably because of our large vote and our long service as teachers. Miss Connors of Brookline, the other teacher from this district, is very agreeable, in fact we all seem to be old friends. Feel that I shall enjoy the trip.

The Herald today prints the following dispatch from Chapleau, Ontario, under date of July 7:

"Luck is with The Herald teachers party on the second day of the transcontinental tour of the "Boston School Ma'ams," as they have come to be known along the Canadian Pacific. At the large places, particularly within the sphere of the Montreal newspapers, there was more than the usual crowd gathered to greet the passing of the express, the one event of the day.

At North Bay, for example, where there was a stop of an hour and all hands were out, the "school ma'ams" were the cynosure of shyly pertinacious eyes intently following the doings of the tourists and every middle-aged fellow-traveller of the other sex enjoyed for the time being the honors paid a professor and was supposed to have some supervisory powers.

Otherwise the day was quiet but successful. A series of showers cooled the air and kept down the dust and encouraged the singers of the party, who with the others made the forested wilds of Ontario ring with melody.

Life on the special car has become second nature already and an object lesson in railroad care and provision for a tourist's comfort. The picturesque lake region of Ontario and its hundreds of small bodies of water, the verdure freshened by the rain, all viewed from the windows of a luxurious travelling home, make ideal touring, very far removed from the tired monotony usually associated with interminable travel on the rail.

The only distinct event, apart from the tour itself, was the celebration of Miss Leonard's birthday in an improvised programme, culminating in a dinner gathering and a token purchased from the fine fund of the tour—a nickel being the penalty for talking shop.

Miss Leonard is about to begin her 20th year in the Newburyport high school and had taught for 20 years before that in the Norway, Me., and North Andover high schools.

—The Boston Floating Hospital made its first trip of the season down the harbor to Pemberton on Thursday, carrying eighteen very sick babies. Within a month the hospital will probably have at least 125 babies on board every day.

New Hampshire State Board of Health Bulletin.

Analysis of Food Stuffs Sold in That State.

Raspberry and Strawberry Jams Colored by Coal Tar Dye.

ONLY SAFETY IN EXTRACTS IS TO USE ONLY FOSS'

Of the 32 samples of canned fruits, jellies, flavoring extracts and jams examined, 91 per cent. were found by the New Hampshire Board of Health defective, preserved by benzoate or colored by aniline dyes.

The only security from all such harmful adulterants in flavoring extracts is to take advice of such authorities as Mrs. Lincoln, author of the Boston Cook Book, and the professional cooks at all the leading hotels along the coast and at the mountains, who publicly state that they use nothing but Foss' Pure Flavoring Extracts, for the simple reason that they are sure of getting simply the fruit in liquid form.

Only a few years ago it was very difficult for the most painstaking woman to be sure that she was using a natural flavoring extract. The demand for extracts at soda fountains and in ice cream especially tempted manufacturers to use substitutes and adulterations for quicker and larger profits.

The imitation became so crude and deleterious that many persons ate sparingly of all flavored desserts. It was proved that it was the impure flavoring that made pies, cakes and ice cream disagree with a grown-up person as well as with the children, and an urgent demand arose for a pure, reliable, natural fruit extract. A wide market was assured for such a wholesome flavoring and from the first appearance of Foss' Extracts, which are simply the fruits in concentrated, liquid form, hotel chefs, cooking school teachers and thousands of plain housewives entirely discarded the use of artificial extracts and began to stock their pantry shelves with nothing but Foss'.

All grocers sell Foss' Pure Extracts in Quincy, Wollaston, Braintree, Weymouth, East Weymouth, South Weymouth, Atlantic and Norfolk Downs.

M'KINLEY'S DEATH.

How the Associated Press Worked to Get and Give the News.

On the afternoon of Sept. 6, 1901, worn out by a long period of exacting labor, I set out for Philadelphia with the purpose of spending a few days at Atlantic City. When I reached the Broad street station in the Quaker City I was startled by a number of policemen crying my name. I stepped up to one, who pointed to a boy with an urgent message for me. President McKinley had been shot at Buffalo, and my presence was required at our Philadelphia office at once. A message had been sent to me at Trenton, but my train had left the station precisely two minutes ahead of its arrival. Handing my baggage to a hotel porter, I jumped into a cab and dashed away to our office. I remained there until dawn of the following morning.

The opening pages of the story of the assassination were badly written, and I ordered a substitute prepared. An inexperienced reporter stood beside President McKinley in the Music hall at Buffalo when Czolgosz fired the fatal shot. He seized a neighboring telephone and notified our Buffalo correspondent and then pulled out the wires in order to render the telephone a wreck, so that it was a full half hour before any additional details could be secured.

I ordered competent men and expert telegraph operators from Washington, Albany, New York and Boston to hurry to Buffalo by the fastest trains. All that night the Buffalo office was pouring forth a hastily written but faithful and complete account of the tragedy, and by daybreak a relief force was on the ground. Day by day through the long vigil while the president's life hung in the balance each incident was truthfully and graphically reported. In the closing hours of the great tragedy false reports of the president's death were circulated for the purpose of influencing the stock market, and to counteract them Secretary Cortelyou wrote frequent signed statements giving the facts to the Associated Press.—Melville E. Stone in Century.

LITERARY DRUDGERY.

Froude passed seven years in collecting materials and writing his "History of England."

Nearly five years of Irving's time were consumed in writing "The Life of George Washington."

Gibbon devoted over twenty years of his life to the labor of reading for and writing the "Decline and Fall."

Dickens says in the introduction to "David Copperfield" that he spent two years in the composition of that novel.

Bancroft devoted nearly thirty years to his "History of the United States," which is not a history of the country at all, since it ends where the history of the country properly begins.

Cruden labored nineteen years on his Concordance to the Bible and immediately after its publication was sent to a lunatic asylum. He never fully recovered from the mental disease brought on by this gigantic undertaking.

Primitive Water Pipes.

Very primitive water pipes of an ancient date have been discovered in the streets of Manchester, England. They were hollowed out tree trunks fitted together so as to make a wooden conduit. The joints were somewhat in the style of those of a fishing rod, the thin end of one trunk being made to fit into the thick end of the other. It is supposed that this means of supplying Manchester with water was in use about 200 years ago, and discoveries of the same kind made in other towns go to confirm that view. The boring through the wood was about four inches in diameter. The supply of water in those days was not only much less in absolute quantity than now, but very much less in proportion to the population.

Highholes' Large Families.

Few birds have larger families than the highhole, but, were it not for the number of his family, how could he hold his own among so many enemies? His conspicuous size and color always make him a shining mark to the collector, for every village lad in the land has collected flickers' eggs. He is a fellow of expediency, however. If his home is robbed, his wife soon lays another set of eggs. It is on record that one pair, when tested by the removal of egg after egg, laid seventy-one eggs in seventy-three days.—St. Nicholas.

What You Don't Hear.

You hear something like this every day in the week: "Ten years ago he couldn't get credit for a suit of clothes. Now he can write his check for $50,000." But when did anybody hear anything like this? "Ten years ago he was thoughtless and regardless of his fellow men and cared for nobody but himself. Now he is kind and gentle and is a constant encouragement to all who desire to enlarge their faith in human nature."—Kansas City Star.

Incompatible.

"What would you do if you had a hundred thousand dollars?"

"I'd own a private yacht."

"Then you wouldn't have a hundred thousand dollars."—Washington Star.

Strange Women.

In Japan it is the height of bad form for a woman to express an opinion contrary to that of her husband. Wonderful people!—Minneapolis Journal.

The Result.

Friend—What was the result of the consultation of doctors? Invalid (glancing at the receipted bill)—It left me in a very poor condition.

Five of the old headstones in the First Parish cemetery have been treated by a process, for preservation, like that applied to the Obelisk in Central park, New York city. His body is to be cremated.

As Patrick Dugan, freight brakeman on the N. Y., N. H. & H., railroad was about to board the freight at Nantasket junction Thursday forenoon, he missed his footing and fell sustaining a severe scalp wound. He was removed to his home and is reported as comfortable.

The necessary funds for a band stand were subscribed, and the Miller Construction Co., built a large portable one Monday. Concerts were given afternoon and evening, July 4th, by the Weymouth Band, before a large audience.

THE SEA BREEZES.

Summer Colony at Houghs Neck Larger Than Ever.

The season at Hough's Neck is now in full blast. There are more people at the beach this season than ever before. There is not a vacant cottage of any description, yet there are daily demands for them. Upwards of twenty cottages are occupied by clubs, and it is a "warm time" they are having.

As for lunch rooms, there are scores of them. How they all get a living is a mystery. Of dance halls, there are several, and the nightly gatherings attract hundreds from Quincy.

C. A. Walther and family of Jamaica Plain, are at the Recreation cottage.

Nicholas Burlo and family of South Boston occupy one of the Shaw cottages on Great Hill.

J. L. Ayer and family of Winchester, are domiciled at Langworthy cottage.

F. S. Johnson and family of Campello are occupying the Upland cottage.

H. M. Gragg and family of Waltham enjoy life in the Mooring cottage.

J. L. McIntire and family of Nashua, N. H., are in their new cottage on Rogers street.

The new cottage of George E. Bell on Great Hill is about completed.

The new cottage of J. A. Buckman of Somerville on Nut Island is finished and occupied.

Rev. A. A. Ellsworth will conduct the Sunday services at the chapel on Bay View avenue.

Mrs. K. S. Sweet of Wollaston and family are at the Highland cottage on Great Hill.

ESCAPE OF REBELS

Pursuit of the Potemkine Not Successful

COALED FROM BRITISHER

Has Crew ot 750 Men Under Good Discipline and All Her Guns Are Loaded--Tension Is Increasing In the Caucasus

St. Petersburg, July 9.—According to the latest reports, the Kniaz Potemkine has escaped her pursuers and is still at large in the Black sea, with the torpedo boat destroyer Smetilvy and the Black sea fleet hot on her trail. There is little doubt that she is heading for Poti or Batoum, but no dispatches from either place had been received up to this morning.

The Kniaz Potemkine escaped from Theodosia before the Black sea fleet arrived there from Sebastopol, and the fleet did not put into Theodosia, thus relieving Admiral Chouknin of having to test the perhaps doubtful loyalty of his new crews.

Advices received by the admiralty are meagre and most conflicting. It is considered possible that "Ensign and Quartermaster" Alexieff, who commands the Kniaz Potemkine, was advised of the fleet's coming and left Theodosia for that reason. At any rate it is clear that the Potemkine coaled from a British ship, which she subsequently released, and then sailed away. The reports as to the direction taken by the Kniaz Potemkine do not agree.

A correspondent who visited the Kniaz Potemkine in company with the mayor found the battleship commanded by an elected committee of seven, headed by "Ensign and Quartermaster" Alexieff, a quasi-commissioned rank in the Russian navy. Everything was in order and good discipline prevailed. All the guns were loaded, and it was said that the mutineers had a full complement of ammunition. The crew consisted of 750 men, and there were 15 more in torpedo boat No. 256. No officers were seen, but it was rumored that there were several ensigns among the crew held prisoners and costumed as sailors.

Press advices indicate that the tension is increasing in the Caucasus, where the turbulent elements are excited over reports regarding the condition of the fleet, increasing the fear that the arrival of the Kniaz Potemkine at a Caucasian port will have the effect of pouring oil on the smouldering flame. A bomb was thrown at Tiflis yesterday.

Black Sea Fleet's Whereabouts

Novorossiysk, July 8.—The Black sea fleet arrived here last night and will sail southward. The authorities have placarded the town, recommending the people not to go upon the streets should the Kniaz Potemkine appear.

Novorossiysk is on the northeast coast of the Black sea.

Mutiny of Transport Sailors

Sebastopol, July 8.—A naval magistrate is investigating a mutiny on the transport Prout. One hundred and fifty sailors of the Prout have been imprisoned in the fortress here and the others are still on board.

Cruiser Protects Theodosia

Theodosia, July 8.—A Russian cruiser has arrived to protect the town. The inhabitants, who fled while the Kniaz Potemkine was in port, are returning.

The Slaughter at Lodz

St. Petersburg, July 8.—The Official Messenger prints a detailed account of the disturbances at Lodz, and editorially declares that they were fomented by revolutionary, socialist and Jewish agitators. The account says that on June 23 160 of the rioters were killed and 152 wounded. One officer and three soldiers were wounded and two police agents were killed and many wounded, while $50,000 worth of property was destroyed. According to the account, 20,000 Jews left the town within two days.

Sedition In Russian Army

London, July 8.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Telegraph declares that General Linevitch has sentenced several Russian officers to death for circulating seditious circulars, and asserts that all Poles and Jews in Linevitch's army are mutinous and are constantly surrendering, so as to enjoy a pleasant captivity as prisoners of the Japanese.

Must Keep Away From Bosphorus

Constantinople, July 8.—The council of ministers has resolved to begin preparation for the dispatch of all available warships to the entrance of the Bosphorus and for the mounting of heavy guns at the forts in Kavak. These guns were purchased for this purpose some years ago, but were not mounted, owing to objections made by the Russian government. The chief of staff of the navy has gone to Heraclea with orders to prevent at all costs the Kniaz Potemkine approaching the entrance to the Bosphorus. He is instructed to supply the battleship with coal, and even with money, is needed.

Improved Sanitary Conditions

Panama, July 8.—Chief Sanitary Officer Gorgas of the Panama canal zone says that since June 23 there has been no case of yellow fever in the city of Panama and only one at Colon. Sanitary conditions have been much improved.

What It Costs
... AND ...
What It Pays

are two values of newspaper advertising that the merchan has to consider. But the most important thing is

WHAT IT PAYS.

The merchant can get space in papers of small circulation and little influence for a little less money than the same size space would cost in the DAILY LEDGER and the QUINCY PATRIOT.

DOES IT PAY

to throw away the certainty of the profitable returns which are sure to LEDGER and PATRIOT advertisers, because it costs less to advertise in cheaper paper?

CANAL MATTERS

Likely That Full Charge Will Be Assumed by Root

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 8.—It is not unlikely that the administration of affairs connected with the construction of the Panama canal may be transferred from the war to the state department. Since Elihu Root indicated his acceptance of the president's tender of the secretaryship of state, the president has had the matter of the transfer under consideration. It is known that Secretary Taft would be quite willing to be relieved of the responsibility attendant upon the direction of the canal affairs.

The appointment of Judge Magoon to be minister of the United States to Panama in connection with his office as governor of the American zone on the isthmus naturally suggests the desirability of placing both offices under the direction of the secretary of state, and, following this movement to its logical conclusion, the secretary of state would be the natural director of the affairs of the canal. Mr. Root is deeply interested in the canal work and already has devoted considerable thought to it.

While no definite decision regarding the transfer has yet been reached by the president, it is regarded as probable that the direction of all matters pertaining to the canal will be placed in the hands of Secretary Root.

Miners Must Pay Half

Springfield, Ills., July 8.—Judge George Gray of Delaware, who was chosen as the fifth arbitrator by the arbitrators selected by the operators and miners of the state of Illinois to decide whether the operators or miners should bear the expense of the shot firers, rendered necessary by the law which passed the last legislature, has decided that the miners shall reimburse the operators one-half for the expenses incurred by the employment of shot firers.

Bank President a Thief

St. Paul, July 8.—Thomas B. Clements, president of the failed National bank of Faribault, who was indicted on 27 counts charging embezzlement, misapplication of funds and making false reports to the comptroller of the currency, was found guilty last night on 24 counts. The defendant was recommended to the mercy of the court. The hearing upon a motion made for a new trial was set for Nov. 10, and sentence was suspended until that time.

Firemen Hurt by Explosion

New York, July 8.—Nearly a score of firemen were seriously burned or overcome by smoke last night during a fire which destroyed the upper floors of a seven-story factory. The first fireman to reach the scene ascended the stairs to the fifth floor, where they were met by a "back draft" explosion which hurled them down the stairway with hands and faces scorched and their clothing on fire. All managed to reach the street.

State Ball In Honor of Japs

London, July 8.—A state ball was given at Buckingham palace last night in honor of Prince and Princess Arisugawa of Japan. Crown Prince and Princess Constantine of Greece and all those in the royal circle were present with the exception of the Prince and Princess of Wales, who are at Sandringham. The American embassy was not represented, owing to the death of Secretary Hay.

Real Dollar In Green Goods Game

New York, July 8.—A new version of the old green goods game came to light through the arrest here of Grove Collins. A letter to the prospective victim contains a good $1 bill and an offer to send $500 of the same sort, C. O. D., for $50. The postmaster at Sayre, O. T., learned that a man he knew had received an express package from Collins, paying over the $50 before being allowed to open it.

May Advance by Merit Alone

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 8.—An important order was issued last night by President Roosevelt announcing that if any officer of the army or navy hereafter shall solicit influences, aside from the records of his service on file in the war and navy departments, in order to obtain promotion or assignment, he shall be debarred thereby from the advancement or detail which he is seeking.

Children Not Given Proper Attention

Chicago, July 8.—"Fatally inefficient and stupidly deficient" have been the public schools in directing the physical and moral training of child life, according to Nelson W. McLain, superintendent of the St. Charles (Ills.) school for boys, who was the chief speaker at the national conference on the education of backward, truant and delinquent children.

Charged With Drowning Child

Chicago, July 8.—John Wicher, 22 years old, has been arrested, charged with drowning his 6-months-old boy in the Chicago river. The arrest followed the recovery of the child's body and identification by Anna Wicher, the mother, who says that Wicher had objected to supporting the child.

Killed For Refusal to Marry

Indiana, Pa., July 8.—Maddened by the refusal of Anna Jenilek, his 15-year-old sweetheart, to marry him, John Irarnock, a miner, aged 23, murdered the girl at her home and then tried to end his own life. The man was arrested.

CORAL REEFS RAILWAY

Remarkable Line to Be Built by Henry M. Flagler.

WILL COST SEVERAL MILLIONS.

It Is to Extend 154 Miles From Florida Keys to Key West, Most of the Distance at a Height of Twenty-seven Feet Above Long Stretches of Water—Will Command Passenger Business to Cuba.

The new railroad which Henry M. Flagler, president of the Florida East Coast railway, is about to build from Miami, Fla., through the Florida keys to Key West will be 154 miles long and for the greater part of its length will be an interisland road, threading its way through the keys which lie off the southern and southeastern coast of the state, says the Chicago Tribune. In order to pass from key to key the road bed will have to be built over long stretches of water at the average height of twenty-seven feet.

Just how many millions it will cost to construct the road Mr. Flagler and his engineers have not been able yet to estimate, but when the road is finished it will have absolute command of the rapidly increasing passenger business to Cuba. It also will be the nearest railroad point in the United States to the eastern end of the Panama canal.

It is believed the possibilities of the road in connection with the rapidly growing commerce of the United States with West Indian and Central American points will warrant the great outlay for construction.

It will be the first attempt that has ever been made to build a road more than 100 miles long over a series of islands, necessitating the construction of more than half the road over the water. From Miami to a point near Mangrove point the road will follow closely the coast line of Biscayne bay.

Somewhere near Mangrove point the road will leave the mainland and will cross Card's sound to Largo key, one of the largest islands in the string. From the time it leaves the mainland whether it be crossing the shallow waters or running along the keys themselves, it will have for its foundation the deep and solid beds of coral rock. No more substantial roadbed than this could possibly be devised.

From Largo key to Matacumba key the islands lie close together, but between Matacumba and Long keys a considerable channel intervenes, as is also the case between Long key and Estetta key, only in the latter instance the way is broken by the Duck keys, which are really nothing more than points of coral sticking up above the surface of the water, which will serve as anchors for the bridge work. From Boot key to Bahia Honda an extremely difficult piece of bridge work will have to be accomplished, but from Bahia Honda to Key West, which is only forty miles, the way is closely strewn with keys. The bridge between the Boot and Bahia Honda will be seven miles long, and the cost of this one piece of work will run into the millions. In all the world there will be nothing like it.

When looking over the plans for this road recently Mr. Flagler remarked facetiously that travelers would not be troubled with dust. From the time the road leaves the mainland there is scarcely anything but water or solid rock.

In a scenic way the road will be notable. The views will be those of beautiful southern waters, with all their tenderness of tint and with the scores of keys or islets, great and small, which will make the voyage a wonderland. The first surveys were made to Cape Sable, across the Everglades, but when this was made Mr. Flagler found he was sixty miles from Key West and twelve miles from what is known as the three fathom line of the gulf. He therefore decided to undertake the greater proposition and to build the line to conform more nearly with the coast.

The position of Florida with relation to important southern points—Panama and Cuba—makes this road of exceptional importance in the extent of our trade. A line drawn from Miami to the southward would pass midway through Cuba and strike Colon, one of the terminals of the Panama canal. Key West literally dominates Cuba, and on this island Mr. Flagler is planning to build a splendid system of terminals, filling in vast stretches of the shore with a singular kind of white mud found a little distance away. There will be twelve piers, each 800 feet long and 200 feet wide, covered with sheds, and with basins 200 feet wide between them, affording berths for a total of forty-eight large ships. Space has also been provided for a complete dry dock of sufficient capacity to care for the largest ships.

The building of this road will open up possibilities for the building of many new resorts and will afford exceptional facilities for travel to Cuba. Season by season the travel to Havana grows greater and greater, and last season the steamers in use were unable to care for all the business offered them. Mr. Flagler is largely interested in the railways of Cuba, and he spent a portion of last winter investigating the future possibilities of that country. The benefits which he will derive, therefore, from his new extension will not come wholly from the road itself, but from the increment on his island investments.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS FLORENCE RHETT.

Household Manager and Social Secretary For J. P. Morgan.

Miss Florence Mason Rhett of New York is household secretary of the great financier J. Pierpont Morgan and is one of the highest salaried as well as one of the hardest worked women in the United States. Those who ought to know say her salary is $10,000 a year.

Miss Rhett has been in Mr. Morgan's employ as household manager and social secretary to the family for six years. She relieves Mrs. Morgan, who dislikes household responsibility, of the care of her magnificent homes in New York, West Point and London. Her word is absolute in each establishment. She engages and discharges the servants and purchases all the supplies. She is not restricted as to expenses.

Miss Rhett is said to be a relative of Mrs. Morgan. She is a descendant of the old Rhett family of South Carolina, the members of which have long been socially prominent in Charleston. She is a tall, large, distinguished looking woman, like Mrs. Morgan and Miss Anne Morgan.

Managing the household affairs is the least of Miss Rhett's duties. She takes charge of all the correspondence of the Morgan home, including all letters dealing with Mr. Morgan's multifarious charitable affairs in connection with churches and hospitals, his relations with the Metropolitan Museum and other institutions of art and learning, his personal correspondence about his yachting interests and the various clubs with which he is connected. All appeals for aid come under Miss Rhett's eye, and her decision upon them is usually final, as that decision is only tendered after she has made a rigid investigation as to the worthiness of the cause.

Mrs. Morgan and Miss Morgan receive almost as many begging letters as Mr. Morgan does. These also are turned over to Miss Rhett. She also acts as social secretary, replying to and sending out invitations.

As a connoisseur in art Miss Rhett is nearly always engaged in looking up something in connection with Mr. Morgan's purchases in that field. If somebody writes offering to sell him a rare piece of china or a painting he sends Miss Rhett to look at it. Her judgment goes a long way with him in such matters. This will give an idea of the wide range of Miss Rhett's duties, and though her salary is large, she earns it. —New York Press.

Feeding the Baby.

This is a question of vital importance and much concern to every mother. The time comes when something besides a purely milk diet is desirable, but what, that the little stomach can digest, will furnish proper nourishment? It is often necessary to change from an entire milk diet when, during the teething period, baby refuses food or does not seem to relish what is taken as formerly.

The old fashioned oat flake, properly cooked, is one of the first things to be given with safety, and the little ones enjoy this. In lieu of a double boiler, if yours is too large, get a small handled basin that will fit in the top of your teakettle, using the cover of the latter for the dish. To a cup of boiling water add a pinch of salt and one tablespoonful of oat flake. Cook over your boiling kettle one hour or more (a thorough cooking is very essential). You will have a jelly with very little solid matter. Add milk, and it is ready for baby. A little sugar may be used, but do not make the common mistake of thinking everything for baby must be sweetened and later wonder why when he is hungry plain bread and butter without a sugar dressing is not acceptable. Gradually increase the amount of oats used until you have accustomed the little stomach to taking it as ordinarily prepared for breakfast.

Bread and milk is readily assimilated and easy to prepare. Use the entire wheat bread if you can get it. Place a slice in a saucer and pour over it the warmed milk. Crushing between the tines of a fork does away with chunks and will not make the bread sticky, as crumbling between the fingers is apt to do.

Saving Irons.

Many housekeepers are annoyed by their flatirons becoming rusty from dampness in the cupboard. This may be easily prevented. Before putting the irons away after the ironing is finished rub them with a little warm grease on a piece of soft paper and wrap them in thick brown paper. When they are to be used again dip them into very hot water with a little soda dissolved in it and wipe them dry before putting them over the fire to heat. When taken from the fire for the ironing have some brown paper on the table with a little powdered bath brick on it and rub the iron on this. Have a piece of paraffin tied in a muslin bag, rub this lightly over the iron and then polish it on a soft cloth. This almost takes longer in the telling than the actual work does, but the process makes the iron delightfully smooth and easy to use, and consequently one may get over the clothes more quickly. Flatirons frequently receive very little care, and snowy white clothes too often are spoiled by them. They should always be immaculately clean.—Housekeeper.

A Day In Bed.

To spend a day in bed when one is not ill seems at first mention rather a waste of time, yet there is profit in it for a tired woman. The large majority of women, who must study economy very closely, cannot make a change of climate at will. For them the rest must be secured at home. Every one knows that the sequence of a brief illness is often a great gain in strength. This is because the patient has had the rest afforded by staying for a short period in bed. Just one day every week or every fortnight thus passed by a tired woman, who is only tired, not really ill, will prove very profitable to her. Try it. Let yourself be waited on and a little missed downstairs.

A Young Wife's Duties.

Perhaps there is nothing more important to a young wife or more calculated to make home happy than a proper knowledge of her duties and a due regard for household expenditure. Yet many a young girl entering upon life is wholly unqualified for her duties and has to pick up, as it were, her knowledge instead of exercising it. A thorough knowledge therefore of domestic economy is an important part of the acquirements of a young girl and as much a moral obligation on her part as it is on that of a man to have that professional information and tact which enables him to provide for the wants of a wife and family.—London Queen.

For the Nerves.

Mere stroking, used in varying degrees of swiftness and pressure, is very soothing to an excited nervous system. The gentler and slower the stroke the more marked is its sedative action. In some way not quite clear it promotes mental peace and nerve rest. Soft fingers, ungloved, are the best implements, and no adjunct of any kind is needed. The stroking may be confined to the forehead, the head or may engage the entire body. A sympathetic mind will communicate itself to the touch. Try this for nervous headache and hysteria.

Bonbon Baskets.

Baskets of drawn sugar make an exceedingly dainty ornament, with flaring edges and a long handle. They are woven from strands of variegated color or they are entirely of satiny white strands, with perhaps a ribbon of pink or blue sugar fastened at the top. These baskets are employed to hold bonbons or petit fours, no other receptacles appearing on the table. A hostess tells the caterer the color scheme for her dining room, and he furnishes the sugar decorations in accordance.

Scratched Furniture.

It is asserted that light scratches or marks on polished tables or chairs can be effaced by rubbing the meat of the common black walnut over them. After the oil of the nut has been rubbed in it is hardly possible to find the scratch. If the furniture is black walnut this would seem on the homeopathic principle of "similia similibus curantur."

Heliotrope Sachet.

Heliotrope sachet is one of the best that is made, and it imparts a delicious fragrance to clothing. Make it thus: Mix well together and pass through a coarse sieve half a pound of orris root, a quarter of a pound of ground rose leaves, two ounces of powdered tonquin beans, half a grain of musk and two drops of essence of almonds.

Carpet Sweeping.

In sweeping a carpet make long, even strokes with the broom, not little jerky dabs, which are hard on the carpet and the wielder of the broom as well. Don't sweep from one side to another, but from the edges toward the middle. And don't forget to raise the windows so that the dust will blow out if it can be managed.

To Save Stockings.

To save the wear of stockings, take a new piece of wash leather and gum it inside the heels of shoes. This will, by preventing friction, save the heels of stockings immensely. Mothers of boys and girls should take advantage of this hint, for it will spare them many stitches.

Toilet combs should seldom be washed, for it makes them brittle, but they are frequently cleaned with borax powder. This should be rubbed on dry, and the comb should be well polished with tissue paper.

Why not in every home a quarreling room, set apart for those to go who are ill natured, and a severe penance demanded from each and every one found "growling" outside of it?—Good Housekeeping.

When Turkish towels grow thin from long usage they may be made to serve better by dipping in thin starch and using unironed.

Potted meat will keep longer if covered with mutton fat than if butter which has been melted is used.

The Bewitched Baker

ONCE upon a time—now sit up and look pleasant, I can't possibly tell a story if you fidget or go to sleep!

No, I don't think these are "really and truly true stories," at least not all of them, but what does that matter? Jack and the Giant Killer, and Old Mother Goose and the Three Bears are not "really and truly true stories," but who cares for that? Jack is quite as interesting a personage as George Washington, and you would no more go back on old Mother Goose than you would deny your own grandmother! And as for the Three Bears, did anything that ever ready and truly happened cause the shivers to creep up your back and lift the hair on your head like that part of the story where the old Big Bear in a deep and guttural voice demands, "W-h-o'-s been eating my soup?"

So I hope you won't put your fingers in your ears or go off somewhere and sulk because these are not "really and truly true stories." Just wait and listen to them! They are as full of shivers as the Three Bears, and there are ghosts and goblins till you can't rest.

Now draw a little closer together and look behind you right quick to make sure there is nothing lurking in the corners where the firelight don't reach, and listen while I tell you the story of "The Baker's Dozen."

Once upon a time there lived in the town of Albany a baker who for more reasons than one deserved to be immortalized. He was the first baker who ever made cows and pigs and men and horses out of gingerbread, and for this reason if no other you should know about this baker, whose name, alas, was Volckert Jan Pieterson!

Now Volckert Jan Pieterson was a good churchman and a brave man, and history does not record that he had been guilty of any outbreaking sins, so why he should live in mortal terror of being bewitched nobody knows. But such was the case.

The worst that could be said of Jan Pieterson was that he was—well, if not really stingy, at least a little close. He may have skimped his loaves a little bit, and his gingerbread horses might have been a little bit fatter and his pigs' tails a little bit longer. Mind, I don't state this as a fact, but merely a rumor which I am not in position to deny, but when one comes to consider the question fairly it doesn't seem reasonable that a man of such nobility of mind as to invent the gingerbread menageries would be capable of conniving to cheat the purchasers of the same!

However that may be, Jan was in a cheerful frame of mind as he sat in his little shop on the last night of the year 1654, meditating on the trade of the day, which had been very brisk indeed.

Jan had sold a great many loaves and buns and cakes and pies, but more than all else he had sold the gingerbread cows and pigs and men and horses, and as a last stroke of genius he had patterned some rolypoly gingerbread babies exactly like his own fat offspring, on which he had had a great run. So Jan was happy as he sat in his shop that last night in the old year and counted over his gains of the week and speculated about the possibilities of the future.

Suddenly there was a sharp tap at the door, and in response to Jan's "Come in" an ugly old woman entered and stood before him.

"Give me a dozen cookies," she demanded in a high, shrill voice.

"Here you are," Jan replied, passing them across the counter to her, "but you needn't speak so loud. I'm not deaf."

"I asked for a dozen cookies," the little old woman screamed, "and you have only given me twelve."

"Well," Jan explained, "twelve is a dozen in this shop."

"But I want another," the little old woman insisted. "Give me another cookie, Jan Pieterson. I want a dozen."

"Then go somewhere else and get them," Jan said, slamming the door in her face and shutting the little old woman out in the darkness and the storm.

Now, that was the undoing of Volckert Jan Pietersen, for then and there the thing which he most dreaded happened to him, and Jan Pietersen was bewitched. The little old woman never came back, but she took with her the peace and prosperity of the unhappy baker. If his bread rose it was so light it flew out of the chimney; if it stayed in the oven it was so heavy it fell through the bottom, and wherever poor Jan went he was pelted with invisible hands until he was black and blue.

At last he bethought him of good St. Nicholas, the patron saint of all pious Dutchmen, and he called upon him for help. Promptly the saint responded, and after reading Jan a lecture on charity he advised him to be more generous in dealing with his fellow men, and I'm not sure that he didn't enjoin him to roll his gingerbread a little thicker and cut his pigs' tails a little longer. At any rate, it seems to me that the horses have grown fatter, and the men stouter, and the pigs' tails longer from year to year.

When the good old saint had finished his lecture Jan returned to his shop to meditate on what he had heard, and suddenly in the midst of his meditation he looked up, and the little old woman once more stood before him.

"Give me a dozen cookies, Jan Pietersen," she demanded in the same high, shrill voice.

Jan did not wait for a second bidding, but promptly put thirteen cookies into the bag and gave them to the old woman. Then, with his hand on a gingerbread effigy of St. Nicholas, he swore that never again should it be said that Jan Pietersen did not give full measure.

And this is how it came to pass that for many years thirteen constituted a baker's dozen, and it was not until the thirteen new states had supplanted the old colonies that the Yankee grew shrewd and worldly wise and, denying the cake devoted to charity, again declared twelve to be a dozen.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Handkerchief Trick.

One of the best sleight of hand tricks is to produce a handkerchief from a lighted candle which has been previously examined. It is accomplished as follows: The handkerchief (a small silk one) is concealed back of the drawer of an ordinary match box, which has the drawer half pulled out as if in readiness to get at the matches. The candle is given for examination, and you then place it in the candlestick on the table and show your hands empty. Pick up the match box, take a match from it and light the candle. Close the box, which pushes the concealed handkerchief into your hand. You then pretend to pluck the handkerchief from the flame, and let it expand as you draw your hand back from the flame.

Tommy's Riddle.

Johnny—No, I don't.

Tommy—You'd be a smart chap to send out to buy apples, wouldn't you?

NOTES ABOUT TOWN.

The Sampson residence on Washington street is undergoing repairs.

George E. Pfaffmann, of Presidents hill, has been confined to the house this week, by illness.

The smoke from the big lumber yard fire in Boston last night was plainly seen from Quincy.

Copies of the Acts and Resolves for 1905 have been received at the City Clerk's office for distribution.

Arthur B. Hultman, who is circulating a paper in Ward Two for the benefit of the Wollaston sufferers, has a good sum subscribed.

Mrs. Anna C. Wells, of Winter street, had the misfortune to slip on her doorstep on Sunday evening, fracturing her hip. It will be several weeks before she is able to get about.

Allen Spear the young grandson of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Fay of Greenleaf street, is suffering from a broken collar bone. A little playmate accidently tipped him out of the hammock at his home in Randolph.

If more houses like that being built by H. F. McIntire on Presidents hill could be erected in Quincy, they would let or sell readily to people wishing attractive, artistic, and convenient homes of moderate size.

The phonograph on Clive street is very entertaining these warm evenings, when piazzas are popular, and everyone is looking for amusement. Surely not all things that yield pleasure to their owners are bounded by the limits ownership in their pleasurableness.

Mrs. W. T. Babcock has a two column article in the Boston Transcript for July 3, on the Rural Free Delivery of mail matter through the farming districts of the United States, and the need of a free parcel delivery in both cities and villages at a lower rate of postage.

If rumor holds good, by the middle of August every house in Atlantic will at least have one member absent on a vacation. Several families are to close up their houses entirely the last of this month and hie themselves seaward or mountainward as the choice may be for the remainder of the season.

Much sorrow is being manifested in the Downs by the death of Albert F. Kingsley, who died Thursday morning as the result of injuries received while on the truck of the Wollaston Fire station. "Bert," as he was familiarly known, was a fellow of sunny disposition, a steady worker, always ready to help anyone in difficulty, a fine companion and good friend. His family have the heartfelt sympathy of many, many friends.

HEROISM OF AUTHORS

BRAVE BATTLES WAGED AGAINST THE AGONY OF DISEASE.

Literature, as Well as Art and Science and History, Is Indebted to Pain and Worry and Suffering For Some of Its Choicest Gems.

There are heroes of the pen as well as of the sword, and the victories of the study are quite as affecting and memorable as those of the battlefield.

If a complete list of the fine examples of heroism of authors were compiled it would reach well out into the thousands and include a large number of illustrious names. In fact, it is said that few authors have done really great work except under adverse circumstances. Literature, as well as science, art and history, is indebted to pain and worry and suffering for some of its choicest gems.

There are few finer examples of the heroism of the study than that presented by Professor Finsen, the discoverer of the light cure for lupus. For the last twenty years of his too short life he suffered from painful diseases of the heart and liver, to which dropsy was superadded, and it was only by daily self denial and the strictest dieting that he was able to live at all.

Yet for all these years, lived in the very shadow of death and in constant suffering, he stuck bravely to his great life work, even studying his own diseases with the keenest attention and writing articles on them for medical journals. The last two or three years of his life were spent lying on his back, unable even to be carried to his beloved institute a few yards away, and yet the lion hearted scientist never relaxed for a single day his gallant fight for his fellow men against disease.

The heroism of the Danish professor suggests a similar brave battle waged by an English professor, J. R. Green, the historian, against disease and pain. It was in 1869, when the disease which had assailed him for many years finally prostrated him and when the doctors gave him no hope of living more than six months, that Green set to work to write his famous "Short History of the English People." Day after day he toiled at his task, holding desperately on to life and in a state of ceaseless pain and exhaustion, and so brave was the man's spirit that he actually prolonged his life for five years. Even he was bound to confess, "I wonder how in those years of physical pain and despondency I could ever have written the book at all."

General Grant's memoirs, which brought his widow the enormous sum of $500,000, were written under even more trying conditions than Green's history. In 1884, the year before his death, the ex-president found himself bankrupt through the failure of the Marine bank and face to face with the prospect of dying penniless and leaving his wife destitute. It was at this terrible crisis that he began to write the story of his stirring career. But the cup of his misfortune was not yet full. A cancer formed at the root of his tongue, and the gallant soldier was compelled to write day after day, suffering constant and severe agony.

Mrs. Browning, too, wrote most of her beautiful poems confined to a darkened chamber, to which only her own family and a few devoted friends could be admitted, in great weakness and almost unintermittent suffering, with her favorite spaniel as her companion.

The German poet Heine was another martyr and hero of the study. The last seven years of his life were spent on his "mattress grave," racked with such excruciating pain that he had to take doses of opium large enough to have killed several men in order to give him a few blessed hours of freedom from it. Through all these years of torture he not only bore himself with a noble resignation and cheerfulness, but produced many of his finest and most finished works, including his "Last Poems and Thoughts" and his "Confessions."

Sir Walter Scott's heroic struggle with misfortune and failing health during the closing years of his life is perhaps too well known to call for more than mention. After the commercial crash came which left him crushed with debt and with shattered health he set to work "with wearied eyes and worn brain" and toiled for years, often as much as fourteen hours a day, until the end came and with it the lifting of all burdens, including that of his debts, every penny of which his monumental toil had paid.

In the list are also Frank Smedley, who wrote his book on "a bed of anguish;" Edna Lyall, who kept death at bay by her brave spirit and busy pen, and Clark Russell, who set a magnificent example of patience by his industry when racked with rheumatism. It is also said that much of Sir Arthur Sullivan's sweetest music was distilled from pain.—New York Herald.

Economy.

The following letter was received from his sister by a New Yorker who was away from home on a visit:

I am sending by mail a parcel containing the golf coat you wanted. As the brass buttons are heavy I have cut them off to save postage. Your loving sister.

J.

P. S.—You will find the buttons in the right hand pocket of the coat.

Would Leave It.

"I insist upon your leaving the house," she said angrily.

"Certainly," replied the tramp blandly. "I have no intention of taking it with me."

To every duty performed there is attached an inward satisfaction which deepens with the difficulty of the task. —Scott.

PUBLIC DIETETIC BUREAU.

Physician's Proposition to Publish Wise Formulae of Diet.

A public dietetic bureau which shall publish in the daily papers wise formulae of diet and physical management of the human body was suggested at the American Institute of Homeopathy in Chicago recently by Dr. M. O. Terry, former surgeon general of New York, says the Chicago Tribune. He held that such an educative measure would result in the palliation or permanent eradication of appendicitis and other diseases which afflict the public.

He proposed not that the physicians should receive a salary, but that they should unite in a magnanimous enterprise to donate to the general welfare the latest information upon the subject of dietetics and preventive treatment which, while it might lessen the necessity for the profession of medicine, would rid the world of much pain and suffering.

"Just in proportion as the people are educated to give time and attention to themselves so that the machinery of the body will perform its duties without the assistance of the various medicines so generally in use, just so sure will appendical difficulties decrease in number until they will be brought to the attention of the physicians and the surgeon as only an occasional malady. The medical profession is too humane and too advanced in higher education to encourage ignorance, but must take the position of instructors, which, we admit, might be unwise from a mercenary standpoint, yet a physician's duty to himself and to the public and the responsibilities of his calling would seem to demand a personal sacrifice for the philanthropic end in view.

"Finally, how best can this education be carried on? By unity of effort on the part of the profession—a bureau elected for that purpose composed of men especially gifted in dietetics who should formulate a system of diet and management of our bodily structures. This could be given to the press as coming from this organization and as representing the most recent thought on the subject."

Dr. Terry also paid attention to the "appendicitis craze," declaring that in many cases where operations were performed a short vacation or a series of morning walks would have prevented the serious turn taken by the disease. He said that appendectomy was wrongly becoming a synonym for surgery, and quoted Dr. Osler's statement, "Pain in the stomach nowadays is always appendicitis and is recognized by the physician's wife over the telephone."

SCHOOL ENVIED OF NATIONS

Applications From All Over the World at Carnegie Institution.

No fewer than 7,200 applications for enrollment as scholars have already been received by the trustees of the new Carnegie Technical school at Pittsburg, which will not be opened for three months, says a special dispatch from Pittsburg to the New York Times.

Every country in the civilized world is represented. There are applications from all parts of Europe, all the South American countries and from Asia.

France and Germany, however, head the list, more than half of the applicants being from those countries. Japan and Russia are also well represented. The Filipinos appear to be particularly anxious to enter the school, a large number of the letters being from inhabitants of the islands. In addition to the letters from individuals, application has been made by William Sutherland, representing the commission which proposes to bring Filipino children to the United States for education, for admission of twenty pupils.

The trustees of the institution have decided to care first for applicants from Pittsburg and western Pennsylvania, then from other states in the United States, next from the Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico, and afterward from the foreign countries.

Most of the letters received are from persons between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-six years, who desire to go to Pittsburg and complete their education.

He Finds Automobiles In the Bible.

"The chariots shall race in the streets; they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches; they shall run like the lightnings.' This utterance of Nahum, chapter ii, verse 4, was the Biblical prophecy of the modern automobile," recently declared the Rev. G. L. Morrill in a sermon at St. Paul, directed exclusively, says the Indianapolis News, to reckless chauffeurs.

Tribute to John Hay.

Fallen like an eagle from his scaur—
From yon clear height none dared to soil!—
Beats on that noble heart no more
Above the warfare and the spoil—

The poet-statesman's, in whose thought
Self had no place since first he shared
The work his boyhood's chieftain wrought,
The faith which life nor substance spared?

There are who serve their country well,
Yet stoop to crave her light acclaim;
His patriot pulses leapt and fell
Nor asked the glory of a name.

Love, honor, rose to him indeed
As vapors toward the sunlit sky,
But his the generous heart, at need,
Without a pang to put them by.

Even so, a white star on his crest,
We knew him in his stainless youth;
Even so—naught else than loyalest—
The world his manhood learned in sooth.

And if there be—and if there be
A realm where lives still forward roll,
Even so—no other—strong and free
Through time and space shine on, dear soul!

—Edmund Clarence Stedman in New York Tribune.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

On Monday, July 10, "The Telephone Girl" will enter on the second and concluding week of its presentation in Boston and with the performances of that week the summer season of musical comedy at the Empire theatre will be brought to a highly successful close. In the past few weeks it has been demonstrated that music-loving people want to be entertained in the summer months just as well as in the other periods of the year, and their patronage of the Empire theatre has proved that, when musical comedies of known worth are presented in adequate fashion under congenial surroundings, they will be supported in satisfying measure.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

For the vaudeville bill at Keith's the week of July 10, the names of some of the best entertainers in their line in the business are announce, including Ray L. Royce, the popular mimetic comedian; Henry V. Donnelly (of "Natural Gas" fame) in a one-act farce, entitled, "Mr. and Mrs. Nagg" made famous by a series of stories in the New York World; Mosher, Houghton and Mosher, in one of the best comedy and trick bicycle acts in the business; Matthews and Ashley, crossfire conversational comedians; Misses Cook and Clinton, experts with rifle and pistol; McPhee and Hill, in a great exhibition on the horizontal bar; Ferguson and Watson, conversational comedians; Murphy and Francis, two of the best "real coon" entertainers in the business, and Therese Dorgeve who comes direct from Paris, a pleasing and talented prima donna soprano. The Fadettes Woman orchestra will make an entire change of selections including a solo from one of the members, and an entire new list of motion pictures will be exhibited in the biograph.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The management of the summer season at he Castle Square theatre is giving ample evidence of a desire to supply the theatre-going public during the summer months with at tractions equal in every way to those presented during the winter season and to afford a pleasing variety of attractions. Next week a revival after two years of the excellent comedy "Brother Officers" is announced and it is promised that the play shall be presented in a most effective fashion. "Brother Officers" is announced for only a single week and the usual free distribution of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

Klaw and Erlanger, whose great theatrical attractions have become wonderfully popular in New England because of their merit and magnitude, will present an entirely new production at the Colonial Theatre in Boston Monday evening, July 17th. It will remain for several weeks. This piece is an extravaganza called "The Pearl and the Pumpkin." It will be presented by a company of 300 people, headed by a corps of the best known comedians and players on the American stage. From the standpoint of scenery and costumes, this production will far eclipse any ever made in this country and will set up a new standard in spectacular art in America.

The book was written by Paul West, a young Lawrence, Mass., journalist, who is now one of the editors of the New York World, and W. W Denslow, author of "The Wizard of Oz." The story of the piece is founded on that of the little book of the same title lately published by these writers, profusely illustrated by Mr. Denslow. These drawings serve as types for the characters in the stage version. The music was written by John W. Bratton, who has more popular successes to his credit than any other American composer.

The story of the piece is remarkably entertaining. The characters are well selected and strongly contrasted and many are so unique that they will furnish much humor from the very oddity of their personalities. In this respect the new extravaganza will display unusual originality. The lyrics are described as the best heard in a musical production in many a day. Herbert Gresham and Ned Wayburn are staging the play.

The scenes will be strikingly effective and will represent the home of the fairies; a Hallowe'en party in Farmer Pringle's barn in Vermont; a lonely road leading to a cornfield; the magic cornfield at midnight; Davy Jones' locker beneath the sea; Mother Carey's fairy palace; Ike Cannem's factory in Bermuda; a lily field and a beach in Bermuda.

Dock Trial.

The new battleship Rhode Island now nearing completion at the Fore River shipyard will have a dock trial of her engines and machinery this week.

The trial will be a very important one and will probably be the last until the vessel goes over the Cape Ann trial course to test her speed.

Nearly all the guns of the Rhode Island are in position and her speed trial will surely take place this fall, possibly in two months.

The greater part of the heavy work has been done on her. She should be commissioned by Jan. 1, 1906, at the latest.

A large force of men is at work on the 16,000-ton battleship Vermont, to have her ready for her maiden dip on Aug. 31. Her hull is pratically completed and she presents a very interesting appearance to those not familiar with shipbuilding.

OPEN REGATTA.

The Rube Won in the 22-Foot Class.

The Marvel Outsails the Hustler.

The Bonitwo and the Zaza II Also Winners.

There was a good fleet of yachts out Saturday at the annual open race under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club. The waters in front of the club house were dotted with the white sails of the flyers and made a pretty sight from the broad piazzas of the club house.

Cash prizes were given in all classes and all but the 15 foot class had entries.

The wind was from the southwest and was quite fresh, making a good sailing breeze. The regular club courses were sailed.

Class E, the 22 footers, got away well bunched at 2.35. The Rube led with the Chewink V second. Then came a luffing match. The Rube led around the first mark with the Tyro second, the Chewink V having surrendered her position.

On the reach to the next mark the Tyro and Chewink V pulled up onto the Rube, and were but a few seconds behind in turning the mark. The Medric carried away part of her rigging and was obliged to withdraw. The Rube was still in the lead upon crossing the mark the first time around with the Nutmeg second. The second time around varied little from the first, Rube finishing first, and the Nutmeg second.

In the Cape cat-class the Marvel and Hustler, the two Quincy club rivals, fought out another battle and the Marvel won. The Hustler finished third and the Stranger fourth, but corrected time made them tie for second position.

The Bonitwo won in the 18 foot class and the Zaza II in class X.

A Straight Tip.

A congressman was lunching alone in a Cincinnati cafe. Near by sat a dignified gentleman, who casually asked his waiter, "How is business?" The man said he was not doing well, upon which the dignified individual expressed regret, saying, "Personally I have always treated your craft in this house generously." The waiter was assiduous in his attentions and helped the guest on with his coat. The dignified man laid his hand on the waiter's arm and said: "Young man, you seem to be discontented with your lot, and I am going to give you the best tip you ever received. Get into some other business." And he strolled away, leaving the waiter speechless.

The Word "Gent."

At one time the word "gent" was a reputable term for general use. A respectable writer in 1564 tells of "a supper to divers gentlemen of the Gray's inne for the great amitie between them and the Middle Temple gents." The diarist Evelyn speaks of the "noise and tumult occasioned by three or four wild gents in drink." Soon after Queen Victoria's accession "gents" became vulgar. Thackeray speaks of it in 1842 as an "affectionate diminutive at present much in use among commercial persons."

Two Rescued.

But for the prompt work of William C. Scott, Thomas O'Brien and Edward Allen of Brockton, who are camping at Woodland cottage, Houghs Neck, two young men would have been drowned Sunday afternoon.

The two young men, who refused to give their names, were stopping at the Cedar Oak cottage. About 3 o'clock they went in bathing. When about 300 feet from shore they became exhausted. They cried out for help and Scott, O'Brien and Allen put out in a boat for them. When the boat reached the bathers they were sinking. Scott jumped overboard and grabbing the two young men by the hair held their heads above water until help arrived.

They were nearly gone when they were taken ashore and had to be rolled on barrels before they revived. Scott was also exhausted and was taken to the Woodbine cottage where he soon revived. But for the prompt work of Scott in jumping overboard and grabbing the two they would have been drowned.

Sunday Picnickers Arrested.

The police were called Sunday afternoon to break up an Italian picnic party on Douglas street, West Quincy. The gang had a half beer barrel which was nearly empty, and were having a high old time when the police swooped down upon them. They not only confiscated the beer but placed the gang under arrest. They gave their names as Peter Cato, Angelo Monti, Charles Falucci, Frank Caselini, Donato Salvucci and Tony Pontili. They were locked up for disturbing the peace.

SECOND VICTIM.

Funeral of Fireman Albert D. Kingsley.

All the Fire Companies Represented.

A Wealth of Beautiful Floral Tributes.

The funeral of Albert D. Kingsley, the second member of the Wollaston company to die as a result of the accident on the morning of July 4, was held Saturday afternoon from his late residence on Freeman street.

The services were largely attended by friends, and by a delegation of forty firemen representing all of the companies of the city. Chief Engineer Peter J. Williams and Assistant Engineers John H. O'Brien, Frank C. Packard and Daniel J. Nyhan were also present.

The services were conducted by Rev. Carleton P. Mills of St. Chrysostom's church.

The body was encased in an oak casket, which was almost hidden beneath a wealth of flowers.

These included a pillow of roses, carnations, sweet peas and hyacinths marked "Husband and Papa," from the family.

A pillow of roses, carnations, hyacinths, sweet peas, and laurel from the Quincy Fire Department.

A broken column of roses, pinks and ferns from the Firemen's Relief Association.

A pillow of roses, pinks and ferns from the Central Fire station.

A pillow of roses, pinks and asparagus vine from the Wollaston Fire station.

A wreath of roses, calla lilies and carnations from the Engineers.

A wreath of roses, sweet peas, carnations and smilax from the Wollaston Foundry.

A wreath of roses, calla lilies and greenery from the Atlantic station.

The bearers were Faxon Billings, driver of Combination 2; Edward Flaherty, driver of H.&L. 3; Richard Colbert of H. & L. 2; William Carroll of the Central station; James Connell, driver of engine 1, and A. L. Mead, driver of Hose 4.

The remains were escorted as far as Beale street by the firemen. As the procession moved from the house the bells and whistles on the fire alarm circuits struck 34 blows at intervals of half a minute, representing Mr. Kingsley's age.

The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, the committal services being read by Rev. Mr. Mills.

Bethany Picnic.

The annual picnic of Bethany church and Sunday school on Saturday at Randolph grove was a grand affair. Over four hundred were in attendance, representing all ages. Committees had planned for a good time, and there was an interesting series of sports for which ribbons were awarded. It was a basket picnic, but ice cream, peanuts etc, were provided for the children. Boat rides were another attraction.

One of the events of interest to the older ones was the ball game. The Makarias went in to wipe out the two defeats suffered at the hands of the Y. M. C. A., which they did in fine style. In the fifth inning finding Penley for four hits and five runs which were sufficient to win the game.

Body Recovered.

The body of Douglas Mitchell, mate of the yacht Romance, was recovered Sunday morning off the Wollaston club house. The body was found by a searching party and was just above the bottom, indicating that it had just began to rise.

There was a cut in the head and another over the eye. These were evidently caused by falling and his head striking the tender while trying to pass from one boat to another. This evidently stunned him and he fell overboard.

Medical Examiner Jones was notified and after viewing the body, turned it over to Undertaker Hall.

Mitchell was 23 years of age, unmarried, and his home was at Wallbrook, Kings county, N. S., where the body will be sent for burial.

Boston's Best Mayor.

Among the story tellers prize stories in the Herald was the following good one of local interest:

When Josiah Quincy was mayor of Boston a well known politician christened his youngest boy Josiah Quincy Ronosky. He had named his preceding son Nathan Matthews, after another Democratic mayor, and had this child with him when he called on Mr. Quincy and told how he had honored him.

"What is your name?" asked Mayor Quincy of the boy.

"I'm named after Nathan Matthews, Jr.," replied the boy. And then he added, as if he had said it often: "He was the best mayor Boston ever had."

Everybody laughed except Mr. Quincy, who never does such a thing.

"Oh, well," remarked Mr. Quincy, "just wait until Josiah Quincy Rosnosky is old enough to talk."

Drift of Opinion.

☞In a play in which Mrs. John Wood acted many years ago, one of the things she had to say was this: "Men like unhealthy women!" Perhaps taste has changed since those days. It was nearly twenty years ago. The languid, delicate, sensitive type is not so much in favor now as the vigorous, healthy, bright-eyed, pink-cheeked girl who can swim, golf, drive a team, fish, play hockey and ride to hounds.—The Boudoir.

Eight Men Working on Railroad Blown to Pieces

A PREMATURE EXPLOSION

Particles of Flesh and Bone Are Found Far From the Scene of Disaster, Some Being Fastened to Telegraph Wires

Harrisburg, July 10.—Eight men were blown to pieces and two others injured by the premature explosion of a blast of powder on the Pennsylvania railroad improvements near New Cumberland. All the victims of the disaster were employes of H. S. Kerbaugh & Co., contractors, who are building double tracks for the Pennsylvania railroad. The bodies of the men were terribly mangled and particles of flesh and bone were scattered for a distance of 200 yards from the scene of the explosion.

Not a trace of two of the men killed can be found and it is supposed their bodies were blown into the river, which is being dragged.

An inquest was held and the jury rendered a verdict of premature explosion from an unknown cause and no blame attached to the contractors.

All the killed and injured were laborers, aside from James Wiseman, whose body was terribly mangled. What could be found of it was identified by the fact that he dyed his hair. His scalp and a portion of his head was found on a hill 200 yards from the blast. Wiseman had been with the Kerbaugh company for five years and had gone to the scene of the explosion to personally superintend the preparations for what is called a "big shot."

A "big shot" consists of a series of blasts, the holes having been drilled in a row and the charges being set off simultaneously by an electric spark. Five of the holes had been filled with powder and the men were at work on the sixth when the explosion occurred. It is supposed that a small stone had gotten into the hole and the iron bar with which the men were "tamping" down the charge caused a spark by scraping on the stone and that this ignited the powder.

One laborer escaped because a fellow-workman playfully snatched his hat and ran with it. The owner ran after the man with the hat and had just got out of the range of the explosion when it occurred.

A water boy was hurled 50 feet. Every stitch of clothing was torn from his body. A leather belt containing $312 in paper money, supposed to belong to one of the men, was picked up near the scene of the explosion. Pieces of flesh and bone were found fastened in the telegraph wires over the railroad tracks.

The force of the explosion was felt for miles and broke many windows in Harrisburg and towns across the river.

Christian Endeavor Services

Baltimore, July 10.—Special Christian Endeavor convention services were held yesterday in 77 churches of various denominations and at night 21 consecration services were held simultaneously in as many churches. In every case the size of the audience was limited only by the capacity of the building. In addition a monster meeting for men was held at Armory hall, during which 300 men professed conversion and at the Lyric there was a meeting for women which crowded the building.

Squaw Slain In Her Cabin

Caledonia, Ont., July 10.—Betsey Jacobs, a crippled squaw, was found dead on the floor of her home with her face beaten to a pulp and marks of strangulation on her throat. Joseph Bennett, an Indian, was seen driving away from the cabin in a buggy and was pursued by a posse. He abandoned his horse after a long chase and took to the woods. The bush has been surrounded.

A Wanderer Found

Springfield, Mass., July 10.—Walter H. Graham, the missing Providence man, was located in Lee. He was walking on the street in a dazed condition, but bore no evidence of suffering from his wanderings, and had a large amount of money. He was taken in charge by his brother. Graham is a member of a firm of jewelers in Providence.

Fast Mail Train In Collision

Green Castle, Ind., July 10.—While running at the rate of 60 miles an hour a fast mail train collided with a freight train which was pulling onto a siding at Oakall. Fireman Tippy was fatally injured and Engineer Garner was seriously hurt. Both of the injured men were on the mail train. None of the passengers was injured.

Former Bank Cashier a Suicide

Philadelphia, July 10.—Silas McDonald, who was for years cashier of the State National bank at St. Joseph, Mo., and who came to this city after that institution went into liquidation, committed suicide here by cutting his throat in the presence of his wife. He had been in ill-health.

Student Drowned While Bathing

New York, July 10.—Harry C. Cromwell, while bathing at Brighton beach, discovered the body of a young man dressed in a bathing suit floating in the water. It was identified as that of Edwin Heim, a Princeton university student.

NO RELIEF PROMISED

Another Hot Wave Is Headed Toward New England

Boston, July 10.—According to the local weather bureau, Boston was the hottest point in New Eigland yesterday, the official thermometer registering 92 at 2 p. m. The heat, however, was more bearable than on Saturday, owing to a lower percentage of moisture in the atmosphere, and as a greater portion of the population sought the suburbs, the list of prostrations was comparatively small, three being reported up to 9 o'clock last night.

To the northwest of the city several thunder showers cooled the temperature during the afternoon, but they had apparently expended themselves in the vicinity of Fitchburg and Lowell, for only a few drops of rain fell here and but one thunder clap disturbed the quietness of the Sabbath.

The fog which has clung so persistently to the southeastern shore of New England during the past week still prevailed, with the result that Cape Cod and Nantucket were cool, though damp.

The weather bureau holds out no prospects of cooler weather, in view of the appearance of another hot wave in the northwest.

Greeks and Assyrians at Odds

Boston, July 10.—Thoroughfares in the Assyrian quarter of the city were patrolled last night by policemen with drawn clubs, as the result of a miniature race war between the Greeks and the Assyrians living in that vicinity. During the strife, one man was painfully injured. The trouble originated through a Greek woman throwing water on two Assyrian children who were making a disturbance beneath her window. The affair magnified and before it was ended nearly all of the Greeks and Assyrians were participants.

Portuguese In Cotton Mills

Fall River, Mass., July 10.—Several of the cotton manufacturing corporations here, it is understood, have decided to employ Portuguese and other Europeans to fill vacancies in the mills. A number of overseers are in New Bedford awaiting the arrival of several hundred Portuguese from the western islands, and it is said some of the immigrants will be given employment here.

Child Fooled With Revolver

Meriden, Conn., July 10.—Miss Catherine Bennett of Brooklyn was accidentally shot in the back at the home of her brother-in-law, Dr. Sorgi Parisi, here, by the doctor's 7-year-old daughter, who had taken her father's revolver from a drawer and was playing with it. The ball passed through the upper part of Miss Bennett's left lung and her condition is critical.

All Round Amateur Champion

Boston, July 10.—Martin J. Sheridan of the Greater New York Irish-American Athletic club won the American all-round amateur athletic championship here against four contestants. Sheridan broke the American record with 6820½ points. The previous record was held by Harry Gill of Toronto, 6360½ points, made in 1900.

Easy Day For State Troops

Westfield, Mass., July 10.—It was fortunate for the state troops in Camp Bartlett that Sunday was one of rest, for the heat was intense, and the weather made even more unbearable by the high humidity. Until late in the afternoon, when the two brigades were called out for a short evening parade, there were no drills of any kind.

Confessed to Stealing Rig

Hartford, July 10.—James Daly and George Bell of Boston were arrested here last night while trying to dispose of a valuable horse and carriage for a small sum of money. Later they admitted to the police that they stole the outfit at Weymouth, Mass., last Thursday night. The men will be taken to Weymouth.

Killing Over Game of Pool

Boston, July 10.—Victor Davis died last night from a bullet wound in the abdomen, alleged by the police to have been inflicted by Frank Smith, who was arrested immediately after the shooting. Both the parties are negroes. The police say that the shooting was the outcome of a quarrel over a game of pool.

Charged With Conspiracy

Providence, July 10.—Myer Shapiro was arrested at Arctic Centre and arraigned before Commissioner Cross on the charge of being implicated in a conspiracy for the operation of an illicit distillery in Portland, Me. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $3500 bonds for a hearing next Friday.

Brown-Tail Pest at Boston

Boston, July 10.—Swarms of brown-tail moths descended upon Boston and suburbs last night. In some places the insects covered buildings and sidewalks to such an extent as to resemble a fall of snow. The moths swarmed particularly about the places where trees and shrubbery were plenty.

Babe's Body In Catch-Basin

Boston, July 10.—Two boys searching for a lost ball in a catch basin on Albany street last night discovered the badly decomposed remains of an infant. The baby had evidently been exposed many weeks. There was no clue to indicate how it came there or where it came from.

Second Arrest of Prison Guard

Windsor, Vt., July 10.—Alvah Sanderson, a former guard at the state prison here, who was recently acquitted on a charge of furnishing convicts at the prison with drugs, is again under arrest. Sanderson is now accused of taking property from the prison shoe shop.

SOFTNESS OF SEALSKIN.
Is Rivaled by Human Hair Where Dandruff Is Eradicated.

Sealskin is admired the world over for its softness and glossiness; and yet the human hair is equally as soft and glossy when healthy; and the radical cause of all hair trouble is dandruff, which is caused by a pestiferous parasite that saps the vitality of the hair at its root. Newbro's Herpicide is the only preparation that is fatal to the dandruff germ. Without dandruff there is no falling hair, but a luxuriant growth of glossy, soft hair is certain. Scouring the scalp won't cure dandruff. Kill the dandruff germ. Thousands of women owe their beautiful suits of hair to Newbro's Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. LABOR THE LOSER

Disastrous Effects of Strikes In Empire State

MANY UNIONS DISSOLVED

Decrease of 17,414 in Membership During the Period of Six Months--The Eight-Hour Day Promises to Become General

Albany, July 10.—In its quarterly bulletin, which is the first that covers a period since Commissioner Sherman took office, the state department of labor speaks of the disastrous effect of recent strikes upon the labor organizations that prosecuted them.

"The failure of the strike on the rapid transit system in New York," says the department, "resulted in the disruption of unions embracing a membership of more than 4000 men; that of the glaziers was followed by the dissolution of a union of 500 men; while the disputes in the Fulton county glove manufactories also caused very large losses. In some industries trade has only recently recovered from the recent depression which greatly weakened the workmen's organizations. Thus the Schenectady unions lost 16 percent of their members between Oct. 1, 1904, and April 1, 1905, while Syracuse was the only large city in which unionism made any gain in number of adherents.

"In the six months specified 165 organizations in this state dissolved and 20 more amalgamated with other unions of the same trade. On the other hand, only 99 new unions were organized, causing a net decrease of 86 and leaving 2418 organizations in existence at the end of March. The aggregate number of members of unions was then 374,262, signifying a net decrease of 17,414 since September.

"While the decrease in organizations was principally in villages and smaller cities, four-fifths of the losses in membership was in the seven principal centres of industry. New York city lost 8741 or 3.4 percent of its membership, but still has 245,978 unionists; Buffalo has 184 unions and 30,158 members; Rochester 91 unions and 12,130 members, a decrease of 125; Syracuse 78 unions and 8162 members, a gain of 171; Albany 81 unions and 7691 members, a decrease of 528, or 6.4 percent; Troy 55 unions and 5149 members, a decrease of 106, or 2 percent; Schenectady 58 unions and 5290 members, a loss of 1012."

Speaking of the progress toward shorter working hours, the bulletin says: "While the bakers, in their trade unions, are now struggling to maintain the 10-hour day first established by legislation, workmen in other trades are enjoying the nine-hour day and are now moving toward the eight-hour day. Relatively few mechanics in the building trades work more than eight hours a day, and in the building industry of New York city the 44-hour week is almost universal. Within the last few years the printers have reduced the daily working hours from ten to nine and are now moving rapidly toward eight hours.

Cassini Leaves Washington

Washington, July 10.—Count Cassini, Russia's first ambassador to the United States, after seven years' service here, has left for New York, whence he sails tomorrow for Europe and will later go to his new post at Madrid. Cassini was frank in his expression of regret in leaving his friends here and took occasion to reiterate to them the kindly feelings he cherished for the country which has been his home for the last seven years.

Pleasure Seekers In Wagon Wreck

Detroit, July 10.—Nine people were injured, one of them fatally, last evening, when a street car crashed into a wagonload of people returning from a drive. Three temporary seats had been rigged up in the wagon for the afternoon's pleasure and it was crowded. The wagon was squarely on the track when the car struck it, and the occupants were hurled in every direction.

Dispute With Fatal Result

Fort Kent, Me., July 10.—John Boulanger, residing eight miles from this village, is held for the grand jury for his alleged connection with the death of Joseph Voison. The two became involved in a dispute, and, in a struggle, Voison was thrown down, sustaining injuries which caused death almost instantly.

Crazy Man's Double Killing

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 10.—James J. Farrell, former assistant chief of police of Plymouth, was killed by his cousin, John Lee, who then killed himself. Lee was formerly in an insane asylum. He suddenly became deranged yesterday and cut Farrell's throat with a razor, afterward cutting his own throat.

Perhaps Incendiary Fire

Burlington, Vt., July 10.—The third fire within 36 hours at Winooski broke out late last night in the woodyard of H. C. Colton. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin. The yard was heavily stocked and the loss is $5000.

A LEVER FOR JAPAN

Her Flag on Russian Territory For the First Time

EFFECT ON PEACE TERMS

Lessens Russia's Chances of Getting Out of Paying Monetary Indemnity--Rebel Battleship Capitulates to Roumania and Is Turned Over to Russia by Order of King Charles

St. Petersburg, July 10.—With the Japanese flag hoisted for the first time on Russian soil after 18 months of war, the importance of the landing on the Island of Sakhalin is generally admitted both in newspaper comment and in government circles. Complete occupation of the island is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The Novoe Vremya voices the general sentiment in holding that control of Sakhalin puts a powerful lever in the possession of Japanese diplomacy, which finally has something tangible in its hands to throw upon the scales with the sword in the coming conference.

There is a divergency of opinion with regard to the effect it will have upon the negotiations at Washington, some of the irreconcilables declaring that it makes peace at the present juncture more impossible than before, as Japan will be able to demand the cession of the island and a heavy indemnity as well, at which terms of peace will be too costly, but the more prevalent view is that Japan has now in her hands enough trumps to take the game.

The attack on the island certainly dissipates one of the hopes of the peace advocates, who have been suggesting that its voluntary cession might be offset, with Port Arthur and the Chinese railroad, against the payment of a large part or all of a monetary indemnity.

No further report of the landing operations has been received.

M. Muravieff, the Russian ambassador at Rome and one of the peace plenipotentiaries, has arrived at St. Petersburg. His sailing arrangements are dependent upon the date of his audience with the czar, which will probably take place tomorrow. His suite has been completed by the selection of two secretaries from the foreign office.

The Novoe Vremya joins in the press chorus against Muravieff, saying it is hard to tell how good a diplomat he will prove, as he certainly was not a success at The Hague. The paper says that Baron Rosen, the other plenipotentiary, on the contrary, is a skilful diplomatist and has been socially successful.

The Island of Sakhalin (Japanese Karafuto) is a narrow island in the north Pacific separated from the Siberian mainland by the Strait of Tartar.

It was taken possession of by the Russians in 1854-67. Sakhalin is 600 miles from north to south and is from 20 to 90 miles wide.

It has the sea of Okhotsk on the east and is separated from Japan by La Perouse strait. The interior of the island is filled with forest-clothed mountains 3000 to 4000 feet high, separated by marshy valleys, of which only the valley of the two Eyms, flowing north, east and south, is fit for cultivation.

Severely cold weather is experienced in the island even in summer in consequence of the large amount of ice coming from the sea of Okhotsk and packed along the east coast along which the cold Kuro-Shiwo sea current flows.

The chief settlements of Sakhalin are at Due, a seaport of difficult access on the west coast, where Russian convict prisons are situated; Kusa-Nai, also on the west coast, in the southern part of the island; Port Muravieff, in Aniva bay, and a few small villages in the Tym valley, east of Due. The population of the island is about 20,000, and the area about 30,000 square miles.

IN KRUGER'S HANDS

Russia Gets Rebel Ship Through King of Roumania

Kustenji, Roumania, July 10.—Admiral Kruger yesterday afternoon boarded and took possession of the Russian battleship Kniaz Potemkine, King Charles of Roumania having sent instructions to the commander of the Roumanian squadron that the vessel be delivered to the Russian authorities without raising difficulties.

The torpedo boat which accompanied the Kniaz Potemkine, however, left for Odessa without surrendering, declaring that she had not mutinied, but that the Kniaz Potemkine had forced her to follow.

Admiral Kruger arrived with his squadron yesterday morning and after exchanging the customary salutes intimated that he had come to arrange for the transfer of the Kniaz Potemkine. Admiral Koslinsky, commander of the Roumanian squadron, boarded the Russian battleship Tchesme and informed Kruger that King Charles had ordered him to turn the vessel over to the Russian admiral. The formalities of the transfer were completed in the afternoon, and Kruger boarded the Kniaz Potemkine.

A press representative inspected the Kniaz Potemkine after the withdrawal of the Roumanian guard. Despite the efforts of the Roumanians to get things in shipshape everything aboard the battleship was still in a state of wild disorder. The officers' cabins were stripped of everything of any value and bloodstains were everywhere. There was sufficient ammunition aboard the Kniaz Potemkine to have lasted the mutineers to make a desperate resistance.

It is said that during the last few days the vessel was navigated by two engineers and an officer, with revolvers at their heads. All of the sailors wished to surrender with the exception of Matuschenko, the leader of the mutiny, who resisted for some time and wanted to blow up the ship.

Seven officers were prisoners aboard the Kniaz Potemkine. They were in a pitiable condition from ill-treatment. They declare that Matuschenko himself killed 10 officers of the battleship. All the papers and books belonging to the vessel were destroyed.

It appears that the decision to surrender the Kniaz Potemkine was made when it became evident that no other vessels would join in the mutiny. The crew of the battleship seemed to be unaware of the surrender of the Georgi Pobiedonosetz and expected that she also was coming to Kustenji to capitulate to Roumania.

China Wants to Butt In Washington, July 10.—China's request to be represented in the Washington conference on the ground that it is vitally interested in its proceedings has been received by the president and informally transmitted to the belligerents. It can be stated that, while Russia is inclined to favor the suggestion, Japan will not consent to it. Japan has already made public her assurances that Manchuria is to be restored to China. That is one of the principles for which she says she has been fighting. Japan regards herself as fully capable of executing this promise without the assistance of China. Moreover, Japan has all along taken the position that when peace negotiations were begun they would be conducted directly with Russia. It is altogether unlikely that the Washington government will press the claim of China and the official view here fails to sympathize with the idea.

New York, July 10.—Dr. George Morgan, who is charged with complicity in the death of Miss Mamie J. Dr. Morgan confessed to signing a death certificate for the girl without having seen the body. Detectives are looking for two doctors who conducted the hospital.

Married In Merry-Go-Round

St. Louis, July 10.—Seated on a lion of a merry-go-round at Delmar garden, with the strains of "Wearin' of the Green," played by an automatic organ for a wedding march, Miss Grace C. Mullery was married to Nelson C. Shannon by a justice of the peace. The couple had secured a marriage license at Clayton and then went to Delmar. Nell Mullery, a sister of the bride, dared her to be married on the merry-go-round. The answer was "I'll not take the dare," and the ceremony was performed while the spectators were whirled about in a circle.

A Preliminary.

The minister's wife engaged a new servant. The girl was very friendly with a constable, and one day she invited him to come round to see her. When he came it was washing day. She went and fetched him some beer, biscuits and cheese, but just then a voice called out, "Mary, have you got started to wash yet?"

"Yes," said Mary.

"What are you doing now?"

"Oh, I am just filling up the copper."—London Telegraph.

"And your new ones?"

"Oh, I let them get old."

It is only a long time after having learned it that we know anything well.—Joubert.

IN THE ROCKIES.

The Teacher's Party Nearing the Pacific.

Miss Underwood Enjoying the Trip.

The Victim on Sunday of a Practical Joke.

Tomorrow at noon Miss Underwood and the Teachers' party are due at Vancouver on the Pacific. Today's journey, however, is perhaps the grandest yet. The Pacific express was due at Banff at 7.06 A. M. and for fifteen hours will run through the Canadian Rocky mountains noted for their picturesque scenery. The altitude of Banff is 4500 feet and there are mountain peaks in sight over 9,500 feet high. It is the station for the Rocky Mountain park and the hot springs, a national reservation of over 5,000 square miles. The highest point reached by the train in today's journey is at Stephen, the summit station, 5,296 feet.

A souvenir postal from Miss Underwood dated at North Bay on Friday reports her as well and having a delightful time.

Another note from the chaperon of the party reports Miss Underwood doing finely.

The Herald prints a dispatch reporting the safe arrival of the party on Sunday at Swift Current, which is in the province of Assinibola to the north of Montana.

A hymn service was held on Sunday also an experience meeting at which a mock indictment was drawn up, a part of which will be of local interest

"The only cloud on our horizon was the report that Miss U. was to receive punishment for her conduct when she stopped off at Winnipeg. There was a report that our director forbade corporal punishment, but when Miss U. appeared, much chastened in spirit, what was our surprise that her punishment was a handsome present. She was deeply moved by the clemency shown her, and promised not to offend again after distributing the present among the sweet-toothed."

Every morning Miss Brinkhaus, who is the life and soul of the party, has some new surprise. Sunday it was The Herald's latest gift. The Herald souvenir postal cards. The enthusiatic applause which followed was a bit embarrassing to a dignified gentleman who happened to be passing through the car. The profound bows which he gave for his supposed enthusiastic greeting were greatly appreciated.

The only thing which the director fears is the western spirit which seems to be insidiously creeping over us. Indian war whoops have been heard in the car, and one member has bravely attempted to ride a broncho, besides; there are dark, but unsubstantiated, rumors of pepsin gum.

A large map is posted in the Daily Ledger show window showing the route of the party today and tomorrow.

A PAINTER'S DREAM.

Pope's Story of the Sleep Vision of Sir Godfrey Kneller.

I dreamed I was dead, said the painter. Before me I saw a door and a great number of people about it. As I drew nearer I could distinguish St. Peter by his keys with some other of the apostles. They were admitting the people as they came next to the door. As the first after my coming up approached for admittance St. Peter asked his name and then his religion. "I am a Roman Catholic," replied the spirit. "Go in then," says St. Peter, "and sit down in those seats on the right hand." The next was a Presbyterian. He was admitted, too, after the usual questions and ordered to sit down on the seat opposite the other.

My turn came next, and as I approached St. Peter very civilly asked me my name. I said it was Kneller. I had no sooner said so than St. Luke, who was standing just by, turned toward me and said, with a great deal of earnestness, "What, the famous Sir Godfrey Kneller of England?" "The very same, sir," says I, "at your service." On this St. Luke embraced me and made a great many compliments on the art we both of us had followed in this world and entered so far into the subject that he seemed almost to have forgotten the business for which I came thither. At last, however, he recollected himself and said: "I beg your pardon, Sir Godfrey. I was so much taken up with the pleasure of conversing with you. But, apropos, pray, sir, what religion may you be of?" "Why, truly, sir," says I, "I am of no religion." "Oh, sir," says he, "you will be so good then as to go in and take your seat where you please."—Pope.

The Quincy Firemen's Relief Association take this way of appealing to the public for subscriptions—to be disbursed under their direction. Notice of which receipts will be printed from day to day in the local papers.

Weekly Row.

A certain family on South street, Quincy Point, were greatly disturbed late Saturday night by a crowd of men coming from the last car, who took possession of the front lawn and began immediately to use rather violent language. This noise was kept up for some hours and then the men began to scatter. A week ago Saturday night, a lively fight took place near the Point church and the week before a similar disturbance took place at Newcomb Square. It does seem as though these weekly occurrences should be stopped. Where is the night officer? People living in this section of the city feel that they are being somewhat neglected by not having better protection at night and complaints are arising from several different parties. Cannot something be done to remedy the difficulty?

TODAY'S COURT.

Twenty-two victims were lined up in the district court this morning before Judge Cook for drunkenness, larceny, assault, disturbing the peace and speeding automobiles. Quincy, Weymouth, Milton and Holbrook were represented.

Herbert H. Frey was arraigned upon two complaints for speeding an automobile at Milton and on the Blue Hills Reservation. He was fined $10 on one complaint and $5 upon the other.

Arthur E. Howard and Stephen G. Skinner were fined $10 each for speeding automobiles at the Blue Hills Reservation.

Peter Cato, Charles Fabrici, Angelo Monti, Frank Caselini, Donato Salucci and Tomney Pontili were arraigned for disturbing the peace at Quincy, and were fined $3 each.

John Hogan was fined $5 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Joseph Myett, who was fined $75 for violation of the liquor law at Quincy and appealed, came into court and retracted his appeal and paid his fine. The second complaint against Myett was placed on file.

Timothy Kelliher and John P. O'Brien were arraigned for disturbing the peace at Quincy. Cases placed on file.

John Foy was arraigned for assault on William McCarthy at Quincy and was fined $20.

George E. Alden and John McGowan were arraigned for threatening assault at Holbrook.

QUINCYS WIN.

Defeat the South Quincys 6 to 4.

The Merrymounts Suffer from Whitewash.

The Copeland Club Were Easy at South Weymouth.

In a finely contested game at the Ward 3 playground on Saturday the Quincy defeated South Quincy by a score of 6 to 4.

The home team had a lead of two runs up to the third inning when by timely hitting Quincy filled the bases and Patterson then forced in a run by giving Powers a base on balls. With two out and a man on second and third Rooney scored both men with a hard drive between short and third.

South Quincy got a run in the third which tied the score. Quincy scored one in the fifth and the home team got one in the seventh.

Quincy put the game on ice in the 7th. Dorley got a nice single over short and Powers reached first on J. Dunn's error. With one out Rooney was on hand and scored both runners on a hard drive to left field making the score 6 to 4.

The South Quincy rooters, realizing that the visitors were two runs to the good, crowded along the third base line and began to yell in the hopes of rattling Black. But Black could not be phased and turned them over.

The best Duffy could do was to send a grounder to Powers who threw to Dorley, making an easy out. Birnie flied out to Eldridge and Oswald got a life on a base on balls. Then Forbes flied out to Dunn.

South Quincy scored two earned runs while the visitors scored on timely batting. Powers, while only a youngster, played a fine game at second accepting all chances and making three sacrifice hits which later resulted in runs.

Anderson, a new man, was tried by Quincy at third, and he gave a good exhibition, accepting seven chances without an error, making a catch of a difficult fly and a brilliant over hand stop which prevented the home team from scoring two runs.

Eldridge made a circus catch in left field, and A. Dunn made the finest play of the game, getting a line drive with one hand while on the run.

Black pitched a splendid game keeping the hits scattered hard with splendid control, striking out seven men.

Patterson pitched a good game but was touched up when hits meant runs.

The other features was the catching of Pitts, the playing of Dorley at first, the fielding of Duggan and Birnie and the hitting of J. Dunn, Birnie, Dorley and Rooney.

Merrymounts Whitwashed.

The Merrymounts were defeated by the Neponsets at the Park on Saturday, 2 to 0. Hawkins held the Merrymounts down to four hits and made four hits himself, one of which went into the hollow for a homer.

The Neponsets scored their first run in the second inning on three successive singles and they did not score again until the ninth, when Hawkins made his homer.

In the sixth a fast double play by Kolson, Cole and Taylor prevented trouble, and in the seventh Bennett robbed Howard of a triple by a seemingly impossible catch close to the ground.

The Merrymounts did not reach first until the fourth when Baker hit a Texas leaguer between short and left. Drake then fanned.

In the fifth Bennett led off with a double, Cole was thrown out by Mullane, and Osgood was safe on Hawkin's fumble. Kolson struck out and Atkins was thrown out by Hogan.

In the ninth Taylor was safe on Mullane's fumble, Donaher fouled out to Hayes, Baker hit safely, and Drake fanned. A squeeze play was then attempted but Taylor was caught at the plate.

Hayes played a fine game at first for the visitors and Cole covered second in first class style for the home team.

NEW YORK HARBOR.

Some of the Wonders of This Vessel Crowded Port.

To present to the mind an easily conjured picture of New York harbor one might make the comparison of the upturned right hand, with the long, straight forefinger for the lower stretch of the Hudson, with the thumb, joint turned out, standing for the bent East river and the palm of the hand representing upper New York bay. The three together make up the harbor of New York. As Hudson river shelters most of the north Atlantic liners while in port, so does East river harbor those that go to make up the truly foreign fleets. Here they are, pier after pier of them—the steamers that go to the far countries. Mind the roll—Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Peru, west coast of Africa, Australia, India, China, Japan! And hark again to the call of the ports—Rio Janeiro, Buenos Ayres, Valparaiso, St. Paul de Loanda, Cape Town, Tamatave, Sydney, Singapore, Hongkong, Yokohama! And the strange stuff of their cargoes! Rubber from the Amazon swamps—see the naked Indians tapping the trees and the slimy reptiles in the shadowy ooze; horn and tallow from the pampas—mark the centaur-like vaquero and his whirling riata; gold dust, ivory, palm oil from the west coast. Dreams for you there! Palm oil and gold dust and ivory; elephants and sacrificial fires and trains of captive slaves; hemp, tea, silks and smuggled opium—and do not believe that opium is not smuggled into New York harbor to this day. You think of all that, and your imagination flames.

The gentlemen in the pilot houses are not always in placid moods. Wild eyed men glare out from pilot houses aloft, like eagles from their eyries, and pass the time of day. Says one: "Where d' y' think you're going? Back, will you?"

And the other: "Back? Me back? Me?"

"You? Yes, you, you slop eyed, slack mouthed, spine twisted fresh water goob, you square headed, fatherless"—And so on, detailing irremediable flaws in the genealogy, after which both back down and avert the impending collision.—James B. Connolly in Harper's Magazine.

WOBURN---QUINCY.

Both Striving for High School Accomodations.

Bids Opened in the Former City.

Some Comparisons of Pupils, Teachers, Valuation, Etc.

Bids for the superstructure of a new High school at Woburn were opened on Monday, and were as follows:

P. H. Jackson, $81,405.
Dillion Bros., $88,793.
Driscoll & O'Brien, $88,873.
Woodbury & Leighton, $88,974.
J. J. Prindivelle, $89,744.
J. E. Locabelle, $91,090.
H. P. Cummings & Co., $92,587.
Henry McGahey, $97,711.
L. P. Soule & Son Company, $101,737.
William C. Edwards, $105,121.

Quincy and Woburn became cities the same year (1888), and for a while were known as the twin cities. Both are about equal distance from Boston with equal advantages.

In 1880, Woburn was larger than Quincy, but today Quincy has nearly twice the population.

In 1884, Woburn had a larger valuation, but today Quincy has twice the valuation.

The latest figures available for comparison show these figures for pupils, teachers, etc., for the two cities:

	Woburn.	Quincy.
Population, 1900,	14,254	23,899
Population, 1880,	10,931	10,570
Valuation, 1903,	$10,952,921	$20,956,671
Valuation, 1884,	$8,484,615	$7,997,580
School children, 1902,	2,919	5,500
Average attendance	2,575	4,584
No. of public schools,	59	123
No. of teachers,	70	134
High school pupils,	302	551
High school teachers,	11	16
Pupils to teacher (High)	28	35

Where Woburn appropriated $5.07 for each $1000 of valuation to the support of the public schools, Quincy appropriated but $4.88.

A city like Quincy, which is growing so much faster in population and valuation than Woburn ought not to occupy second place.

Fall From Attic Window.

Murray McLeod, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McLeod of 143 Arlington street, Wollaston, who walks in his sleep, had the misfortune to fall from the attic window, a distance of 29 feet, at 1.30 on Sunday morning. Fortunately he struck the piazza, thus breaking his fall. He was pretty well shaken up and is now feeling pretty sore. That no bones were broken is a wonder, and that he lives to tell the tale is a miracle.

Comments on Work of Our Representatives in Legislature.

Practical Politics in an interesting biographical number comments as follows on the Representatives from Quincy in the Legislature of 1905:

Richard R. Freeman of Quincy, even if he had never secured the passage of a bill in the legislature, would nevertheless have demonstrated the value of the work which a business man who applies himself can do in the great and general court. A ship broker, he naturally gravitated to the committee on harbors and public lands, of which he is now chairman. He is also on the rules committee. On the former committee he has introduced a sane element of judgment which has worked well for the commonwealth. Membership on this committee has quite often been sought for the junketing rather than the business possibilities. Each man, a special agent for some scheme, has devoted himself to the hearings. Freeman, in these cases, has held a brief from the commonwealth.

This year it is fair to say, harbor improvements have been authorized by the committee with the broad idea of doing good for all, rather than helping a clique. Freeman devoted himself very assiduously to the plan which would allow the construction of two marine railways for fishing vessels at East Boston, a project which the vessel owners on T. wharf to a man have petitioned for.

His judgment helped to kill the Brockton ship canal. He also worked hard with the idea of helping the Fore River dredging scheme, and largely through his efforts the aid of the United States government was secured.

Mr. Freeman was born Nov. 19, 1860, in the town of Wellfleet.

HARRY S. NICOLL.

There is a whole page of lessons in the few short lines about his life which Rep. Harry S. Nicoll of Quincy, in the 5th Norfolk district, contributed to the clerk of the house at the opening of the session.

A man who in 1880 arrives from Scotland, where he was born in 1858, makes this his adopted country, for nine years works as a granite cutter, becoming a wholesale dealer in 1889, and who goes to the city council from 1898 to 1901 and to the legislature in 1905, is a man whom it will pay to keep an eye on. That is his career, epitomized, and it is really a remarkable one.

Not only has he thus gone forward politically, but in his chosen business for three years he has been the president of the Granite Manufacturers' association.

Mr. Nicoll this year has served on the committee on water supply. In the committee he has been particularly conservative, and with his business training he has never forgotten that there never yet was a contract that did not have two sides. It can be said that he has seen both before he has voted.

Held for Breaks.

George W. Scott and Jame J. Dailey, who were arrested in Hartford, Conn., on Sunday while trying to dispose of a horse and carriage stolen from Dr. Carl H. Granger at South Weymouth, were turned over to Chief Fitzgerald on Monday, who brought them to Weymouth that night.

The two men were arraigned in court upon two complaints charging them with breaking and entering the store of Louis J. Hart and the building of Carl H. Granger.

Both waived examination in the lower court and were held in $4,000 each for the grand jury.

Rattlesnake Killed.

G. H. White killed a rattlesnake opposite his residence on Town street, South Braintree, Sunday morning. The snake had 11 rattles, and was about four feet long. The place has been visited by many people, who were anxious to see the curiosity, as this is the first rattler seen in that vicinity for many years.

Owned by Wollaston Men.

Fire was discovered early this morning in a brick block on Fairmont avenue, Hyde Park, owned by Baker and Nickerson of Wollaston. It was confined to a millinery store, the loss on the contents being $500; on the building $50.

—Malden parents have been successful in their war against the one session plan as adopted by the School Board and carried out for the past few months. In response to the vigorous protests from all parts of the city, the School Committee has unanimously voted to resume the former two-session plan with the opening of the schools in September.

TO THE RESCUE.

Councilman Crane and Others are Successful in Efforts.

But for the prompt work of the Post Island life saving crew, under command of Councilman H. Everett Crane, there would probably have been a drowning accident Monday afternoon during the squall.

When the squall came up a man and a young girl were out in a small yacht off Adams shore. Before they could make a landing the squall struck them carrying away the mast. The yacht was in immediate danger of being swamped and the mother of the girl was almost frantic.

Councilman Crane with Roscoe Ricker and Mr. Shirver put out in a boat to the rescue. With considerable difficulty they made fast to the yacht and towed it in shore.

Electric Novelties.

The International Electrical Exposition, which opens in Mechanics Building, Boston, July 15, will abound in startling and spectacular devices in addition to the most elaborate display of electric machinery ever shown under one roof in America. One of the most interesting exhibits will be made by C. S. Knowles, who has secured from the Polytechnic Institute, of Worcester, the loan of its mammoth transformer, its ratio being the highest ever successfully worked out, viz: 1000 to 1. By its use the voltage of 200 received from the power station is increased to 200,000, as against 60,000, the highest voltage used in any transmission line in the country, the latter now being operated in California. Tongues of purple flame leap outward, showers of electric sparks fly skyward, while detonations resembling a volley of musketry renders this spectacle brilliant and inspiring.

High voltage, viz: beyond 60,000, is, today, purely experimental. The secret of success in high tension transmission lies in the power of the insulator to withstand the disruptive discharge, and the ability of the insulator to prevent surface leakage. Thus these demonstrations, while spectacular and entertaining, will be instructive as indicating the possibilities in future transmission. A gorgeous electric fountain, placed in the centre of Grand Hall, with its myriad changes of kaladescopic combinations will serve to cool and purify the atmosphere while also proving a source of rare enjoyment.

Concerts by Reeves' American Band, introducing solos by artists of international renown, will be given each afternoon and evening during the week. The show will open its doors to the public Saturday evening, July 15.

Locked in Box Car.

According to his own story, says the Record, Patrick Sullivan, who was found in a tight box car on the Cunard docks, nearly dead, had been there three days.

Sullivan was released from the Quincy hospital, where his right eye had been removed on Thursday. He was former employee of the Fore River Ship Works.

Sullivan was unconscious when the freight handlers opened the door of the box car.

"The hospital authorities had given me a little money," said Sullivan, "and I spent it for drink. I was in Charlestown, and as it got late I went to the freight yard and crawled into this car. When I tried to open the door in the morning I found it locked and sealed."

Sullivan has relatives in Lynn. He was given enough money to reach them.

NOT SHY NOW.

Miss Underwood on Sail from Vancouver to Seattle.

The Herald teachers have reached Vancouver, and today Miss Underwood is enjoying a sail from that city to Seattle stopping en route at Victoria. At home she always declined excursions by steamships, and was even shy of the ferry to East Boston when going to Lynn. But, as in 1875, when Col. Parker came to Quincy as superintendent of schools, Miss Underwood proposes to be as young as any of them and improve her opportunities.

The party will stop over night at Seattle, and resuming their journey tomorrow will reach the Worlds Fair city Thursday morning, where three days will be alloted.

On the return trip next week 24 hour stops will be made both at Glacier and Banff through which the tourists journeyed yesterday.

Penelope Penfeather of the Herald writes of this region:

"Banff, Field's, the Glacier! What a list for one day's seeing, and yet that was the Herald teachers' itinerary for Monday. They are taking the best that the continent affords. Well, they deserve it; good luck to them!

"And oh, those twilights of the north. One can read her paper on the piazza at Banff these midsummer evenings until 9 o'clock, and that in spite of the mountains that rise on every side. I wonder if the mountains will tease the visiting teachers as they did me the first time I came within their influence. If I was in my room and looked up suddenly I always thought there was a heavy shower coming, and had to look twice before I realized that the threatening black mass was not a cloud, but just the side of the Rocky Mountains. It was so to the end of my stay. I simply couldn't get rid of the illusion."

Graniteville Missouri.

Frederick J. Fuller, a veteran granite manufacturer, of West Quincy, who has been for many months in charge of a granite quarry at Graniteville, Missouri, returned Sunday to his home on Hall place. He intends to remain in this city until cold weather in the fall. It is very hot in Missouri where he has been, in the summer season; the thermometer ranging from 90 to 105; but he says the weather did not appear to him any hotter there at 105, than it did here at 93 on Sunday last.

Graniteville is situated a hundred or more miles south of St. Louis, in the Iron Mountain region, and has a large splendid red granite quarry, where at times several hundred men have been employed, but only a few now. The granite is very hard and takes a nice polish making it very desirable for monumental work.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ While judges of the United States and some of the State courts envelop themselves in portentous robes when in the discharge of their official duties, it may not be out of order to take exception to the affectation of student caps and gowns for those connected with colleges, universities, seminaries, etc. The young ladies present a very charming, chic appearance in these college vestments, and the fashion may be said to be tolerable for the male students; but for the grizzled polled, wide girthed professors and trustees—well, they can see their pictures in the newspapers, and if they are candid and unbiased in the matter of pulchritude they can know how they look to other people. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

If you see a woman or a man with luxuriant glossy hair, you may be sure neither has dandruff to amount to anything. In nearly every case where women and men have thin brittle hair, they owe it to dandruff. There are hundreds of preparations that "claim" to cure dandruff, but not one but Newbro's Herpicide tells you that dandruff is the result of a germ burrowing into the scalp, and that permanent cure of dandruff and its consequent falling and baldness, can only be had by killing the germ; and there is no other preparation that will destroy that germ but Newbro's Herpicide. PANAMA RAILROAD

Commissioner Bristow Makes Recommendations

CONSTRUCTION OF CANAL

Color Line Will Not Be Drawn, and All Sorts of Men Will Be Used--Foreigners Will Not Enter the United States

Washington, July 11.—The report of Joseph L. Bristow, who was appointed a special commissioner to investigate trade conditions and other matters affecting the Panama Railroad and Steamship company, is made public.

The report discusses from several points of view the question of what policy should be pursued by the government in the management of the railroad and makes a number of important recommendations. Among these are the continuance of the railroad as a commercial line with improved facilities for handling commerce, including double tracking and re-equipping the line with modern rolling stock; the enlargement of its port facilities; the retention of the steamship line between New York and Colon; the cancellation of the contracts with the Pacific Mail Steamship company and the South American lines and the opening of the ports of Colon and Panama to all steamship lines on equal terms, and in certain contingencies the establishment by the railroad of steamship lines between Colon and gulf ports and Panama and important United States Pacific coast ports. It is also recommended that in traffic connections American steamship lines be favored as far as consistent with the treaty obligations of the United States.

Mr. Bristow spent several months in his investigation. His report reviews the entire history of the railroad and discusses allegations that its local freight and passenger charges were excessive and its traffic contracts with steamship lines monopolistic.

It would seem that the "color line" is not to be drawn in digging the ditch at Panama. The news that comes from the canal commission about the proposals to be made in the immediate future for supplying unskilled labor on the canal works, the invitation to be extended to 2000 each of Japanese, Chinese and Italian laborers, has caused some comment.

The commission is careful to add, lest native American labor become apprehensive, that these foreign workingmen, who are considered good enough to do the national work, and who, it is hoped, will succeed where Americans have proved unsuccessful, will not be allowed to enter the United States. Since recent reports from the isthmus of sickness and unsanitary living conditions have been spread throughout the country the cry that only American labor must be employed in digging the waterway has died away to nothing.

It is not expected that the present plan to get Chinese, Japanese and Italians will be met with the same fury of opposition as was the "tentative proposal" of the administration to buy ships and supplies in the cheapest markets of the world. There is a vast difference between sending down protected machinery and securing American protected labor to man it after it reaches the digging. It is becoming to be realized that if the canal is to be cut in any reasonable time, almost any laborers who are willing to endure the hardships and the climate must be accepted.

The phrase in the commission's formal announcement of the future proposals stating that the groups of laborers are "to be delivered" on the isthmus, is regarded as rather unfortunate. It does not sound pleasantly in American ears because of its indefinite suggestion of a padrone system.

Declined Tug's Assistance

Halifax, July 11.—Captain Olsen and the other officers of the Norwegian steamer Salerno were exonerated from blame by the admiralty court which has been investigating the loss of the vessel near Herring Cove, but Olsen, is criticised for declining the offer of assistance from a tug after the vessel struck.

General Blackmar Laid Up

Boise, Ida., July 11.—Commander-in-Chief Blackmar of the G. A. R., who arrived here last night, is sick. The doctor is unable to determine whether the illness will be serious, but says that it is unlikely that Blackmar will be out to participate in the program arranged in his honor.

New England Not Well Represented

Washington, July 11.—Official announcement is made at the navy department of the 24 successful candidates in the examination for assistant paymasters. They represent 15 states, the single one from New England being Eugene H. Douglass of Massachusetts.

Submarine Deep In Mud

Bizerta, Tunis, July 11.—The sunken French submarine boat Farfadet is now embedded in mud for two-thirds of her length and is gradually being engulfed. The divers are working waist deep in mud.

Failure of Labrador Fishery

St. Johns, July 11.—The Labrador fishery is reported to be a complete failure, owing to immense ice floes blockading the coast fleet of over 200 schooners, which are unable to get north of Hamilton inlet.

SEASON'S HEAT RECORD

Six Fatal Prostrations and a Death From Lightning

Boston, July 11.—The crest of the most intense heat wave of the season passed over New England yesterday, leaving behind it many victims. Exhausted humanity was revived toward night by a clear, cool northwester. Six deaths from the heat were reported from New England points, while there were probably 10 times as many more prostrations, some of which may have a similar result. The dead from the heat are as follows:

John J. Fogarty, Boston; Levi A. Bouley, Nashua, N. H.; John Dailey, Worcester, Mass.; Joseph A. Guishanan, Hartford; Austin J. Reade, Bridgeport, Conn.; Chester D. Ryder, Lowell.

As usual, thunder showers were frequent. At Medway, Mass., James Jays, 15 years old, was killed by lightning.

As on Sunday, Boston proved to be the hottest place in New England, the thermometer reaching 93 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. From that time the mercury gradually receded until at 6 o'clock a change in wind and a slight shower sent it down quite rapidly, a drop of nearly 20 degrees being recorded within two hours. Welcome changes of a similar character were reported from all other points where the heat had been intense during the day.

At Marlboro lightning crippled the telephone service for a few hours, and one young woman was affected by lightning. The electric car service was deranged for a short time.

It is not anticipated that the cool wave will be of any great duration, as the thermometer is rising quite rapidly west of the lakes.

Rain Drove Soldiers to Cover

Westfield, Mass., July 11.—A violent thunderstorm interfered with the militia maneuvers at Camp Bartlett yesterday afternoon. General Miles had the entire strength of the state soldiery encamped on the parade ground for the purpose of attempting a flank movement on a supposed enemy. When the storm broke, however, the recall was sounded, sending the infantry at double-quick to their quarters, while the artillerymen kept up a steady fire on the hypothetical enemy.

Jewelry Thieves In Custody

Boston, July 11.—Frank and Elizabeth Kiley, who were arrested here on the charge of the larceny of thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry from S. Nathan, a wholesale dealer of New York, were taken to New York last evening by officers of the New York police. The alleged stolen property had been identified by Nathan.

Fire Threatened Maine Town

Bangor, Me., July 11.—Absence of wind and hard work by firemen saved half of the town of Passadumkeag from destruction by a fire which burned a sawmill and caused an estimated loss of $30,000. Assistance was sent from this city. About 60 men were employed in the mill. The origin of the fire is not known.

Connecticut Town Suffers

New Milford, Conn., July 11.—This town was visited by a terrific wind storm, accompanied by thunder, lightning and hail. Hailstones as large as marbles fell for several minutes. The wind tore the roof off a grain and flour warehouse and 1000 bags of grain and a large amount of flour was destroyed.

Gibson Located In Texas

Providence, July 11.—The Providence police have received a telegram from Houston, Tex., stating that Percy B. Gibson, a prominent young man of this city, who disappeared on June 14, has been located in that place. When Gibson left home he said he was going to his summer cottage in Marion, Mass.

Bay State Strike Statistics

Boston, July 11.—The state bureau of statistics of labor reports that there were in this commonwealth 65 strikes and lockouts during the six months ending April 30, 1905. In 27 cases the strikes failed, in 14 cases they were successful, while in 16 instances there was a compromise.

Strike Over an Interpreter

Nashua, N. H., July 11.—Because of the discharge of an interpreter at the factory of the New England Counter company, 75 Greeks employed there have struck. After going out they created such a disturbance about the factory that the police were forced to disperse them.

Goes to Connecticut Prison

Boston, July 11.—Gus Lee, a sailor on the cruiser West Virginia, has been ordered to the prison at Wethersfield, Conn., to serve a term of five years for the killing of a fellow seaman on board the cruiser. Lee was tried by court martial and found guilty of manslaughter.

Life Preserver Was No Good

Portland, Me., July 11.—John Smith, 17 years old, and several playmates went bathing in a pond in Calvary cemetery. He was equipped with an old life preserver, which failed to prevent him from sinking when he got into deep water and he was drowned.

Decorator Falls to Death

Bangor, Me., July 11.—Thomas F. Dyer of Boston, a decorator, was instantly killed by the giving way of a staging in the First Congregational church. He fell 20 feet, breaking his neck. He was 45 years old and leaves a wife and four children.

Smith Charged With Murder

Boston, July 11.—Frank Smith, a negro, was arraigned in the municipal criminal court, charged with the murder of Victor Davis, another negro, in Washington street. Smith was held without bail to await the action of the August grand jury.

A SENSE OF RELIEF

France and Germany Agree on Moroccan Conference

OPEN DOOR MAINTAINED

Checks Prospective Break-Up of Sultan's Tottering Monarchy and Its Subdivision Among the Various European Powers

Paris, July 11.—Premier Rouvier's announcement in the chamber of deputies of the terms of agreement between France and Germany concerning Morocco brings a deep sense of relief to the entire country, after many weeks of tension which many persons believed involved the possibilities of war.

The text of the notes fully confirms the general impression relative to the lines of the negotiations. Germany's contention for a conference receives the final adherence of France, but Rouvier has secured the safeguards which he insisted were indispensable. The most important of these safeguards is that the conference shall not convey any prejudice to the Anglo-French or Franco-Spanish ententes. While Germany does not specifically assent to these agreements, she formally withholds dissent. This is considered an important gain for France over the ambiguous position Germany heretofore occupied, and as both the Anglo-French and Franco-Spanish ententes recognize France's "privileged" position in Morocco, France emerges from the negotiations with this privileged position still intact.

Both countries agree as to the sovereignty of the sultan, the independence of Morocco and the open door without inequality. This has always been the policy of both governments, so neither can claim victory in this respect. At the same time, it gives a new lease of existence to Morocco and appears to put at an end the prospective break-up of the sultan's tottering monarchy and its subdivision among the European powers. On the other hand, the agreement recognizes France's special interest in the country, due to the geographical proximity of Algiers, and its right thereby to police the frontier and maintain peace and order.

It is pointed out that the Sultan of Morocco's position is weakened by the negotiations, as he will no longer have representatives of the various powers pleading for favor, since the entire question regulating Morocco is now practically taken out of his hands for determination elsewhere.

Following Rouvier's presentation of the notes to the chamber of deputies, efforts were made to interpellate him in the premises. These, however, were not pressed, the feeling being generally in favor of supporting the premier's adjustment of the matter.

The newspapers, with few exceptions, express satisfaction that the controversy has terminated, and consider that Rouvier secured an admirable result, when the difficulty of the negotiations is considered.

Thirty-Nine Miners Entombed

Dortmund, Prussia, July 11.—A fire has broken out in the Borussia coal mine, caused by the careless handling of a lamp. The lamp exploded, igniting the timbers of the shaft. Many miners escaped through an air-shaft, but 39 were cut off and their death is regarded as a certainty. Great crowds of women and children are standing about the mine, hoping for the rescue of husbands and fathers.

FALL OF SAKHALIN

Japs Hold Island Which They Once Relinquished

REPORT OF OPERATIONS

No Resistance to Landing of Marines, Who Were Relieved by the Army--Russians In No Position to Contest Occupation

Tokio, July 11.—The announcement of a landing of a Japanese force at Sakhalin island and the occupation of Korsakovsk, followed by the northern flight of the garrison, has been received with great satisfaction by the Japanese.

The landing of the army at Sakhalin marks the first entry of the Japanese upon Russian territory proper. The Japanese have expressed themselves pleased to be again in possession of the island, declaring that they have long felt that the bargain under which they relinquished the place 40 years ago was unsatisfactory.

The Japanese express the belief that they will speedily control the entire island, as they regard the garrison there as being incapable of serious resistance, and are confident that it will certainly be captured.

Admiral Kataoka reports under date of July 7 as follows: "My squadron went north and, acting in conformity with a prearranged plan, landed marines on July 7 at a point previously chosen. There was no resistance and a portion of our army had already been landed."

Under date of July 8, Kataoka reports: "One of our tropedo destroyers reports on the afternoon of July 7 that Korsakovsk was burning. The forts previously shelled by the destroyers were then silent. Our army arrived at Yenguma on the afternoon of the 7th."

Under date of July 9, Kataoka says: "The squadron convoyed the transports through dense fogs on July 5. The fleet preserved good order and reached the point chosen for concentration on the evening of July 7. The fleet anchored and the work of sweeping the sea of dangerous obstacles was completed. The transports were led in gradually. The warships lowered launches and assisted in landing troops, guardships protecting the operation.

"Admiral Dewa reported that his division had reached the landing place at 6 in the morning and a landing was effected. A reconnaissance was conducted, but no defenses were found. Only three guards were discovered. The flotilla engaged in sweeping the sea for dangerous obstacles encountered heavy currents, but speedily pressed the work. A portion of the squadron and the transports were led through the cleared space and marines were landed from the combined division. Later the army relieved the marines. Our sweeping division was suddenly shelled from the hills south of Kosakovsk. The cruiser Akagi was also exposed to the fire, but the sweeping was concluded without damage.

"The army reported by wireless on July 8 that Korsakovsk had been taken. Our flags are visible at several points. We were apprehensive on account of the weather, but the work of the fleet was successfully accomplished. Admiral Nakao reconnoitred in the vicinity of the islands, but nothing unusual was discovered.

"Early on Saturday three warships and two destroyers were dispatched to Yensuma cape. Later a destroyer entered Relisei and was vigorously shelled by a field piece. We returned the fire and silenced the enemy's guns."

Russian Troops Will Clear Out

St. Petersburg, July 11.—Although 10 days have elapsed since Russia informed President Roosevelt of her willingness to conclude an armistice pending the result of the Washington conference, Japan, so far as known to the Russian government, has not deigned to reply to the president's communication.

When the question of an armistice was first broached by the president it is understood that Japan indicated that she would decline to agree to a suspension of hostilities until the plenipotentiaries met. Russia agreed in principle to this as the basis for negotiation. Since then the Russian government feels it has given ample proof of its desire to conclude peace and it is possible it may go a step further.

But the impression here is that, now that the Japanese have made a descent on the Island of Sakhalin, they are determined to get the island firmly in their grasp before the negotiations begin. This is an easy task, as the small Russian force on the island is in no position to contest its occupation. In addition to marines and infantry the Japanese landed artillery and cavalry. The latter are moving rapidly north. The presumption here is that the Russian troops will clear out without fighting, crossing to Alexandrovsk on the mainland.

Firing Squad Killed Officers

London, July 11.—The Morning Post, from private sources, gives an account of the recent outbreak at Libau, according to which the first naval mutiny led to 23 men being condemned to death. The attempt to carry out the sentences of death provoked still more serious signs of mutiny, whereupon the port commander ordered the executions to be stopped and applied to St. Petersburg for instructions. The government replied that all the mutineers must be shot and a shooting party was formed, but when the order to fire was given the firing squad turned and fired on the officers instead, and a dozen officers fell dead. Other troops, including Cossacks, the account says, were summoned, and a serious conflict developed in which between 20 and 30 Cossacks were killed before the mutiny was quelled.

Proclamations In Shells

Sipinghai, Manchuria, July 11.—The news of the mutiny in the Black sea reached the Russian army through the Japanese, who fired night shells charged with proclamations conveying the information into the Russian advanced posts, scattering the proclamations broadcast. Rain is falling in torrents and all activity at the front has ceased.

Odessa Fire Cost $20,000,000

Odessa, July 11.—The question of insurance on property lost by fire in the harbor during the recent disturbances is occasioning serious disputes between the Russian and the foreign insurance companies. The foreign corporations declare that they will make claims against the Russian government. The total losses are estimated at $20,000,000.

Treated as Mutineers

Sebastopol, July 11.—The Russian torpedo boat No. 267, which declined to surrender to the Roumanian government with the Kniaz Potemkine, declaring that she had not mutinied, but had been forced to follow the mutinous battleship, has arrived here. The members of her crew were arrested.

Place For Peace Negotiations

Washington, July 11.—Japan and Russia, without any prompting by this government, have agreed upon the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard as the place for holding the peace negotiations. The conference will take place in a new government building, just completed, on the island which lies in the Piscataqua river, between Portsmouth and the navy yard.

Civilians and Soldiers In Conflict

Havana, July 11.—A fight here at 3 o'clock last night between soldiers and civilians was broken up by the police, who arrested several from both sides. A company of soldiers was sent at 11 o'clock for the purpose of restoring order, but on seeing a wounded comrade in the hands of the police the soldiers mutinied, firing on a police sergeant and knocking down a policeman with the butt end of a rifle. Other policemen appeared and the soldiers began deliberately to fire with Mausers. One person was killed, two mortally wounded and a score of persons slightly wounded.

Cuban Bandits' Bold Work

Santiago, Cuba, July 11.—Julian Cendoya, a wealthy American banker and agent of the Ward line, while dining with his family at his home across the bay, was attacked by eight bandits, who presented a written demand for $30,000 and seized Cendoya as a hostage until the amount should be paid. Cendoya agreed to pay $2000 and the bandits withdrew. Cendoya later came to the city and secured the money, which he turned over to the bandits at a rendezvous in the bay.

Lord Roberts' Plain Talk

London, July 11.—Field Marsnal Lord Roberts created a sensation in the house of lords last evening, when he deliberately expressed his opinion that the military force of Great Britain was inadequate, imperfectly trained and totally unfit to uphold Great Britain as a first-class power. Lord Roberts did not blame the government, but he scathingly attacked the people of England who, he said, showed no national feeling toward the military until danger arose.

An Official Congratulation

Stockholm, July 11.—An elaborate court of congratulation for Prince Gustavus Adolphus, son of the crown prince, and his bride followed a levee held at the palace. Afterwards the royal party drove in state through the city. This was King Oscar's first state appearance in public since the disruption of the union of Sweden and Norway, and he was given a great ovation.

Fire Creeps Toward Observatory

San Jose, Cal., July 11.—Mountain forest fires are threatening Lick observatory on Mount Hamilton. The professors at the observatory have asked that the governor call out the militia to fight the flames. The fire is now within eight miles of the observatory and the flames are making rapid progress toward the summit of the mountain.

Duel Spectator Killed

New York, July 11.—During a pistol duel over a game of pool in a saloon in Johnson street, Brooklyn, between John Thomas and John Shepard, Frank Scofield, an innocent bystander, was shot through the head and instantly killed. Having emptied their pistols, the two combatants fled.

Danish Prince Offered Throne

London, July 11.—The Standard's Christiania correspondent says the Norwegian throne has been offered to Prince Charles of Denmark, second son of Crown Prince Frederick. Prince Charles is the husband of Princess Maud Alexandra of Great Britain.

Monkeyed With Dynamite

New York, July 11.—A crowd of Italian boys found a handful of fulminating caps last night, bit off the ends of the cartridges and poured the dynamite into a tin can. Nichola Parrello dropped a lighted match in the can and in an instant there was an explosion. Fifteen boys who had formed a circle around Parrello were flung in every direction and all were hurt by flying bits of the can and earth. Parrello's leg and chest were badly torn by fragments of the can. He may not recover.

Chicago Jewelers Flimflammed

Chicago, July 11.—By means of stolen postoffice money order blanks, W. A. Maxwell has succeeded, it is alleged, in defrauding five Chicago jewelry firms out of diamonds valued at $800. Each of the orders was filled out for $100 and sent to a jewelry house with a note attached asking that a diamond ring be sent to a given address. Eight rings had been delivered before the fraud was discovered.

Irish to Lose Seats In Commons

London, July 11.—The government's proposals for the re-distribution of seats were issued last night. Roughly, the idea is to give one member for every 65,000 of population, thereby abolishing the constituencies having populations under that figure. The effect of the proposals will be a gain of 17 seats to England, one seat to Wales and four seats to Scotland, and a loss of 22 seats to Ireland.

"Exclusion Law a Farce"

Detroit, July 11.—In his annual address delivered at the convention of the International Longshoremen, Marine and Transport Workers' association, President Keefe characterized the Chinese exclusion law as a farce, insofar as the protection of American labor is concerned. He said that any Chinaman who wishes cannot be excluded when he desires to enter the United States.

Numerous Heat Prostrations

New York, July 11.—Ten deaths and more than two score cases of prostration resulted from the continuance yesterday of the wave of intense heat. A grateful breeze from the sea served in a measure to temper the torrid temperature and excessive humidity, but the suffering, especially in the swarming tenement house quarters, was intense.

Looking After the Future

Washington, July 11.—About 200 government employes last night organized the United States Employes' Retirement association, whose object is to aid in devising measures for the retirement at half pay of aged or disabled persons who have rendered not less than 20 years' faithful service to the government.

Cassini Affected by Heat

New York, July 11.—Count Cassini, the retiring Russian ambassador, was made ill by the heat in his apartments at the Waldorf-Astoria. He was under a physician's care for several hours, but felt so much better in the evening that he was able to attend the dinner given in his honor by the Brazilian minister.

Attorney's "Honor" Vindicated

Panama, July 11.—A duel with swords was fought by Eusebio Morales, an attorney, formerly fiscal agent of the United States at Panama, and Julio Arjona, a newspaper man. The trouble arose out of the publication of an article by Arjona reflecting on Morales. Arjona was slightly wounded.

The boiler at Couch's sawmill at Golightly, Ala., exploded, killing three men. The mill was wrecked.

Paxinosa inn, a famous summer resort hotel on the summit of Weygadt mountain, near Easton, Pa., was destroyed by fire. The loss is $150,000.

HENRY HUDSON.

Born No One Knows Where and Died No One Knows How.

Hudson must have been at least forty when he died, but nothing is known of his life before the last four years of it. A certain Henry Herdson, or Hudson, alderman of London and one of the founders of the Muscovy company, has been suggested as his grandfather, and the relationship is the more likely because it is certain that some of his name and kin were interested in the company. It may have been upon their recommendation that he was first appointed to the command of a ship in the company's service in 1607. Of his early training and previous voyages nothing is known. The beginning of his history is as mysterious as its end. He was born no one knows where, and he died no one knows how. He comes into our knowledge on the quarter deck of a ship bound for the pole; he goes out of it in a crazy boat manned by eight sick men, and so fades away into the dim haze that hangs about the desolate ice floes.

The four voyages of Hudson of which we have record were not directed to absolutely unknown waters, but the observations made by his precursors were so untrustworthy that they were of little service except to mislead him. The object of his first voyage in the service of the Muscovy company was "to discover the pole and to sail across it to the islands of Spicery or Cathay," and on April 19, 1607, he, with John Hudson, his son, sixteen years old, and the ten men who made up the crew of the Hopeful, took the sacrament together at St. Ethelburga's, in Bishopsgate, "purposing to go to sea four days after." In the following year Hudson sailed again, still in the service of the company. They reached the Lofoden isles in a month and rounded the North cape on June 1. A fortnight later they encountered one of those wonders of the deep which the seamen of that time were so often privileged to witness and describe on June 15.

"One of our company, looking overboard, saw a mermaid. Calling up some of the company to see her, one more came up, and by that time she was close to the ship's side, looking earnestly on the men. A little after a sea came up and overturned her. From the navel upward her back and breasts were like a woman (as they say that saw her); her body was as big as one of us; her skin very white, and long hair hanging down behind, of color, black. In her going down they saw her tail, which was like the tail of a porpoise and speckled like a mackerel. Their names that saw her were Thomas Hilles and Robert Rayner."

The only really incredible part of the story is that no more than two men thought it worth while to go on deck to look at her.—W. J. Fletcher in Macmillan's Magazine.

Forced Liberality.

It is not often miserliness gets such a straightforward rebuke as in the case quoted by the Montclair Times. In the early days of primitive Methodism there traveled in England an eccentric minister named Neale, who was famous for his plain talking. On one occasion he was preaching missionary sermons at a village so noted for its small collections that he determined to pass the plate himself.

On his round he came to a farmer who was, as Mr. Neale well knew, the richest man in the place. This individual placed a penny on the plate. Mr. Neale stopped immediately and said in a loud voice:

"Take your penny out, man, take it out! Don't you see you've covered up your laborer's sixpence?"

The rebuke was effectual, and a much more valuable coin was placed on the plate.

Cloves.

From Java, Sumatra, Mauritius, Zanzibar and Guiana come the little brown flower buds of the clove tree. When gathered the buds are red and are dried by exposure to the smoke of wood fires and afterward by the rays of the sun. In a very short time they become of a deep brown color. To secure a monopoly and thus keep up the price the Dutch in the seventeenth century destroyed all their clove trees except those in the island of Amboyna. The chief value of cloves lies in their essential oil, which forms about one-sixth of their whole weight.

Good Stage Elocution.

It was one of Joseph Jefferson's distinctions that he was not only an advocate, but an example, of good stage elocution. He was, however, an exception that proved the rule. The first step toward a better state of affairs is to convince managers and actors that it is desirable. With the memory of many a bad quarter hour of strained effort to hear what should be apprehended with ease, we respectfully submit this word of suggestion.—Century.

Its Exact Shade.

The elder Dumas once was wearing the ribbon of a certain order, having recently been made a commandant, and an envious friend remarked upon it. "My dear fellow," he said, "that cordon is a wretched color! One would think it was your woolen vest that was showing." "Oh, no, my dear D'E——," replied Dumas, with a smile, "you're mistaken. It's not a bad color; it is exactly the shade of the sour grapes in the fable."

Possible.

She—And do you think it's possible for a man to love two girls at the same time? He—Oh, yes; provided it isn't also at the same place.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Remember that what you believe will depend very much upon what you are. —Noah Porter.

The Rev. John Scott

[Copyright, 1905, by Robert McClure.]

No matter what sort of business my employers were engaged in or the firm name. It is sufficient to say that I was a trusted collector, and once a month I made a round of about fifty customers and turned in from $15,000 to $20,000.

On one occasion I had a railroad journey of a hundred miles to make, and I would arrive home before 9 o'clock in the evening. It had always been that way, and the watchman was instructed to let me into the office in order that I might deposit the money in the safe. I took a glance at my fellow passengers as I entered the car, and I found no cause for suspicion. Indeed, in my car there were only half a dozen people, and three of them were women. One of the three men was an old man, and I spotted him for a clergyman at once. He had a seat quite a distance away, and after about half an hour I took a second look at him, and he beckoned me to come over. He made a place for me to sit beside him and opened the conversation by asking:

"Young man, I want to ask you if you are a resident of Blankville?"

"I am, sir," I replied.

"Then you can do an old man a favor, if you will. I am not only an old man, but very lame to boot. My name is John Scott—the Rev. John Scott—although I retired from active work some years ago. I presume you are well acquainted with your city."

"Fairly well, sir, and I shall be glad to oblige you in any way I can."

"Thanks. I knew I could not be mistaken in you. It is this I want to ask: How far is Butternut street from the depot?"

"Only two blocks away."

"And about where would No. 224 be?"

"Not over three blocks away," I replied, after a little thought.

"That is well. The street, as I have been told, is respectable?"

"Oh, yes. The residents are mostly working people, but it is a nice street.

"You don't happen to know a machinist living at 224—a man named Barrow?"

"No, sir."

"Well, no harm done. I don't know him, either, but shall make his acquaintance this evening. I had a son die in South Africa three years ago, and this Mr. Barrow was with him and has written me that he can give me full particulars. He is to meet me at the depot and put me up for the night. Poor Harry! He was my only son, sir. He went off there to seek his fortune, and was killed by the natives. You are not a father and you don't know what it means for one to lose his only child.

I assured him of my sympathy, and as a matter of fact I did feel sorry when I saw his chin quivering.

"Oh, well, it is a cross I am called upon to bear," he said after a time. "The Lord gives and the Lord takes away. Are you a member of any church, may I ask?"

"Not as yet, sir."

"But you believe in the Christian doctrine, I hope?"

"I certainly do."

"Well, let me trust that in time you will see your way clear to ally yourself to some church. Religion asks nothing of any man he cannot grant, and you do not know what a consolation it is in time of trouble."

Later on he told me something of his history, and I learned that he had been a great exhorter in his time, and had been the means of leading thousands into the true path. We fell to discussing Biblical questions, and I was surprised and pleased at the extent of his knowledge and the keenness of his arguments. I offered to withdraw several times, thinking I might weary him, but he overruled me, and so I rode the whole distance in his company. He did not ask my business or other impertinent questions, but seemed perfectly satisfied with what I told him.

When we at last reached the end of our journey I felt it no more than common politeness to offer my arm to help him out of the car. He accepted it, and when he rose up he placed a crutch under the other and moved painfully along. He had already told me that his complaint was sciatic rheumatism and that he was just now suffering from a periodical attack. He had said that Mr. Barrow was to meet him. No such person was there. When we were satisfied of this the reverend gentleman said:

"He may have made a mistake about the time, or something has happened to detain him. Would it be asking too much of one who has already favored me to ask that you walk to the corner with me? I shall be indeed grateful."

Why not? Any man would have done so. We set out at a slow pace, and I afterward remembered that all the hacks were gone before we left the platform, nor did I notice a policeman about. The two blocks to Butternut street were occupied by lumber yards and factories which were closed at that hour. In going a block and a half we did not meet a single person. Then we halted and the Rev. Mr. Scott said:

"I will change the crutch under the other arm, please."

He stepped back of me to make the change, and the next thing I knew he had his arm around my neck, his knee in the small of my back and was doing the garrote in first class shape. I was found half an hour later by a pedestrian and removed to the hospital, and it was two weeks before I was able to crawl out. It was a put up job to get my money, and the $16,000 I had in my pocket was duly transferred. We had the police on the case for a full year, but they never spotted off anybody who resembled the slick garroter within forty rods.

Japanese Painting.

The Japanese, with their natural, unsophisticated view of life, have ever sought in their art to mirror what a great painter and critic has termed "men's primordial predilections." Art, however, that seeks to embody pleasures founded on the unchanging properties of human nature must have a past as well as a future, must be able to look backward as well as forward. Not one's life labor, but that of many generations, is required. No people have better understood this than the Japanese. They have also clearly perceived that no art that is not true to the changeless element in man can endure, while, on the other hand, any subject, however trivial, can be made eternally attractive if only treated in accordance with aesthetic law.

Japanese painting delights us by its delicate fancy, its poetry, its freedom, its spirit, but what gives these qualities special and enduring charm, what makes the play of fancy never wearisome, the liberty never mere license, is that they find expression in and through a framework of design so finely conceived that in it we see reflected as in a mirror the fundamental principles which govern all true art.—W. M. Cabot in Atlantic.

Power of Fashion.

Though we can neither tell whence fashion comes, nor how, nor what it will do next, nor why it was yesterday one thing, today is something else and tomorrow will be different, nor why it always has been, is now and probably always will be obeyed, it moves steadily forward into that realm of common sense where beauty and utility blend in perfect harmony and ever keeps step with the progress of civilization and culture. No garment can please the man of refined and cultivated taste, however correct it may be in fit, however well it may be tailored or however excellent the materials may be of which it is made, unless it is fashionable, even though it violates no law of art and of itself is a thing of beauty, for without that indescribable something that only fashion can give it is like a flower without fragrance or a tune without music.—Sartorial Art Journal.

Two Tales of Macready.

It is not always well to strut and fret one's little hour upon the stage too realistically. Macready, who threw himself into his acting heart and soul, used to tell funny stories about the effect of his easy, colloquial manner upon the players collected for his company in small provincial towns. Once in the play of "William Tell" he turned to one of these stupid rustics and put the question, "Do you shoot?" so naturally that the man was quite thrown off his guard, and, to his horror, replied, "A little, sir, but I've never had a go with one of them crossbows." Another time in "Virginius" he asked, "Do you wait for me to lead Virginia in, or will you do so?" only to be greeted unexpectedly by the actor who played Icilius with, "Why, really, sir, I don't care; just as you do it in London."

Sennit.

In Polynesia and the Pacific islands generally the outer husk of the cocoa nut is braided into strands of uniform texture, known to the natives as sennit and used by them for a variety of purposes. The framework of their houses is held together by braided sennit, and the strakes of their boats are united by it. It is the staple from which string is made to bind the adze blade to its handle and to tie the different parts of their implements securely together. In short, whatever things are nailed or screwed or pegged or glued in other lands are tied together with sennit by the south sea islander.

One Legged Dinner Party.

A certain gentleman, the possessor of a cork leg, living in one of the London suburbs annually gives a dinner to a dozen owners of a like substitute. In the center of the table are grouped four crutches, around which twine festoons of flowers; miniature legs in ivory compose the handles of the knives and forks, while the piece de resistance is invariably a magnificent turkey that has been deprived of a leg before being brought to table.

English Fish Laws.

Fish, because of its tendency rapidly to decompose, holds a peculiar position among foods. In England it is the subject of a special act of parliament. So long ago as 1698 men knew the evil consequences resulting from eating mackerel of uncertain post mortem age, so they passed an act providing that except during the hours of divine service this fish could be sold on Sunday. That act has never been repealed.

Making It Plain.

Sapleigh—Oh, I say, Miss Hammerton, why is it that you are always out when I call? Miss Hammerton—Because I'm foolish, I suppose. Sapleigh—I—er—beg pardon! Miss Hammerton—Well, you know the old saying, "A fool for luck."

Sleep.

If the muscles are not tired, there cannot be a full demand for sleep, unless, of course, the brain has been overworked. Healthy bodily exercise, carried to the point of rendering rest sweetly welcome, is one natural means of promoting sleep.

Won Over.

Lawyer—I'll be frank with you. You can't break your father's will. Client—I'll be frank with you. I can't pay you unless it can be broken. Lawyer—I'll go you one better. We'll break that will.—Cleveland Leader.

A DELICATE TASK

Judge Calhoun to Investigate Venezuelan Affairs

MISSION IS CONFIDENTIAL

Will Find Out Just What Differences Are Between Venezuela and Other Nations So Far as They Affect Us

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 12.—The following official announcement is made:

"The president has appointed W. J. Calhoun of Chicago special commissioner to Venezuela. The president has been familiar with Calhoun's services in connection with the report on Cuba, which he made for President McKinley's private information, and has also known of his work as interstate commerce commissioner. He has been designated as special commissioner to examine fully into the situation in Venezuela and report to the president exactly what the differences are between Venezuela and the United States and Venezuela and other foreign powers, and also to what has been arranged for the other foreign powers that in anyway conflicts with the interests of the United States. He is also to examine, although necessarily in a rather general way, into the complaint made by American companies as to the conduct of the Venezuelan government and report to the president exactly as to what the equities are in these cases."

Judge Calhoun will make no inquiries relating to the Bowen-Loomis case. The president regards that as practically a closed incident. Judge Calhoun visited visited President Roosevelt about 10 days ago. The president at that time tendered him this appointment and shortly afterward he indicated his acceptance of it.

The investigation which he is to make is not strictly defined by his instructions, but he is to go thoroughly into all phases of the Venezuelan matters, so far as they may affect the interests of the United States. His mission is in a nature confidential and his report on it will be made directly to the president. What disposition the president will make of the report cannot be foretold. He may authorize its publication, but the probability is that he will treat it as President McKinley treated that of Judge Calhoun on Cuba.

Double Tragedy in Crowded Store

Atlantic City, N. J., July 12.—Murder and suicide ended the lives of Edward O. Doughty and Miss Mela S. Clyde. Doughty, the murderer, who was insanely jealous of the woman, met her walking with a man on the street and, after upbraiding Miss Clyde, drew a revolver and chased her into a crowded store. The woman was shot to death as she crouched behind a counter. Doughty then shot himself, dying instantly.

Killed Sister-in-Law's Assailant

Jackson, Miss., July 12.—Davis Collins, a negro who was convicted of attempted criminal assault on Miss Hogg and was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary, was killed on the way to prison by Mr. Dickey, a brother-in-law of Miss Hogg. Dickey walked into the coach where an officer was sitting with the prisoner and fired three shots into the negro's body. Death was instantaneous. Dickey surrendered.

Held For Court In Washington

Boston, July 12.—Charles C. May, the western bank president who was arrested in Boston a few days ago on the charge of misapplying the funds of the Big Bend National bank of Davenport, Wash., was arraigned before Judge Dodge and held for the September term of the federal court at Tacoma, Wash. He renewed the bail of $5000 in which he was held at a previous hearing.

ADAMS---ROOSEVELT.

The Quincy President "the Scholar in Politics."

[July 11, 1767—Feb. 23, 1848]

The Boston Transcript compares President Adams and President Roosevelt as follows:

Certain of President Roosevelt's qualifications for his high office were duplicated most closely by John Quincy Adams of all his predecessors. Adams from youth prepared for a civic career; he had an affluent and cultured environment; he knew history and literature; and he had the academic stamp of Harvard University, and for a time was a professor there. To a degree not equalled in the earlier history of the country and not duplicated until the present Administration, he was "the scholar in politics."

In diplomatic experience prior to assuming the duties of Secretary of State, which he filled with consummate ability, he was preeminent among all who have filled that post, not even Mr. Hay having had any such training as Adams had at the courts of the Netherlands, Prussia, Russia and England.

With the new definitions of the Monroe Doctrine and the increase of our power and responsibility in the States of Central and South America, which the last decade has brought, Adams's paternity of what has usually been credited to Monroe has been made clearer, and his foresight and courage as a statesman has been recognized more adequately, though there yet is chance for a very much wider and truer apprehension of his merits by his countrymen.

He deserves more study also because of his example as an ex-President. We wonder what Mr. Roosevelt will do when his term of office is over, and he a comparatively young man. It is suggested that he become president of Harvard University or mayor of New York city. It is far more likely that he will do as Mr. Adams did than that he will settle down to private life as Mr. Cleveland has in Princeton, N. J.

Mr. Adams when defeated for a second term by Jackson thought it not beneath him to enter Congress from Massachusetts, and from 1831 to 1848 he served his native State and the nation with a wisdom which was the fruit of his experience as Chief Magistrate, as well as of his native talent and culture.

The most glorious chapter of his personal history was his defence while in Congress of the rights of petition and free speech, and his sturdy championship of the Abolitionists whose radicalism was so unlike the Whig opportunism of Adams's party supporters.

Mr. Roosevelt, as senator from New York State, might give the Empire State a standing in the Senate which it cannot have as at present represented, and might aid in carrying into effect policies which in the very nature of the case he can only initiate, not complete, during the single term of office to which he is pledged.

LIKED TO GO FAST.

Miss Underwood Enjoyed Steamboat Ride on Puget Sound.

Tomorrow and for the balance of the week the Herald teachers will be at the World's Fair at Portland, Oregon.

A special dispatch to the Herald dated at Victoria, B. C., on Tuesday, says:

Puget sound was the keynote of today's journeyings of The Herald teachers, and the extraordinary luck attending the tour followed them on the water. "Verily," said one with mock obeisance, "everything cometh our way." No rain had troubled them; it was cool when the rest of the world sweltered, and today on what is usually a fairly rough bit of water the sun was bright, the water like a mill pond and the steamer Princess Victoria, the fastest passenger steamer in the world, swept The Herald party through an ideal marine view at a 19-knot rate.

Thirty insatiable notebooks were flashed out as an officer explained that all C. P. R. coast steamers were named Princess and the ocean steamers Empresses. He had not been warned in advance, and was glad to escape after he had a response to the teachers' cross-questioning stating that the boat that they were on had 6000 horsepower and could go 23 knots an hour.

He was wheedled into a promise to show this speed just once, and he kept it, or at least the boat fairly whizzed for a little while through the widest reach of the sound. Even the venerable Miss Underwood, who was taking her first steamer ride anywhere, approved of this, and is now curious about flying machines.

Nobody was sick but the younger section of the party, who spent the afternoon perched among the anchors forward, are wondering when the sunburn they have will heal.

George A. Sproul Dead.

Mr. George A. Sproul of South Braintree died at his home there last evening. He was one of the oldest residents of the town, his age being 88 years. Mr. Sproul leaves a widow and one son, Mr. A. E. Sproul of this city. Deceased had resided in South Braintree for half a century. He had the respect of all who knew him, for his sterling qualities. Mr. Sproul had been in failing health for a long time.

Hospital Aid Association.

At a special meeting of the Hospital Aid Association held Tuesday afternoon in the Unitarian chapel, it was voted that a committee be appointed by the secretary to prepare a letter expressing to the president, Mrs. Joseph C. Morse, the sympathy of the organization in her recent severe bereavement; that a copy be sent to the family, spread upon the records and published in the local papers.

The following named ladies served as committee: Mrs. Walter F. Babcock, Mrs. David L. Jewell, Mrs. Annie E. Faxon, Mrs. Thomas Fenno, and Mrs. John W. Sanborn, who report as follows:

The Hospital Aid Association desires to express to its president, Mrs. Morse, its tender sympathy in the great and sudden bereavement which has come to her.

The circumstances of her sad loss touch us all very keenly. We enter not only individually into her sorrow but as an organization.

We feel that the work which we all have so much at heart has lost a most valuable friend and helper in the death of Mr. Morse.

We trust that in the future she may find comfort in the service to the sick and suffering to which this organization is pledged, and we promise in the future as in the past we will go with her hand in hand.

—Chauncey Depew is still a director in the Equitable Association. The trustees wish he would resign, but are afraid to ask him, although the testimony he gave to the Insurance Commissioner furnishes good ground for making the demand.—Lynn Item.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The Democrats are bearding Douglas in his halls at every opportunity, but he does not say he will retract his plea of not guilty, and run for governor once more. The diplomats of the party have been called into the life-and-death councils, and they are preparing elaborate talks filled with flattery and pleading which are calculated to turn almost any man's head, but even John R. Thayer is said to have given up hope that the governor will reconsider his refusal to again be the party Moses. The Democrats have set the price too high for the honor, hence their extra hard work in finding a willing candidate.—Worcester Telegram.

☞ Yes, the weather is of the warm variety.

It needs no thermometer other than your body to tell that. But if you were in doubt you could read it in the hot weather faces all about you.

The hot weather scowl!

Look at the faces. Perspiration stands out in beads. And clothes are sticky. And feet burn. The air is murky. And sweltering humanity wears a frowning visage. Brows are corrugated. Mouths droop at the corner. Eyes are glazed sullenly. Humanity gestures in dissent.

Look at the faces!

They are repellant countenances. You smile into them feebly and your smile fades as does a faint cooling breeze in the teeth of a sirocco. On every brow is a ready-to-burst thunder cloud. You lose your least tendency to look pleasant and your temperature goes up by notches. Presently you are a part of the scowling, dissatisfied mob. You have caught the hot weather face.

But hold on—

There's a face that is different. It is the face of a woman. She is disagreeably hot, like the others. Her face is undeniably red. But she is smiling! And her smile is like the glorious bursting of the sun from the surrounding clouds. It is the smile that won't come off.

What a handsome face!

And how ugly the other women are in comparison. To be sure they are good featured and formed and gowned, those others—

But—

They are spoiling themselves by the grudge they carry on their features. And the more they frown the hotter they get—and the uglier.

There's another face—a man's.

He perspires and smiles. He mops his face and his eyes twinkle. He radiates good humor. And he seems a mite cooler than the others. He really is cooler.

Certainly it is hot.

But there is no call to add mental to material warmth. A smile does not make the temperature a bit warmer. It may even cool things some.

Beware of the hot weather face.

Smile, brethren and sisters, smile. There's both religion and comfort in a smile.—Beverly Times.

P. O. Exhibit.

One of the most interesting displays at the Lewis & Clarke Exposition is made in the Government building by the Postoffice department. With the exception of a small semi-circular space, this exhibit occupies the entire west end of the main structure. Under the personal supervision of Stanley I. Stack, chief special agent of the postoffice department, the displays have been arranged to give an excellent idea of the United States mail service immediately after its inauguration, during the period intervening between then and now, and of its present high state of efficiency.

Prefect of Moscow Police Is Killed by a Petitioner

BULLETS WERE POISONED

Assassin of Official, Who Was Captured, Was Recently Arrested as a Political Suspect, but Escaped From the Police

Moscow, July 12.—Major General Count Shuvaloff, prefect of police here and formerly attached to the ministry of the interior, was assassinated while receiving petitions. One of the petitioners drew a revolver and fired five times at the prefect, who fell dead. The assassin was arrested.

One bullet wounded the count in the pericardium, another pierced his abdomen, a third hit him in the arm and the fourth in the shoulder, while the fifth bullet fired by the assassin struck the leg of an official who was standing near.

According to the physicians, the bullets were poisoned. The victim speedily lost consciousness and never spoke afterwards.

The assassin, who was dressed as a peasant, has not been identified. He was recently arrested as a political suspect, but escaped from the police station before his examination.

The assassin waited in the anteroom of the prefecture till the other petitioners had been received, and then, entering the audience room, he advanced toward Count Shuvaloff, firing five shots at close range.

A great crowd gathered in front of the house of Count Shuvaloff and made demonstrations to show its indignation and sorrow at the assassination of the prefect, who was very popular. There is much horror over the deed.

Count Shuvaloff owes his death to his custom of freely granting audiences to and receiving petitions from all classes.

Cannot Trust Russian Sailors

Kustenji, Roumania, July 12.—The Russian squadron seems to be delayed here, owing to the fear that another mutiny will break out should the vessels put to sea. The fact that 55 sailors from the Kniaz Potemkine who surrendered have been imprisoned on board the different vessels of the squadron awaiting trial for rebellion has caused intense indignation among the crews, and as a consequence there are fears of another mutiny.

Russia Wants to Get Mutineers

St. Petersburg, July 12.—The government will commence regular proceedings for the extradition of the crew of the Kniaz Potemkine as ordinary criminals. Roumania's promise to give the mutineers an asylum was made before Roumania had been apprised of other crimes committed by the Russian sailors.

KEEP YOUR HEAD UNCOVERED.

The Constant Wearing of a Hat Propogates Dandruff Germs.

There are many men who wear their hats practically all the time when awake, and are blessed with a heavy shock of hair; yet if the scalps of these same men once became infested with dandruff germs, the parasites would multiply all the quicker for lack of air. Baldness would ensue as the final result. Newbro's Herpicide kills these germs and stimulates unhealthy hair to abundant growth. Herpicide is a pleasant hair dressing as well as a dandruff cure and contains not an atom of injurious substance. Sold by leading druggists. LOSS OF 120 LIVES

Fire Damp Causes Awful Calamity In a Welsh Mine

Cardiff, Wales, July 12.—An explosion of fire damp in No. 2 pit of the United National Colliery company at Wattstown is believed to have resulted in the loss of at least 120 lives. A loud report was immediately followed by the belching of clouds of smoke and dust from the pit shaft, in which 150 men were working.

The force of the explosion wrecked the machinery at the mouth of the pit, cutting off communication with the doomed men in this direction. No. 1 shaft, adjoining, ordinarily affords communication with No. 2. The 800 men in No. 1 and the few who escaped from No. 2 were drawn up.

A rescue party descended, but its work was seriously impeded by the foul air and the falling masses of earth dislodged by the explosion.

The news of the explosion spread rapidly and thousands of men, women and children thronged about the head of the pit, seeking information concerning relatives and friends. The mountain roadways are crowded and there are streams of people in the neighborhood of the mine, all contributing to the usual pitiful scenes.

Efforts at rescue are still in progress and currents of fresh air are being driven through the shaft, but the rescuers are without hope of reducing the list of fatalities.

Ruined Financier a Suicide

Darlington, S. C., July 12.—R. K. Dargan, formerly president of the Independent Cotton Oil company and the Dargan Trust company, committed suicide last night by drinking carbonic acid. He left a note mentioning the financial troubles and stating that he intended to kill himself. The oil company was capitalized at $1,000,000 and it is rumored that the deficiencies may reach $700,000. The properties are in the hands of receivers and sensational developments are anticipated. Dargan was 40 years old.

Norfolk, July 12.—A panic was created on the steamship Pennsylvania just before it left Cape Charles for Norfolk by James Monroe, a large insane negro, who came aboard, drew two long knives from his coat and ran amuck among the passengers, who fled about the boat in efforts to escape. The negro threatened to kill all who approached him and finally an officer of the Cape Charles police shot the negro in the neck. He probably will not recover.

Dowie Out of Bankruptcy

Chicago, July 12.—All bankruptcy proceedings against John A. Dowie have been dismissed by Judge Bethea. As none of the petitioning creditors have complied with the court's order to amend, all petitions have been declared to be no longer in force. According to Dowie's attorneys all of the claims mentioned in the original petition, amounting something like $400,000, have been substantially paid off with interest.

Milwaukee, July 12.—Sixty-seven indictments against 25 individuals, most of whom are former county officials, were handed down by the grand jury last evening. This makes a total of 105 true bills thus far, with the expectation that further probing will result in many more indictments being brought in. Nearly all of the indictments charge bribery in connection with the awarding of county contracts.

Paste Duplicates Left Beside Them Were Undisturbed

Newport, R. I., July 12.—When Mrs. Charles M. Oelrichs returned to her cottage on Kay street at 6 o'clock last evening, after an absence of two hours, she discovered that $10,000 worth of jewelry had been taken from her dressing case. The police were at once notified of the robbery and a detail of officers was immediately ordered to the Oelrichs establishment. Among the jewels lost are a diamond tiara and several pearl and diamond ornaments.

It is said that entrance was gained to the cottage through a window on the south part of the house. During the period of Mrs. Oelrichs' absence, the butler and two female servants were the only occupants of the house. The jewels, with their paste duplicates, lay on a dressing case in Mrs. Oelrichs' chamber. The imitation jewels were not taken.

By his character and clean American manhood he helped make the United States one of the greatest forces for civilization in the world."

Bay State Troops Break Camp

Westfield, Mass., July 12.—The first general encampment of the Massachusetts militia since 1870 was virtually ended last night after the 6000 troops had been put through a test of defending Camp Bartlett against a night attack. The plan was that of forming a line to resist a night attack of the supposed enemy. The infantry began firing first, and after they had been in action for some time, the artillery went into the battle. Camp was broken soon after breakfast today.

Quincy Yacht club ladies' day next week.

The clear hot days were preferable to a day like this.

Have the Daily Ledger sent to your vacation address.

Pop concert at the Squantum Yacht club this evening.

Mr. Smith of the Smith Granite Co., Westerly, R. I., is in town on a business trip.

The proprietor of the little variety store on Saville street is certainly enterprising.

The Granite Railway Co. has recently received the contract for an elaborately finished private residence.

The marriage intentions of Mr. Emil Bjornholm of Quincy and Miss Hannos Ahokes of Gloucester were announced on Monday.

The house of Mrs. Willis on Chestnut street has been greatly improved by painters, and looks attractive; also the small store building,

Mrs. F. J. Pierson, the wife of the Granite street merchant, will leave next Tuesday on the Saxonia for a visit of several weeks among relatives in England.

When anyone proudly affirms that he has been down to Squantum to dinner, it doesn't always mean that he has dined at the inn, for the little waiting room opposite with its clam chowder and other dainties is equally popular, especially for pocket books that need a spring tonic.

Sunday School Workers.

The summer school of methods at Northfield for Sunday school workers under the auspices of the Massachusetts Sunday School Association, opens July 23 and continues until the 30th. The success of the first session of this school last year bespeaks for it this year a greater interest and attendance. Able instructors, specialists in their departments, are included in the faculty. Detailed information can be obtained by addressing Hamilton S. Conant, General Secretary, 120 Boylston street, Room 615, Boston, Mass.

—In consideration of the fact that quite a number of ladies now attend church services without wearing hats, the following vote of the old town of Abington, taken in town meeting, May 25, 1775, is of interest: "Voted, It was an indecent way that the female sex do set in their hats and bonnets, to worship God in his house, offensive to many people of this town."

—The city of Northampton reports a tax rate of $17 per $1,000 a reduction of seventy cents from last year.

Cotton Leak Investigation Begins In Earnest

WILL PUNISH CULPRITS

If Criminal Prosecution Is Not Possible, Some Other Way to Reach Them Will Be Sought--The Tobacco Figures May Have Been Manipulated

Washington, July 12.—Acting Attorney General Hoyt has received from Secretary of Agriculture Wilson the papers in the cotton report investigation. Subsequently the papers were placed in the hands of United States District Attorney Beach, who will probe into the whole subject and make a thorough inquiry, embracing every detail connected with the compilation of the statistics involved.

Mr. Beach declined to say anything on the subject when asked, but it is understood that the investigation which he will conduct will be begun in earnest today and will cover both the legal and administrative features of the incident. Mr. Beach has already examined the report and will now take active direction of the next proceedings looking to prosecutions of the guilty parties.

Mr. Hoyt states that he has been urged by Secretary Wilson to probe the matter to the bottom and to use any means at his command to get at the true condition and to bring all guilty persons to trial. Messrs. Hoyt and Beach have already been in communication, and it will be determined whether there is any statute under which a criminal prosecution may be directed against Edwin S. Holmes, the former associate statistician of the department of agriculture, who was dismissed, it is alleged, because he "juggled" figures in the government crop estimates and furnished advance information to New York brokers, and against any others that may be found implicated. In case criminal prosecution is not possible, some other way to reach the guilty parties is to be sought.

The investigation conducted by Beach will be pushed with vigor and without regard to persons who may be affected by it. Mr. Beach remained at his office until midnight last night, going over the papers in the case. The whole investigation will be aimed at bringing about the indictment of any persons found to have violated the criminal statutes, if any such are found, and to cause the infliction of administrative punishment, such as dismissal on any person found guilty of wrongdoing not cognizable in the criminal courts. The inquiries will be prosecuted along other lines than the investigation work already done. Mr. Beach already has mapped out his program. He will order the investigation to be made as searching as it is possible to make it.

Should it be found advisable to seek indictments, there will be no delay, as the grand jury, although excused until September, is subject to the call of the district attorney at any time. As to how long the investigation will last it is impossible to predict, but the impression is corroborated by the action of the district attorney that he is under "hurry orders" to complete the task assigned him within the briefest possible time consistent with thoroughness, and the task may be effected within a fortnight.

Unless there are new developments in connection with the cotton leak investigation, Secretary Wilson says that he proposes to stand on the report of the secret service officers. He expects, however, that the investigation will give rise to various rumors and stories of irregularities in connection with the department's reports on other products, but that where there is the slightest tangible evidence to work upon he declares he will go to the bottom of every complaint and publish the results of his investigations. Already, he says, the allegation has been made that the tobacco figures have been manipulated and the matter will be looked into.

Wouldn't Break Engagement

Boston, July 12.—Hamilton McK. Twombly, the millionaire of New York and Newport, had a dinner engagement in the latter city which he was determined to keep. He was in Springfield and, finding that the regular afternoon train would not connect in Boston with the 3:55 p. m. express for Newport, he ordered a special train and told the engineer to break records if necessary. Twombly had 12 minutes to spare, for he was landed in Boston at 3:43, his special having made a new record by covering the 100 miles in 103 minutes. Over some parts of the road the train traveled at a 70-mile gait.

Elks Capture Buffalo

Buffalo, July 12.—At the annual reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Robert W. Brown of Louisville was chosen grand exalted ruler. Brown is managing editor of the Louisville Times. Trolley service was suspended in some districts last night and there was a constant procession of automobiles containing Elks masquerading. An incessant din of horns, bells, shouts and other noises of joviality sounded above everything else. The crowd on the sidewalks was a happy, swaying multitude, ready to go in any direction the current carried it.

Labor Men Disagree

Cleveland, July 12.—Displeased with what they consider unjust treatment, the 30 delegates of the Knights of Labor walked out of the convention hall in which they were holding a session with the Amalgamated Association of Window Glass Workers, with the object of uniting the two organizations. It is now probable that all attempts to merge the two bodies will fail.

Surrender of Alleged Murderer

Cincinnati, July 12.—George Ritchey, a farmer, surrendered to Sheriff Allphin at Hebron, Ky., and is held on a charge of killing William Smith with a knife and probably mortally wounding John Warner, Smith's father-in-law. The tragedy was the culmination of a feud.

PRAYER FOR HAY.

At Lunch In Forest President Asked God's Mercy For Late Secretary.

The Chicago Tribune recently printed the following anecdote:

"Ten miles from any city, with the members of his cabinet and the silent trees of the forest as the only witnesses, Wednesday afternoon (July 5) Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, on his bended knees prayed for the spiritual welfare of John Hay, the late secretary of state, who was buried at Cleveland.

"The president's train left Cleveland shortly after noon Wednesday (July 5), and owing to the great hurry the party did not have time to eat anything at midday. At Wheelock's switch, ten miles south of Cleveland, the train had to lay over some minutes, and President Roosevelt asked for luncheon on the grass. Part of the forest had been cleared, and there the cloth was laid. Then the members of the party, sitting on the grass, grouped themselves about the cloth.

"President Roosevelt then arose to a kneeling position and asked the Almighty for his blessing on the repast. He spoke simply of the great friendship that existed between himself and John Hay, and finally he asked God's mercy for John Hay, as men were all sinners, although John Hay was among the least of these.

"The food was then eaten, and the trip to Pittsburg continued."

RANCH AUTOMOBILES.

Great Changes Wrought by Motor Cars In Western Texas.

"I have just returned from a tour of the great ranching regions of western Texas," said the salesman to a representative of the Houston Post, "and as it is my custom to make that belt at least twice every year it comes easy for me to note the progress.

"No man who has not visited it in recent months can even surmise the great change worked by the automobile. Why, the latter has now brought points more than a hundred miles distant from the railways into the closest touch with civilization. What used to be days of travel between distant ranches and railway stations is now merely a matter of a very few hours.

"Nearly all the ranchmen own their automobiles, and you can see them skimming the broad prairie in every direction, at times frightening the jack rabbits and the coyotes and striking consternation to the hearts of hoot owls and rattlesnakes.

"With the passing of the cowboy has almost come the passing of the cow pony, too, for on several big ranches I actually saw men rounding up the herds in automobiles."

CAT A BIRD'S CHIEF ENEMY.

Professor Hodge of Clark University Urges Feline Extermination.

Professor Clifton F. Hodge, biologist at Clark university in Worcester, Mass., has come out urging the extermination of all cats by municipalities, declaring they are the worst existing enemy of bird life, says a Worcester dispatch to the New York Tribune.

"This has become a matter of national consequence," says Professor Hodge, "and demands the attention of cities as well as of people in the country. I have given much attention to this subject, and I am firmly convinced the cat is the worst enemy the bird has. Not excepting the severities of winter, scourges of disease that might prevail in bird families and all other enemies of bird life combined, the cat is the arch fiend of them all and stands at the head of the list as a destroyer of bird life. We need the German method of cat traps like those that in one year killed 30,000 cats in Hamburg."

The World's Finest Hospital.

In Mexico City a new hospital has recently been completed which has no rival in the world today, says the Metropolitan Magazine. It is built on the French detached plan and consists of thirty-five buildings, each fifty feet apart, built on the most modern and approved sanitary lines, with a magnificent operating theater and a complete system of isolated wards for all infectious diseases.

Man of Many Attainments.

Doc Cowley, editor of the Cowgill Chief, is now a rural route carrier and is in love with his job, says the Kansas City Journal. Cowley is editor of a newspaper, physician, farms some, is a member of the pension board, secretary of the county Republican committee, town poet, rural carrier and several more things.

Gold Finders Now Use Autos.

As horses are too slow for the gold finders in the west, an automobile seating fifteen passengers has been put in operation between Bull Frog and Las Vegas, one of the new mining towns in California. It covers the 130 miles of bad roadway about four times as fast as was ever done by horse drawn stages.

A Linguistic Bird.

A bird which can talk in two languages and whose repertory consists of seventeen phrases is the latest addition to the London zoological gardens. The bird belongs to a species known as the larger hill mynah, which flourishes in northern India. Three of its phrases are in an Indian dialect and the rest in English.

An Automobile Club For China.

Court officials in China now have an automobile garage with some fifteen or twenty machines that are handled by native chauffeurs. As might be expected, the Automobile club has been formed, with headquarters in Shanghai. It already boasts of twenty-five members.

The Quincy Yacht Club hops for members and their friends are now in full swing every Saturday night and the society people of the club are giving them the most liberal support and encouragement. The music is by Hendley of Boston, which is a sufficient guarantee for its extra fine quality. The hours from 8 to 10.30 seem all too short to the young people who attend.

One Man in Party.

A party of fifty ladies and one man, comprising members of Maple lodge, K. & L. of H., Paul Revere, W. R. C., and the Order of Eastern Star, left City Square in a special car this morning on the annual outing of Maple lodge to Nantasket. The one man looked a little lonesome but said he was having a good time and was able to chaperon any number of women. He enjoyed the distinction of being wedded to single blessedness when the party started, but the Lord only knows what he will be when he gets back.

Of course being the only man in the party he will be expected to put up for the peanuts, pop-corn and pink lemonade, and the ladies in turn promised to make it pleasant for him. That his blushes may be spared, his name is omitted.

Lawn Party at Atlantic.

The Epworth League of the Atlantic M. E. church, held a successful lawn party Tuesday evening on the grounds at the corner of Squantum and Clark streets, which were brilliantly illuminated with Japanese lanterns.

The tables were presided over as follows:

Pop corn,—Miss Margurite Holbrook.
Candy,—Miss Julia Barbour.
Ice Cream,—Miss Mabel Burr.
Cake,—Miss Helen Kilpatrick.
Lemonade,—Walter Southard.
Watermelon,—Arthur Chamock.

Henry H. Faxon was one of the honored guests present, and distributed quantities of tickets in value from ten to twenty-five cents each, which he latter redeemed.

A hurdy gurdy furnished music during the evening.

Fire at Braintree.

The South Braintree fire department was called out this morning at 8.30 for a small fire at the home of Willis Cottrell on Plain street. Matches in the bottom drawer of a bureau caused the fire. A teamster passing the house discovered the smoke and promptly removed the bureau. The all-out alarm was given in fifteen minutes.

Public Bequests.

The will of Nelson Merrill, late of Holbrook, which was admitted to Probate at the session of court in Quincy this morning, leaves $100 to the New Jerusalem church of Brockton, $100 to the First Parish New Jerusalem church of Bath, Me., and $200 to the Union church of North Turner, Me. The deceased, however, only left an estate of $60.

Think This Over.

Drink less, breathe more.
Talk less, think more.
Ride less, walk more.
Clothe less, bathe more.
Worry less, work more.
Waste less, give more.
Preach less, practice more.

IMMIGRATION BARS

Will Not Be Let Down So Far as Chinese Are Concerned

PRESIDENT'S ASSURANCE

Labor Men Who Had Doubt of Enforcement of Exclusion Law In Conference With Chief Executive--Eight-Hour Day Is Also Discussed

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 13.—Immigration to the United States and its relation to the labor problem formed the subject of a conference between the president and two leaders of organized labor, President Gompers and Vice President Duncan of the American Federation of Labor. The conference was devoted particularly to a consideration of the order recently issued by the president regarding the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion law.

Mr. Gompers urged upon the president the desirability for an intelligent, practical and humane consideration of the general question of immigration by the people and by congress. The people of the whole civilized world are entitled, he maintained, to such a consideration of the problem.

"We directed the president's attention," said Gompers, after the conference, "to the interpretation placed by some on his recent order, issued at the instance of the American Asiatic association, concerning the admission to the United States of Chinese. By many of our own people and by many Chinese that order was looked upon as a letting down of the immigration bars so far as the Chinese are concerned.

"The president assured us that no proper reading of the order would warrant such an interpretation, and that nothing was further from his intention than that such an impression should be gotten from the order. His determination is that both skilled and unskilled Chinese laborers shall be excluded from the United States, and he says the law will be rigidly enforced. His order related only to the so-called exempt classes, merchants, students, travellers and the like, who heretofore have had difficulty in gaining admission to this country because of the many fraudulent certificates issued to them and to coolies who are not entitled to certificates in any event.

"We went over the entire matter thoroughly, the conference being perfectly satisfactory to us. The president suggested that in the course of five or six months we again bring the matter to his attention in the light of the experience of that length of time in working under the order. He said he was determined that the diplomatic and consular representatives of the United States in China should perform their duties thoroughly and impartially, and that the law as to the issuance of certificates to members of the exempt Chinese classes should be complied with absolutely. He added that any officer of the United States who issued a false certificate would lose his official head the instant his misconduct was discovered.

"We also considered with the president the eight-hour law and the difficulties which we had encountered in securing its enforcement on government work. We instanced violations of the law and requested him to consider them. He asked us to present the facts in a formal document, he refusing to take up the subject at once. Meantime he expressed himself as being in entire sympathy with the law and insisted that it must be observed. We pointed out to him that officers of the war department, under whose direction much government work is done, were not inclined to insist upon an observance of the law, and many of them had declined to regard it as their duty to bring suit to compel its enforcement. The president agreed with us that the government officers ought to see to it that the eight-hour law was obeyed.

"Our talk with the president was most satisfactory. We discussed generally the condition and interests of labor, considered the subject of more rigid regulations for the exclusion from this country of vicious and illiterate immigrants and talked of some legislation along these lines which we regard as desirable."

Gompers and Duncan had expected to be accompanied to Oyster Bay by President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America, but the latter was unable to meet the engagement.

Square Deal For Chinese

Portland, Or., July 13.—In response to President Roosevelt's invitation to the commercial bodies of the Pacific coast to express their views regarding the problem of Chinese exclusion or the restriction of the immigration of Chinese, President Wheelwright of the Portland Chamber of Commerce has forwarded a letter to the president in which he appeals for more liberal treatment of the Chinese. He says the Pacific coast no longer fears the Orientals, that they are needed in some parts of the country, and that there is no danger of lowering the standard of wages.

Politicians May Be Involved

Pittsburg, July 13.—As a sequel to the arrest of Clarence Riddle, employed in the office of Division Superintendent Duer of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company, charged with unlawfully taking and selling employes' passes, four additional arrests were made last night. It is said that several politicians of Pittsburg are involved in the matter.

GERMANTOWN FIRE.

Department Not Needed But Had a Long Hot Run.

The alarm from Box 15 at 3.33 Wednesday afternoon called the fire department out for a long run in the hot sun to Germantown. The fire was in the house of William Hodgkinson and was caused by an oil stove which had just been lighted.

Mrs. Hodgkinson was alone at the time, but with the assistance of neighbors and the old sailors at Sailors' Snug Harbor run a garden hose to the burning building and did yoeman service in subduing the flames. Mr. Tinkham, a summer resident, also appeared on the scene with his chemical extinguisher and did good work.

They had the fire out when the apparatus arrived from Quincy and Wollaston. The four walls of the kitchen were charred and the room above the kitchen damaged.

Chief Williams estimates the loss at $200, and says the neighbors did well to check it.

New Captain.

The Victors regret the loss of Capt. Collins who makes his debute in fast company on Saturday, playing with the South Quincys against the Dewey B. B. team of Weymouth. He was the best all-round player on the team and his loss will be a serious one for them, and will no doubt lessen their chances for the pennant. Smith, the second baseman, was elected captain to succeed him, and will no doubt show himself worthy of the honor.

Teachers at World's Fair.

The Herald teachers have reached the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Oregon, without a casualty of any kind.

On Tuesday, at Victoria, the party were the guests of Sir Henry G. Joly de Laottbiniere, the Governor of the province. They made a tour of the gardens and were entertained at tea.

Forty miles out of Portland the excursionists were met by a committee and hospitably welcomed. They will spend three days at the World's Fair.

CONTRACT SIGNED.

Fore River Company to Build Turbine Steamer.

The contract was closed on Wednesday by E. H. Harriman of the Southern Pacific railway for the construction of a 6000-ton turbine freight and passenger steamer by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy.

This craft will operate on the Morgan line between New York and New Orleans, and will be, when completed, by far the largest turbine propeller ship built in America. President Bowles has been an earnest advocate of the turbine propulsion and last year made proposal to build for the government the most powerful class of warships with turbine machinery. His contract with Mr. Harriman marks the first important venture into the field of turbine navigation for commercial purposes in the United States. The new ship will be equipped with turbines of the Curtiss type, and will have a speed of 16 knots an hour.

REBEKAH OUTING.

George L. Gill Lodge and Friends at Nantasket Point.

One of the pleasantest, liveliest and jolliest parties of the season was that held Wednesday, when George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge with invited guest and friends to the number of 60 went on their annual picnic to Nantasket Point, being conveyed in a special car decorated with flags to their destination. Mrs. Elsie L. Robinson of Roxbury, Past President of the Rebekah Assembly, honored the gathering with her presence.

After doing justice to a fine dinner served by D. O. Wade, the sport of the day, arranged by Mrs. B. Porterfield and assistants, was enjoyed, and the following were awarded prizes:—

Wheelbarrow race,—Margaret Milne.

Running race,—Mrs. Couitts, Jennie Crowell and Sadie Mountain.

Throwing ball,—Florence Jones.

One Legged race,—J. H. Gillis.

Wheelbarrow race,—J. H. Gillis.

Running race,—Elizabeth W. Furnald.

Running race,—Ellis Young.

The party also enjoyed themselves immensely with the varied amusements afforded visitors a tthis resort. It was a round of fun from start to finish, a brother and sister, making continuous sport for all. The happy crowd arrived in City square at 9.20 P. M. Much credit is due Miss M. Lizzie Furnald and her assistants on the committee for the able, successful and happy manner in which everything was conducted. On the whole it was a grand time. Come again in 1906.

TROT OR GALLOP?

What Do Fish Do, and the Seals and Insects and Worms?

Here is a problem for people with sharp eyes: As we all know, a horse when walking or trotting advances only one leg of each pair at a time, but when galloping lifts both fore feet together and then both hind feet. Now, the question is how other animals manage this matter. The birds, of course, flap both wings together, but which birds run and which hop? We human beings "trot" when we walk and "gallop" when we swim—that is, if we are using the plain breast stroke. The dog, however, "trots" for both. Now, do the amphibious animals—the seals, otters and the rest—swim like men or like other four footed creatures?

Then there are the fish. One would rather expect that, as they move their tails from side to side, they would flap alternately with the fins, which are their hands and feet. Who can tell whether they do or not and whether all fish at all times follow one rule? By the way, how does a frog use its "hands?"

The great anatomist E. Ray Lankester has pointed out that, while the "thousand legs," such as our common gally worm, advance two feet of a pair together, the centipeds, which are much like them, do exactly the opposite, and the swimming worms also alternate the stroke of each pair of paddles. I doubt if many people can tell on which system the caterpillar manages its dozen or so legs or whether the adult insect walks, trots, paces or gallops on its six. How does the spider use eight?

Altogether this is a large field for observation, a field, too, where any one may discover new facts as yet unrecorded, and thus add to the store of knowledge.—St. Nicholas.

PRETTY WEDDING.

Miss Ethelyn L. Jameson Becomes Mrs. Sylvester P. Robertson.

Green and white was the color scheme on Wednesday evening for the wedding of Miss Ethelyn L. Jameson of Boston, formerly of Quincy, and Mr. Sylvester P. Robertson of Boston, at Bethany Congregational chapel.

The ladies' parlor and chapel adjoining were prettily decorated by friends of the bride. There was a profusion of evergreen and laurel from the former home of the bride in Dunbarton, N. H. which was intertwined with white; also plants and flowers.

The marriage was performed by Rev. E. N. Hardy, the pastor of the church, at 8 P. M. the couple standing beneath a wedding bell.

Mr. Charles W. Robertson of Bridgeport, Conn., was best man, and Miss Louise Fisher of New York City, the maid of honor.

Little Miss Lewis was flower girl and Paul Cheney, a pupil of the bride, was ring bearer.

The bride looked charming in a crepe de chine with chiffon and battenberg lace and veil. She wore a string of pearls, the gift of the groom, and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations.

There were four bridesmaids, Miss May Geeson and Miss Alice Sampson of Quincy, Miss Blanche Peters of Everett and Miss Mildred Cilley of Concord, N. H.; and seven ushers: Mr. Charles H. Hardwick, Mr. Walter Sampson, Mr. Melville Hayward and Mr. John Northcott of Quincy, Mr. Walter R. Meins of Roxbury, Mr. Frank P. Tibbetts of Salem and Mr. Patterson of Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson were assisted in receiving from 8.30 to 10 P. M. by Mr. and Mrs. Addison Kingsbury of South Coventry, Conn., and the best man and maid of honor. The groom is a son of Mrs. Kingsbury. Delightful music was furnished by the Highland orchestra of Woburn. Frappe and fancy cake was served by Miss Park and Miss Buttman.

The happy couple received several rich gifts from friends.

At 10 P. M. the bridal couple was given a happy send [illegible]. Their future residence will be at Lexington, at the corner of Merriam and Oakland streets, where they will be at home after October 1.

Married Jewess Heiress.

At Revere on Monday Miss Bertha Greenburg, an Orthodox Jewess, and Mr. William McLeod a Gentile, were quietly married, much against the wishes of the young lady's parents.

Mr. McLeod is well known in West Quincy being a member of the Copeland club. He was born in Saratoga 19 years ago, and has been employed in a restaurant at Revere beach.

Miss Greenburg is 18 years old and has been a student at Boston University for two years. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Greenburg of Florence street, Boston, who own considerable property.

Pop Concert.

There was a very large attendance Wednesday evening at the pop concert under the auspices of the Squantum Yacht club. Tables were arranged about the broad piazzas, and while those present regailed themselves with ices, etc., they listened to some delightful music by an orchestra. An electric fountain on the float added novelty to the scene.

Y. M. C. A. Sail.

The moonlight sail down Boston Harbor Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Associations of this section was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Twenty-five from Quincy enjoyed the sail, who were most enthusiastic in their praise of the trip. All present were sorry to have the trip end, yet glad they had been among those present on such an ideal night. The steamer went as far as Minot's light.

—The returning delegates from the Knights of Columbus convention at Los Angeles are full of enthusiasm at the cordiality of their reception and the beauty of the country, but one of them said yesterday: "California is all right; the flowers are beautiful and the plant life is wonderful, but I longed for a sight of the green grass of the Atlantic coast." Which reminds us again that there is no place in the United States which compares with New England in the summer time, or with Boston as the summer city par excellence.—Traveler.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Many a man who inveighs against the dishonesty of corrupt trust and corporation methodswill not hesitate to swear off his taxes and see no sympathetic relation between the acts.—Baltimore American.

☞ Are submarine boats worth the while? Recent disasters to these craft would seem to indicate that they are extremely hazardous to the crews, and their efficiency is still an open question. There has always been a desire to build and employ them. During the Civil War the Southerners constructed a large number of them, and in several cases they were effective, but always at the expense of the submarine, and those who operated it. Several of the craft were sunk, with nothing to show for the sacrifice. It they are to be a recognized arm of our naval service there should be provided a convoy, with suitable apparatus to give aid to the submerged machine when it gets into trouble. This is no more than a natural precaution, and it should not be neglected. There will always be found reckless spirits who will not hesitate to man the submarine and take their chances, but the majority are shocked when they read of a disaster, and humanity suggests that everything be done to render the service as free from danger as possible.—Lynn Item.

☞ Walter Scott, a man who struck it rich and made a lot of money in the west, hired a special train to run from Los Angeles to Chicago to beat all speed records. The special was engaged on an agreement that it should have the right of way over everything. Scott wanted speed and nothing else.

This is an acute case of speed madness, but merely exaggerated a little over the case of some others in the world. There are autoists who care nothing for their machines except for the ability the machinery has to carry them over the great extents of territory in the fewest possible moments. A great many people when they are about to go abroad are unhappy unless they can procure a passage on some steamship that has a record for covering distances in a wonderful way. A driving horse is considered of little value by a great many horsemen unless the animal not only looks well and drives well, but can do a fast mile whenever desired.

As for speed in living, speed in work and speed in pleasure, that is the common lot of most Americans.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ A story is told by Robert Ogden about a friend of his, not long dead, who held securities in a certain railroad. Being told, and from a source to leave no doubt, that the road was about to collapse, he refused to sell, not wishing to shift the loss upon a purchasher. He had no large amount of money, but he was rich in something better. With all the venal trickery that is being exposed, we lean to a belief that men like this exist in America in larger numbers today than they did five, a dozen, or twenty years ago. We hope there will soon be fewer with salaries like those of Senator Depew, and fewer corporations which seek to have their lawyers in the Legislature. "Old-fashioned honesty," Mr. Cleveland says, but he must be referring to some period before the Civil War. Americans are now endeavoring to halt a plunging commercial dishonesty that took its impetus with the immense practical activity of the nation after '65. In a sense we are a new nation from that date. President Eliot has spoken of business as one of the learned professions, and so, in many of its divisions, it is coming to be. Miss Tarbell, in the latest of her Rockefeller studies, draws some graphic features of the most discouragingly successful money-grabber in the world. It is not a pretty picture, composed as it is of greed, cruelty, and disgusting piety. "According as you put something in," he observed to a Cleveland Sunday-school, "the greater will be your dividends of salvation." But he is not the type of business man who represents the future. His like are on the wane. The responsibilities and opportunities of money are becoming more widely understood, and its mere rapacious accumulation tends every day more to become a source of shame.—Collier's.

STRONG FOR PEACE

Witte Will Be Russia's Chief Plenipotentiary

MURAVIEFF STEPS ASIDE

New Selection by Czar, Though at First Opposed by Him, Is Hailed as a Practical Assurance of Peace In the Far East

St. Petersburg, July 13.—M. Muravieff has resigned his position as chief peace plenipotentiary. It may be regarded as practically certain that he will be replaced by M. Witte, president of the committee of ministers, who all along has been considered the Russian statesman pre-eminently qualified to undertake the difficult task of negotiating peace with Japan.

However, though the czar, who on two previous occasions flatly declined to accept Witte, has now indicated his readiness to make the appointment, the commission will not be actually signed until Foreign Minister Lamsdorff, who throughout has been Witte's warm supporter, has had an audience of the czar. To that extent only the matter may be regarded as unsettled, nothing being certain in Russia, as a prominent diplomat remarked last night, until the czar's signature has been affixed.

M. Witte's selection will undoubtedly be hailed as a practical assurance of peace. While it would be a mistake to denominate him as a peace-at-any-price man, Witte earnestly believes that the struggle should be ended and should be succeeded by an understanding between Russia and Japan which would ensure peace in the far east for half a century. Indeed, he is personally believed to be in favor of a Russo-Japanese alliance.

The conduct of the negotiations by Witte, it is felt by the peace party here, would inspire instant confidence in Japan. The only handicap under which Witte labors is his lack of familiarity with the English language, as the only foreign languages he speaks are German and French.

M. Muravieff's retirement, ostensibly owing to reasons of ill-health, is in reality due to the fact that the czar became convinced that the negotiations might be jeopardized if he went to Washington. M. Muravieff, himself, upon consideration, quite frankly recognized his lack of diplomatic training and his want of acquaintance with the questions involved, and with equal frankness expressed satisfaction that he had been relieved.

Neither the Washington nor Tokio governments has yet been officially advised of Muravieff's withdrawal, the foreign office probably preferring to announce the name of his successor at the same time.

The change in the chief of the plenipotentiaries does not involve any postponement of the date of sailing of the peace mission for Washington.

Almost Certain of Peace

London, July 13.—The news that it is regarded as practically certain that Witte will supersede Muravieff as chief of the Russian peace mission has not yet reached the London newspapers with the exception of The Daily Telegraph, which, in an editorial, hails the probable appointment of Witte as the best omen of peace it has been its privilege to chronicle and considers that Japan will welcome it as a proof of Russia's serious desire for a cessation of the war. The editorial further declares that the moderation of the Japanese demands will astonish the world.

Hot Pace Set For Birileff

St. Petersburg, July 13.—The announcement of the appointment of Vice Admiral Birileff as minister of marine in succession to Admiral Avellan, which was gazetted this morning, is coupled with a highly significant rescript in which the czar charges the new minister not only with the task of rebuilding the navy, but also with that of reforming and reorganizing the whole system. The minister is instructed to eradicate the faults which have developed under the stress of war, to remedy the conditions which led to the recent mutinies in the Black sea, and to inspire the personnel of the navy with a new spirit of discipline and devotion.

Japanese Loan Over-Subscribed

New York, July 13.—The subscription lists for the imperial Japanese government 4½ percent sterling loans, second series, were closed yesterday afternoon. The bankers had announced that the lists, which were opened yesterday morning, would be closed on or before July 17. The applications were so heavy, however, from all over the country that it was soon seen that the $50,000,000 of bonds allotted to the United States had been heavily oversubscribed and it was decided to limit the taking of subscriptions to a single day. It may be a week or 10 days before the allotments are completed.

China Wants to Take Part

London, July 13.—China has appealed to the powers for support in her demand that she be admitted as a party to the peace negotiations soon to take place. It is quite natural that Pekin should want to say a word about the disposal of Chinese territory, but, on the other hand, it is equally natural that Japan should refuse to permit the complicating influence of Chinese diplomacy, which is, if possible, more disingenuous than that of Russia.

Statement Concerning Royal Arcanum's Emergency Fund

Boston, July 13.—W. O. Robson of this city, supreme secretary of the Royal Arcanum, last night issued a statement touching upon the present condition of the emergency fund of the order, which has been the subject of discussion. Secretary Robson says:

"In April, 1905, the executive committee directed the withdrawal from the emergency fund of $300,000 at such time and in such amounts as required by the supreme treasurer to meet mortuary liabilities. Of this amount, $95,000 was paid by the supreme trustee, from the receipts from interest on investments, to the supreme treasurer on April 30. To provide for the balance of the amount it was necessary to withdraw from the treasurer of Massachusetts $153,000 (face value) of government 4 percent 1925 bonds. These were sold on June 30 for $202,246.87, which amount was placed in the current widows and orphans' benefit fund account. The remaining $2,753,13, to make up $300,000, will be paid to the supreme treasurer by the supreme trustees before the end of the month from interest accumulated in their hands.

"The $253,000 of government bonds withdrawn from the treasurer of Massachusetts in May, 1904, were returned to him in November, 1904, the receipts during the summer months being sufficient to meet payments, which made it unnecessary to sell the bonds. The total amount of the fund on June 30 was $1,804,139.38."

Disposed of Stamps at a Bargain

Boston, July 13.—Jesse Hueston, 14 years old, who was arrested for the larceny of $3000 worth of stamps from a stamp company, was placed on probation by Judge Forsaith. Hueston went into the stamp company's store and stole what he supposed was a blank stamp book. When he examined it at home he found it contained rare stamps. He tried to return the book unnoticed, but was unsuccessful, and finally he sold it to J. J. Delaney, 19 years old, for $4. Delaney, who was charged with receiving stolen property, was held in $1200 for a hearing.

TORRID WAVE RETURNS

Two Deaths and Many Prostrations Reported at Boston

Boston, July 13.—The torrid wave which was checked Tuesday in this city by a refreshing breeze from the ocean swept in again yesterday, bringing much suffering and causing two deaths. The victims were John Sullivan and Joseph Morjinski, both of this city. Several cases of prostrations were treated at the different hospitals in the city, while one man in Wakefield was so affected by the sun's rays that he had to be taken to an insane asylum.

For a few hours in the forenoon the east wind had sufficient force to keep the hot wave back from the business section of Boston, but at 2 o'clock it subsided and then there came a blast of intensely heated air from out of the southwest that sent the thermometer up from 78 to 91 in less than an hour's time. With the atmosphere well saturated with moisture, the balance of the afternoon proved most trying and hurry calls for medical aid became frequent.

The customary thunder showers put in an appearance in several parts of New England, but none of them proved particularly destructive. A couple at Newport woke the echoes of Narragansett bay, and lightning struck in many places, but caused very little damage. At Northfield, Mass., a barn was struck and burned.

The weather bureau holds out no prospects for any cessation of the heat for the next day or two at least, although showers may bring some relief.

Lost "Beauty" and Cash

New York, July 13.—On complaint of Mrs. Josephine E. Ware, said to be prominent socially in Denver, Dr. Nekden, who conducts a beauty renewing establishment in this city, has been arrested, charged with the larceny of $200. Mrs. Ware, who gives her age as 45, alleges that she paid the doctor that amount in advance, with the understanding that by the removal of wrinkles he would make her look "like a girl of 25" and that for a sojourn of four weeks in his sanitarium she paid him nearly $1000. She says her face is seared from a carbolic "wash" applied by the doctor.

Ready to Sail Toward Pole

New York, July 13.—Robert E. Peary announces that he will sail this week for the north. His new Arctic ship, the Roosevelt, has been idly waiting several days for supplies, which could not be bought on account of a lack of funds. The Polar expedition has cost $150,000, including yesterday's subscriptions of $35,000. The entire amount has been donated by American business men to the Peary Arctic club, whose members are anxious that none but Americans have any hand in this Polar voyage.

Yacht Sunk; Three Drowned

New York, July 13.—Three lives were lost by the sinking of the steamer yacht Normandie, which was run down in the Hudson river off Dobbs Ferry by the steamer Volund. Those who perished were Miss Gladys Dodge of New York, a guest aboard the yacht; Captain Storm, and Engineer Gracie. Coroner Russell has issued warrants for the arrest of Joseph Hannigan, a deckhand of the Normandie, and John H. Rudd, who had chartered the yacht.

Great Suffering at New York

New York, July 13.—Undiminished heat and humidity marked the fifth day of the torrid wave that has afflicted New York, and there is no immediate prospect of relief. Ten deaths and nearly three score cases of prostration was the record of the day. Some of the victims of the heat were rendered insane by their suffering.

COTTON CROP LEAK

It Was Suspected as Far Back as 1900

A COMPLAINT TO WILSON

Secret Service Officers Thought It an Attempt to Bunco New York Brokerage Firm After Making an Investigation

Washington, July 13.—A new and interesting phase of the cotton leak investigation has developed through the publication of the letter of Walter C. Hubbard, president of the New York Cotton exchange, addressed to President Roosevelt, in which the writer declared that the members of the exchange had been "greatly shocked by the recent disclosures of venality in the department of agriculture," and requesting a full investigation of the methods which led to the corruption, with a view of preventing the possibility of recurrence.

That letter is believed here to be the outcome of recent correspondence between Secretary Wilson and Hubbard, in which the latter called upon the secretary to make him a public apology because he had some years ago called the secretary's attention to alleged leaks and that no notice had been given the suggestion.

The secretary wrote a tart reply, in which he informed Hubbard that he owed no one an apology in the light of having done his duty to the best of his ability, and that when he got anything that looked like facts he promptly sent it to the secret service officers to hunt down.

The case to which Hubbard referred in his recent letter to the secretary occurred in 1900. On Dec. 20 of that year Hubbard sent the secretary certain papers showing that a Mr. Steinberger wanted to sell information to a New York cotton brokerage firm, claiming that he could get it in advance from the department. Secretary Wilson immediately turned the matter over to the secret service officers, but in about a week Chief Wilkie reported that "it looks like an attempt of Steinberger to bunco the New York firm."

After allowing two months to elapse and not hearing anything further, the secretary, on March 26, 1901, called upon the secret service for information as to whether they had made any discoveries. On the following day Secretary of the Treasury Gage replied as follows:

"The action of this man who wanted to sell information was done with the hope of being able to sell information, but as a matter of fact his efforts to obtain the advance information failed, as he received no assistance from the person in Washington upon whom he depended for information."

This report of Gage was transmitted to Hubbard by Secretary Wilson the next day and the matter was allowed to drop. But in January, 1902, Hubbard complained of having been advised that southern ginners were sending to the department returns of their ginning operations bearing date of Dec. 22 or 23, "and," said Hubbard, "I am unable to understand why additional returns from ginners should be obtained, since the result is to be published."

It seems, however, that the department of agriculture had not called for any ginners' statistics at that time, but that the circulars had been issued from the census bureau. In the same month Hubbard wrote the department of agriculture asking for certain information on cotton, but the secretary, in the course of a sharp letter denying the request, written under date of Jan. 11, 1902, said: "We take the ground here that nothing goes out unless it goes to the whole people. We have no favorites."

Secretary Wilson yesterday permitted the examination of the correspondence in order to show that as far back as five years ago he had taken prompt action to discover any leaks in his office.

Attempt at Train Wrecking

Cincinnati, July 13.—An unsuccessful attempt was made to wreck a passenger train which left Cincinnati at 8:45 o'clock last night. At a curve near North Elmwood, 12 miles north of Cincinnati, a railroad tie had been fastened to the track. The engineer discovered the obstruction in time to avert an accident.

Detective and Outlaws Dead

Winfield, Kas., July 13.—C. S. Calhoon, an Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe detective, was shot and instantly killed at Cedar Vale by two outlaws, who were shot down later by a posse of citizens at Hewins. The outlaws exchanged shots with the posse and during the exchange two persons were shot.

Raising Submarine in Secret

Bizerta, Tunis, July 13.—Efforts to raise the submarine boat Farfadet have continued and a successful outcome is expected. The presence of newspaper men and the public is strictly prohibited, the authorities being desirous of preventing the publication of details regarding the distressing spectacle.

Roosevelt Talks to Doctors

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 13.—President Roosevelt delivered an address before the Associated Physicians of Long Island, discussing the relations physicians sustain with the people of the communities in which they reside and the work to be done by the medical experts in connection with the construction of the Panama canal. He referred to achievements of the sanitary engineers who cleaned the cities of Cuba for the first time in 400 years, and closed by paying a tribute to the services of General Wood, whose career as a military officer, he said, was flouted by some critics because he once had been a doctor.

Lawson's Raid on the "System"

Des Moines, July 13.—The relation which Iowa and the west bear to the "system" was the theme of Thomas W. Lawson's address before the Chautauqua at Missouri Valley yesterday. He advised Iowa people who own stocks and bonds to sell them. He denied that he would advise them to sell except that the "system" has advanced stocks and bonds to a high degree and must keep them there during the raid which Lawson purposes to engineer on "behalf of the people."

Twenty Freight Cars Wrecked

Towners, N. Y., July 13.—A bad freight wreck occurred here last night and as a result Engineer Avery will probably die. About 20 freight cars were wrecked and piled in great heaps along the track, blocking traffic all night, the collision being between an eastbound freight and a work train. The latter was speeding in order to reach a siding and crashed into the regular train head-on.

San Juan Cartmen Idle

San Juan, P. R., July 13.—Mayor Todd, on behalf of the striking longshoremen, has cabled to the New York offices of the New York and Porto Rico Steamship company the terms of a compromise under which the men are willing to return to work. The strike of the members of the Cartmen's union is still in progress and not a single cartman is working.

CLEANLY WOMAN.

Erroneously Thinks by Scouring Her Scalp That She Cures Dandruff.

Cleanly woman has an erroneous idea that by scouring the scalp, which removes the dandruff scales, she is curing the dandruff. She may wash her scalp every day, and yet have dandruff her life long, accompanied by falling hair, too. The only way in the world to cure dandruff is to kill the dandruff germ, and there is no hair preparation that will do that but Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide by killing the dandruff germ, leaves the hair free to grow as healthy Nature intended. Destroy the cause you remove the effect. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Baking Watches.

"I will be with you in a moment. I must finish the baking of this batch of watches first."

The speaker was a jeweler. He said as he worked:

"I suppose you are surprised at the idea of watch baking. I will explain. The machinery of a watch is delicate, yet it must work the same in winter as in summer, the same in Russia as in Cairo, the same in the Sahara as in Iceland. There is only one way to accomplish this—the watch must be regulated to heat and cold.

"I am regulating these watches to heat. Afterward, in a refrigerator, I will regulate them to cold. Then when they go out in the world they won't disgrace themselves in any climate. Chronometers must be regulated more carefully than watches. They are often kept for weeks in temperatures that are now zero and now 120 degrees."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Apparently the German town of Haschmann does not believe in a state of single blessedness. Annual prizes are offered to the men who wed the ugliest, the most deformed and the oldest women in the town. Eighty dollars is paid to the man who marries the ugliest, while but $60 is the reward for the one marrying the cripple. All women over forty who have been jilted at least twice bring their spouses sums which vary according to the state of the fund, which was left by a rich resident of the town. The average price paid is $50 to each unless they should be unusually numerous, while the trustees are empowered to pay a larger sum when, in their judgment, it seems wise to hold forth a special inducement to procure the marriage of some particularly unfortunate woman.

Curiosities About Wood.

The strongest wood which grows within the limits of the United States is that known as nutmeg hickory, which flourishes on the lower Arkansas river. The most elastic is tamarack, the black or shellbark standing not far below. The wood with the least elasticity and lowest specific gravity is the Fiscus aurea. The wood of the highest specific gravity is the blue wood of Texas and Mexico. The heaviest of the foreign woods are the pomegranate and the lignum vitae, and the lightest is cork. Four hundred and thirteen different species of trees grow in the various sections of the country, and of this number sixteen, when perfectly seasoned, will sink in water. These woods of high specific gravity grow mostly in the arid regions of New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada.

No Reason For Two Trips.

Patrick's wife was "ailing," and Patrick put on his Sunday best and walked four miles to the doctor's house to tell him about her.

"Now," said the doctor, when he had heard all Patrick had to say and had prepared some medicine, "here is something for your wife. I've written the directions on the bottle and I want her to try it faithfully for a fortnight. Then, if it doesn't relieve her, come to me again and I will give you another prescription."

"Now, docther, see here," said Patrick, standing straight and looking grimly at the physician. "If you have your doubts o' this curin' Mary, as it's lvident you have by the way you spake, why don't you give me first what you're goin' to give me last?"

Torpedo Boats.

Torpedo boats do not ram the vessels against which they operate; they simply discharge self propelling torpedoes which, if they strike the vessel, explode and sink or otherwise damage it. Then, if not sunk by the enemy's fire, the torpedo boat runs away and after taking on more torpedoes is ready for service again. Torpedo boats are built very light and of enormous speed. They cannot resist gun fire and are easily sunk if hit even by comparatively light shot; therefore they operate to best advantage in the night, so that the threatened fleet has to be very wide awake with its searchlights and its light guns.

An Odd Simile.

A Scotch minister who used similes that would bring home to the rough characters around him the truths he sought to impress was once denouncing the ingratitude of man for all the benefits conferred on him by Providence.

"My friends," he said, "look at the hens when they drink. There's not ane o' them but lifts its heid in thankfulness even for the water that is sae common. Oh, that we were a' hens!"

Not Too Much For Our Good.

"Lawd," prayed the old colored deacon, "please give us in dis worl' whar we livin' at all de prosperity we kin stand, but w'en we gits dizzy wid it en goes ter celebratin' too much des send 'long old Br'er Trouble ter make us sit stiddy in de boat, en we'll be mighty thankful!" — Atlanta Constitution.

Accomplishments.

Muggins — My daughter will be a great catch for some one. She can cook or write poetry with equal ease and effectiveness. Juggins—Well, my daughter can write poetry. I never saw her try to cook it, but I'll bet she could.—Cleveland Leader.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

"This is a hard world," growled the chronic kicker.

"That's what!" replied the observant man. "The only thing with which you can make an impression on it is 'rocks.'"—Exchange.

"The Delight of Mankind."

Titus, the Roman emperor, was entitled "the delight of mankind." Titus' beneficence was unbounded, and it so happened that during his brief reign there was the most urgent need of its exercise. In the first year occurred the great eruption of Vesuvius, overwhelming Herculaneum and Pompeii and ruining numerous other towns and villages. The next year a fire broke out in Rome, which raged three days, causing great destruction, and in the tracks of these calamities followed a dreadful pestilence. Titus dealt out gifts with lavish hand to the houseless and ruined sufferers. He even despoiled the palaces of their valuable ornaments to obtain money for distribution and schemed and planned to furnish occupation for them. He was now the idol of his subjects, the "love and delight of the human race," but, unfortunately for that part of the human race over which he ruled, in the commencement of the third year of his reign he became suddenly ill and died at his patrimonial villa in the Sabine country.

Noted Dead In Trinity Churchyard.

Alexander Hamilton is buried in Trinity churchyard, at the head of Wall street, New York, and the grave is marked by a conspicuous white marble monument near the Rector street station of the elevated road. His wife, who lived until 1854, fifty years after his death in the duel with Burr, is buried beside him. Albert Gallatin, who succeeded Hamilton as secretary of the treasury, lies only a few feet away, and near by is also the grave of Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat. Another famous occupant of Trinity churchyard, whose monument is near the Broadway gate, is Captain James Lawrence of the United States navy, commander of the frigate Chesapeake, who fell in battle with the British ship Shannon June 1, 1813, in the thirty-second year of his age. As he fell upon the deck he cried to his subordinates, "Don't give up the ship!"

A Losing Dream.

"I made a nice idiot of myself the other morning," said the commuter, who is paying teller in a savings bank. "My wife was afraid I'd miss my train, and she got me by the shoulder and shook me, telling me that it was time to get up. I got about half awake, and, somehow, I thought I was at my window in the bank with a long line of women awaiting their turn. The one at the window was handing me a check, and, from force of habit, I said: "'How much money do you want?'

"You know, most women who present checks want to draw some and deposit the rest. Well, what do you think the wife did? Quick as a flash came her answer to my 'dopy' question:

"'Five dollars will do.'

"She got it, but I hope I won't dream any more."—New York Post.

An Eccentric Painter.

William Willard, well known as the painter of Massachusetts' governors, was very eccentric in his ways. His special aversion was the attempted purchase of his many old relics of furniture by people of wealth. A New York woman visiting in the vicinity of Sturbridge, hearing that the old artist possessed a beautiful colonial mirror and a rare clock, tried to buy them. Mr. Willard seemed to readily agree to the sale, but when asked when it would be convenient to have them packed replied, "Not until after the funeral." "Whose funeral?" asked the visitor. "Mine," replied Mr. Willard, with a chuckle.

An Early Railroad.

An old inventory of the Mohawk and Hudson railroad, now a part of the New York Central and Hudson River railroad, dated Jan. 1, 1833, gives the following as the total rolling stock of the road at that time: Three locomotives (the John Bull, the De Witt Clinton and the Experiment), three carriages, accommodating twelve passengers each; nine, accommodating nine each; two, accommodating six each, and three, accommodating eighteen each, a total capacity of 183.—Four Track News.

The Change of a Letter.

"Business men should be careful," writes a correspondent of a London newspaper, "to read their typewritten correspondence before committing it to the post. I have received a typewritten letter from a gentleman of German extraction who informs me that he is a 'wholesale tobacconist and cigar imposter.'"

Diplomacy.

"What did papa say?"
"He showed me the door."
"And what did you say?"
"I said it was certainly a very handsome door, but not what I had come to talk about. That made him laugh, and a minute later you were mine."

London's Intensity.

London is the most intense of all cities. New York is noisier; there is more rattle in Paris; in London alone you have that subdued roar, that indescribable murmur which suggests an irresistible volume of life that is deep as well as strong.—Christian.

Under the Chandelier.

Next time you go to a party watch some of the women as they stand under the chandeliers. Notice how a light shining from above brings out unsuspected lines and angles in all but the youngest and freshest faces. It is a severe test of beauty.

Down and Up.

"Wot did yer tell de judge?"
"Dat everybody wuz tryin' to keep me down."
"An' what did he do?"
"Sent me up."—Exchange.

Bluebeard.

"Who was the original Bluebeard?" asks a writer in the London Chronicle. He continues: "We owe the familiar Bluebeard of the pantomime to Charles Perrault, the Frenchman who published in 1696-97 his immortal stories of 'Bluebeard,' 'The Sleeping Beauty,' 'Little Red Riding Hood' and 'Cinderella.' But it is very uncertain who, if anybody, was Perrault's model for Bluebeard. Some have supposed that it was our Henry VIII., others that the tale is a lampoon upon the castle lords of knight errantry days in general. Perhaps the favorite candidate has been Giles de Rais, marshal of France, who was hanged and burned in 1440 for an awful series of crimes. During fourteen years he was believed to have kidnaped about 150 children, tortured them, sacrificed them to the devil, burned their bodies and buried their bones in his castle grounds. But the resemblance between his tale and Bluebeard's is too slight to be convincing."

An Unmarried Widow.

It would appear that the standard of happiness of at least one African widow in Manhattan had reached high water mark, judging by this advertisement published a few days ago:

Widow, colored, age 34, with high school training, vocalist, excellent cook, desires a husband same age or younger; awful extremely fair, clean, sober, moral and never been married. Address WIDOW.

The following personal, printed in a metropolitan newspaper the other day, deserves a class by itself:

A European gentleman wishes to meet an American who is the typical daughter of all that is most admirable in our age; one gifted with the bold frankness of understanding, the enthusiasm of expectancy, the merry cheerfulness of superiority, the psychical and physical alertness of those of tomorrow; the worldly independence of this optimist must be duplicated; view, matrimony.

Knives For Brides.

The custom of giving knives to brides was formerly a common practice, when it was fashionable for women to wear knives sheathed and suspended from their girdles. A wedding offered an opportunity of presenting something novel or ornamental in the cutlery line, and frequent reference to such presents occurs in the plays of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. In the "Witch of Edmonton," 1648, for instance, the bride is described as wearing "the new pair of Sheffield knives, fitted to one sheath." A list of trinkets usually worn by ladies about 1560 includes girdles, knives, purses and pin cases. In Dekker's "Match Me In London," 1631, the bride says to her jealous husband:

"See, at my girdle hang my wedding knives;
With these dispatch me."

Indignation.

Law Notes relates that Albert E. Pillsbury, former attorney general of Massachusetts, on visiting the birthplace of Horace Greeley in Amherst, N. H., noticed that there was no placard about the place to inform the public of its historical interest. Accordingly he himself tacked on the house a card which read: "This is the birthplace of Horace Greeley." While he was engaged at this task a passing native paused to read the card, and, turning to Mr. Pillsbury, he remarked with some acidity: "The gall of some of you fellers that hev made money in the city is fairly sick'nin'. What do you suppose folks here care whether you was born on this farm or some other farm? Them's my sentiments, Mr. Greeley, and don't you forgit it!"

Carried It With Him.

A short time ago a burial took place at sea from one of his majesty's cruisers. As there were no leads with the stores large pieces of coal were attached to the body in their place. All the crew were summoned on the quarter deck for the burial. Just as the body was being lowered Pat burst out laughing. Next morning the chaplain sent for Pat and asked for an explanation of his laughter at such a very solemn time. "Sure now," replied Pat, "Oi've heerd o' many a wan goin' below, but Oi've niver seen wan take 'is coal with un afore."—London Tatler.

Cleverly Evaded.

A wealthy Australian squatter in order to protect his six daughters from fortune hunters left his property to them in equal shares, but decreed that if either married without the consent of the trustees she should forfeit her share to her sisters. When the case came up at Sydney it was found that the six sisters had all married without permission, and thus each had forfeited her share in the property to her sisters, a state of affairs which the ladies doubtless considered highly satisfactory.

Neglected Opportunities.

"I wonder," said Farmer Corntossel, who had just returned from a trip to the big city, "why so many young men insist on not gettin' rich."

"What do you mean?" asked his wife.

"They all want to be lawyers or doctors instead o' bein' restaurant waiters or policemen."—Washington Star.

His Chance.

He (moodily)—Ah, tell me truly, is there anything that hasn't been said already on the subject of love? She (softly)—Probably not, but I am sure, very sure, indeed, everything on the subject hasn't been said to me.—Puck.

The Difference.

Tim—I'm feeling fine this morning. I was up with the lark. Jim—I'm not feeling so fine this morning. I was up with the lark last night.—Detroit Free Press.

LAWSON'S REMEDY

He Says It Will Cause Great Financial Revolution

TO WRECK THE "SYSTEM"

Advises Unloading of Stocks and Bonds at Present High Prices --Has Something to Say About Insurance Companies

St. Paul, July 14.—Thomas W. Lawson of Boston gave a talk to a large audience at the People's church last night. He declared that should his so-called remedy, which he did not make public, be put into effect, there would be a great financial revolution; there would be no more stock inflation; the money stolen from the people by the "system" would be returned to the people and, because railroads and industrial corporations would have only to earn a fair percentage on the true value of their investments, the cost of living would be reduced and wage earners would be able to enjoy greater luxuries and to lay by a greater portion of their savings.

As to when he would propound this remedy, he said that it would be foolish to make it known until the people were ready for it; otherwise the "system" would find means to render it non-effective. The people must first get rid of their stocks and bonds, sell them to the "system" at the present inflated prices, and then when the "system" is forced to let them go, the people should buy them back cheaply and forever keep the control in their own hands. When this had been accomplished his remedy, which he declared to be a simple business proposition, could be put into force, and there would never again be inflation of capital stocks.

Asked as to whether his plan was a dangerous one, he replied that it was; that it is dangerous "for the other fellow." A panic might ensue; in fact he hoped and believed a panic would ensue, but not until the people had sold their stocks to the "system."

"My friends," said Lawson, "Wall street is nothing but a trick machine. Every year Rockefeller, Rogers, Morgan and others of their class run the American people through that machine from one end to the other and as they pass through the money in their pockets falls into the system's bucket. What I propose to you is simply to reverse the operation; run the system through the other way, and in that manner separate them from their ill-gotten gains and return their stolen millions to the rightful owners—the American people.

"I tested the people in December. I put in some advertisements, and stocks dropped $400,000,000. I didn't do it; the people did it when I got the kernel of truth that I gave them.

"I told the people that the three big insurance companies were rotten. They spent $3,250,000 to answer me. They declared I was a fakir. I gave them four months to be out in the middle of the street fighting and gouging. They were doing it in three.

"I wouldn't have dared to tell you what the insurance commissioner of New York has told you. If I wanted to steal I would take a dark lantern and go out robbing banks, taking my chances. I wouldn't take the pennies and dollars of poor people, and spend 100,000 of them for a dinner.

"They are now proving that every dollar that goes in is shrunk and tapped, and the stealings have accounted for $150,000,000 in 30 years. I offered Hyde $50,000,000 for his stock, so I could recover the stealings for the people. He refused, and sold lately for $2,500,000."

Lawson Talks at Minneapolis

Minneapolis, July 14.—Thomas W. Lawson of Boston was the guest of the Minneapolis Commercial club. In an address he said: "I have several millions myself and I wronged the American people in getting them. But I did not know it at the time. When the time comes I will give that money back to them. John D. Rockefeller is worth $500,000,000 and every dollar that he has he got dishonestly. If I live I'm going to make the American people sell every dollar's worth of stock they have and by that time they'll know better than to buy back."

Monarchs Plan an Alliance

Stockholm, July 14.—It is stated on good authority that a German-Swedish alliance is seriously contemplated. The question was discussed at a conference between Emperor William and King Oscar on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern at Gefle yesterday. The conference lasted over two hours.

Paper Trust to Be Probed

Milwaukee, July 14.—A special United States grand jury will be summoned in September to meet in Milwaukee. It is said it will devote itself into an inquiry into the affairs of the General Paper company, the so-called "paper trust."

CITY FINANCES.

Half the Appropriations Unexpended on July 1.

The June 30 statement of the City Treasurer and City Auditor is just out, showing the expenditures for the first six months on account of the year 1905 to have been $262,500.53, which added to $320,622.75 on account of 1904 makes the total expenditures $583,123.28.

Of the total appropriations of $574,209.41 there is a balance of $313,789.73.

The receipts aggregating $661,599.33 include $113,097.48 cash on hand Jan. 1 last, $310,000.00 by temporary loan, $93,751.62 by taxes of 1904 paid, $44,440.26 received from water, $19,795.57 from sewer assessments, $25,000.00 raised by water loan, $9,000.00 raised by loan, and smaller amounts.

CORRECT ATTIRE.

He Who Dresses In Good Taste Shows That He Respects Himself.

When our country was in the log cabin stage of its growth correct dress was not held in high regard, and obviously so. The stout hearted pioneers were too busy hewing paths and blazing trails to cultivate life's finer side. Theirs was the rough work of field and camp, of hammer and saw. But times, men and manners have changed, and a new conception of dress has sprung up. Young men especially recognize the direct relation of correct dress in business and social preferment. The well dressed man carries his introduction with him—he is master of himself and of the situation. He commands the respect of others because he shows that he respects himself.

It is true that there are some men of wealth and position who slur their clothes and even some who feign to scorn the niceties of dress. The habits of a careless youth have left their imprint on such men, and it is quite certain that their disdain of dress played no part in their success and detracts measurably from their enjoyment of it, for, after all, the ripest fruit of success is the esteem of one's fellows, and who can esteem the slovenly? In talking to a man one's attention naturally roves to his clothes, his hair, his teeth and his finger nails. Dandruff on the shoulder, stains on the waistcoat and unshaven face, untidy hair, creases in the coat, a soiled collar, a mussed cravat, proclaim in trumpet tones that a man lacks the truest refinement—respect of self.—Success.

Making It Easy For Him.

"The most difficult part of a pastor's duty," said a New York preacher, "is the pastoral calls. I have always remembered one of the first I ever made, when I was a green youth just out of a theological seminary. I had been called to the bedside of a member of my church who was well known for his peculiarities and crankiness. After talking with him a few minutes I said:

"'Shall I offer a short prayer with you?'

"'Short or long. Use your own judgment,' said he.

"More and more embarrassed, I hesitated, and then said, 'What shall I pray for?'

"'Exercise your own discretion as to selection of topics,' said he."

ONE DROWNED.

On Braintree Little Pond Last Night.

Four of Boat Party Rescued.

The Victim Miss Jessie Brown, Aged 16 Years.

On Braintree Little pond Thursday evening one young lady lost her life and four others had very narrow escapes from drowning. All five were members of a boating party which started out about 9 o'clock.

The victim was Miss Jessie Brown, aged 16 years, a daughter of James Brown of Pond street, and the others in the party were her sister Annie, aged 18 years; May McGibbon, aged 15 years; Elmer Smith aged 16, and Fred Diute, aged 17.

The boat was about 300 yards from shore when the fatality occurred. Smith was rowing and Diute was in the bow. Diute said one of the girls was changing her position to get alongside Smith, who held the oars, when the boat capsized.

The moment the boat began to capsize the girls screamed for help and a crowd was attracted to the shore. Harry Simonds and Perly Proctor put out in a boat and reached the overturned craft in a few minutes. They found Smith holding up Annie Brown and May McGibbon, but there was no sight of Diute or Jessie Brown.

The rescuers took Smith and the two girls into the boat and brought them ashore. About this time Diute swam ashore in an exhausted and dazed condition. He said he was struck on the back by the side of the boat when she turned and that he went down once. It was with difficulty that he reached the shore as he was not a very good swimmer.

A search for the body of Miss Brown was begun at once. The water is seven feet deep where the boat was overturned.

Elmer Smith, who was rowing the boat, denied that any of the girls were changing seats but said he did not know what caused the accident.

Smith is one of the boys who escaped miraculously from the shoe factory explosion in Brockton. He saved two girls that time and escaped through a small space between piles of debris.

Has the Front Seat.

The Herald teachers are enjoying the beautiful surroundings of Portland, Oregon, which claim attention as well as the Lewis and Clark exposition. There was a heavy shower Thursday morning, but during the day the teachers enjoyed a long automobile ride and visited several of the exhibition buildings.

That Miss Underwood is participating in the side trips is shown by pictures which are being published. Whether it is a sight-seeing automobile or an observation car, she generally has the front seat.

Miss Underwood will probably see today Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Welch and Mr. and Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick of this city who are due at the World's Fair city.

Accident.

Henry Forsberg of Carlson street, who was injured on Thursday at the Ledger office by having his arm caught in the press is comfortable today and in good spirits. No bones were broken, but Dr. Jones who responded promptly found it necessary to take many stitches. The practical benefits of the instructions in physiology at the Woodward Institute was shown in the bravery of one of the former pupils, now in the Ledger office, who knew what to do, and greatly comforted the sufferer both before and after the doctor arrived. The injured boy also showed considerable grit during the dressing of the wound.

BRAINTREE BARBER

Suspected of the Murder of His Wife at Belmont.

It is now thought that the woman who was found brutally murdered on the Arlington golf links on Thursday, as reported on page 2 today, was the wife of a barber at Braintree, known as John Schidloffsky, a pole.

He and his wife lived at Brockton and he came daily to South Braintree to work until about a week ago.

The husband is suspected and the following description of the man is issued by the police:

John Schidloffsky. Pole, 28 years.
Height, 5 feet, 6 inches.
Weight, 150 to 160 pounds.
Complexion, light.
Hair, light brown.
Build, medium slender.
Trade, barber.
Wanted for murder of his wife.

TO SUPREME COURT.

Secretary Duncan and Union Granite Cutters Appeal.

An attempt to quash the indictments of nine members of the Hardwick branch of the granite cutters' union and Secretary Duncan and another officer of the national association, charged with conspiracy, failed in the Caledonia county court today says a St. Johnsbury Vt., dispatch to the Globe, and the respondents appeal to the supreme court.

Last March several Hardwick granite cutters took out withdrawal cards and went to work without helpers. The union objected to this and several firms were boycotted. The boycotted firms laid information against the union's officials and eleven indictments were returned.

Press Finals.

The final 36-hole round for the championship and consolation trophies in the annual tournament of the Press Golf Club of New England will be played today on the course of the Wollaston Golf Club at Montclair. In the championship event M. F. O'Connell of the Globe will contest with H. M. Cole of the Boston News Bureau, and in the consolation division George H. Sargent of the Transcript meets Daniel T. O'Connell of the Republic.

Granite Men's Outing.

The Barre Daily Times says: Nearly all the arrangements have been completed for the annual outing of the members of the Granite Manufacturers Association, which is to be a trip to Quincy, Mass., and Crescent Park, on the Providence river in the state of Rhode Island the latter part of this month. The party will leave Barre on the night of July 27, on a special train over the Wells River railroad. Two sleeping cars will be attached and a round trip fare of $6.50 has been arranged to Boston. The party will have one day in Boston and Quincy. The manufacturers are planning to shut down their plants for the day and a half they will be away during running time.

Mr. Lodge's "power" will always be more or less out of joint. There are Massachusetts Republicans who stick to the old fashioned notion that he is a servant, not master, of the Republicans of this State.—New Bedford Standard.

Origin of the Derby.

The twelfth Earl of Derby is unknown to the reader of the ordinary history book. Lovers of art know him vaguely as the peer who married the pretty and popular actress Eliza Farren, whom the young Lawrence painted so brilliantly. But the earl yearly has his revenge when all the world and his wife flock to Epsom to see the race for the Derby stakes, for that race, in its institution in 1780, was named after the jovial young peer who was one of the leading patrons of the Georgian turf.—London Standard.

Butter In Slices.

From time immemorial in Cambridge, England, the dairymen roll the butter so as to form a long stick weighing a pound, which they sell in slices, as if it were sausage. In the market the butter merchants do not need to use either weights or scales. A simple glance is sufficient for these people accustomed to the time honored practice. A very neat cut with the knife divides the yard into halves, quarters or eighths very exactly, and it appears that the customer is never given short measure.

Drift of Opinion.

☞It will, we suppose, hurt the feelings of Chauncey M. Depew to be ticketed and proclaimed a thief, and yet that is exactly what has happened to him. His real estate transactions with the Equitable company, of which he has long been a director, is denounced by all newspapers which say anything about it as "plain stealing." His cynical statement when under examination that his verbal guaranty of the investment was not "legally binding" shows that he stole with his eyes very wide open. He may have to make that promise good or go to jail.—Hartford Times.

☞The full testimony of Messrs. Hyde and Alexander is sickening reading. To such callous betrayal of a great trust it must be hard to find a parallel. These men had not simply itching palms, every square inch of their cuticle was inflamed with the desire for money not lawfully theirs. Their confessions let us into an atmosphere of sordid politico-financial intrigue and swindling where every honest man must feel himself stifled. The right place for these architects of financial disaster and moral ruin is in the prisoner's dock. There can be no satisfactory disposal of the flaming scandals until the douche of criminal prosecution is turned upon them. Let the whole be laid bare in court. Let all the loose ends be followed up in court, all the mysterious suppressions of evidence accounted for. If we have anywhere in state or county a relentless prosecutor, his is the opportunity to apply caustic of the penal code to this ulcer.—New York Evening Post.

MURDER IN WOODS

Almost Decapitated Body of a Woman Is Found

IS NOT YET IDENTIFIED

Appearances Indicate That She Had a Severe Struggle With a Man--Body Dragged to Place Where It Was Found.

Belmont, Mass., July 14.—The Massachusetts district police and the police of Belmont are investigating the murder of a woman whose body was found yesterday afternoon near the links of the Arlington Golf club, over the Belmont town line. The throat had been cut, a deep, jagged wound having almost severed the head from the body. The identity of the victim has not been learned.

The body was found behind a stone wall and from the general appearance of the spot and the ground in the vicinity it was judged that the body had been dragged to the place where it was found some time Wednesday night.

The Arlington Golf club links, in the rear of which the body was found, is situated on a road leading directly from Arlington to Belmont Center. The woods to the rear of the golf club are not extensive, but are fairly dense and seldom traversed. It is about a mile from the woods to the Belmont police station at Belmont Center, and a little more than a mile to Arlington Center.

The description of the body as furnished by the medical examiner is as follows: Age, between 30 and 40 years; height, 5 feet 2 inches; weight, 130 pounds; hair, dark brown; eyes, blue. There were no identifying marks found on the body.

Dr. Swan held an autopsy last night and his conclusions were that the woman had been murdered. Death, he found, was due to multiple cuts and bruises on the head, face and neck. The skull had been fractured in the front part of the head. The head itself had been practically severed from the body by a sharp knife or similar instrument.

The crime was discovered by a farm hand named Peter Igo, whose attention was first attracted by a woman's hat. He looked at the hat a second or two, and then observed marks along the ground and among the shrubbery, which indicated that some heavy object had been dragged for several feet. There were further marks as if a struggle had occurred. The murderer had evidently attempted to get the body of the woman over a barbed-wire fence which skirts a small pond. Failing to get the body over the fence, it is thought the murderer retraced his steps, as he evidently dragged the body back a number of feet, and then took it to a shaded depression alongside of the stone wall, about 75 feet distant. The body was then thrown over the wall and into a gully on the property of the golf club.

In addition to a black picture hat, a parasol with blood stains was found nearby the marks on the ground. The hat, when first seen by Igo, rested near the barbed-wire fence. Later a pair of cuffs, belonging to a man's blue-striped shirt, were picked up near the pond. There were also blood stains on the cuffs. In the vicinity a woman's pocketbook and a bottle containing whiskey were found.

Later the police stated that a portion of a man's gold watch chain had been found hanging to one of the barbs of the wire fence, and a woman's beaded necklace had been picked up near the body. In the pocketbook was a slip of paper on which was written two names, a man's and a woman's, but the police refused to give the names. The purse also contained a Chinese laundry check and 58 cents in money. The police also stated that the clothes on the body of the woman were very badly torn, indicating that there had been a struggle.

Dr. Swan found no traces of alcohol on the body and he is certain that the woman had not been drinking. The woman had not been criminally assaulted. Two stones, weighing about 15 pounds each and bearing blood stains, were found on the scene of the murder, and it is thought that the wounds on the head were made by them. After almost decapitating the woman, the murderer made a deep cut over the left breast, evidently with a knife, the same weapon he had used on the throat.

From the clothing and the appearance of the hands the authorities have decided that the woman belonged to the working class. Her waist and skirts were made of inexpensive material.

Late last night Detectives Whitney and Rhoades hastily left the town and went to Boston. It is supposed that they are investigating a possible clue furnished by the slip of paper found in the pocketbook picked up at the scene of the murder.

Perhaps a Clue at Brockton

Brockton, Mass., July 14.—State Detective Whitney and Officer Rhoades, also of the district police, arrived in this city from Boston early this morning. By previous arrangement over the telephone an officer of the Brockton city police force met the state officers at the railroad station and, without calling at police headquarters, the three started on a tour of investigation, the nature of which was not disclosed. It is supposed that the officers came here to follow a clue which Whitney and Rhoades picked up in their investigation of the murder of a woman at Belmont.

HOT WAVE HOLDS ON

Greater Part of New England Sufferiog From its Effects

Boston, July 14.—For more than a week New England, that is that portion not affected by the sea breezes, has sweltered in an almost uninterrupted wave of intensely heated air, more or less charged with moisture, and yesterday was no exception. The rays of the sun shortly after noon were probably more powerful than have been felt this year, and at least a score of people in Boston and its vicinity were prostrated and two persons succumbed altogether. The dead were Edward Flynn and Martin Mulkern, both of this city.

The effect of the downward pouring of heat was somewhat mitigated by a brisk breeze from the southwest, and numerous clouds which shut off the sun every few minutes. The atmosphere was not quite so saturated with moisture as on Wednesday, but the thermometer touched 91 at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, although it fell slowly but steadily toward night.

Several thunder showers moved somewhat listlessly across Massachusetts and other parts of New England, but none of them had force enough to create any amount of damage.

The weather bureau is unable to hold out any prospects for cooler weather before Sunday, and, perhaps, not until the first of next week, the temperature being very high throughout the entire country.

Police Descend on Summer Resort

Hull, Mass., July 14.—The police department of Hull last night raided a number of beach resorts at Nantasket and seized a quantity of machines which the authorities claim are gambling devices. Various kinds of slot machines were seized and the officers closed a bowling alley and stopped a number of card games. The police also took possession of a telegraph wire which they alleged had been transmitting horse races for the benefit of pool patrons.

Changed Seats and Upset Boat

Braintree, Mass., July 14.—While five young people were rowing on Braintree Little pond last evening, the boat capsized and one of them, Jessie Brown, was drowned. Two other girls were held up until help arrived by Elmer Smith, while the other occupant of he boat, Fred Diute, managed to reach shore alone in an exhausted condition. It is said that two of the girls attempted to change seats and in doing so overturned the boat.

Reward of $400 and No Questions

Newport, R. I., July 14.—Discouraged by the inability of the police to apprehend the burglars who robbed her of $10,000 worth of jewelry last Tuesday, Mrs. Herman F. Oelrichs offers a reward of $400 for the return of the missing jewels. Mrs. Oelrichs announces that no questions will be asked the person returning the valuables.

Conspiracy Indictments Stand

St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 14.—An attempt to quash the indictments of nine members of the Hardwick branch of the Granite Cutters union and two officers of the national association, charged with conspiracy in boycotting several firms, failed in the Caledonia county court, and the respondents appealed to the supreme court.

Weavers Won't Press Demand

Fall River, Mass., July 14.—The weavers of the Fall River mills discussed last evening the refusal of the manufacturers associated with M. C. D. Borden to grant the old scale of wages, and at the conclusion adjourned without taking any action toward pressing the demand at this time.

Mind Deranged by Heat

"Robbed King of Throne"

Stockholm, July 14.—The semi-official Dagblad, referring to the rumor that Prince Charles of Denmark may ascend the throne of Norway, says: It would cause astonishment, not to say worse, if Denmark allied herself with a country which through revolution robbed a lawful king of one of his thrones.

Hyde Resigns a Position

Philadelphia, July 14.—James H. Hyde of the Equitable Life Assurance society has resigned as vice president of the Commercial Trust company of this city and the directors of that company accepted the resignation. CITY BREVITIES

Have the Daily Ledger sent to your vacation address.

The City Council Committee on Streets will meet tonight.

Milne & Chalmers have built a new engine house at their South Quincy plant, and have made other repairs.

Mrs. F. J. Leonard of Bigelow street is entertaining her father from Whitman, who is enjoying trips to Houghs Neck and the beaches.

The dock trial of the battleship Rhode Island at the Fore River works was to have been held Thursday. It was impossible to get her ready, however, and the trial has been postponed until Monday.

A letter received from Councilman Spargo says that he arrived on the other side safe and sound. The trip over was delightful. The water was very smooth all the way and not a person on board the vessel was sick.

Word has been received from the Barre Granite Manufacturers' Association that they will leave Barre on the night of Thursday, July 27, arriving in Boston the following morning. Friday each man will do as he pleases. Saturday everybody goes to Crescent Park, R. I.

☞Eyeglasses fitted scientifically. No guess work.—Williams.

Quincys vs. Braintrees.

The Quincys will play Braintrees at South Braintree on Saturday and a hotly contested game is booked.

It looks as though the Quincy team have struck their gait, as they played a snappy game at South Quincy Saturday and hit the ball when hits meant runs.

Another noticeable feature was that they played the hit and run game which Manager Flynn believes is the kind of playing that wins games. The team will line up the same as last Saturday, with Anderson the new man, who looks a find for the Quincy team at third, and Galvin a West Quincy younster and a member of the Boston College team, in a Quincy uniform. Manager Flynn believes in giving the young fellows a try out and it looks as though in this respect he has used good judgment, as has been shown in the case of young Powers and Rooney. Galvin has the reputation of being a fast fielder and is also a fine hitter. It is expected that a large crowd of rooters will accompany the team. Black or Welch are slated to do the pitching. Game to be played at French's Common at 3.30.

—The sweet girl graduate will continue to be sweet for three or four years, at least.

Jerome Made a Move to Probe Equitable Affairs

DOCUMENT IS REFUSED

Order of Governor For Copy of the Detailed Evidence Before the Insurance Commissioner Is Ignored--Paper Printed It

New York, July 14.—District Attorney Jerome has made an unsuccessful attempt to secure from the office of First Deputy Superintendent of Insurance Hunter in this city a copy of the detailed evidence on the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society, taken before Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks. This is the report which already has been printed, and of which Jerome said it was "funny" that he could not obtain a copy when a newspaper secured and printed it.

After failure to get the report, Jerome sent Hunter a letter in which he said that he had Governor Higgins' order for a copy of the report and requested that it be delivered to one of his assistants. Mr. Hunter declined to comply with, the request unless Jerome could prove that the copy in Hunter's hands was the property of Hendricks and would agree to return it within a reasonable time, when requested to do so. Mr. Jerome then sent another letter to Hunter in which he detailed all the correspondence which had passed between himself and the governor on the subject, as well as copies of the letters exchanged by the district attorney and Hendricks. Concluding, the letter says:

"This morning I sent my assistant, Mr. Turnbull, to you, in view of your letter to me, to ask that I be given a copy as promised by the governor in his letter of June 28. Mr. Turnbull informs me in substance that you said you would deliver a copy to me if I would give you something over my signature to show that the copy was the property of the superintendent of insurance, and would, in addition, state that I would return it within a reasonable time and when called for.

"It is always the habit of this office to receipt for papers and always the custom of this office to return papers to the custody where they belong, but it is not the custom of this office, nor will the district attorney agree to return upon demand to a subordinate, a copy of evidence directed to be furnished by the governor of the state of New York.

"I regret that there should be any misunderstanding about this matter and ask that you deliver to me, without qualification or conditions, a copy of the testimony taken by the superintendent of insurance pursuant to the promise made by the superintendent of insurance to the governor. Upon the delivery of this I will receipt for it, and will answer to your superiors for its safe custody and return at the proper time."

Mr. Jerome said last night: "Over and beyond what is shown by the correspondence I want to say I believe Governor Higgins has done everything in his power to aid me in getting possession of the testimony taken by Superintendent Hendricks."

Hendricks Silent as to Leak

Syracuse, N. Y., July 14.—Insurance Superintendent Hendricks declines to discuss the leak by which the testimony taken in the Equitable investigation became public. Asked as to why reference to the Depew Improvement company and its exorbitant loan from the Equitable was not contained in the preliminary report, Hendricks said: "That was ancient history. We had gone into that before. We told them to call the loan. We marked the valuation of the property down to $150,000. They kicked on that, and we told them that if we made any change it would be less. They then foreclosed the mortgage on the property, bid it in for $50,000 and they have it yet."

Classed as Public Document

Albany, July 14.—Bearing in mind Governor Higgins' statement that the testimony taken by the state insurance department in its investigation of the Equitable Life Assurance society was a public document, Attorney General Mayer gave access to the typewritten copy which he received a week ago. The main portions of the testimony have already been published and discussed. The remainder adds little or nothing to what is already known of the company's affairs.

Alexander In Bad Plight

New York, July 14.—James W. Alexander, former president of the Equitable Life Assurance society, continues very ill. He is undergoing treatment in a secluded place in Long Island. According to statements made, Alexander does not even know that Paul Morton is at the head of the Equitable. Neither has he been informed of the Ryan purchase and the installation of the three trustees. The fact of the acceptance of his own resignation and that of Hyde, it is declared, has not been made known to him, and neither has information been conveyed to him of the return of syndicate money, nor the purport of the report of Superintendent Hendricks.

Conscience Fund Over $400,000

Washington, July 14.—A contribution to the United States treasury conscience fund received here carries the total amount beyond the $400,000 mark. The conscience fund was established in 1811.

PLEASES PEACE PARTY

Czar Signs Appointment of Witte as Chief Peace Envoy

St. Petersburg, July 14.—Emperor Nicholas has signed the appointment of M. Witte, president of the committee of ministers, to be chief plenipotentiary representing the Russian government in the peace negotiations to be conducted next month in the United States. The appointment clothes Witte with plenary powers.

Official notification of the designation of Witte to head the mission was forwarded to Washington. M. Witte will take passage on the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which sails from Cherbourg July 26.

The peace party is overjoyed at the fact that the negotiations have been placed in Witte's hands. It is the firm belief that this not only secures a successful termination of the negotiations, but that Witte will secure the best possible terms for his country.

Some of the grand dukes and courtiers of the emperor's entourage, however, are reported to be furious at Witte's selection.

Saw Brother Poison Himself

Columbia, S. C., July 14.—At the inquest in the case of R. K. Dargan, former president of the Independent Cotton Oil company, it developed that Pegram Dargan, brother of the dead man, was in the room with the suicide when he took carbolic acid and remained with him until he died. The brother was placed on the stand, but declined to make a statement. The physician who was called to Dargan's aid testified that Pegram Dargan said he bought the acid and saw his brother drink it.

Thirteen Deaths From Heat

New York, July 14.—Thirteen deaths attributed to the hot weather were recorded in New York yesterday. In addition a score or more of persons were overcome by the heat and are under treatment in the city hospitals. Despite a drenching rainfall during the forenoon and scattered showers throughout the day, the thermometer rose to a maximum of 85 degrees at 11 o'clock in the morning. Last night a strong westerly breeze brought a share of relief.

Oil Companies Peddle Rebates

Kansas City, July 14.—The giving of rebates as a common practice to secure business was brought out in the testimony of A. G. Shires, traveling salesman for the Penn Refining company, who was a witness at the hearing in the state's suit to oust the Standard Oil company, the Republic Oil company and the Waters-Pierce Oil company from Missouri.

Striking Tailors In a Riot

New York, July 14.—One man was probably fatally injured, more than a score were slightly hurt, and hundreds were involved in a riot of striking tailors and their sympathizers in Williamsburg. Before the police could disperse the crowd it had wrecked the clothing factory of Isaac Newman. Newman will probably die. Two arrests were made.

Hooker's Character Praised

Hooker in the appellate division at Brooklyn took the witness stand at the joint legislative session called to investigate charges against him and spoke in high terms of his ability as a judge and his personal character as shown in their relations.

May Regulate Express Rates

Frankfort, Ky., July 14.—The Kentucky railroad commission holds that under the constitution of the state the express companies doing business in the state are common carriers as are railroad corporations, and that it is within its province to regulate the rates where charges are made that said rates are exorbitant.

Would Die by Axe

New York, July 14.—"I want your honor to kill me with the same axe I used in killing my wife," was the statement made by Nichols Mardics, convicted of wife murder, as Judge Blair, in Jersey City, sentenced him to be hanged. Mardics killed his wife during a jealous quarrel last May.

Weaver Strikes a Snag

Philadelphia, July 14.—Mayor Weaver has received a setback at the hands of the common council, that body refusing to comply with his request to authorize him to employ special counsel to represent the city in the matter of certain contracts that are to be brought before the courts.

Detroit Going Out of Commission

Washington, July 14.—The cruiser Detroit is coming north from Dominican waters and will go to the Boston navy yard, where she will be placed out of commission. In addition to having a damaged propeller, the Detroit is in need of a general overhauling.

Drop In Price of Sugar

San Francisco, July 14.—A reduction of 20 cents per 100 pounds in all grades of sugar is announced. The cut is attributed to the weakness of the raw sugar market, the price of that article having recently dropped 1 1-4 cents a pound.

Small Schooner Sunk

St. Johns, July 14.—Steamer Harlow was in collision with a small schooner in the Bay of Islands. The schooner, with a cargo valued at about $1000, was sunk. No lives were lost.

Shuvaloff's Assassin Identified

St. Petersburg, July 14.—The assassin of Prefect of Police Shuvaloff of Moscow has been identified as a former school teacher of St. Petersburg named Kulikovsky, who was actively connected with the political agitation. He was arrested in 1901 and three years later was exiled to Siberia for six years, but he escaped in 1904 and was supposed to have gone abroad. He was next discovered at Moscow in June last. He was arrested and taken to a police station from which he escaped. Upon his escape Shuvaloff offered a reward for Kulikovsky's capture.

Balfour Against Conscription

London, July 14.—In the house of commons last night Premier Balfour referred to the speech of Lord Roberts in the house of lords, in which the latter said that the armed forces of Great Britain as a body were unfitted and unprepared for war and declared that the choice lay between conscription or some practical system of universal training. The premier said he could never be led to believe that conscription could be successfully adopted in England.

Hummel Must Stand Trial

New York, July 14.—Attorney Hummel, under indictment on a charge of criminal conspiracy in connection with the Dodge-Morse divorce tangle, will not be permitted to inspect the minutes of the grand jury which returned the indictment. In denying the application for such permission, Judge Davy declared that he was convinced that there was evidence to sustain the indictment. Judge Davy appointed Sept. 18 as the date for the beginning of the trial.

Duel Between French Senators

Paris, July 14.—Senator Prevet was severely wounded in the forearm last evening during a sword duel with Senator Delpech as the result of a dispute over the questions involved in the government's amnesty bill.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The Franco-American Financial association was formally incorporated at Paris with a capital of $10,000,000.

At a meeting of the western window glass jobbers at Chicago the retail price of window glass was advanced 10 percent.

A Remarkable Dwarf.

Perhaps the most remarkable dwarf on record was Sir Jeffrey Hudson, the little fellow whom Scott introduces in "Peveril of the Peak." He was born in Rutlandshire, England, in 1619.

When eight years of age he was presented by the Duke of Buckingham to Queen Henrietta in a cold pie. He afterward became attached to the court of Charles I. At one of the court masks the king's porter, a man of gigantic size, who used to torment the little dwarf, pulled from one pocket a loaf of bread and from the other Jeffrey, much to the surprise and amusement of the company present. Jeffrey was at this time only eighteen inches in height.

He remained at this stature until he was thirty years of age, after which a curious exception to the laws of growth took place, since Jeffrey rapidly grew to be three feet nine inches in height, whereas most men do not grow a quarter of an inch after the age of thirty. This dwarf had an enormous head and very large hands and feet; otherwise his proportions were symmetrical, and his face was considered handsome.—Youth's Companion.

The Useful Donkey.

In Syria, says a traveler, I saw a donkey put to an extraordinary use. One evening just before the dinner hour in our tent the Arab cook rushed hurriedly out of the door of the kitchen tent with a glass carafe in his hand. He went up to the row of donkeys, horses and packages tethered close by. Seizing the tail of the smallest of the donkeys, he hastily thrust it into the carafe, gave it two or three vigorous turns inside the bottle and then as quickly removed the unconcerned tail. Thus he had cleansed the water bottle for our dinner. It is in Syria also that the strange fashion exists of shaving the donkeys' coats in different ways, much as a lady of fashion shaves her French poodle. A choice breed of donkeys, known as "Bagdad mules," is much cherished in the neighborhood of Damascus. Their long, hairy coat, usually of pure white or pale gray, admits of fantastic clipping.

Money Hotel Cashiers Dislike.

"It is a curious habit the great American public has of wanting the kind of money that hotel cashiers dislike and have the least of," said one of those useful functionaries. "Many are the times each day that I am called upon, by ladies especially, for fifty cent pieces. Quarters won't answer. They want half dollars, though why that particular coin I've never been able to understand. No cashier cares to keep halves on hand, but always maintains a good stock of quarters and dimes, for the reason of their greater convenience. Many of the guests also beg for two dollar notes despite the fact that of all forms of currency they are the most objectionable. We never take them voluntarily and pay them out as fast as they come in."—Washington Post.

Ponderous Handel.

Handel was very large, weighing over 200 pounds. His figure was unwieldy and he rolled from side to side as he walked. His hands were so thick and ponderous that people wondered how he could play the harpsichord or organ at all. His face was red and coarse, with a long nose, thick lower lip and full chin with a dimple in it. His eyes were prominent and eyebrows very full. He was a monstrous eater and at times drank heavily. His conceit was stupendous, and he always entertained the idea that there was no music to be compared to his own. He was boorish in manner, quick in temper, and when irritated would sometimes give utterance to a robust oath in the German language. His contemporaries said he looked like a porter.

Orange Trees.

An orange grove in full bearing is one of the most delightful sights the eye can witness. The trees are a beautiful shape if left as nature made them. The limbs come nearly to the ground, so close that an orange picker goes under the tree flat on his back and often cuts 100 oranges from the tree before he comes out. Oranges are never picked, but are cut off with shears having a spring between the handles. An orange that has no stem on it is considered a "cull" and is not packed by a first class packer.

A Chance For Science.

"Scientists have discovered that a caterpillar can eat 600 times its weight of food in a month."

"Say," replied the dyspeptic billionaire, "I wonder if the scientists have ever done any experimenting in the way of grafting caterpillars' stomachs on other things?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

That Cozy Feeling.

The Visitor—What a delightfully snug little flat you have! The Renter—Isn't it? When we open the door we're in the middle of the room, and when the sunshine comes in we have to move some of the furniture out.—Chicago Tribune.

Anonymous.

A Birmingham churchwarden was reading at a vestry meeting a list of subscriptions to the parochial funds. The list began as follows: "The vicar, a guinea; Mrs. ——, half a guinea; an anonymous donor, myself, 25 shillings."

Irresistible.

She—How do you suppose his Satanic majesty succeeded in tempting Mother Eve? He—More than likely he told her that apples were good for the complexion.

Covetousness swells the principal to no purpose and lessens the use to all purposes.—Taylor.

KISSES TO HARVESTERS

Kansas Girl's Scheme For Saving Her Father's Crops.

HUGS ALSO AS AN INDUCEMENT

Farmer's Daughter Gave Them to Best Men Who Got Wheat In Before Rain—College Man Entered In Lists Had Pretty Miss Sutton's Admirer on Next Farm Beaten, but Fainted at Crucial Moment.

Although Saline county, in Kansas, has been drenched with rain and many farmers are mourning for their ruined wheat crops, the yield belonging to S. H. Huston is safely stacked, all because his pretty daughter Mabel offered kisses and hugs to the first three men to do the heaviest work just before the heavy rains set in, says a Topeka (Kan.) dispatch.

At no time for years have men been so hard to get to work in the wheatfields of central Kansas as this year. College boys have tried it, and most of them have stuck to the task, but there are few of them to be had, and the farmers have been obliged to get along with what hands they could pick up.

The greater part of the Huston wheat was unstacked, and the farmer saw the loss of a crop worth $6,000 staring him in the face when the government reports came that continuous and heavy rain was expected. The loss of his crops meant financial ruin to Huston, and both he and his daughter, who is eighteen years old, took to horseback and rode far and near, gathering up men and offering double wages for any that would go to their farm. But hands were scarce, and others were offering high prices. Things looked as gloomy as the sky above when the hands started for the fields the other morning.

Unknown to her father Mabel, who is as pretty a Kansas girl as ever rode a mustang, told the servant she would carry buttermilk to the fields that morning and keep on filling the men up with the grateful drink until every head of wheat was shocked. So she appeared in the fields with gallons upon gallons of the cool drink, and after every man had his fill the girl called them around her.

"Boys," she said, blushing to the tips of her pretty ears, "daddy's wheat must be saved before the rain comes or I won't be able to go back to school this fall, and you all know how badly I want to have just one season more of preparation for college so I won't be behind those bright eastern girls.

"Well, I am going to offer a prize for the best workers, and it's a prize that no man has won yet, kisses and hugs for the best men here. To the man who stacks the most wheat today I will give three kisses and a hug—real old fashioned Kansas girl's hug. To the man who is second I will give two kisses, and the third man shall have a real hard hug. So please save daddy's wheat."

Never was there such a harvesting in all Kansas as that of the Huston wheat. Every man worked, not as if the crop were his own, but as if it belonged to Mabel and her college career depended on it, as it really did. The hands to a man refused most gallantly to stop work even for dinner, and for hours the contest seemed so even that any one of a dozen husky fellows might have been the winner. Toward evening it was noticed that three men were leading all the rest, and when Miss Mabel brought the buttermilk again and noticed their progress she grew pinker and pinker and prettier and prettier. Finally the contest was seen to be almost a tie between Fred Norton, the brawny son of a neighbor, and two young college men who had left their universities earlier than usual for the health giving work in the fields.

Besides the test of brawn it began to be felt that there was another reason for the determined rivalry of the two pale eastern students, who had overdone athletics a little, and the boy from the Norton farm, who had deserted his father's work to join the lists for Mabel's caresses.

The way those college youths hustled that wheat was a caution. No one would have believed it had he not seen one breast the tape in the record breaking relay race and the other lift his shell out of the water on the long four miles. Finally one fell back a little, and it was between the other and young Norton, who plainly was working himself to death for love of the pretty Mabel. It was nearing the quitting hour, and the college man was ahead and looking as pale and undisturbed as when the race was begun, while Mabel sympathetically watched only the heroic struggles of Norton.

Maybe there was a tear in her eye, and maybe there wasn't. Anyway the former varsity sculler toppled over in a faint, and while they were pouring water over him young Norton struggled in a winner by two stacks.

There were tears in Mabel's eyes as she paid the winners and told them they had saved her father and her too. With Mr. Huston as judge she bestowed the kisses and hugs, the college man miraculously reviving to get his share before the cheering hands. If he got an extra kiss Mabel didn't care nor did he. Nor was Norton angry, for he wrung the college man's hand, but nary a wink was there in the eastern man's eye.

Sarasate, the great Spanish violinist, has, like most musicians, a belief in talismans. His particular mascot is in the form of a tiny replica in silver of the famous Guarnerius violin on which Paganini used to play. Tolstoi is in no sense a popular writer, yet his works have a wider circulation than any living writer, it is said. Up to the present his books have been printed in forty-five languages.

Judge Francis Miles Finch, the author of Memorial day's greatest poem, "The Blue and the Gray," is now living quietly at his home in Ithaca, a patriarch of seventy-eight years. Judge Finch's library, in which he has 2,000 and more volumes, is the same library in which, almost forty years ago, he penned the famous poem.

Worst Storm Of the Season.

TWO FIRE ALARMS.

But No Loss by Fire at Either Place.

Large Barn at Milton Struck and Totally Destroyed.

Damage Reported in All Parts of the City--Big Downpour of Rain.

Seldom has Quincy been visited by a heavier shower than that of last night. The thunder was heavy and the lightning sharp. The city, however, was fortunate to escape without much damage.

The first signs of the storm came between 4.30 and 5 o'clock, in the form of a heavy roll of distant thunder. The wind began to increase in violence as the storm approached and by 6 o'clock a heavy shower was in progress.

The lightning was unusually sharp, and the rain came down in torrents. Those who were caught out in it were drenched to the skin in an instant for umbrellas were of but little use.

The hard rain continued until just before 7 o'clock when the sky cleared and the sun came out. It was but a temporary clearness, however for at 7.15 it had again clouded in and another storm was in progress.

It was during this shower that the house of Miss Malone on South street was struck by lightning. Then came another lull in the storm, followed by another heavy shower.

While the rain stopped at intervals there was but little let up in the thunder and lightning, which continued heavy and sharp and incessant.

At 8.45, while it was raining in torrents, an alarm was sounded from Box 61, and the firemen must have been drenched to the skin.

This alarm called the department to a house on Hodges avenue that had been struck by lightning. There was no fire damage, however, and the recall sounded inside of five minutes.

And so it continued all the evening until along toward midnight when there was a clearing up shower and the moon came out bright and clear. There was a cool breeze and the heat had been tempered.

During the evening the house of Cornelius Duggan on Holmes street was struck and damaged some.

Early in the evening a skiff moored off Houghs Neck was struck and the stern shattered.

William Slaunwhite of Houghs Neck was in the act of picking up an axe when there was a blinding flash of lightning. He was thrown down and received quite a severe shock.

A dog on Granite street near the old Veazie house, was struck and killed.

A street railway signal box on Copeland street was struck and burnt, and the pole to which it was attached.

Frequently during the evening the circuit breakers at the Electric Light and Power station were blown out, and the lights were put out for a few seconds.

A number of the telephone lines were burnt out, but the police and fire alarm escaped serious damage.

Trees in various parts of the city suffered somewhat. Limbs were torn off and scattered about, and some trees were uprooted. Vegetable gardens were also damaged.

Although tons of water fell and at times the streets were flooded there were but few serious washouts. The worst perhaps was on Granite street where it was gullied out quite badly early in the evening. Commissioner Burke who was in City Square called out one of the city teams to put the street in passable condition.

A very severe electrical storm passed over Wollaston. Mr. Cochran's house on Beach street was struck by a bolt which entirely demolished the chimney, burst a water pipe and killed the pet dog. Fortunately none of the occupants of the house were injured.

TWO FIRE ALARMS.

The alarm from Box 72 at 7.20 last night, while it was raining hard, called the department to a fire in a house on South street, near the foot of Chubbuck street, owned by Miss Malone, and occupied by W. H. Sullivan. The fire was caused by the house being struck by lightning.

Some of the corner boards, clapboards and shingles were torn off, and the plastering damaged in some of the rooms. There was, but little damage by fire, but the loss is placed at $100.

The alarm from Box 62 at 8.44 called the department to the house of James Cullen on Hodges avenue, which had been struck by lightning.

The chimney and some of the boards were knocked off, but there was little damage by fire.

The same bolt which struck this house also struck the house of Cornelius Duggan on Minot street, but little damage was done however.

AT MILTON.

The cow barn on the Charles L. Copeland estate on Hillside street, Milton, was struck about 7.30 P. M. and was destroyed. Two cows were killed by the bolt, but 27 were rescued. In the barn were over 30 tons of hay, wagons, tools, etc., which were destroyed. Other farm buildings were threatened but were saved. The loss was $5000, which is covered by insurance.

Reception at World's Fair.

The Teachers' party at the World's Fair at Portland, Oregon, were tendered a reception yesterday by the New England Society of Portland, and President H. W. Goode of the Lewis and Clark Exposition was a guest. A dispatch to the Herald says:

"The teachers bore these accumulated dignities with becoming humility, and were quite the normal, approachable persons after a few hours' rest that were sent away on the 5th in the special car from the North station. It may be worth stating that no one has missed a meal yet, a health record that several could not claim during the school term or a similar period."

A POUND PARTY.

Three Houghs Neck Brides "Pounded" on Thursday Evening.

Mrs. Easterbrooks, one of the four hundred of the plains, gave a pound party at her beautiful summer home on Bell street, Houghs Neck, on Thursday evening, which was attended by seventy-five. Among the number were "three young brides," and of course there wasn't a thing done to them, by those present. They were "It" during the evening, but took all jokes good naturedly, especially the one presented with a nigger doll.

The house was elaborately decorated both outside and in. Games and social intercourse was the evening's entertainment. This gathering was the first of a series and will be continued weekly during the summer.

A fine collation was served on the piazza, the contents of packages brought by the guests, which proved very tempting. Punch was served during the evening. As the wee small hours arrived all took their departure, feeling well paid for the evening's enjoyment and hospitality shown by Mrs. Easterbrooks, who proved herself a royal entertainer. All are looking forward to the next meeting when the gathering is expected to be increased.

Gilmore--Brown.

A very pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mrs. Sarah Jackson Brown, 57 Presidents avenue, Monday evening, July the tenth, when her daughter, Luella Gertrude was united in marriage to Mr. Andrew Walter Gilmore of Wakefield, Mass.

At the sounds of Lohengrin's Wedding march, the two bridesmaids, Miss Mina Smith of Reading and Miss Grace M. Hunt of Boston, entered, followed by the bride leaning upon the arm of her grandfather, Mr. Daniel Fish, a beautiful white bearded old gentleman, who gave her away. Mr. Robert M. Clark of Wakefield was best man.

After taking their places beneath a bower of crimson roses and asparagus fern the marriage service was solemnized by Rev. Merrill C. Ward, former pastor of the Universalist church, the double ring service being used.

The bride was charmingly attired in white silk chiffon over white silk with veil held in place by white sweet peas, and carried a bouquet of the same dainty flowers. The bridesmaids wore white point d'esprit over white silk.

The ceremony was followed by hearty congratulations from friends from Wakefield, Wollaston, East Weymouth, Allston, Reading, Boston and Quincy, who after partaking of dainty refreshments and viewing the beautiful gifts of china, cut glass and silver bade the happy pair bon-voyage as they left for a trip to New Hampshire.

They will be at home to friends after September the first at 57 Presidents avenue.

Day Nursery.

The Quincy Day Nursery association met at Mrs. Hunting's July 5th with eight members present.

The treasurer's and matron's reports were read and accepted. On motion of Mrs. Hunting it was voted to accept the secretary's report and that not more than five dollars be expended for paper and paint at the Nursery.

The Treasurer reported $133.51 cleared at the rummage sale held recently.

The matter of an ice cream freezer was spoken of and one of the members promised one for the Nursery.

The following members were elected a nominating committee to select the officers for the coming year: Mrs. Theophilus King, Mrs. Edwin E. Davis, Mrs. Harry Read. Adjourned at eleven o'clock.

Fanny V. Sears, Secretary.

Prefers Water.

Relative to the launching of the battleship Kansas, Gov. E. W. Hoch of that state says: "My preference is that the ship shall be christened with water; if the matter is left to me, I shall certainly rule that only water is used. If, however, it is the custom of the navy department to christen the boat otherwise, and it has the say in the matter, then, of course, I shall be guided by the department's suggestion."

DISCRIMINATING LADIES.

Enjoy Using Herpicide on Account of Its Distinctiveness.

The ladies who have used Newbro's Herpicide speak of it in the highest terms, for its quick effect in cleansing the scalp of dandruff and also for its excellence as a general hair-dressing. It makes the scalp feel fresh and it allays that itching which dandruff will cause. Newbro's Herpicide effectively cures dandruff, as it destroys the germ that causes it. The same germ causes hair to fall out, and later baldness; in killing it, Herpicide stops falling hair and prevents baldness. It is also an ideal hair dressing, for it lends an aristocratic charm to the hair that is quite distinctive. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Charges Against Officers of a Failed Boston Bank

RECEIVER BRINGS ACTION

Says Directors Wilfully Falsified Reports of Condition of Bank to Comptroller of Currency--Over $300,000 in Poor Paper

Boston, July 15.—Civil action has been brought in the United States circuit court by Frank D. Allen, receiver, against the entire board of directors of the Central National bank, which failed Nov. 13, 1902, with liabilities of over $3,000,000. Mr. Allen asks the court that an account be taken, under direction of the court, of all the losses sustained by the bank, its stockholders and creditors, by reason of incompetent management, and that the officers of the bank, or such of them as may be found liable for the losses, be decreed to restore to the bank the money thus lost.

The documents submitted by Allen in support of his case are voluminous, and in them he severely arraigns the bank officials. The suits are for the purpose of securing for the stockholders and creditors an amount estimated at between $300,000 and $500,000, which represents the sum Allen was unable to collect on poor negotiable paper.

One of the most serious charges made against the directors is that they wilfully falsified their reports of the condition of the bank to the comptroller of the currency, procured J. A. Brown, the cashier of the bank, to bid up the stock of the bank at a public sale, and to buy it in with the funds of the bank if it did not go high enough, in order that no reflection should be cast on the credit or solvency of the institution in the minds of the public.

The directors were from time to time severely criticised by the comptroller of the currency, according to Allen, for certain loans they had made, and in a letter to which he refers they promised the comptroller that they would make amends, while as a matter of fact they were constantly adding to these objectionable loans, and told him that a certain loan was paid when the books showed that at the time of the failure there were several thousands still due upon it.

Otis H. Luke, president of the bank, is accused by Allen of accepting personal bonuses from firms accommodated at the bank, either by extension of time or by continuing loans or overdrafts. The receiver says that over $5000 was paid to the bank president in this manner.

Neglecting their duties, Allen alleges, the directors permitted Luke largely to control and manage the affairs of the bank, to loan its funds, without security, to himself and to other members of his family, to friends and to clerks of the bank, for his benefit, and also to other persons known to Luke and to the directors to be persons of little or no financial responsibility, which loans were approved by the directors without further inquiry or examination; that the directors permitted funds of the bank to be loaned by Luke to Howard L. Porter, with whom he was engaged in business, the said loan being made without any security.

Mr. Allen further alleges that by reason of the conduct of Luke, suffered and permitted by the directors, through neglect of their duty and their failure to correct known abuses in the management of the bank, and in the conduct of its affairs by the president, losses were sustained by the bank, and for these losses he seeks to hold the directors liable.

FIERCE RACE RIOT

Revolvers and Missiles of All Descriptions Were Used

New York, July 15.—"San Juan Hill," the district bounded by Amsterdam and West End avenues and 61st street and 63d street, so called because of its notoriety as a battle ground, was the scene last night of a furious race riot which required police reserves numbering more than 250 men to quell after many shots had been fired and several persons had been seriously injured. Even after the actual fighting had been suppressed only the presence of strong guards of police patrolling the neighborhood prevented the renewal of hostilities.

The trouble began when a policeman arrested Edward Connelly for attacking a colored lad and was pursued to the station house with his prisoner by a mob of Connelly's friends, hurling showers of stones, bottles and other missiles.

When the reserves turned out the whole neighborhood was in an uproar and blacks engaged in desperate struggles in the streets and torrents of missiles were hurled from roofs and windows. Within 10 minutes not less than 1000 men, boys and women, black and white, were engaged in furious combat.

The worst of the fighting was in 62d street, where from every window and roof rained missiles, while hundreds of shots were fired. That no one was killed is amazing.

Five whites and six negroes were arrested. At midnight order had been restored, but a picked body of 30 policemen was detailed to occupy the region during the night and assist the police of the precinct in preventing a renewal of hostilities.

Major Muscovite.

Great Career of the Well Known Pacing Campaigner.

Chicago has claimed a pacer for a number of seasons past that has been always a noted and not seldom a sensational one. This is the brown stallion Major Muscovite, 2:07, by Muscovite, 2:18—Baby, by Uwharie, owned by Eugene Sullivan, and already this season the spot light of prominence has found him, and he is in the full glare of its effulgence.

The reason is that at Baltimore recently he won the free for all pace from Frank Yoakum, 2:05½, and paced the first heat over the half mile track at the Gentlemen's Driving park in 2:08¼. This is far the fastest mile raced by a harness horse so far in 1905, and for a two lap track so early in the season it is a truly remarkable performance, especially for a horse whose best record is but 2:07 over a mile track.

Major Muscovite is now nine years old and has been before the public since he was three. It was as a four-year-old that he first became a pacing star. That season Dick McMahon campaigned him through the great western circuit with brilliant success. He captured the $5,000 annual pacing stake at the Minnesota state fair at Hamline, a rich event at Dubuque, Ia., and numerous other good races and retired the heaviest winning pacer in the west for that season.

The next year Dick tackled the grand circuit with him, and he showed well, but the extremely fast record that he had made forced him into a class replete with sensational horses—among them Dan Patch himself—and he was unable to repeat his previous year's successes. The next year he also performed on the "big ring" and was given his present record of 2:07 at Readville, Mass., by McMahon in a race which he won at long odds.

In 1903 the Major was placed in the hands of Dan Clippinger, who still has him. The pair seem to hook up together with a degree of compatibility that is near perfection, and between them they have done a long series of remarkable things. Their campaign of last year has seldom or never been excelled. It began at Baltimore in early June and was prolonged until November.

During the course of nineteen weeks Major Muscovite started in eighteen races, of which he won thirteen, was second in four and fourth in the remaining one. He covered a range of territory reaching from Baltimore north to Lewiston, Me., and west to Titusville, Pa., and when he reached Chicago in November had traveled over 10,000 miles to fill his various engagements, which, with two exceptions, were confined to the half mile tracks. It will be conceded that only a horse of great vitality and wearing power, and one perfectly trained and managed, could have done so much.

MAJOR MUSCOVITE, 2:07, THE GREAT PACER.

The horses that beat him during the season were all, without exception, holders of faster records than he—Little Squaw, 2:04½; Anidrosis, 2:05¾, Frank Yoakum, 2:05½, and Terrace Queen, 2:06.

Muscovite is a smallish seal brown, extremely neat and bloodlike, and so clean gaited that he requires no hobbles and almost no boots. His legs are perhaps his best point. They are slim and deerlike, but of such steel and whipcord texture that today, after scores of hard fought races, including a long array of very fast heats, they are still as clean and free from blemish as a colt's. The horses that reach their sixth campaign in such shape, as to underpinning, are few and far between.

Of preference the Major has of late seasons kept closely to the half mile tracks, which, it has been found, he can negotiate so well that he outclasses at their game, most pacers with records from three to four seconds faster than his. Still both his races on mile tracks last year were clever victories. He has not been seen on the grand circuit for several seasons now.

Both the past spring and that of 1904 Major Muscovite was prepared at Baltimore, and his performances, together with those of numerous other horses, make it evident that there are few better training grounds, either for a horse that it is desired to bring to hand early or otherwise, than the Monumental City.

Star Pointer was prepared there by Dave McClary the season of 1897, when he immortalized himself by placing the harness record below two minutes for the first time in history.

Jack Chesbro emphatically denies that his spit ball arm is gone. He says he caught cold pitching in a drenching rain against the Washington club in New York on the opening day and developed malarial fever.

BODY IS IDENTIFIED

Woman Killed at Belmont Was Wife of a Barber

HUNT FOR HER HUSBAND

They Had Differences Over Another Woman and Money Matters--Supposed Slayer Known to Have Started For California

Belmont, Mass., July 15.—The police officials of the state and town, who, since Thursday, have been investigating the murder of Mrs. Marchina Schidlofska of Brockton, await anxiously news from the west, where they have endeavored to bring about the arrest of the woman's husband, John Schidlofska, otherwise known as John Cline, a Polish barber.

The officials here have practically cleared up the entire case, so far as the Belmont end of it is concerned. They have decided to search a small pond, near the Arlington Golf club property, on which the body was found. The theory has been advanced that the knife with which the victim's head was nearly severed from her body might have been thrown into the water.

The state officers have established to their own satisfaction that Schlidlofska left Boston Thursday for Los Angeles, Cal., where he had been desirous of locating, but they admit the possibility that the barber may have changed his plans and gone elsewhere. A Brockton expressman, who conveyed some of Schidlofska's effects to a railroad station in the latter city last Wednesday, said that he thought the barber purchased tickets over the Boston and Maine railroad from Boston. From Chicago the tickets were made out to Los Angeles, via the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad and other lines.

The western train on which Schidlofska was supposed to be traveling left the North Union station, Boston, at 12:30 p. m. Thursday, and was due in Chicago yesterday. Chief Shaw of the state police has telegraphed the police of every place through which the train would pass, and he says he expects an early arrest if the man continues westward with the train.

The body of the murdered woman has been positively identified as that of Mrs. Schidlofska by a friend who was brought from Brockton to view the remains. The body will probably be buried today by the town.

There are two theories as to the motive which led to the crime. One of these is that differences arose between Schidlofska and his wife over another woman. The other is that a quarrel occurred over the refusal of Mrs. Schidlofska to turn money over to her husband. The two had a joint account at the Brockton savings bank, and on Tuesday $341.50 was withdrawn by the barber. Friends of the woman say she had saved nearly $1000; that she had given $250 of it to her husband, and that the latter had frequently induced his wife to give him more money. The Brockton police have learned that Schidlofska shipped a trunk and box to Boston, and thence to Los Angeles, from Montello on Wednesday.

In the course of their investigation the state police secured a number of letters said to have been written in Polish by a woman in Los Angeles to Schidlofska. These letters are said to have disclosed an intimate acquaintance between the two, and the police are inclined to view the circumstance as an additional incentive to Schidlofska's desire to go to Los Angeles alone.

It now appears that John Schidlofska had formerly been employed as a gardener by Irving B. Frost, upon whose property of the body of the murdered woman was found. The police accept this as showing the missing husband's intimate knowledge of the topography of the place. It has also been learned that Joseph Perkus, a Pole resident of Boston, states that Schidlofska was previously married about eight years ago; that his first and only child died, and that soon thereafter his wife disappeared.

Chicago Officers on the Watch

Chicago, July 15.—The Chicago police were last night requested to watch for and arrest John Schidlofska, husband of the woman found murdered at Belmont, Mass. It was supposed that Schidlofska would arrive on a train due in Chicago at 10 o'clock last night. The train was carefully searched by officers, but nobody answering the description of Schidlofska was found. Other trains which arrive from Boston will be closely watched.

Cause of Disaster Unknown

Cleveland, July 15.—All hope of discovering the cause of the recent wreck on the Lake Shore railroad at Mentor, in which 21 lives were lost, has been given up by the officials conducting the inquest.

Trainmen Burned to a Crisp

Richmond, Ia., July 15.—Three trainmen were killed and two more probably fatally injured in a freight wreck here. A car of oil took fire, the tank exploded and the bodies of the killed were burned to a crisp.

Girl Ended Life of Brute

New York, July 15.—That Berthe Claiche, aged 19, killed Emile Gerdron in self-defense, after he had threatened to kill her, was the testimony given by detectives who witnessed the killing, when the inquest into the shooting was begun. The story of Berthe's slavery to Gerdron has caused New York women to raise a fund for her defense. She says that under promise of marriage Gerdron, who was six feet tall and weighed over 200 pounds, lured her from her home in France to this city. He did not keep his promise, but with his great size and strength terrorized her, forcing the girl to go out on the streets and bring him back money by evil living.

Kept Reasons to Himself

Albany, July 15.—Editor-in-Chief Ervin Wardman of the New York Press was the storm center of a sensational scene in the state legislature. His persistent refusal to give the reasons for his expressed belief that some members of the legislature had been the subject of improper influences in connection with the trial of charges against Supreme Court Justice Hooker produced intense excitement. The situation has raised far-reaching questions as to the status and powers of the present joint session; its authority as a joint session to issue subpoenas or inflict penalties.

Good Business Prospects

New York, July 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that seasonable merchandise goes into consumption more freely than usual; retail trade exceeding expectations at many points. Preparation for fall and winter business is on a liberal scale, except in a few agricultural communities, where there is a disposition to await definite assurances regarding the crops.

Cy Young Tells How to Pitch

Command of Ball Is First Essential---The Jump Ball---When to Vary Delivery---High and Low Balls---Throwing to Bases.

By CY YOUNG.
Veteran pitcher of Boston Americans.

Command of the ball is the first essential to success in pitching. A good, fast, overhand ball, kept high, is the one I depend on mostly when anxious to get an out.

I take the ball with two forefingers and thumb for all styles of work, as it gives me the best control.

Straight balls over the corners will often prove more effective than the widest curves. This style is of little use, however, unless the umpire is a good judge of corner work.

CY YOUNG IN POSITION TO DELIVER AN OUTSHOOT.

When in good shape I use a jump ball considerably. It comes with extra speed, and if worked well into the batsman is perhaps the most difficult ball to hit safe.

The ball should be kept high when the batsman is out for a sacrifice, and a clever slow ball with a change of pace is very effective when you want to see the batsman send up a weak fly. The underhand ball with a raise I use but very little, as it has a tendency to lame the arm and must be curved as well as raised.

Many pitchers are effective until men get on bases, when they must shorten their swing; therefore a pitcher should have two distinct movements. In his preliminary swing, holding men close to the bases is one of the important features of the game.

A pitcher should throw seldom to the bases unless with a fair chance of getting the man. Too much throwing will affect his command over the ball and lose the lines he has on the man at the bat.

There is a vast difference in pitching to right and left handed batsmen, and

YOUNG READY TO THROW A LOW INSHOOT.

I think the left hander the more annoying for a right hand pitcher. I work a left hand man with close curves about waist high, with a curve on the out corner of the plate. As most of the left handers are "choppers," they are ever ready for speed and bothered more with curves and a change of pace.

The preliminary swing is everything to a pitcher. By putting your shoulder and back muscles into your delivery you will save the arm.

GOOD AFTERNOON.

A sketch of Hon. Elihu Root of New York, the new Secretary of State, is one of the features of today's Ledger.

Because some of the very smallest towns in the state reported a loss by the new census, one must not get the impression that Massachusetts will show a loss. Some of the larger towns now report gains and most of the cities will show big gains, including Quincy. Seekonk and Sunderland report a gain of over 30 per cent.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ It is the Boston Herald that speaks of a college professor who has just died, as being "75 years of age, and not an old man." It may be a very true statement. There are people who keep their youth remarkably. Life has been kind to them; they have maintained their interest in existence; they have had work that has suited them; and they have had a measure of prosperity, and they have scarcely felt the touch of the wing of time. We all know people of whom it is generally said that they have changed scarcely at all in ten, fifteen or even twenty years. We all know people who were "grown-ups" when we were little children, and yet they seem no older, no different in action, appearance or ability to work or play, than they were when we were children.

They say that a half-century ago a person of fifty was supposed to be quite old enough to go on the retired list, and to go to bed early at night, and abandon the joys and usances of the young folk. How is it now? Why, the old fellows are among the liveliest and the most thoroughly "in the game" at all angles of anybody; and as for the old women—but there are no such left in the world! —Brockton Enterprise.

Newspaper Enterprise.

A copy of the Nome Nugget, issued at Nome, Alaska, June 10, was received today by C. C. Mueller, who has a brother there in the jewelry business. It is an eight-page paper larger than today's Ledger, and is printed in two colors and well illustrated. The typographical appearance is a surprise, as it is as well printed as any newspaper we ever saw. The write-ups give the history, and resources of the Seward Penisula, the wonderful discovery of gold on Little Creek, the richest placer mining claim, news from the north, etc.

The Nugget says: "Nome is the most important city in the whole of Alaska, with a summer population of 6,000 to 8,000 and winter habitation of about 3,000. An up-to-date city, peopled by an active, aggressive and intelligent class of citizens. It enjoys modern conveniences such as telegraphic communication, railroad facilities, telephones, electric light plant, and water works. Splendid churches, five schools, a chamber of commerce, etc."

Formerly of Milton.

Dr. John Littlefield, aged 81, a veteran officer of the Civil War, a resident of Philadelphia for fifteen years, and formerly of Boston, died July 13, at residence of his son, John Gannett Littlefield, 1490 North 55th street, Philadelphia.

Interment will be at Milton, Mass., where he was born, and where his ancestors were among the first settlers, 1645.

Dr. Littlefield was a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and well known in dental trade here, and abroad.

He was a charter member of St. Albans' Lodge of F. & A. Masons of Foxboro, Mass. A master of the lodge, from which he resigned to go to war, a member of Post 68 Grand Army of Republic, and is survived by a son and two daughters.

Much credit is due the house committee of the Squantum Yacht club for the arrangement and carrying out of novel entertainments. Only interested effort could put the club on the level of a well patronized weekly point of gaiety for young and old, and the present house committee has done wonders for the good of the club and the enjoyment of its members.

What It Costs

... AND ...

What It Pays

are two values of newspaper advertising that the merchan has to consider. But the most important thing is

WHAT IT PAYS.

The merchant can get space in papers of small circulation and little influence for a little less money than the same size space would cost in the DAILY LEDGER and the QUINCY PATRIOT.

DOES IT PAY

to throw away the certainty of the profitable returns which are sure to LEDGER and PATRIOT advertisers, because it costs less to advertise in cheaper paper?

During Braintree's "Old Home Week" observance in 1902 it was the pleasure of many of us to welcome him to his native town after an absence of about 25 years. Last summer he made us another visit which he said was his last for he was not feeling like again coming east from Washburn, Wis., where he has lived for many years. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and took considerable interest in his post's meetings. Death of an Old Resident.

[From the Braintree Observer.]

Another of the aged residents of Braintree has passed away. Mr. George A. Sproul died at his residence on Crescent avenue, South Braintree, at 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening, the 11th inst. Deceased had been in failing health for some time, and his death had of late been looked for from day to day. Death resulted from a general failure of the vital powers. The funeral, which was private, took place at 2 P. M., on Thursday, Rev. A. E. Kirk of the M. E. Church officiating. Interment was in Plain Street cemetery.

Mr. Sproul was born in Wilmot, N. S., Sept. 5, 1817, so that at his decease he had nearly reached the advanced age of 88. He was of New England stock, (Massachusetts and Connecticut), his ancestors having been among those who went from this part of the country to settle upon the farms in Acadia from which the French had been evicted in the days mentioned by Longfellow in "Evangeline." He came to South Braintree over half a century ago and had lived there ever since, and in the same house. He was married in June 15, 1856, to Louisa D. Lakin, who survives him. He also leaves a son, Mr. A. E. Sproul of Quincy.

Mr. Sproul was a man of simple tastes and quiet life. He did faithfully the work which was his to do, had always a pleasant word for those with whom he came in contact, was scrupulously regardful of his obligations and agreements, and uniformly gave his voice and his vote on the side of good citizenship and good government. By nature he had a fine taste for good literature and for music. For many years he had among his treasured companions volumes of Burns and Byron, two poets of whom he especially admired and from whose works he was fond of quoting.

President Lincoln used to say that he had an abiding and unshakable faith in the plain people. Mr. Sproul was an excellent type of the quiet, unassuming body of men and women throughout the country whose sterling worth form the foundation of all national strength.

HOLLIS INSTITUTE.

President B. F. Dyer Reelected---Quincy Man Vice President.

The second annual reunion of the Hollis Institute Association was held Wednesday afternoon, July 12, from two until six in the chapel of the South Congregational church. On account of the extreme heat that day, and the preceding three days, the attendance was small there being less than fifty people present.

President B. F. Dyer called the meeting to order, and made a speech in which he kindly alluded to the interest Mrs. R. M. Sanborn had taken in the Hollis Institute Association. He said she was the parent of the association, and therefore must take the burden upon herself.

Following Mr. Dyer's speech two verses of Old Lang Syne were sung with a will specially aided by Mrs. Azel R. French, soprano, and Capt. James T. Stevens, bass.

Mr. Dyer then read a report of the formation, one year ago, of the association at which time the following officers were elected:

President,—Benjamin F. Dyer.

Vice Presidents,—Rufus A. Thayer, Randolph; Capt. George F. F. Wild, U. S. N.; Judge E. C. Bumpus, Quincy; Rev. George A. Thayer, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Secretary,—Miss E. M. Thompson, South Braintree.

Treasurer,—Mrs. S. J. Wilde, South Braintree.

Executive committee,—Mrs. Eliza M. Sanborn, South Braintree; Miss H. P. Pratt, South Braintree; Mrs. Mary A. Powers, Brockton; Mrs. Helen Tirrell, South Weymouth; Mrs. Harriet Fay, Quincy; Miss Anna A. Stevens, Watertown; Mrs. Emma Dyer, South Braintree; Mrs. Susan J. Dyer, South Braintree; Mrs. Amasa Thayer, South Braintree.

Upon the motion of Mrs. Sanborn, it was voted that the officers of the past year serve another term.

After singing in chorus "Bless be the Tie" the president called upon Rev. Sydney K. B. Perkins of Raynham for a speech. Mr. Perkins said (in part) "Friends I am certainly very happy to be with you. I attended the Hollis Institute 59 years ago, when Mr. Thayer and Mr. Kendall were the teachers, then I attended the Bangor theological seminary for three years. During the years 1851, 1852 and 1853 I was a teacher in the Hollis Institute. I have preached for 48 years, and hope that I have accomplished some good in the ministry."

Mr. Perkins formerly lived in East Braintree, and is a son of the Rev. Jonas Perkins, for whom the school building is name. The Rev. Jonas Perkins was pastor of the old Union church, and served the town on the school committee with Dr. Storrs and Rev. Mr. Matthews. Rev. Sydney Perkins is the father of Mrs. Charles G. Sheppard of East Braintree, and at the close of this meeting went to his daughter's home for a visit. He is a very genial man to meet and exceptionally well preserved for his years.

President B. F. Dyer read letters of regret from Mrs. Mary Holbrook Powers of Fortress Monroe, Va., and Mrs. William M. Thayer of Franklin, Mass. Mrs. Powers hopes to be present next year. Mrs. Thayer is now 84 years, and probably that accounts for her absence, although she is in good health.

After singing "Hurrah for Old New England" Mr. Dyer called upon Capt. J. T. Stevens for a speech, and his remarks were very much enjoyed.

Speeches were made also by Mr. W. A. Reed of South Weymouth, and Mrs. Johnson of Watertown. Mrs. Fay of Quincy, instead of a speech stepped to the piano, and rendered her old favorite parody on "Uncle Ned."

There was an aged colored gentleman,
His name was revered aged Edward,
He died some time since—some time since,
He had no capilary substance on the top of his cranium,
In the place where that article ought to vegetate,
Then place all his agricultural implements—
The Fiddle-de-de music on the wall
For there is no more manual labor for ye revered aged Edward,
He's long since departed this life and gone to the place designed
By nature for all colored individuals.

The meeting closed by singing "America." Ice cream, punch, cake, olives, candy and fruit in abundance were served, and after a social hour, the meeting adjourned.

It was voted to hold the future annual meetings during the month of September.

Since the meeting, Mrs. Sanborn received the following letter from Judg Kelley of Rockland of whom Braintree people are proud.

Lincolnville, Me., July 12.

My Dear Madam:—

Your kind letter of July 7th has followed me here. I am sorry that I did not receive it in time to make reply before your reunion. I trust that Braintree men and women do not need any word from me, or from any one, to warm them to the cause of liberty and justice. I thank you heartily for your invitation to attend the gathering of Hollis Institute members and wish you a happy and profitable meeting.

Sincerely yours,
George W. Kelley.

WHOA! WHOA!

Another Book by Charles W. Guy for Children.

Charles Warren Guy of Butler road, Quincy, has added a book of wide interest to his works. Of interest to the children because it is written for them largely; of interest locally because of comments of historic value. The Boston Traveler comments as follows:

Now when the boys and girls are released from school and are planning for a summer vacation, let me suggest that at least part of the time could be spent profitably by reading a new book entitled "Whoa," New England stories for big and little folk by Charles Warren Guy. This book is dedicated "To my grandchildren and to the King's Daughters and Sons of America." This story is well adapted for the little reader as it is wholesome, pure, full of variety, simply told and refreshing.

This dear big-hearted grandpa weaves his story into a history of Boston and Quincy and advises the little people to learn all they can by observation. He tells them stories of kindness to dumb animals; he takes them fishing, berrying, sugar-making salting the sheep, riding in a mountain wagon and the way to get up a doll party. Then the author teaches that if a boy can be kept from card playing and tobacco, his future, with good health, ought to be prosperous. Then he defends the mothers of our boys and girls and claims that men would be better and politics cleaner if women could help.

The quaint stories will not tire the reader. There are halftone cuts, including historical landmarks—the house of John Quincy Adams, the Dorothy Q. Home, Quincy, Mass., "Old Fairbanks Place," Dedham, and "Roselawn," Quincy, the home of the author. Mr. Guy thinks charities could be profitably spent and that money and time would be better devoted to support homes for old people, orphan asylums and such institutions in our own country than in foreign lands, where every dollar seems to bring its full value. He commends the Home for Aged People in Wrentham, which is in care of the King's Daughters, floating hospitals, and fresh air funds. The story winds up with a charming romance. But "Whoa! It's time to stop."

—Walter Kittredge the poet and author of Tenting on the Old Camp Ground, died on July 8th, at his home Reeds Ferry. The funeral service was most impressive and several of the author's songs were feelingly sung.

—"A word to the wise may be sufficient," but,—has anybody discovered which word it is?

EXPLOSIVES.

New Rules for Their Transportation, Storage, Etc.

When Deputy Chief George C. Neal of Lynn of the State police gets out his new rules and regulations for the transportation, cartage and storage of explosives, there will be many surprises.

One of the most striking innovations not heretofore noted, is that every carter of explosives will be compelled to emblazen his wagon with large letters indicative of the danger of the load.

On every cart will appear the warning "Powder Wagon." The letters will be six inches in height, plainly visible to people on sidewalks who may know what peril to avoid.

Another plan he is to introduce will be the requirement that every driver of a wagon containing dynamite or other explosive must submit to a test. He must show that he is over 21 years of age, that he is of sober habits, and that he can read the English language. The last qualification has been imposed that no one may plead ignorance of the law or inability to read the simple printed rules which the state police will issue.

A third idea in the regulations of the use of explosives is that the parties who receive and order and those who give must keep records indicating how large quantities have been received, what sort of an explosive it is, what its strength may be, etc. These records are to be open to the inspection of the state police at all times. The purpose of this rule is to enable to trace up any accident at any time, something they were unable to do in the Melrose affair because no records were kept.

Dealers who keep a large quantity of explosives in storage will be compelled to store their dynamite, etc., and their powder separately, and also to secure a license from Chief Joseph E. Shaw, not from any subordinate. This arrangement is for the purpose of centralizing all responsibility.

Elihu Root, Secretary of State

John Hay's Successor Is a Thinking Machine --- He Gets to the Bottom of Things, Then Acts---Now a Strong Presidential Possibility

Careless of Public Opinion, Callous to Newspaper Comment, but Rigidly Loyal to His Trust, He Goes Straight to the Point :: :: :: ::

Not a Novice, but Master of the Game of Statecraft and America's Greatest Lawyer --- At the Helm During the Boxer War :: :: :: :: :: ::

ELIHU ROOT earns $200,000 a year as a lawyer. That puts him in a class by himself. Remarkable is the adjective that applies, if it ever applied to any man.

Mr. Root is to give up his princely income to accept a salary of $8,000 a year as secretary of state in President Roosevelt's cabinet. Which sentiment dictates the action—patriotism or ambition? Perhaps both.

In any event, the nation secures the talents of an unusual man. He will serve her well, for absolute loyalty to his cause has been one of Mr. Root's strongest characteristics. He becomes not only secretary of state, but a strong presidential possibility.

President Roosevelt realized that a strong man must succeed John Hay. A strong man was chosen. Five years as secretary of war showed that strength to the country. There is nothing spectacular about Root, nothing to take hold of the popular imagination. He is careless of public opinion, almost callous as to what the newspapers say of him. He is a thinking machine. He masters his proposition, sees what he wants to do clearly and goes ahead in a straight line to do it, regardless of what anybody else may think about it. Thorough is the word that describes him. Withal, he is tactful and diplomatic. He has wit, but is without humor. For the most part his attitude is deadly serious. He goes to the bottom of a thing, rips the heart out of a question, brushes aside all minor considerations and goes directly to the point at issue. Perhaps he owes this quality of mind to his father, who was a professor of mathematics. At any rate, he possesses the mathematical turn, which will not permit him to take a superficial view of things, but makes him solve his problem and take the meat out of whatever is brought to his attention. Then, too, he is an organizer and has the executive temperament. To cap it all, he is rigidly loyal to his client, whether that client be a corporation or the government of the United States.

HON. ELIHU ROOT.

Not a Novice In Statecraft.

The new premier of the cabinet is not a novice in the duties of his position. In the trying days of 1900, when the foreign legations were shut up at Peking, President McKinley was at his home in Canton and Secretary Hay was ill in New Hampshire. Root, being next in command, had to bear the burden. The famous dispatches to Li Hung Chang were written by Root, and the command to General Chaffee to march forward to the relief of the American minister, which had so much to do with forcing the rest of the powers to take a similar action, was given by Root. The policy of the McKinley administration to maintain the integrity of China had been formulated by Hay, it is true, but the carrying out of the policy was left to the secretary of war. Perhaps the thorough way in which the second member of the cabinet played his part at that trying time had much to do with placing him at the head of the cabinet now. However that may be, he revealed himself a master of the game of statecraft, and no fear need be entertained that he will not be able to take a hand along with the chancelleries of the old world. The commanding position which the United States has taken in the diplomacy of the nations will not suffer under Elihu Root. His enemies—and he has many—will be as ready to admit that as his friends. Whatever faults he may have, he does not fail in a crisis. In plain language, he is not slipshod; he does not fall down; he delivers the goods.

The newly appointed secretary of state was born on a college campus in the month of February, sixty years ago. His father was a member of the faculty of Hamilton college, Clinton, N. Y., from which institution the son graduated as valedictorian of his class at the age of nineteen. He then taught in the Rome academy for a year and graduated from the University Law school of New York city when twenty-two. He immediately entered the practice in New York and began to secure corporation cases almost from the start. He took little part in politics, but so strong a position had he secured at the bar that at the age of thirty-eight he was appointed by President Arthur United States district attorney for the southern district of New York. He only held this place for a trifle over two years, but so efficient was he and so many reforms did he inaugurate that his work attracted outside attention. The only political office he ever held was that of secretary of the Republican county committee of New York. In 1894 he was elected delegate at large to the state constitutional convention, in which body he held the important position of chairman of the judiciary committee. He was never a candidate for an elective office, in fact, is not much of the type that makes a popular candidate before the people. He is not exactly contemptuous of what may be thought of him, but simply does not consider it as a factor entering into the equation.

His Methods as Orator.

As a speaker he is masterly and exhaustive, making clear and cogent arguments, but is not much versed in methods of appealing to the popular fancy. Perhaps it never occurred to him to cultivate that style of oratory. He is the typical lawyer, who strives to satisfy his clients and justify their faith in him. After that is done his duty, at least so far as he sees it, is performed. His attitude is not exactly the famous Vanderbilt motto of "the public be ——," but as for currying popular favor it seemingly never enters his mind.

A Friendship of Long Standing.

The little part he did take in politics during these years was for the most part against the Platt machine and with the so called silk stocking reform element in the Republican party. Theodore Roosevelt took considerable part in reform politics in those days, which makes the friendship between himself and Root of long standing. The policy of the "easy boss" to get his enemies out of his way by having them appointed or elected to office doubtless accounted for his complacency in seeing these two vigorous young men go to the front in national politics. Platt never did seem to bear malice, but only considered a move from the standpoint of its effect on his control of New York politics. Whether it was due to this fact or simply a graceful bowing to the inevitable, at any rate Platt raised no public objection when Root was made secretary of war in 1899. As at present in the state department, a strong man was needed in the war portfolio at that time, and President McKinley, the excellent judge of men, after looking the country over, selected the then comparatively unknown lawyer, Elihu Root of New York. His keen insight into human nature was probably never shown more clearly than in that choice.

Few cabinet officers have had graver problems confronting them than those which faced Root in the assumption of that office. The newspapers had teemed with criminations and recriminations of his predecessor, Secretary Alger, there were charges of grafting in the war department, the Miles feud was on, the new colonial policy had to be formulated, the Cuban situation had to be dealt with, and reforms were demanded in the army itself. The new head of the war portfolio turned to these various problems as he would to knotty points in a law case. First he found a man on whom he could rely, a subordinate in the department who knew things and was honest. Then he began posting himself, until he knew the situation. Next he worked out the questions as his father had worked out mathematical problems.

The Philippine situation, of course, was the first thing that had to be met by Secretary Root. The decision had already been made to keep the islands. He frankly said in an interview that if he had been consulted at the time the treaty of Paris was being signed and had foreseen the complications he probably would not have advised the taking over of the archipelago, but since the policy was settled he had to make the best of it, put down the insurrection, establish civil government and prepare the natives so that ultimately they could govern themselves. Resolutely and thoroughly he undertook the task, and he did not leave the cabinet until he considered that he had it practically accomplished.

At one trying time in this work he was criticised from one end of the country to the other over certain alleged acts of army officers in the Philippines. At first the secretary paid little attention, but finally issued a general denial. The representative of an important and friendly paper went to him to get a more specific statement of the case.

"Why should I pay further attention to these reports?" asked the secretary. "They are not true. I have said so; that is enough."

"But," said the reporter, "they affect public opinion. You ought to have the support of the newspapers."

"What for?" replied the imperturbable Root. "Does that make any difference?"

Not very complimentary to the press that, but a rather luminous sidelight on the character of Elihu Root.

Witty and Keen at Parrying Questions.

Perhaps the reputation which the secretary gained for coldness came somewhat from his treatment of newspaper men. Always polite, but never betrayed into saying one word he did not wish to say, he parried questions like the keen lawyer that he is. Frequently a witticism would serve his point. When one young reporter wanted to know whether the president would dismiss Minister Conger, and, if so, how, Root quickly responded.

"I suppose he will send him a poisoned letter."

Again when Aguinaldo was captured, the same reporter wanted to know how Funston brought the Filipino chieftain in.

"He probably brought him in in his mouth," flashed the secretary.

Any one who remembers how Roosevelt had to reprimand Funston for talking too much may see more than one point to that joke.

Some Creek Indians were hunting for Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock and by mistake strayed into the war department. When steered into the presence of the secretary, Root told them they had come to the wrong man.

"I have jurisdiction over navigable rivers," he said, "but not over Creeks."

Mr. Root is not much of a story teller, but here is one that he is said to have told:

A western judge about to pronounce sentence asked the prisoner:

"Have you ever been sentenced before?"

"No, your honor," said the criminal, bursting into tears.

"Well," said the judge, "don't cry. You're going to be now."

Trim and Wiry, Never Demonstrative.

In personal appearance Mr. Root is small, trim and wiry. He is never demonstrative, and his face often is so serious it is almost sad. He wears his hair like no other man on earth, but then he is not just exactly like any other man on earth. His eyes are keen and dark, his nose straight, his mouth firm, but concealed under an iron gray mustache, his chin round, but strong. One of the most notable things about his face is a wen on one cheek, and doubtless, like Cromwell, he wants to be painted as he is, warts and all.

At the time he was made secretary of war Elihu Root was receiving from his practice a sum many times as great as his salary in the cabinet. It has been said that his yearly income then was nearly $100,000. It is also asserted that since returning to his practice he was in the way of making twice that amount. Among other retainers he might have had was that offered by Thomas F. Ryan to act as attorney for the Equitable. The fact that he was willing to give up all this for a government salary of $8,000 per year is a fact that should not be overlooked in this dollar grabbing age.

The secretary of state does not care much for society. He spends most of his time, night and day, in hard work. He has two sons and one daughter and lives unostentatiously.

STORMY AUDIENCE

Witte's Bluntness Hurts Feelings of the Czar

LATTER DESIRES PEACE

His Selection of Chief Plenipotentiary Was a Bitter Pill to Swallow, as Personal Relations Were Strained--Machinations of Military Party a Factor

St. Petersburg, July 15.—M. Witte, after his audience of the czar at Peterhof, returned last evening to St. Petersburg and drove directly to the foreign office, where he was closeted for three hours with Foreign Minister Lamsdorff.

A sensational report was current this morning that Witte might not go to Washington after all. According to the story his audience of the czar was anything but smooth, the czar rather resenting Witte's plain-spoken ideas and indicating that under the circumstances he would prefer that Baron Rosen should act as chief plenipotentiary. The czar is even said to have intimated that Lamsdorff exceeded his authority in officially announcing to the Washington government that Witte would occupy the first position.

M. Witte is said to have left the czar in an ugly frame of mind and to have frankly informed Lamsdorff that it would be impossible for him to undertake the mission. It was only by the greatest effort, the story says, that Lamsdorff succeeded in persuading him not to flatly refuse, and the question as to whether he will go to Washington is said to be still open.

Although this story comes from a high personage, its informant was not prepared to vouch for it. It is therefore sent under great reserve, as it may prove to be an invention.

A prominent Russian statesman, who is peculiarly qualified to speak on the matter, is authority for the statement that the czar now sincerely desires peace. In spite of somewhat strained personal relations in the past between the czar and Witte, due to the fact that the latter was never a fawning courtier, but always insisted on bluntly telling his imperial master what he believed, the czar has always recognized Witte's great ability and devotion to the best interests of Russia.

It was gall and wormwood to the czar, however, to turn for the extrication of Russia from her difficulties to the very man who predicted all the disasters with which the throne has been beset as the result of the war and whose advice he so long rejected.

Nevertheless, the czar is surrounded daily, even hourly, by members of the military party, many of whom are blindly chauvinistic. The czar cannot disregard the men who control the power which supports the throne and the dynasty, and therein lies the danger that even Witte may fail. However successful the negotiations may be, the machinations of the military party will have to be reckoned with.

Takahira at Sagamore Hill

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 15.—Through a previous appointment Minister Takahira was a visitor to Sagamore Hill. Assurance was given that the minister bore no special advices to President Roosevelt from the Japanese government. He discussed with Mr. Roosevelt some points about the approaching conference at Portsmouth, N. H., but it is announced that no date was agreed upon for the reception of the Russian and Japanese envoys by the president.

Russian Shipyard Scandals

St. Petersburg, July 15.—The newspapers are publishing a series of accounts of alleged unsavory scandals in government shipyards. Private yachts, it is said, have been repaired, and five private steamers built at government expense. Three country houses were erected with material belonging to the government and by workmen in government employ. It is said that many naval officers bought all the furniture for their apartments out of government funds.

Cossacks In Revolt

Warsaw, July 15.—At the cotton milling centre of Zgierz, a number of Cossacks declined to eat what they considered bad food and sent a delegate named Khazanov to the captain to demand double pay, double rations, better food and the payment of arrears. In reply the captain shot Khazanov dead. As the demands were persisted in, troops were summoned and the Cossacks were seized and imprisoned in a fortress.

More Troops For Linevitch

St. Petersburg, July 15.—Plans for the reinforcement of General Linevitch's armies are keeping pace with the preparations for peace negotiations. The Nineteenth army corps has received marching orders and the mobilization of six regiments of Cossacks has been successfully accomplished.

Thirty of Potemkine's Crew Shot

London, July 15.—The correspondent of The Daily Chronicle at Kustenji, Roumania, says that, according to a sailor belonging to the Kniaz Potemkine, 80 of the crew of the battleship who surrendered have been shot.

Salaries of Peace Envoys

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Two Churches and Many Dwellings Damaged at Boston

Boston, July 15.—A severe thunderstorm broke over this city last night, during which the rain fell in torrents and the lightning struck two churches and several dwellings, causing more or less damage by fire. The First Congregational church was struck shortly after 9 o'clock and set on fire. The damage is estimated at $5000.

Mrs. Joseph Rose and her three children, residing at 1 Lindell place, narrowly escaped death during the storm. The family were in a rear room on the second floor, when a bolt came in at the chimney and found exit through the window. Benjamin Rose, aged 14 years, was thrown from the window to a nearby bed, while the other two children and the mother were thrown down and stunned. None, however, was injured, nor was the house damaged.

Three houses in the South End district were struck by lightning and damaged.

The steeple of the New Old South church in Copley square, one of the tallest and most beautiful in the city, was also struck by lightning. Fortunately the lightning did not injure the steeple, but passed down and did about $2000 damage.

A number of residences in the Dorchester district were struck, but the damage was slight.

Autoists' Trip Half Completed

Bretton Woods, N. H., July 15.—The 1000-mile automobile reliability tour from New York to the White mountains and return for a trophy offered by Charles J. Glidden was half completed when the last of the 32 contestants reached here last night. George H. Tyrrell led the party in the trip from Portsmouth, arriving here at 12:22 p. m. Charles J. Edwards drove his huge touring car into the side of a bridge at Conway. The car turned completely over, burying Edwards and his machinist beneath the wreckage, but neither was seriously injured.

A Woman's Mysterious Death

Medford, Mass., July 15.—Mrs. Grace Taternaude, aged 48 years, wife of Clement Taternaude of New York, was found dead near a stone wall on Grove street last night. She left her sister's house last evening for a walk alone. A severe thunderstorm raged while she was absent, and lightning struck in the vicinity of Grove street, where the body was found. The absence of any marks upon the body gives the death some mystery. An autopsy will be held.

Car a Target For Lightning

Medford, Mass., July 15.—An electric car, carrying 20 passengers, was struck and badly damaged by lightning in Medford square last night. Miss Margaret Conway, a passenger, was severely shocked and was taken to her home, where she collapsed. Motorman Mulchahy was overcome with shock, but recovered. The other passengers were greatly frightened, and a panic prevailed for a few minutes.

Car Plunged Into Ditch

East Brookfield, Mass., July 15—Three passengers on an electric car were seriously injured last night, but none fatally, by the derailing of the car, due, it is supposed, to spreading rails. There were about 30 passengers on the car, all of whom were thrown from their seats as the car left the rails and plunged into a ditch, where it rested at an angle of 75 degrees.

Storm Brought Relief

Boston, July 15.—One death and eight prostrations was Friday's record for the heat wave that has hung over this city. While a 12-mile breeze brought some relief, the continuation of the heat caused much discomfort and no little suffering. It was not until evening that the atmosphere was cooled by a severe electrical, wind and rainstorm.

Strike of Hebrew Bakers

Boston, July 15.—About 140 journeymen bakers, members of the Hebrew Bakers' union, went on strike here last night. Members of the union complain that the master bakers have not been living up to the agreement made last May.

HE CALLED ROSELLAN

By JOANNA SINGLE

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

Rosellan's father stormed in the time honored fashion, her mother soothed her a little and tried to soften the situation, but she agreed with her husband that their one fair and cherished daughter should not become the wife of John Barry. The girl herself, flushed and lovely, declared that she would marry him, that she loved him and that her life would be ruined without him.

"But, my dear daughter," said her father, "John is just out of college, and he has studied too much—run all to one sort of brains, and he's not fit to battle with the real world. And, besides, he is your cousin."

"Four times removed," remarked the girl quietly.

"But still your cousin," continued the vigorous old gentleman, who hated the thought of giving up his daughter to any man, but had decided that she must some time marry, and that the man must be Gilbert Crane. "And we all know that John has nothing in particular and that you have always had everything you want."

"I don't want anything but John. He has himself, his ability," she put in proudly. "We have cared for each other always."

"Oh, the ability to write a decent article or even a popular novel! What does scribbling amount to? He has nothing till that old great-aunt of his dies." The father looked fondly at the daughter, so like him in feature and spirit, though what he counted firmness in himself seemed rank obstinacy in her.

"Father," the girl protested, "I would listen to you if you had advanced one valid reason for separating us. He is not cousin enough to make one grain of difference, and the fact that he is not well is only another reason why I should go to California with him till he is rested and can begin work on his book." The old man drew the girl to his knee, and the mother wiped her eyes.

"Look here, child, we have a reason. We have had a talk with John and his mother, and Dr. Simpson. The plain truth is that he has symptoms of consumption. You know what that may mean"— Rosellan clutched his arm.

"It is not true! He would have told me first of all! He is only tired out. I will send for him and see, and if it were true I should take care of him."

"You don't know what you are saying. Even if we had so little sense, do you suppose John himself would expose you to even a possible danger like that? He said last night"—

"I had a right to be there! And he never let me know!"

"Wait, dear," said her mother. "We love you too well to— John knows his duty. His going to California"— Rosellan sprang up and faced them.

"I shall go, too!" she declared.

"Dearie," her mother spoke, "he left you this letter. He"—

"Left me a letter! Why, where is he?"

"He went to California this morning. It was for the best"—

"Without telling me or saying goodby? You must have made him do this! But no, you couldn't do that! It is his own fault. It means that he—doesn't care as he said he did." She stood looking at them.

"Rosellan," pleaded her mother, "he did the right thing." But the girl took John's letter from her father's hand and left the room.

"Well," old Roger Howard said to his wife, "it's hard on her at first, and John certainly did the square thing, but she's young and the separation may turn her heart toward Gilbert, as we have always planned."

And Rosellan, in her own room, was reading her lover's letter:

Rosellan, dearest, you know I love you. That is why I am leaving you this way. I think I could not bear to say goodby; it would be cruel to us both. Privately I myself cannot think that I am anything worse than run down from mental overwork and neglect of physical exercise, but all our relatives and Dr. Simpson seem to see a danger to the very shadow of which I will not expose you.

So I am off to my Aunt Eunice. It would be brutally unfair to hold your heart to a pledge I may never be able honorably to redeem. Therefore, dearest, I set you free. Try to be happy and forget. I have promised your father not to write. It seems best, though you know it breaks my heart. You know, too, that I would let no obstacle but this come between us. I wish it was decent to ask you to wait till I find whether I may not yet be in shape to make a home for you, but it is not.

It is hard not to kiss you goodby, and I never loved you as I do now in giving you up. Yours always,

JOHN BARRY.

But all Rosellan said to herself was: "He does not love me or he could not leave me."

That one wakeful night that followed seemed to change Rosellan utterly. She forbade her parents to mention John's name and seemed suddenly to have grown from girl to woman. She accepted invitations everywhere and was welcomed as an acquisition at social functions, but beneath the blossoming brilliance lay an undoubted hardness. She hated it all. Gilbert Crane she ignored so absolutely that sheer self respect obliged him to withdraw his wooing. Even her father saw there was no hope for his cherished plan. But this was not the worst.

Three or four months after John's departure Rosellan began a marked flirtation with Steve Golden, a wealthy, dissipated man of forty. He was evidently infatuated with the girl, and she let him follow her about till her father remonstrated.

"Father, you put your hand on my affairs once. I warn you not to do it again." And somehow he dared not.

Rosellan kept even her mother at a distance and was in a continual whirl of parties and dances, the gayest of the gay, and Golden, confident and dashing, was always in her wake. He had bought and was refurnishing one of the handsomest houses in town, which further alarmed her parents.

One January afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Howard returned from an afternoon function to find their daughter standing in the hall in her traveling suit.

"What is it?" they both asked in the same breath. She handed them a telegram:

Los Angeles, Cal.

Miss Rosellan Howard, Des Moines, Ia.:
Doctors have given me up. If you want to see me, come. JOHN BARRY.

"You need not say anything," she announced, though neither of them had spoken, "and if you want to help me, mother, will you see that a few of my things are packed? I shall start this evening."

The train seemed to crawl; minutes seemed hours and hours days. Plain or mountain, stream or lake, the landscape seemed dull and dreary. The girl lived years on the trip, and as she read and reread John's farewell letter, which she had kept, her resentment and distrust died away, her girlish faith in him returned, and she saw only the real love and the self abnegating honor of the man.

As the train pulled into Los Angeles she remembered suddenly that she did not know his aunt's street address. How would she find him? Would she be too late? Dazed and weary, she emerged from the car into the brilliant California sunshine and stepped down, half blinded, into a crowd of strangers—and John Barry's arms. He was brown, vigorous and smiling. Quite unabashed, he kissed her, and they seemed suddenly to be all alone.

"What does it mean?" she gasped. He laughed.

"The doctors have given me up—discharged me—cured, of what I never had, and I wanted you—I"—

"You might have written and not—not frightened me so." She choked back the tears. "You knew I cared or I wouldn't have come."

"I know, sweetheart. We will have a wedding this afternoon. I had to telegraph for fear you would have one without me." She turned and looked at him in astonishment.

"I didn't want Golden to get you," he explained.

"Did you think he ever would?" she asked indignantly. "I simply wanted to bring father to his senses."

"Well," John answered slowly, "you succeeded. Just look at this." He handed her a crumpled telegram:

Des Moines, Ia.

John Barry, Los Angeles, Cal.:
If you want to marry Rosellan, for heaven's sake do it before Steve Golden does.

They both laughed.

"You see," he said, "if I had started to go to you, you might have taken him before I reached you, so I called you across the continent, and Aunt Eunice has divided up with me. She says she would like to be worth at least half as much to me alive as she would be dead, so we can live here."

Rosellan considered.

"John," she said softly, "I haven't a white dress to my name."

New England Justice.

Ebenezer Snell, the grandfather of the poet William Cullen Bryant, is described as a good type of the New England farmer, in whose nature Puritanism, with its stern rigors of conduct and conscience, was overlaid with many of the amenities of Yankee humor. Bryant preserved several anecdotes of his grandfather, one of which, quoted by Mr. W. A. Bradley in his biography of the poet, may serve to indicate the way in which he exercised his humor, and also to show the patriarchal conception of justice that was held in a remote New England community at the end of the eighteenth century.

My grandfather, said Bryant, once found that certain pieces of lumber intended by him for the runners of a sled and called in that part of the country sled crooks had been taken without leave by a farmer who lived at no great distance. These timbers were valuable, being made from a tree the grain of which was curved so as to correspond with the curve required in the runners.

The delinquent received notice that his offense was known and that if he wished to escape a prosecution he must carry a bushel of rye to each of three poor widows living in the neighborhood and tell them why he brought it.

He was only too glad to comply with this condition.

The Japanese Jury.

In the Teiyei era (along about the middle of the thirteenth century) a Japanese statesman brought the laws in touch with the people by establishing a council of state, with twelve judges, the same as our jury. Before these twelve all litigation was brought for investigation and decision. The plaintiff and defendant had their spokesmen, who argued and defended the case, and afterward the twelve retired into a closed chamber, where the following oath was administered:

During the deliberation of a case, and the decision afterward between right and wrong, neither family connection nor sympathy with, nor antipathy against, the party shall influence. Fear not a powerful family or favor not a friend, but speak in accordance with the dictates of truth. Should there be a case decided wrong and redress refused to a man we shall be punished by all the gods and goddesses of the realm. Thus we swear, and affix our signatures.

Titus Wants A Reform In Rowing

Champion Says Members of Eight Oared Crews Should Use Two Sculls Instead of a Single Sweep---He Gives Reasons.

By CONSTANCE S. TITUS,
America's greatest amateur oarsman.

When rowing was taken up by the colleges all over the country the original idea was to promote a fine out of door sport that would benefit the men who took part in it. Of course it does benefit them, but I believe that the present methods could be greatly improved upon.

The important crew in any college is the eight. We took the idea of having eight men in a boat, each handling a twelve foot sweep, from the English. We have improved the boats, making them lighter and faster without sacrificing strength where strength is important, but still we stick to the old English idea of arranging the men.

Now, look at the result.

Each man when he begins to row is placed either on the port or starboard side. He almost invariably rows on that side as long as he stays in the game. He uses a sweep about twelve feet in length and weighing, say, nine pounds.

As he reaches forward with his hands close together on the handle of the sweep one arm is fully extended, with the wrist straight. The inside arm is cramped, with a bend at the wrist. One shoulder swings forward more than the other. Some of the coaches tell the men that they must hold their bodies square to the front, but it is a practically impossible thing when both hands are on the handle of a sweep that shifts from one angle to another. As the stroke begins the inboard shoulder is further than the other. Coming to the finish of the stroke, the whole body twists, bringing that shoulder back to the rear. A man at a starboard oar develops his right shoulder and his whole right side much more than his left. At a port oar the development is on the left side.

Now, take the centiped or octoped, which, I think, should take the place of the eight.

Here each man handles a pair of sculls about nine feet six inches long, weighing only four pounds each.

As he leans forward his hands swing apart, expanding the chest so that he can breathe freely. Midway in the stroke they come together, and open out again at the finish, again expanding the chest. Each side does exactly the same amount of work, so there is no chance for an uneven development, as in the case of the one sided sweep.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Another splendid summer vaudeville program is scheduled for Keith's Boston Theatre for the week of July 17. The headline attraction of the variety show will be George Wilson who will be pleasantly remembered by amusement-seekers hereabouts for his clever work in connection with the old Boston Museum stock company. Mr. Wilson is too well known to need any lengthy introduction and his vehicle, "A Bachelor's Babies," is said to be one of the most mirth provoking comedies seen in vaudeville. The surrounding show will be of the usual Keith standard including Charlie Case, the mirth provoking blackface comedian who talks about his father; Brothers Dam, eccentric acrobats, tumblers and balancers; Madeline Diston, pleasing vocalist and dialect comedienne; the Maxsmith Duo, novelty club jugglers and experts on dancing ladders; Hawthorn and Burt, comedians and dancers; Misses Mills and Morris, "The Blackface minstrel girls," and Burke's musical dogs which have been specially engaged for the amusement of the juveniles. The Fadettes women's orchestra continue to attract music lovers and for the coming week they will make an entire change of selections. An entire new list of motion pictures will be exhibited by the biograph.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

In Klaw & Erlanger's great New England Spectacle, "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," which will be at the Colonial Theatre in Boston, for a limited engagement beginning Monday evening, July 17, with Saturday matinees, it is shown what happened when a pumpkin famine occurred, and only one farmer was fortunate enough to raise a crop which, strangely enough, was bigger and better than ever before. The wonderful spectacle is one that every New Engander should see. It is the first real Yankee spectacle ever put on the stage — brimful of Yankee wit, and filled with Yankee scenes, characters, and incidents. A hundred thousand dollars have been spent on all the magnificent scenes, costumes, and effects. The production is so big and beautiful that it will be talked o for many a long day.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

On Monday, July 17th, the management of the summer season at the Castle Square Theatre will transfer the company now playing there to the Empire Theatre where the organization will complete the summer season. The policy of the management of the Castle Square company will be in no way changed by this transfer and the plans for the balance of the season contemplate the presentation of a series of dramatic productions that will maintain the high standard which has characterized the productions of the Castle Square company throughout the eight years of its existence. The attraction announced for the opening week of the Empire Theatre is the satirical comedy in three acts "A Royal Family" written by Capt. Marshall, the author of "His Excellency." Capt. Marshall's work in "A Royal Family" was instantly recognized as the best he had given the public when the play was first seen at the Court Theatre in London in October 1899.

If you wish to travel all the way to old age without missing connections at any stage of the journey you must command sleep. Sleep is the medicine of nature and if you can command sleep you can snap your fingers at work. It is a surprising thing how few people own a really good mattress, yet they spend money in a reckless manner for other things and sleep on a mattress that is hard and uncomfortable and that plays the old jinks with sleep, keeping them rolling and tossing all night and in an unhappy state of mind all day.

By all means own a good mattress, with one third of your life spent in bed, a good mattress will make life worth twice the living.

N. E. A. CONVENTION.

Braintree Man Writes of Work Done at Asbury Park.

[From the Braintree Observer.]

It has been my privilege to spend the week at Asbury Park, New Jersey's beautiful seaside resort, and I wish I could adequately convey to my fellow-townsmen even a small part of the interest and inspiration afforded by the place itself and the great meeting of the National Educational Association which was the occasion of my visit.

Asbury Park is 55 miles from New York City down the Jersey coast. The broad Atlantic breaks on a long stretch of clear, white sand, making a perfect bathing beach where thousands daily enjoy sporting in the surf to their own great refreshment and the entertainment of other thousands of interested onlookers. Long Branch, a few miles nearer New York, is perhaps the more famous watering place. But Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, twin cities separated by a small lake and united by numerous bridges, board-walks and other ties of a less material nature, are the mecca of a large number of summer visitors and the seat of certain religious operations, under Methodist auspices, which make life there somewhat unique.

Trains do not stop at Asbury Park on Sunday, and some weary long-distance travellers, inadvertently arriving on the Lord's day have to get off at North Asbury Park and walk or drive the rest of the way. Even carriages are halted at the boundaries of Ocean Grove. A friend of mine arriving on Sunday asked his "cabby" if he could not make an exception in his case and drive him to his assigned stopping-place. The reply was that he could if the passenger was willing to put up the $4,000.00 which the laws prescribed for such a violation of the Sunday quiet. Consequent upon the visit of some 20,000 educators to attend the Convention, each with a trunk or dress-suit case the glut of baggage at the station over Sunday can better be imagined than described.

No liquor is sold (at least not openly) and in the vast throng of people on beaches and streets I did not see an intoxicated person not a bit of disorder even on the night of "the glorious Fourth" when at least 10,000 persons were on the Asbury Park beach to witness a magnificent display of fireworks provided by the city.

The National Educational Association is a purely deliberative body, neither claiming nor desiring any authority over anyone. Yet what it formally approves generally "goes," for the leading experts of the country are in its membership and active in the conduct of its affairs. The general sessions of the convention were held in the great auditorium at Ocean Grove. This building comfortably seats 10,000 people and it is a model audience room. The electric lamps are so arranged that there is a soft diffusion of light throughout the room which is entirely agreeable to the eyes. The acoustic properties are perfect; and from every part of the room it is possible to see the whole audience and the speaker.

The music was most inspiring throughout the week. A very large orchestra of all kinds of instruments and a very large chorus of both men and women, together with many distinguished soloists furnished a musical treat which cannot soon be forgotten. A very able conductor kept all in perfect time and gave expressiveness to the renderings of some of the selections, such as to deeply stir the emotions of the audience.

The very elect of the Educators were there from all parts of the country and the air was surcharged with discussion of all phases of nearly every conceivable school subject. No one person could take it all in, both because there is a limit to man's mental capacity and because many different meetings were held at the same time in different parts of the city. But anyone would have been stupid who did not carry away many fresh and helpful ideas and a new and exalted conception of the greatness of the work of educating the future men and women of our great free republic.

In the first service which I attended (on Sunday evening) that great pulpit orator, Rev. Russell H. Conwell, of the the Baptist temple, Philadelphia, made a noble plea for a Christian education, preaching from the text "We would see Jesus."

Massachusetts people were all proud of Secretary George H. Martin's clean-cut presentation of the ideal attitude of the state on the subject of child-labor. He claimed that every child, born into this world by no choice of its own, has a right to three things,—time' instruction and protection; time to grow, to find himself and to discern what kind of things and people are in the world; instruction in regard to what the race has accumulated in the way of knowledge of how to live successfully; and protection by the state, in these rights and for the state's own interest, against the ignorance, indifference, greed or viciousness of irresponsible parents and others. Mr. Martin argued for a uniform law, making fourteen years the limit, before which it should be unlawful to confine children in shops and factories.

The inconsistency of those who oppose modern methods in education was amusingly illustrated by citing the case of a certain school-committeeman, who, after being called by telephone to a dinner cooked over a gas-range, left his electrically lighted home, riding to the board-meeting in his automobile, to cast his vote in favor of requiring schools of his city to confine themselves to the teaching of the three Rs, to the exclusion of all modern methods and fads in education.

I heard it argued by one gentleman that out-of-town talent should be employed on the teaching force as far as possible. This speaker pointed out the fact that in some towns, especially New England, there had been among the inhabitants a steady physical deterioration on account of the intermarriage of neighbors for generations, until in some cases the old stock was inferior and gradually dying out. He claimed that there would be a similar intellectual degeneration where the young ladies of a town, however estimable and well-educated, were year after year employed as teachers in their own town. It is far better for them to go into new scenes and far better for the schools to introduce "new blood" in the persons of teachers brought up elsewhere, who from a different environment should bring in fresh life and new ideas. I believe this to be in a general way true and good doctrine.

Here are just a few of the many topics and speakers, which will serve to indicate the richness of the program.

The Nation's Educational Purpose, Andrew S. Draper, state commissioner of education for New York, Albany, N. Y.

The Standards of Local Administration, Hon. George B. McClellan, Mayor of the City of New York.

The Recognition of the Physical Development of the Child in the Training of Kindergartners, Nathan Oppenheim, educational author, New York, N. Y.

The Validity of Recent Criticisms of the Kindergarten, M. V. O'Shea, professor of science and art of education, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

Teaching of Arithmetic in Elementary Schools, M. A. Bailey, department of mathematics, New York Training School for Teachers New York City.

Why do so Many Pupils leave the High School in the First Year? How Can They be Induced to Remain? Reuben Post Hallect, Principal of Boys' high school, Louisville, Ky.

The Psychology of Reading and Writing, Robert MacDougall, professor of descriptive psychology, New York University.

What Young People Read and What They Should Read, G. Stanley Hall, President of Clark University, Worcester, Mass.

The Aims of Drawing as a Subject of Public School Instruction, Henry Turner Bailey, educational editor, Worcester, Mass.

Music as an Element in Culture, Charles Edward Locke, D.D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Manual Training in the Grades, Lorenzo D. Harvey, superintendent of schools, Menomonie, Wis.

Fighting the School Desk, Luther H. Gulick, supervisor of physical Training public schools New York city.

Should the Twelve Years Now Occupied by the Grammar and High School Courses be Divided equally Between Them? Eugene W. Lyttle, state inspector of high schools for the state of New York, Albany, N. Y.

Scores of other interesting topics were discussed but lack of space forbids even the mention of them here.

The crowning event of the program was the coming of President Roosevelt on Friday afternoon, to address the assembly. He was called in my hearing "the most powerful man in the world today." He is undoubtedly more influential than any other individual in the Western Hemisphere, if not in the world; and his whole political career is an expression of the conscience of the American people. From the first he has stood uncompromisingly for purity and uprightness in public official relations. On this issue he has been successively elected to a series of high positions until he has reached the highest in the gift of the people.

They want in the public service the straightforward, courageous, frank and uncompromising integrity which he has always shown in all his dealings with the manifold corruptions that have thus far in vain assailed him. That is why they have elected him and why he is so powerful. The President gave the teachers high praise for their faithful and unselfish labors for the good of the nation and spoke a strong word in favor of a better remuneration for their services. It is safe to predict that every one present at this great meeting will return to his work at the close of the vacation with a new conception of his responsibility and a larger, deeper inspiration. Frank H. Palmer.

LEG FOR MARVEL.

Won on Time Allowance in Race of Cape Cats.

A race for Cape cat boats of the Quincy Yacht club was held Saturday afternoon. Owing to the lateness of the tide, it was necessary that the race be started off Fort Point. The wind was fresh from the northwest and the six boats that entered sailed over an eight-mile course.

The Argestes was the first to finish and the Marvel second. Corrected time, however, gave the race to the Marvel by 1 minute 15 seconds.

The summary:

Name and owner	Actual time h. m. s.	Corrected time. h. m. s.
Marvel, I. M. Whittemore	1 07 04	0 40 26

Prompt Arrest.

A man who gave his name as John P. Smith, aged 29 years and residence as Brockton, passed Sunday night at the police station as a result of the promptness of Chief Burrell. The Chief with Lieut. McKay were in an automobile at Houghs Neck when they saw Smith grab a young woman and pull her off the street. In an instant Chief Burrell jumped from the auto and grabbed the fellow, placing him under arrest.

A crowd quickly surrounded them and it looked as though an attempt would be made to rescue the prisoner.

Before the crowd had an opportunity to do anything, Lieut. McKay went to the Chief's assistance and Smith was put aboard an electric car for Quincy.

He was arraigned in court upon two complaints: assault on an unknown woman and drunkeness.

The Swede "Worsted."

According to a Boston paper Michael Mahoney of East Boston, and Gus Olsen of Quincy met at the corner of Cross and Hanover streets in Boston on Sunday. Olsen said the Irish were no good, while Mahoney told Olsen the Swedes all ought to be branded and driven out of the country. Then there was a lively fight. Mahoney hit Olsen a stunning blow that sent him into the street, and followed with a right jolt to the chin. Two policemen appeared on the scene and the men were hustled to station 1. Olsen was in bad shape, and told the sergeant he would never insult the Irish again.

Superior Service.

Detailed description of the steamers Eastern States and Western States would be tedious. Possibly it may be abbreviated by saying that these new boats are not only the largest and latest but the best on any fresh water in the world. The finest hotel is not better in respect to furnishings. The rooms, sleeping comforts, ventilation and cuisine are altogether admirable on these truly palatial steamers.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

The School Teachers Again in Canadian Rockies.

The New England teachers are again on Canadian soil en route home from the Lewis and Clark fair. They are today making a 24-hour stop at Glacier on the west side of the Rocky Mountains. On the westward trip last week Monday, Miss Underwood wrote from this point:

"Have been on observation car today through Canadian Rockies. Their grandeur words are inadequate to express. One is thrilled! The trip has been delightful. Am very well. Kinds regards to friends."

Before arriving at Glacier the excursionists had a superb view of the Selkirks. The summit has an altitude of 4,300 feet and the Glacier House is 4,122 feet above sea level. The Great Glacier is near by and to the left is Sir Donald 10,600 feet high.

At Portland Saturday it was a perfect day to see the exposition. In the evening there was a goodbye dinner at the American Inn, with distinguished guests.

We little knew the danger of Miss Underwood's long term of service being broken when we sent her west. But a dispatch to the Herald says: Nearly every Oregonian on learning that there are 30 unmarried women in the party, has gone on to say that there are 42,000 more men than women in Oregon. This was an interesting fact for the first times, but lost its glamor by constant repetition.

"Bother statistics," says one of the teachers, "where are they?"

Victim Unknown.

A young man who refused to give his name was treated by Dr. Sargent at 3.30 Sunday morning for a cut over his left eye. He claimed some party unknown had hit him over the eye while walking up from Neponset.

Officer Phillips reports that he saw two men acting in a suspicious manner near the Neponset bridge, a little while previous and fired his revolver at them as they ran away. The injured man may have been one of the two men.

Why Not?

Arnold & Johnson, the florists in Music Hall block, have each week on exhibition in their show window a flag made up of different kinds of flowers. These have been attracting some attention as a new flag is shown each week. A notice was found on their door this morning stating that the flag shown was neither English or British. Soap Suds for Brown-tails.

Under the heading "Worth Trying," the Free Press of Somersworth, N. H., says:

Mr. Reuben C. Clark of Berwick says that for some years he has been using soapsuds, made of old-fashioned soft soap, as a remedy for tent caterpillars and current worms. He has sprayed the suds on the pests, and its effect was immediate. After the soapy water struck the insects they never once moved, but remained in that position until they dried up and blew away. On a neighboring farm there is an elm tree which has been invaded by the brown-tail caterpillars, and they had played sad havoc with it. Wishing to experiment on these caterpillars with his soapsuds, Mr. Clark found several and applied the suds to them. They never moved. Its effect was apparently instantaneous. If these experiments are borne out by further tests, here will be found a cheap and convenient remedy for this destructive pest, soapsuds is not poisonous, and the use of it does not present the danger of poisoning the grass and thus poisoning the stock that may feed on it. One great drawback to the use of paris green and other such remedies, is the danger of poisoning. The only difficulty in the use of soapsuds is that involved in the use of paris green, and that is the difficulty of spraying the taller trees. Some inventive individual ought to devise a sprayer that will fully meet the demand in this respect and then we will have in soapsuds a cheap and effective remedy for a dangerous pest. These facts are certainly worth knowing and Mr. Clark expressed the hope that other people will experiment with soapsuds and report to him as to results.

This is a simple thing to try and if it is efficacious let's give the moths all the soapsuds that can be made.

BLACKMAR IS DEAD

Popular Head of Grand Army Was Overworked

ON EXHAUSTING TOURS

Had Been Advised to Curtail Itinerary, But Gave His Life to Organization Whose Welfare He Had at Heart

Boise, Ida., July 17.—General Wilmon W. Blackmar, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, died here of nephritis. His wife was with him during the illness. The body will be embalmed and taken to the home of the family in Boston. General Blackmar arrived here on July 10 on an inspection tour of Grand Army posts throughout the northwest. He was ill when he arrived and gradually failed. The seriousness of his condition was kept from the public at the request of his wife.

Boston, July 17.—Except to two or three officials of the Grand Army, the news of the death of General Blackmar was received with great surprise in this city. The home of Blackmar was in this city, and since his elevation to the position of commander-in-chief the headquarters of the organization have been here. General Blackmar is succeeded by John R. King of Washington, senior vice commander-in-chief.

Two weeks ago Blackmar broke down and was ordered to bed at his summer home in Hingham by his physician. At the time his indisposition was regarded as of a slight nature. On July 6 Blackmar's condition had apparently improved, and his doctor decided to permit him to continue his visits to western departments, which he had begun early in the year.

The general was accompanied on his last trip by Mrs. Blackmar and her sister, Miss Fannie Brewer. The department of Idaho had arranged a camp fire for July 10, and soon after Blackmar reached that city he was obliged to again engage the services of a physician.

General Blackmar had intended, after visiting Idaho, to go to Portland, Or., Tacoma and Seattle, Wash., and Sitka, Alaska. It is claimed that since his election to office he has visited Grand Army departments and posts oftener than any of his predecessors, and in less than a year he had inspected practically every department in the country. The exhausting trips which these visits made necessary affected his physical condition and some time before he broke down his friends considered that he was overworking himself.

Adjutant General Gilman says that Blackmar was so wedded to his duties that he gave his life to the Grand Army. He said that the general had been unusually popular at all the departments, and that he was loved and honored by his associates. When Blackmar reached Chicago, on his journey to Boise, Gilman says, he was warned not to undertake the full itinerary, but the commander-in-chief said he would go on, as he had determined to visit every department.

General Blackmar was born at Bristol, Pa., July 25, 1841. His father was a Massachusetts clergyman and his mother a native of Andover, N. H. When the Civil war broke out young Blackmar was preparing for college, but he volunteered immediately as a private in the Fifteenth Pennsylvania cavalry. He remained in the army until the end of the war. He was engaged in 22 actions, including Antietam, Chicamauga, Chattanooga, Hunter's Ridge, Lynchburg, Clarksburg and the Shenandoah valley campaigns, under Sheridan.

After the war he attended the Harvard law school and upon his graduation at once entered upon the practice of his profession. In 1873 he was appointed judge advocate general of the Massachusetts militia, continuing in this office for 10 years, under four different gubernatorial administrations. He had been connected with the Grand Army of the Republic for 37 years.

General Blackmar had held numerous offices in the Massachusetts department, G. A. R. He was department commander at the time of the Grand Army encampment in this city, August, 1904, and at that time was elected commander-in-chief of the organization, succeeding General Black of Illinois.

Highwaymen Got Left

Birmingham, Ala., July 17.—L. D. Burr, paymaster of a steel and iron company, was held up by two masked highwaymen and relieved of $5000 which was to be used in paying off the men. Less than five minutes afterwards officers had shot and killed one of the highwaymen and recovered the money. The other robber escaped.

Foolish Prank Cost a Life

Willimantic, Conn., July 17.—Albert Ferrier, 42 years old, and four friends were in a rowboat on the Willimantic river and were returning home after a day's outing. When near shore they started to rock the boat and all were thrown out, Ferrier sinking almost immediately.

Two Executions at Sing Sing

Ossining, N. Y., July 17.—Two men were executed this morning at the Sing Sing prison. The men are the negro, Jackson, who killed Charles W. Roxbury, and James Breen, who shot and killed William H. Keyes in the latter's saloon in Manhattan.

THE FARFADET DISASTER

Submarine's Crew Suffered Terribly Before Death Came

Bizerta, Tunis, July 17.—The task of extracting the remains of the dead crew of the submarine boat Farfadet, which sank at the entrance of the port of Sidi Abdallah July 6, and which was towed into drydock Saturday after incessant efforts to raise her, is proceeding slowly. Owing to the displacement of the machinery through the action of the water some of the bodies have become firmly fixed beneath the engines and other apparatus.

It is now apparent that four of the men who occupied the forward compartment were drowned immediately the accident occurred. Eight men in the after compartment were those who responded to the divers' rappings during the 32 hours after the sinking of the submarine. From the condition of the interior of the vessel it was seen that they struggled hard against their fate and endeavored to stop the leaking hatch with their jerseys. The water, however, gained while the air supply diminished. Only four bodies have as yet been recovered and these are almost unrecognizable.

The second day after the accident, when the members of the crew of the Farfadet were yet alive, the submarine was brought to the surface, but the cables snapped and the submarine sank into the deep mud. Five successive efforts to raise the vessel likewise proved unsuccessful.

When the boat was raised and the door of the Farfadet was opened there was a rush of nauseous gases from the decomposing bodies of the men who had perished in her. Powerful deodorants were immediately introduced into the vessel and the ventilators were started.

Women Assaulted by Burglar

Clayton, N. Y., July 17.—Mrs. Fanny Harners and her daughter, Ida, 18 years old, who are summer residents of Grinnell Island park, were brutally clubbed by a burglar who entered the sleeping apartments of the daughter for the purpose of stealing diamond jewelry kept in the room. Neighbors surrounded the house, capturing a man who proved to be Albert Nuley. Both victims are in a critical condition. Nuley is in jail.

Peary's Ship Starts Northward

New York, July 17.—The Roosevelt, in which Captain Robert E. Peary hopes to reach the North Pole, has started on her long voyage. Captain Peary and a party of guests were on board at the start, and remained with the ship on her trip down the bay, but they left her at the Narrows, returning to the city on a navy tug. Captain Peary started last night by rail for Sydney, C. B., where he will join the ship.

Bulgaria Has a Grievance

Sofia, July 17.—The Bulgarian government has sent a circular note to the representatives of the powers, in which the powers are asked to intervene for the protection of the Bulgarian population in the vilayet of Adrianople against systematic Turkish persecution. The note suggests that the vilayet be submitted to European control.

Time That Report Should Be Made

St. Paul, July 17.—Governor Johnson has ordered Public Examiner Kerst to make a full investigation of the books and business methods of the state capitol commission since its organization in April, 1893. There has been no general report made by the commission in 10 years on the expenditure of more than $4,500,000.

Six Drownings at New York

New York, July 17.—Six persons lost their lives while bathing in the waters of New York, one of them being John Smith, a life guard at the Washington Heights baths, who perished in a brave but vain attempt to rescue a boy who was unable to swim and had been swept out of his depth by the current.

Orders Were Disregarded

Midvale, Va., July 17.—Two trainmen were killed and four more injured in a head-on collision between two freight trains here. A north-bound train had orders to wait at Midvale for a south-bound extra, but the orders, it is alleged, were disregarded by the north-bound crew.

Drivers to Continue Struggle

Chicago, July 17.—The express drivers formerly employed by the seven railway express companies will remain on strike, for the present at least. This was decided by the members of the Express Drivers' union when a referendum vote was taken on the proposition of calling off the strike.

Cigar Stub Started $10,000 Fire

Fredericton, N. B., July 17.—A cigar stub, thrown away by a careless smoker, last night set fire to a long wooden bridge spanning the St. John river, between this city and Marysville. Two spans and a pier of the bridge were destroyed, causing $10,000 damage.

Despondent Girl Drank Acid

Bridgeport, Conn., July 17.—Lillian J. Houlihan, aged 19, said to be the daughter of John Houlihan of Boston, committed suicide in a boarding house by drinking carbolic acid. Despondency is believed to have been the reason for the act.

DESIRE FOR PEACE

Political Balance of Europe Is Greatly Disturbed

GERMANY'S PRETENSIONS

Of a Character She Would Not Have Dreamed of Before the Far Eastern War--Growl Over "American Invasion of Russia"

St. Petersburg, July 17.—M. Witte spent an hour with American Ambassador Meyer at the Kleinmichel palace, discussing the forthcoming peace conference. Before leaving for Paris next Wednesday Witte will have another audience of the czar. Witte is expected to be the bearer of a personal message from the czar to President Roosevelt.

The Novosti says that it believes that the desire of the anti-German coalition which Great Britain is trying to engineer to restore Russia as a threat against German aggression should be a powerful diplomatic weapon in the hands of the Russian plenipotentiaries.

"Europe wants to end the war," says the paper, "as Russia's preoccupation in the far east destroys the political equilibrium. Austria is in danger from Germany, which seeks a thoroughfare to the Adriatic in exchange for compensation in the Balkan peninsula. Germany has pretensions now which she would not have dreamed of before the Russo-Japanese war. It is evident from the Morocco incident that Europe wants peace in order that Russia may safeguard her against German aggression."

The Bourse Gazette prints a long article attacking the "Northeastern Siberian company of St. Petersburg," which is presided over by M. Contionlivsky, having Admiral Abaza of Yalu fame among the stockholders, but which, the paper says, is really managed by John Rosin, an American, for the benefit of Americans. The Bourse Gazette asserts that the company has taken entire possession of the spacious Chukotsky peninsula, where mining privileges are denied to Russians. It characterizes the whole affair as "a warning against the American invasion of Russian territory, which is connived at by the Yalu scoundrels."

"Death Knell of Autocracy"

Moscow, July 17.—The fighting organization of the social revolutionists has issued a proclamation announcing that the death sentence pronounced against Count Shouvaloff, chief of police here, who was assassinated July 11, was executed by one of its members "on account of the black and cruel activity of this satrap at Odessa (where Shouvaloff was formerly prefect) and his subsequent return to the active service of reaction to stamp out the revolution in Moscow." The proclamation concludes: "Let this execution serve as a joyful signal to the Russian millions in revolt and as the death knell of the dying autocracy. Let it remind all dogs of the autocracy of national justice."

Japs Sure to Take South Sakhalin

Tokio, July 17.—The Russian centre holding Darline and vicinity was attacked July 11, and offered stubborn resistance. The attack was renewed at dawn of July 12, when the Japanese dislodged the Russians, driving them in the direction of Mauka. This victory ensures complete occupation of South Sakhalin by the Japanese. Eighty prisoners were taken by the Japanese. Four field pieces, one machine gun and the ammunition warehouses were captured. The Japanese loss was about 70 killed or wounded. The Russians lost 100 men.

Japs In Russian Waters

Vladivostok, July 17.—Four Japanese torpedo boat destroyers reconnoitered Olga and Vladimir bays, northeast of here, July 14 and 15. They made soundings and examined the shores and were evidently investigating the possibilities of landing troops.

Alexander Shows Improvement

New York, July 27.—The condition of James W. Alexander, former president of the Equitable Life Assurance society, who has been seriously ill at a retreat on Long Island, is reported to be improved. He was taken about three weeks ago to the Long Island retreat, the present location of which has been kept secret. Four nurses and a staff of physicians are in constant attendance on the patient.

New Trial Denied Mitchell

Portland, Or., July 17.—Judge De Haven, in the federal court, overruled a motion of John H. Mitchell for a new trial. Mitchell was recently convicted of using his office as United States senator in the furtherance of the legal practice of the law firm of Mitchell & Tanner of this city. Mitchell's attorneys obtained a week in which to file a bill of exceptions and a writ of error.

River Driver's Life Crushed Out

Rumford Falls, Me., July 17.—Stephen Robarge, a river driver, was killed while working with a crew piling logs on the canal bank. The logs began to roll and Robarge's body was crushed badly, most of the bones being broken.

Sixty-Six Killed In Church

Fermo, Italy, July 17.—The roof of the chapel of the women's hospital fell in yesterday during the celebration of mass, killing 16 women and 50 children. The injured have been taken from the ruins.

CONFESSES CRIME

John Schidlofska Arrested by a Colorado Sheriff

HE ADMITS HIS IDENTITY

Tragedy Was Culmination of Series of Quarrels Due to Alleged Deception on the Wife's Part Previous to Marriage

La Junta, Col., July 17.—John Schidlofska, wanted at Belmont, Mass., for the murder of his wife last Wednesday night, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Barr, while passing through this city on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad. Schidlofska confessed and gave the full details of the tragedy which has been puzzling the Massachusetts police. He said that he and his wife were drinking and quarreling Wednesday afternoon. They continued their quarrel at a park that night, when her taunts enraged him to such an extent that he cut her throat with a knife and threw the body into a gully. Then he started for the west, making no attempt to conceal his identity.

The prisoner expressed his willingness to return without extradition papers, and he will be held by sheriff Barr pending the arrival of officers from Massachusetts. A telegram from Chicago apprised Barr of the fact that he would be on Santa Fe train No. 1 from the east. The train stopped but a few minutes at the station, but this was sufficient for the sheriff to pick out his man. Schidlofska made no attempt to conceal his identity.

He told a clear story of the tragedy. He said he came to America from Poland five years ago and worked on a farm near Lynn, Mass. On Feb. 18, 1905, he married the woman whose murder he now confesses. When he married her, he states, the woman represented that she had $600 and was but 28 years of age. He found afterward that she had but $200 in money and was more than 40 years old.

The deception she worked upon him was the constant cause of quarrels, he said, and these quarrels had their culmination Wednesday night. That afternoon they decided to go to California and the wife furnished the money for two tickets. Then they drank heavily during the afternoon and went to a park at night. The quarrel over the statements the woman had made before their marriage was begun anew. He threw a rock and struck her in the head and while she was lying unconscious from the blow he gashed her throat with a penknife and dragged the body through an unfrequented part of the park, throwing it into a gully and covering it with rubbish. Then Schidlofska returned home, where he spent the night, leaving for the west Thursday noon. Before leaving he returned the ticket which he had purchased for his wife, receiving for it $69.

The location and arrest of Schidlofska are due in no small degree to the shrewdness and judgment of Pullman Conductor Kiser of Los Angeles, in charge of the train.

Conductor Kiser received a message from Chicago at Osage City, Kan., at 2:28 Saturday afternoon, asking him for the occupant of lower berth 10, tourist sleeper 3. The berth had been reserved at Chicago in Schidlofska's name. It had not been claimed. Conductor Kiser made a thorough search of the train.

In the smoking car Kiser spotted the man through the descriptions. When the sheriff came aboard at La Junta, Conductor Kiser took him to Schidlofska, and the sheriff asked for the suspect's ticket. Schidlofska reached up and took it from his coat pocket. The form and number were those mentioned in the telegram from Chicago, and he was placed under arrest.

Sheriff Seeks Information

Lynn, Mass., July 17.—Chief Shaw of the Massachusetts district police has received two telegrams from a Colorado sheriff named Barr, and judging from their contents it is believed here that the Colorado officials think they are on the track of John Schidlofska, who is wanted by the Massachusetts authorities in connection with the murder of his wife at Belmont on Wednesday night.

The telegrams were transmitted through Chicago, and in both cases the name of the city or town where they were filed was omitted, but it is known that they came from Colorado.

The wording of the two telegrams was almost identical. In them Sheriff Barr asked if Schidlofska was wanted by the Massachusetts authorities; the amount of the reward offered for his capture, and there was also a request for a full description of the fugitive.

BLOW IN THE FACE

As Delivery by a Youth Causes Newport Man's Death

Newport, R. I., July 17.—As a result of an altercation that occurred on the water front Thomas F. Allen, aged 45, a master painter of this city, was killed, and William H. Kirby, 18 years old, who, the police state, admits having struck Allen, is under arrest pending the outcome of an autopsy.

According to the police version of the affair, Allen went to the pier where his sailboat was moored preparatory to taking it out. Kirby and a number of companions who were on the pier asked Allen if he would take them with him, but the request was refused.

A wrangle followed and the dispute ended, it is alleged, by Kirby striking Allen a sharp blow in the face, causing him to fall backward and strike his head upon the edge of the pier. Death occurred almost instantly. Kirby gave himself up.

NOTES ABOUT TOWN.

The battleship Maryland is in Boston harbor.

A race for all classes, except Cape Cats, will be held by the Quincy Yacht club Saturday.

Frank Jenkins and family of Billings street have opened their cottage at Kenberma.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker of Walker street are at their summer home at Nantasket for the summer.

Ex-Councilman L. F. R. Langelier and family are at Montpelier, Vt., for the balance of the month.

Mrs. Walter Hill and son George of Clive street have gone to Weirs, N. H., for the remainder of the summer.

Herbert Cobb of the U. S. training ship now at Newport, R. I., made a flying visit to Quincy on Saturday.

The funeral of Miss Jessie Brown, the victim of the drowning accident at Braintree Little pond, was held Sunday afternoon, and was conducted by Rev. W. C. Darby of the East M. E. church.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cummings of Clive street and Miss Mabel Drew of Walker street started Saturday for East Andover, New Hampshire, for two weeks. Miss Drew will go from there to Wolfboro for the first two weeks in August.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coe of Marion street enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Creelman of the firm of Coe, Ray & Creelman of Boston, last week, at his summer home at Marshfield. Mr. and Mrs. Coe went down and back in their launch, "The Squanto."

Rev. B. F. Eaton, a former pastor, supplied the pulpit of the Universalist church Sunday. Many old friends were glad to greet him again. Rev. Hazen Conklin will occupy the pulpit next Sunday after which services will be discontinued until September.

Judging from the number who took advantage of the high tide Saturday morning at the Atlantic beach, one would be unkind to ask how many of the salt bathers sneaked out of the hot dip in the tub Saturday night. Of course too many baths are enervating, and who wouldn't choose the ocean to the bath-tub.

The reason that the members of the Wollaston Golf club are making such enviable records these days may be due to the fact that there is a derth of young women players in the club. As long as men are left alone with an excellent field and first class sticks they cannot help "doing themselves proud" in the popular game.

Those who heard the delightful talk of Gen. W. W. Blackmar of Hingham at the banquet of the Wollaston Unitarian club last winter, as well as his Grand Army friends, will regret to learn of his death in a western city while on a tour visiting all the departments in his jurisdiction. At Wollaston, Gen. Blackmar told of his trip around the world. Death was due to nephritis.

Mrs. J. P. Prout has gone to New Hampshire for two months.

H. B. Seller of Quincy Point is enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

Mrs. Alonzo Cain of South street is visiting her sister in Worcester.

Frederick Shultz of Norfolk Downs is at Holderness, N. H., for the season.

Congressman McNary broke his ankle Saturday evening in alighting from a yacht at South Boston.

Mrs. Robert Cochran of Bath, Maine, is visiting Mrs. Daniel Scouler of Madison avenue for a few days.

Arthur Sampson of Washington street is spending his vacation in Dublin, N. H., as the guest of Mr. Walter Bailey.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sparrow of Wollaston have gone to Bridgewater, N. H., where they will spend the coming two weeks.

The Quincys Lose at Braintree.

The features of the game were the fielding of McLaughlin, Kappler, McTierman and Dunn and the hitting of Kappler and Dunn.

The Merrymounts Lose.

The Merrymounts lost to the West Roxburys at the Park on Saturday.

Cooney pitched a good game for the visitors, holding the home team down to four hits. Kolson held the visitors except in the first and fourth innings when they scored all of their runs.

The Merrymounts scored one in the fourth on a gift to Granahan, and Atkins' hit. In the seventh Taylor hit safely, and went around on an error, and Baker's fly to Moran.

In the ninth with one run needed to tie, and two to win, Atkins and Taylor were safe, and with the heavy hitter up it looked good, but Donaher and Baker paddled the ozone, and Drake was thrown out at first.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Child's French Dress by Martha Dean—No. 4656

A thoroughly practical warm weather frock for a little girl will be found in the design published here. The little French dresses are always becoming and especially so when made of thin summer materials. The full round blouse is fitted to a shallow yoke, which is covered by the pointed collar. The full gathered skirt is attached to a narrow belt, over which the little maiden may wear a sash on "state occasions." The dress may be worn with a guimpe if desired, but for summer wear it well illustrates how cleverly comfort and style may be combined in the making of children's frocks. Dimity, lawn, gingham, china silk, challie or cashmere may be employed in the making. Sizes, 3 to 9 years.

DIRECTIONS FOR ORDERING

Send 10 cents to this office, give number of this pattern, No. 4656, and state size desired. It will then be sent to you by mail postpaid. Be sure to write plainly and always give full address. Several days must be allowed for delivery of pattern.

Granite City League.

The Athletics continue with an unbroken record at the head of the Granite City league, without any near rival. The standing to date:

Athletics	6	0	1.000
Victors	3	2	.600
Makarias	1	4	.250
Orients	1	5	.200

Victors vs. Athletics.

Saturday afternoon, at Merrymount park, the Athletics defeated the Victors in a game that took ten innings to decide. But for a piece of foolish coaching the Victors would have won.

Geekie, Hill, Burditt and Coleman played good ball for the Athletics, while Dackers, Troupe and both Smiths excelled for the Victors. The feature of the game was made by Smith, the Victors second baseman, who competed a double play unassisted.

NORFOLK CLUB.

Candidates For State Offices Heard at Meeting.

Nearly 200 attended the summer gathering of the Norfolk club on Saturday at Hotel Pemberton at Hull, when the State political campaign was opened. The speakers were Lieut.-Gov. Guild, Councillor Fred S. Hall of Taunton, Hon. Eben S. Draper and District Attorney French.

While the first three discussed State and National issues, Mr. French spoke of his work in Norfolk and Plymouth counties, saying in part:

I suppose I may consider myself not only in the "house of my friends," but also in the house of my relatives discussing a family matter, and this isa family matter. Norfolk and Plymouth, from Brookline to Mattapoisett, inclusive, are Republican, are loyal, have done their share of the work, have contributed their share of the money, have, we are proud to believe, their share of the good men and have a right to expect and demand their share of recognition from the state ticket, which has been withheld from them for many years.

Since Mr. Peirce of Plymouth was secretary of state and Mr. Endicott of Norfolk treasurer, we have had nothing. We have presented candidates, good men, men of admitted ability, men of experience, men of character, who have been rejected in favor of no better men in other sections of the state.

For nearly four years I have had the honor to hold an office which no one can occupy for a week without realization of its great importance to the community; an office whose incumbent has a tremendous influence for good or evil over the destinies of individuals, and the peace and good order of the community.

The office of district attorney is a public trust which involves in the discharge of its duties the exercise of an almost boundless descretion in an officer who should stand as impartial as a judge.

I love the office. It was filled by my father. It brings me in close touch with the people—people of all kinds and conditions, officers of the law, jurors, witnesses and unfortunates charged with crime. I should be sorry to give up the work.

And yet, ambition "by which sin fell the angels," encouraged by such kind words as have been said to me and of me here, publicly and privately, today, has induced me to humbly aspire to something not better, but higher. Whatever the result, I doubt if I am wise—but no matter.

SLEEP FOR SALE.

Registered Trade Mark.
Copyrighted by Ostermoor & Co. N.Y.

If you wish to travel all the way to old age without missing connections at any stage of the journey you must command sleep. Sleep is the medicine of nature and if you can command sleep you can snap your fingers at work. It is a surprising thing how few people own a really good mattress, yet they spend money in a reckless manner for other things and sleep on a mattress that is hard and uncomfortable and that plays the old jinks with sleep, keeping them rolling and tossing all night and in an unhappy state of mind all day.

By all means own a good mattress, with one third of your life spent in bed, a good mattress will make life worth twice the living.

Make your selection at once. Any one of these mattresses will make you wonder why you waited so long.

K. OF H. RATES.

Those Over Sixty Years of Age Protesting.

The new rate schedule adopted by the Knights of Honor, to go into effect Sept. 1, is causing a protest among those over 60 years of age, who are affected. There are two lodges in this city, Merrymount and Wollaston, who have several members who are hit.

The following table shows the new rate of assessment for full rate members between the ages of 61 and 70 inclusive:

Ages of
61 and 62	$8.20
62 and 63	8.40
63 and 64	8.60
64 and 65	8.80
65 and 66	9.60
66 and 67	10.40
67 and 68	10.90
68 and 69	12.50
69 and 70	14.00
70 and over	15.00

Wollaston lodge 926, did not meet Monday evening to discuss the new plan, as was expected. The matter will now probably go over to the first meeting in August. Opinion is divided as to the merit of the plan. The change, coming so soon after the Royal Arcanum change, has caused uneasiness among the members of other fraternal insurance organizations.

Past Grand Dictator, William J. Battison, who is a member of Wollaston lodge, K. of H., and a representative to the supreme lodge, defended the action of the supreme lodge in adopting the new rate. He said:

"The fact is that the rate of assessments established under the step rate plan some five or six years ago has proved on the whole insufficient to meet the claims arising from the death of members. Up to the age of 60 years the receipts under this plan have been more than sufficient to pay the claims arising below that age, but the receipts from members above the age of 60 have fallen so far short of what was required to meet the claims arising above that age, that the surplus contributed by members under that age did not make up the deficiency."

"When the supreme lodge met at Atlanta, Ga., on June 13, it was found that there was a large number of unpaid claims to be provided for, and as it has never been the policy of the Knights of Honor to accumulate a reserve fund, the only way these claims could be liquidated was by assessments of members. A committee of 11 was appointed to examine the situation and report a plan for the consideration of the supreme lodge. The committee was in continuous session for a number of days, and examined very carefully the mortality statistics of the Knights of Honor, as well as its table of rates and those of other organizations, and finally brought in a report, which was adopted with slight amendments."

Barre Granite Manufacturers Lose $15,000 by Fire.

Barre granite manufacturers suffered a heavy fire loss early Monday morning. A dispatch to the Globe says:—Fire at 2 o'clock this morning destroyed what is know as the National circle of granite sheds, causing a loss of $15,000. The circle is owned by L. J. Bolster and was occupied by Frank Parnigoni, Excelsior granite company, Joseph Maffani & Co., Cloud Bros. and Sivewright & Co.

The blacksmith shop, which was also destroyed with all the tools, was run by George Burgess and Charles Cory.

The fire is believed to be of incendiary origin. No insurance was carried by the owner or occupants of the sheds. Much partially manufactured granite was destroyed. The loss was more keenly felt, because many improvements were recently made in the circle and the occupants had installed new tools and power appliances.

The plant of A. Barclay and others is directly in the rear and was saved. The mast of the derrick, however, caught fire. The fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin, and a man is suspected.

Granddaughter of President.

Mrs. Caroline Monell, said to be a granddaughter of President John Adams of Quincy, died on Monday at Newburg, N. Y., aged 89 years. She was a daughter of the late J. P. Dewint, an old Knickerbocker. She first married Andrew Downing, the landscape artist who laid out the public grounds at Washington. He perished in the Henry Clay disaster, May 28, 1852. She later married Judge J. J. Monell, who died some years ago. She leaves a daughter.

LADIES' DAY.

Plans of Quincy Yacht Club for Thursday.

Ladies' day will be observed on Thursday by the Quincy Yacht club, with a review and sail, lunch, concert and dance.

The preparatory gun will be fired from the flagship at 2.45 P. M. and at 3 o'clock the yachts will pass in review of Commodore Crane.

The new party boat, Edith A., Capt. George A. Shurburne of Marblehead, has been secured by the management for the occasion. The Edith A. is a large and commodious schooner yacht, built expressly for parties. It has all modern conveniences and is a staunch and handsome craft. She will be commanded on Ladies' Day by ex-Commodore C. F. Pettengill with an able reception committee consisting of Dexter E. Wadsworth, George D. Follett, H. H. Hill, John O. Hall, R. E. Tappenden and J. J. Deasey.

Club members extra tickets for Ladies' day can be procured at the office of F. F. Crane, the stores of C. F. Pettengill, H. H. Hill, at the Weeks Hill Pharmacy, or of any member of the house committee.

The club books with a schedule of the club cruises are being mailed to each member today. The frontispiece is a new cut of the club house showing the recent improvements.

The Edith A. has also been secured for the club cruises. Book with the committee on board on Ladies' Day or with H. H. Hill, at Weeks-Hill pharmacy.

Yacht captains are earnestly requested to read the slips that will be put on board each boat and enforce the request contained therein, to save confusion and rush at the lunch, which will be served at the clubhouse at 5.30 on the return from the sail.

There will be a promenade concert at the clubhouse from 5 to 7 P. M., and in the evening from 7 to 10.30 there will be dancing.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ There is a decided setback to the cry for government ownership and operation in the cry that is now being heard for the abolition of the crop reporting bureau of the government. This is tantamount to saying that the government cannot secure honest service, and if not in such a minor matter as this, how can it hope to succeed in greater enterprises?—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Lawson says he has a motto hung up in his office which says, "Don't speculate; you'll lose." This is not the first instance of a motto that is never heeded. What would Lawson be if nobody would speculate? What would he be if he had never speculated? The motto is true enough in the majority of cases, but there is a chance to win. If you lose, the other fellow wins, for speculation does not affect the amount of actual money in existence; it only changes the ownership, and your real speculator always hopes to be that other fellow. What would the brokers do if nobody speculated? However, the advice is good, especially for those who have a little money that is now drawing small interest in safe institutions. Much misery would be saved each year if the advice was followed.—Lynn Item.

☞ Everywhere men boast of the amount they accomplish without regard to the manner in which they do it. The farmer brags of the number of acres he plows, even though he may lose much because of the faulty manner in which his work is done. The business man lauds himself upon the fortune he has piled up even though scores and hundreds of innocent men and women have suffered through his acts. Universities grow jubilant over being "bigger" than the colleges, even though their work may not be any better or even so good. It is the ambition for bigness that constitutes the ruling motive. As a people we are seemingly still in the childhood stage when quantity is more attractive than quality. We have not yet learned that bigness is not greatness. We have not yet learned that true worth is not to be measured in terms of square feet.—Beverly Times.

☞ General Wilmon W. Blackmar, whose death is announced today, died as he had lived, attending to the duty to which he had been assigned. As commander of the Grand Army of the Republic he aimed to be more than a figurehead, and devoted himself from the tie of taking the office to the elevation and betterment of that organization. Despite his poor health, he did not spare himself, and probably hastened his end by the energy and enthusiasm with which he looked after its interests. He was a good soldier when the country needed his service in that capacity, and a prominet and useful citizen in the better times of peace. He was a well-known figure upon the streets of Boston. Few there were in city or state more distinguished in appearance, or more patriotic in spirit, and this community joins with the great veteran body of the country in sincerely mourning the loss of its devoted and estimable head.—Boston Transcript.

ON OWN INITIATIVE

Mayor Weaver May Prosecute Prominent City Officials

FOLLOWS ROOT'S ADVICE

District Attorney Refused to Enter Criminal Proceedings Against "Certain Other Persons" With Caven and Hill

Philadelphia, July 18.—As a result of advices received from Elihu Root, special counsel for Mayor Weaver, it is probable that the mayor will within a few days institute criminal prosecution against certain persons who are prominent in municipal affairs. Mr. Root advises the mayor that in the face of the refusal of District Attorney Bell to take the initiative in bringing further prosecutions, the mayor should exercise his right to go before a magistrate and carry the prosecutions as far as the law will permit him.

This opinion was sent to Weaver and was the result of a conference held in New York. Those who participated in the conference besides Mr. Root and the mayor were former United States Attorney General MacVeagh, who is special counsel for the committee of nine of this city; former Judge Gordon, private counsel for Weaver, and Julien T. Davies and Joseph S. Auerbach, of counsel for the committee of seventy.

The purpose of the conference was to decide whether the mayor should take the initiative in further prosecutions, the district attorney having refused to do so. Mayor Weaver and Judge Gordon last week requested that the district attorney, in drawing up indictments against Councilman Caven and J. W. Hill, former chief of the bureau of filtration, should bring the charge of conspiracy with certain other persons to defraud the city. Caven is under bail for violating his councilmanic oath in being interested in city contracts, and Hill is under bonds to answer the charges of forgery and falsification of records in connection with contracts for the construction of the city's filtration plants.

At the hearing given both men before magistrates the name of the contracting firm of D. J. McNichol & Co., which is constructing the greater part of the filtration system, was frequently brought in by witnesses. The members of this firm are former Insurance Commissioner I. W. Durham, the leader of the local Republican organization; State Senator J. P. McNichol and his brother D. N. McNichol.

The district attorney, in refusing to add the charge of conspiracy to the indictment drawn up against Caven and Hill and to initiate criminal proceedings against "certain other persons," said that such charges based on the evidence taken at the Caven and Hill hearings could not under the law be made. He suggested that the mayor take the initiative. Weaver and Gordon insisted that it was the district attorney's duty to begin prosecutions, they declaring that the evidence in his hands warranted him in so doing. Bell persisted in his refusal and the New York conference followed.

In the midst of the controversy between Bell and the mayor's counsel, Bell yesterday sustained a broken leg through the falling of an elevator in an office building. Whether this accident will delay the trials of Caven and Hill is not known. Under a law passed by the last legislature, criminal proceedings can be conducted by a special district attorney instead of the district attorney himself or his assistants. The state attorney general is authorized to appoint a special district attorney upon the request of one of the presiding judges of the county court.

Got Deserved Thrashing

New York, July 18.—Prompt retribution was meted out last night to Samuel Brooks, a bather at Audobon beach, whose foolhardy mischievousness imperilled the lives of three young women. Brooks was rescued by the police after having received a terrible beating at the hands of hundreds of people who had seen him rock a boat until it was capsized and its occupants thrown into the water and almost drowned.

An International Deal

London, July 18.—It is stated that the reported purchase of Welsh coal fields exclusively by a German syndicate is inaccurate. It is a fact that negotiations are in progress for an extensive estate in South Wales, but the purchasing company, it is expected, will be an international one.

Washington, July 18.—Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture has begun an investigation of a report that a woman employe of his department has for several years sold questions to be asked in civil service examinations prior to the holding of such examinations.

General Blackmar's Successor

Washington, July 18.—General John R. King, pension agent for this district and commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has received official notification from Adjutant General Gilman of Boston of the death of General Blackmar.

GOT HIS HAIR BACK.

Was Perfectly Bald When He Started to Use Newbro's Herpicide.

Frederick Manuell, Maryland block, Butte, Montana, bought a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide, April 6, '99, and began to use it for entire baldness. The hair follicles in his scalp were not dead and in 20 days he had hair all over his head. On July 2 he writes, "and today my hair is as thick and luxuriant as any one could wish." Newbro's Herpicide works on an old principle and with a new discovery—destroy the cause and you remove the effect. Herpicide destroys the germ that causes dandruff, falling hair, and finally baldness, so that with the cause gone the effect cannot remain. Stops falling hair at once and a new growth starts. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

IS TERROR STRICKEN

Schidlofski Guarded to Prevent Him Committing Suicide

La Junta, Col., July 18.—John Schidlofski, the Boston wife murderer, is in a state of collapse. He had believed up to last night that he would be sent back to Russia for trial, and that he would get only a short sentence for killing his wife.

When told that he would be tried in Massachusetts and that the penalty for murder was electrocution, he broke down completely. "Oh, my God," he exclaimed, "must I die just because I killed a woman who lied to me about her money and age?"

Sheriff Barr has placed a constant guard over the prisoner to prevent him from committing suicide. The man's demeanor has changed so suddenly from one of indifference to despondency that were a vehicle of self-destruction furnished him there is no doubt that he would attempt to cheat justice. It took considerable time to convince the prisoner that no violence is liable to befall him here, but he is now thoroughly alarmed.

To Bring Schidlofski Back

Boston, July 18.—J. H. Whitney of the state police left this city last night for La Junta, Col., to bring to Boston John Schidlofska to answer to the charge of wife murder. It is understood the prisoner will return without requisition papers, but should he refuse these will be forwarded at once by another messenger.

Feat of Expert Swimmers

Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 18.—Carlisle D. Graham and William J. Glover, Jr., successfully swam the lower rapids of the Niagara river from the American side of the whirlpool to Lewiston yesterday afternoon. Glover beat Graham by four minutes. The distance of four miles was covered in 26 minutes by Glover. Fifteen minutes after Glover was pulled upon the dock at Lewiston he was dressed and telling his story. Graham had to be taken to a hotel in a wagon and put to bed. Neither of the men was injured.

Alexander In Critical Condition

New York, July 18.—James W. Alexander, former president of the Equitable Life Assurance society, is in a critical condition in Unkaway sanitarium, within three miles of the Oaks, the summer residence of James H. Hyde. Alexander is rarely conscious of his surroundings, and requires constant attention. So strict has been the observance of secrecy that even Hyde was unaware of the close proximity of his former associate and chief.

Crisis Over Peonage Cases

Decatur, Ala., July 18.—United States deputies are at loggerheads with W. O. Heath and James Adams, white men, over the serving of warrants on witnesses in the peonage cases. H. Gibson, the first federal deputy on the scene, wired Federal Judge Jones that he had two of the negro witnesses in his keeping, but the state officers were demanding them on warrants. Judge Jones notified the deputy to hold the men. Trouble is expected.

China Seeks Enlightenment

Pekin, July 18.—An edict has been issued ordering the dispatch abroad of four missions to study foreign political methods. The edict orders the envoys to visit all countries in the east and west and study foreign methods generally. None of the men named speak any foreign language. The four missions will depart separately. The idea is generally regarded as a step in the right direction, though it may prove futile.

Gunboat Ashore For a Day

New York, July 18.—Gunboat Dubuque grounded in the lower bay early yesterday morning. Attempts to work her off under her own steam proved fruitless and three tugboats were dispatched to the aid of the gunboat from the navy yard and the army steamer Ordnance came from Sandy Hook. With their united efforts the Dubuque was hauled off at high tide last night, having apparently sustained no damage.

Doctor's Long Journey to Give Aid

Meeteetse, Wyo., July 18.—Three men were killed and four injured by an explosion in the Kerwin gold mine. There was no doctor nearer than Thermopolis, 100 miles away, but Dr. Richards at that place covered the mountainous distance in a little less than 11 hours. Four relays were used by him in making the trip, ranchmen along the route supplying the horses.

Sleeping a Hundred Days

New York, July 18.—Charley Canepi, 6 years old, has laid in a death-like trance in his father's house in Yonkers for just 100 days—the longest period of coma known to medical history. In all that time the only indications of wakefulness he has shown is to have his eyes open part of the daytime. Milk has been forced between his lips and he has swallowed mechanically.

Clark Continues to Gain

New York, July 18.—Though scarcely perceptible, what change is noted in the condition of Senator William A. Clark is in all in favor of the patient. Since the radical operation for an abscess on the brain the senator has exhibited remarkable recuperative powers and has rallied steadily.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Two Pretty Coat Sleeves Designed by Martha Dean—No. 6314

Many a last season's coat would be like new if the sleeves were not small and out of date. There is no part of the garment which shows the style so much as the sleeves, and the woman who is ambitious with her needle, whether she be experienced or not, may easily remedy this fault. The patterns are very simple, and she will find her small labor amply repaid by the satisfaction of having sleeves in the latest mode and becoming. The first sleeve is for a dressy coat in the popular three-quarter length and is surprisingly pretty when developed. The top has ample fullness, which is restrained at the elbow in small tucks and a band which ends in crossed tabs in front, trimmed with tiny buttons. The fullness of this sleeve flows from beneath the band as a narrow ruffle, from beneath which falls a soft frill of lace. The elbow gloves should be worn with this and harmonize in color. The second sleeve is the plain coat sleeve with the tiny tucks extending up from the cuff as its only adornment. A pretty shaped cuff appears at the wrist as a neat finish to the sleeve. All sizes.

LOCKJAW VICTIMS

Police Investigating Deaths of Two Brooklyn Women

POISONING IS SUSPECTED

Had Been Married But a Short Time to Man In Whose Favor Their Lives Were Insured--Third Woman May Shed Light

New York, July 18.—The body of Mrs. Mary Gorman Carlton, the second wife of Frederick E. Carlton of Brooklyn to die of lockjaw, is to be exhumed and subjected to minute examination for traces of poison. An order to this effect was signed by Supreme Court Justice Sewell, in Brooklyn, upon the request of District Attorney Clarke of Kings county. Both women died of tetanus not long after they had been married to Carlton. Each had been insured in favor of Carlton.

When the man was arrested about a week ago on a technical charge of vagrancy, stories regarding the manner of his wives' deaths began to gain circulation. Carlton said it was absurd to bring up such stories and declared that he would be glad to have a searching investigation made. He was released on $200 bail at that time and readily presented himself when his case again came up in court. This time, however, a charge of grand larceny, preferred by a young man with whom Carlton had roomed, was lodged against him, and his bail was increased to $2000. He was unable to furnish sureties in the required amount and has been in jail since that time.

The Brooklyn police announce that a young woman with whom Carlton had lived just before his arrest is under surveillance and that she will be questioned regarding several letters, signed by her, which were found in Carlton's possession. One of these letters, dated from a town in New Jersey, implored Carlton to write to her.

"Why in God's name don't you write to me?" the letter asked. "I am heartsick at your delay. I have been up to meet every New York mail. Dearest, if you don't write to me very soon you may have to collect my life insurance. It looks as if things were going to turn out just as Bradley said. You know he said you would tire of me in a little while. Fred, for God's sake don't let it come true, as I will go crazy. You know what you left in my care."

The writer of the letter spoke of her arm paining her so that she left it necessary to lie down and rest for the afternoon. The police say that they will question the woman at the proper time regarding the pain in her arm to which she referred. They also are anxious to learn, they say, what it was that Carlton left in the writer's care. They believe also that the young woman may be able to throw some light on the whereabouts of a hand satchel which disappeared from Carlton's room after his arrest.

HUB "FODDER" CLUB

City Furnishes Delicacies to Men Employed by Contractor

Boston, July 18.—In the auditor's office at city hall, says The Post, there are a number of bills charged against the appropriation for the Fenway sewer that have attracted a great deal of attention. They are monthly bills paid to a provision dealer for steaks, chickens, bottled pickles and other appetizing decorations for a dinner table. These bills range from $150 to $300 a month. Why the city hould be providing eatables for the workmen employed by a contractor on this work is one of the mysteries surrounding the work on the Fenway.

A Post reporter called the attention of the city officials who are bossing this work to these bills, and was surprised to be informed that the contract under which certain work was being performed conditioned that the city should supply fodder. Under this condition the men were supplied with food, although the word fodder has always been applied to horses and not to men, so this explanation having gained some publicity the Fenway workers have come to be known as the members of the Fodder club.

IN HANDS OF CZAR

He Alone Can Decide the Destinies of Russia

INTERVIEW WITH WITTE

He Thinks That Japanese Peace Terms Will Be Such That an Accord Cannot Be Reached--Says Internal Crisis Will Pass

St. Petersburg, July 18.—M. Witte, the senior Russian peace plenipotentiary, received a press correspondent at his villa on Yelagin island. In according the honor of an interview, he said he expressly desired it stated that he had declined all previous requests of journalists for interviews and would decline all future requests. He further said that he made an exception in this case, as it was the representative of the press of the United States, and as he was about to become the temporary guest of the United States, and also as a mark of the particular sympathy he felt toward that great country.

M. Witte received the correspondent in the cabinet of his villa. He spoke in French. After greetings, which were cordial, the conversation gravitated quickly to the high mission with which the Russian statesman is charged and the disposition of the foreign press to interpret his appointment as an indication that Russia was inclined to make peace at any price.

"No—, no—," said Witte, speaking slowly and distinctly, as if weighing the value of each word. "In the first place, I have been designated by the emperor as his ambassador extraordinary for pour parlers with the Japanese plenipotentiaries to ascertain whether it is possible to conclude a treaty of peace. My personal views are of secondary importance, but my ideas are in entire accord with those of Foreign Minister Lamsdorff. In serving my emperor, I have received precise instructions from his majesty and shall follow them.

"The ultimate decision remains in the hands of the emperor and it is for him to decide the destinies of Russia. The emperor is the friend of peace and desires peace, but I very much fear that the Japanese terms will be such that we will be unable to reach an accord.

"Secondly, the world should disabuse its mind of the idea that Russia wants peace at any price. There are two parties in Russia. One favors the continuation of the war; this is a large and influential party. The other, to which I belong, favors peace. I avow it frankly, because telling the truth has always been my rule in politics. I was for peace before hostilities broke out. When the war began the situation changed.

"Even though there are these two parties as to the advisability of ending the war in the present circumstances, both would be united if the Japanese demands wounded the amour propre of the Russian people or jeopardized our future as a nation. I am sure if I report that the conditions of Japan cannot be accepted, Russia will accept the verdict and the Russian people will be ready to continue the war for years, if necessary.

"Thirdly, Russia is not crushed. The interior situation is very serious, but in Europe and America the true significance of what is happening is not understood. Russia has little resemblance to western countries. To know Russia, to understand the soul of the Russian people, it is necessary that one should have been born here or lived many years in Russia. The customs, history and mentality of the people are entirely different from those of western nations and Russia cannot be judged by western standards. It is such an immense country, composed of diverse elements and interests, yet the Russian people are like a great family. At present they are torn by internal dissensions, but these divisions would disappear should the people really feel that the integrity of the country and its future destiny were at stake.

"Russia is not on the verge of dissolution as a great power and is not obliged to accept any conditions offered, in spite of the military reverses she has sustained. We are passing through an internal crisis, which has been marked by many grave events, and which may have others still in store, but the crisis will pass, and in a few years Russia will again take her place as a preponderant power in the European concert."

Would Not Part With Sakhalin

St. Petersburg, July 18.—The Svet bitterly objects to the cession of the Island of Sakhalin, declaring that as it commands the mouth of the Amur river its possession by the Japanese would constitute a constant threat to Russia in the far east and forge shackles from which the empire could never rid herself. The paper calls attention to the immense riches of the island in oil, coal, iron and gold, as well as in forests and fisheries.

Witte In Melancholy Mood

Berlin, July 18.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Lokal Anzeiger says: M. Witte's powers as peace commissioner are considerably limited, and it will be necessary for him to get instructions by cable from the home government as the negotiations develop. One of Witte's life-long friends describes him as in melancholy mood and profoundly discontented.

Steamboat to Gloucester.

One of the finest water trips out of Boston is a sail to Gloucester on the staunch steamers the Cape Ann or City of Gloucester. These warm days the trip is particularly enjoyable and it is so cool, wraps are necessary before Gloucester is reached. For the day trip the steamer leaves the north side of Central wharf at the foot of State street and the elevated train, at ten o'clock, leaving Gloucester for the return trip at quarter past two, and reaching Boston about five. The afternoon boat from Boston at two o'clock is a pleasant trip for one staying over at Gloucester or wishing to return by train or trolley.

The round trip is only 75 cents and there is music and cool breezes all the way.

The Boston & Gloucester Steamboat Co., L. S. Merchant, general manager, is one of the oldest and safest lines out of Boston.

PEONS OF OLD MEXICO.

Indian Farm Laborers That Are Really Beasts of Burden.

The Mexican peon is the backbone of the republic. Without him the great landed estates, or haciendas, would lie in idleness, while agricultural and commercial interests would stagnate. Of a cast iron constitution, he can endure, apparently without effort, the hardest sort of drudgery. His energy comes from a diet that consists chiefly of ground peppers, beans or frijoles and a large quantity of tortillas. He works from 6 to 6, enjoying in the meantime his two simple meals. In general, the Indian farm laborers are of a submissive and respectful disposition. Like the negroes of the south, they are not far from the main building, so as to be on hand whenever their services are required. They usually insist, however, on celebrating their holidays, which lessens their real usefulness about 25 per cent. The holidays are numerous and afford the laborer many opportunities to quaff from the stupefying pulque bowl. Their stock of surplus change is not apt to be excessive. It cannot be when most of them receive but little over 20 cents a day. Field hands in the states of Guanajuato, Michaocan and Queretaro receive a cuartillo of corn in addition to their wages of 12 cents a day. One hacendado who voluntarily raised the wages of his hands to 18 cents a day found himself without laborers for two days of the week. As the extra wages supplied living means for the entire week, what was the need of working?

These laborers are of all sizes and ages; but, whether young or old, all bear alike upon their brow the depressing and degrading leathern thong that makes of them beasts of burden. The effect of this customary strap on the shape of the head is seen in the fact that the peons the country over have peak shaped heads tending toward the shape of the pointed hat. The supply of laborers is, so to speak, perennial. The young muchacho receives his training in watching the sheep and the goats, acting as messenger or prodding the burros in the pack train. When he is about sixteen years old he takes his place with the regular laborers and begins to cast his eye about for a helpmate. The wife may prove useful and earn a small wage at some such operation as sowing seed. Her life will be a monotonous one. A strip of cloth serves as dress and skirt, a strip of leather provides a sandal, and in the hot regions the clothing for the boys is even as simple. All that is required is a jorongo, which consists of a yard of cotton cloth with a hole for the head and two depending flaps to cover breast and back. There is no possibility of their clothing impeding their movements. When the woman takes her husband's meal to him far out in the fields, she takes the little toddler with her fastened securely in her rebozo.—Pilgrim.

TO NUT ISLAND.

Quincy Sewage to be Diverted From Squantum.

By the construction of a force main in Quincy, now nearly finished, says the Boston Transcript, the Metropolitan sewerage system is completed as far as authorized by the Legislature. There may be improvements in the near future, by further extension, but they have not yet been decided upon or authorized. With its own force the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board has laid a pipe this summer connecting the Quincy pumping station with the high-level sewer, so as to take care of a part of Quincy which now drains into the Boston system. By the end of this month the work will be done and every section of the district will have the full use of the great Metropolitan system.

The total cost of the Metropolitan sewers, including the pumping stations and other structures, has been close to $14,000,000, of which $6,086,569 was spent on the Northern Metropolitan division which has been completed for many years, and the other part of the outlay has been for the Southern division just completed. As a whole the works provide for the sewage of areas amounting to nearly 200 square miles, including the whole or parts of 25 cities and towns in the Metropolitan District.

It is divided into two main sections; the Northern section which provides for the district situated largely in the Charles River and Mystic River valleys, lying north of Charles River, and whose sewage is carried to Deer Island, and then emptied into the Boston harbor; the Southern section which provides for the part of the Charles River valley lying south of the river, as well as the city of Waltham and the town of Watertown, also for a part of the Neponset River valley and the city of Quincy, with an outlet beyond Nut Island in the Boston harbor.

What is called the high-level sewer, a part of the Southern section, extends from near Ward street in Boston through parts of the city and through Hyde Park and Milton and the city of Quincy to Nut Island, a distance of 16.83 miles. A little more than twelve miles are constructed in open trench. From Nut Island the sewage is conveyed through two submarine 60-inch cast iron pipes to points in the harbor, each a little more than a mile beyond the low water mark, where outfalls have been built. This high-level section, which is nearly twelve feet in diameter at the outlet, has a capacity for the daily discharge of 300,000,000 gallons of sewage.

A few of the proverbial "finishing touches" remain to be done along the line, such as grading and seeding.

At Banff Today,

The Herald teachers have reached Banff today on the homeward trip. They are making a 24 hour stop at this resort in the Canadian rockies noted for its picturesque scenery. When the journey is resumed today, there will be no more stops until the party reaches Boston, either Sunday night or Monday morning next.

A car load of the Knights and Ladies of Honor, with the Womans' Relief Corps as guests, left this morning for a day at Nantasket. Previous to their departure Henry H. Faxon presented a couple boxes of chocolates.

What It Costs

... AND ...

What It Pays

are two values of newspaper advertising that the merchan has to consider. But the most important thing is

WHAT IT PAYS.

The merchant can get space in papers of small circulation and little influence for a little less money than the same size space would cost in the DAILY LEDGER and the QUINCY PATRIOT.

DOES IT PAY

to throw away the certainty of the profitable returns which are sure to LEDGER and PATRIOT advertisers, because it costs less to advertise in cheaper paper?

THE MAYOR.

Investigating the Wollaston Disaster.

Hearing Behind Closed Doors.

Firemen and Others Summoned as Witnesses.

Mayor Thompson began an investigation Tuesday evening of the accident to Hook and Ladder No. 2, on the morning of July 4, which resulted in the death of Firemen Albert D. Kingsley and Robert T. Fisher.

The investigation was held in one of the committee rooms in the Council Chamber and was private. In the room were Mayor Thompson, City Solicitor Thomas, Chief Engineer Williams and Chief of Police Burrell and a stenographer. The witnesses were examined separately. They were questioned as to the conditions at the fire station previous to the alarm, the location of the automobile, and other matters.

The witnesses examined were Frank Genero, who drove the truck on the morning in question; Clarence Sargent of Hose 2, Richard Colbert of H. & L. 2, Herbert Griffin of the Wollaston steamer, Parker Sheldon and Charles Magnuson, who were doing volunteer fire service that night; Harold Ruggles, A. H. Kingsley, Miss Kingsley and Mrs. A. D. Kingsley, father, sister and widow of one of the men killed.

The hearing began at 8 o'clock and it was 11 o'clock before the examination of the witnesses present was completed. It was impossible to complete the investigation at this session and another will be necessary.

Mayor Thompson would not give anything out about the matter until the hearings were completed.

LAWN PARTY.

Henry H. Faxon Helps to Make It a Success.

A lawn party under the auspices of the Ladies Social Union of the West Quincy Methodist Episcopal church was held Tuesday evening at the residence of Mrs. F. L. Badger on Crescent street.

The grounds were lighted with hundreds of Japanese lanterns making a very pretty effect as they cast a mellow glow over the tables arranged about the lawn for the sale of ice cream and refreshments.

There was a very large attendance, upwards of 200 being present. Among these was Henry H. Faxon, whose pockets were filled with checks good for five, ten and twenty-five cents. These he distributed among the young people present.

The entertainment, which was of a pleasing nature, included selections by the church quartette, and Levenworth, the impersonator.

Edward Brown of Neponset made molasses kisses on the grounds which were in great demand.

Annual Inspection.

A State inspector is in town today making an inspection of the Quincy Poor farm. He with Mayor Thompson and other city officials were entertained at the Quincy Home by Overseer Green.

ELLIS---ROCHE.

Reception Follows Wedding, at Residence of Bride's Sister.

At the parochial residence of St. Johns church on Tuesday evening, Miss Annie Louise Roche of this city, and Mr. Nathan Augustus Ellis of Harwich, Mass., were united in marriage by Rev. John J. Coan, the pastor. The couple were attended by Mr. James H. Roche and Miss Julia B. Roche. The bride is the daughter of the late John Roche, and has been a teacher for two years at the John Hancock school.

The bride's gown was a white crepe de chene over white taffeta, and the bridesmaid wore a dotted muslin with dresden girdle.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. M. T. Sullivan of Baxter avenue, Quincy Point, from half past seven until half past ten, which was attended by about one hundred friends. The piazza was hung with Japanese lanterns and cool breezes were enjoyed by the guests.

Mrs. Sullivan and the groom's mother, Mrs. Samuel A. Ellis, assisted in receiving.

SALUTE WAVED.

Miss Underwood Climbed the Big Glacier on Tuesday.

Again today Miss Julia E. Underwood is the only person mentioned by name in the special dispatch to the Herald from British Columbia. It is dated at Field, Tuesday, July 18, about 66 miles east of Glacier and 51 miles west of Banff and reads:

After an early breakfast, The Herald educational party spread over the landscape at Glacier this morning, determined to wring all there was possible from the stop in a few hours available. Spreading over the landscape in Glacier is a perpendicular process of course, and the bragging is of altitudes, therefore; one "First" to be recorded was scored by a teacher who attained about 6000 feet, a feat that bids fair to be exceptional for the party, for Banff, the next stop, thouth a beauty spot indeed, hardly offers opportunities for a better climb, though there are at least 20 resolves to beat that 6000 feet record tomorrow if it cost a meal. The experts are dubious over the prospects.

Other schools in blazoning the deeds of their teachers may record a first to reach dining car, first to ride a broncho, or even a first get up in the morning, but Wolfboro will probably score the highest altitude. The cautious faction of the party climbed to the glacier, leaving no real "quitter" in the ranks.

Even Miss Underwood, whose years might well excuse her from the test, went up promptly to and on the ice, whence she waved a greeting to the world at large, but in the supposed direction of Quincy.

The adverse of the rosy picture was the experience of three members who rode upon bronchos which must be dismounted at some distance from the glacier, outside the moraine. This was their first ride on any broncho, and not daring to dismount they went back ingloriously, but were agreed on all sides to be deservedly rebuked for having given such an expensive example.

At this hour the sublimities of Kicking Horse Pass are yet to come before nightfall, and the note books and cameras and eyes sharpened by previous experiences are on the qui vive for the wonderful scenic panorama of this great gateway of the Selkirks.

Bathhouse Popular.

The city bathhouse is a much sought place during the hot weather. The tide is right this week for bathing in the middle of the day. The result is that crowds avail themselves of the opportunity every day. Tuesday there was an unusually large crowd present, both men, women and children.

☞ Boston has had a long series of bank failures during the past twenty years, and many millions of dollars have been lost, while a considerable number of those who were responsible for the failures have been sent to jail. The Globe National Bank failure, which resulted in the incarceration of Charles H. Cole, its president, was the most noteworthy instance, prior to the Central National Bank failure. In all such cases the names of eminently respectable men appear on the boards of directors. These men have innocently consented to be hoodwinked by the active officers of the bank, but the action of the receiver of the Central National Bank shows that directors who fail to direct cannot escape responsibility for their carelessness.—Hartford Times.

A SCORCHING DAY

Record For High Temperature For the Season

MANY DEATHS REPORTED

Thermometer at Boston Registered 94, While In Some Other Cities It Was Higher--Lack of Humidity the Saving Feature

New York, July 19.—An area of oppressive heat has settled down over the eastern and New England states, already numbering hundreds among its victims and causing indescribable suffering to thousands in this and other cities. From all points comes the story of the hottest day of the summer, attended with frequent prostrations and not a few deaths.

Philadelphia reported a maximum temperature of 98.3, the highest figure officially noted. In this city the weather bureau's high mark was 96, while in Boston a temperature of 94 was recorded. The official thermometers located in exposed places above the street did not, however, indicate the temperature in which the ordinary mortal moved, and street thermometers frequently indicated a temperature of 100 or higher.

Following are the maximum temperatures officially recorded in the larger cities, with the known cases of prostration and death:

	Max.	Pros.	Deaths
New York	96	190	23
Philadelphia	98.3	50	5
Baltimore	97.3	5	—
Washington	95	6	—
Chicago	95	17	5
Boston	94	12	2
Pittsburg	93	45	13
Buffalo	78	2	1

The above figures by no means represent the sum of human suffering, as an endless number of victims who collapsed at home, or in the office or workshop, were privately attended. No relief is in sight.

All records for the summer were broken in point of high temperature, but mercifully the humidity was correspondingly less. But for this the total of prostrations and deaths would have been greatly increased. In New York the suffering was intense, especially in the crowded tenement districts, where scarcely a breath of air relieved the stifling atmosphere. Thousands who could afford the holiday flocked to the beaches, but even in these crowds women and children fainted and men were overcome, making the trip from home a doubtful experiment so far as securing any comfort was concerned.

At 8 a. m. the mercury stood at 80 and rose slightly until the maximum of 96 was reached at 4 o'clock. The humidity was 72 at 8 o'clock, but lessened steadily until but 35 was registered, when the temperature was highest.

It was a busy day for the hospitals and the ambulances were continuously on the street. As usual most of the reported deaths were among the poorer classes. The prostrations, however, were not confined to these and many persons in apparent good health succumbed.

To add to the unavoidable physical suffering, Brooklyn was threatened with a water famine, while the whole city was startled by the prospect of a strike of the icemen. The water supply in Brooklyn was reported as nearing the danger point and the water department took immediate precautions, asking that street sprinkling be temporarily suspended and warning householders to be extremely economical in the use of water.

It was different with the ice question, though an expected strike did not materialize. A few ice wagon drivers stopped work, but deliveries were continued.

Prompt measures were taken by the police and park commissioners to alleviate in some degree the suffering of the public. Orders were issued keeping open throughout the night the park gates and permitting those who would to spend the night in these places.

Two Deaths at Manchester

Manchester, N. H., July 19.—William Kearns collapsed from heat while at work in a mill and died soon after being removed to his home. Joseph B. Proctor, a farmer, was overcome by heat in front of his house and died almost immediately. Thermometers registered from 90 to 98 throughout the day, and night brought little relief.

Cool on Mount Washington

Mount Washington, N. H., July 19.—Throughout yesterday, said to have been the hottest day of the summer, overcoats were worn on the summit of Mount Washington. At 8 o'clock in the morning the thermometer registered 37 degrees, but later in the day climbed towards the 50 mark.

Hot Weather Will Continue

Washington, July 19.—There will be no material relief from the present high temperatures throughout the country for three or four days, according to the weather bureau.

CENTRAL BANK CASE

Suit by Receiver May Bring Out Startling Revelations

Boston, July 19.—The Central National bank scandal presents a placid surface. The defendants claim to feel no fear as to the outcome, some even ridiculing the suit brought by Receiver Allen. The general opinion, however, is that the outcome will be a series of revelations the most sensational in the annals of Boston banking institutions.

The directors, through counsel, will file their answer to the suit brought by Allen on Aug. 7. Until that date they will not discuss the case. They declare that a fully adequate defense will be made against the serious charges, and that they feel sure that the receiver will not succeed in his attempt to recover $300,000 to $500,000 which he seeks.

Among the charges that the receiver will make is that loans were made with no more security than notes signed by the young clerks in the bank, and that these loans were used by one or more of the directors for their personal benefit.

New Auto Climb Record

Bretton Woods, N. H., July 19.—The record of 24:37 3-5 established last year by Harry Harkness in making the eight-mile climb over the carriage road from the base to the summit of Mount Washington was broken four times yesterday. W. H. Hilliard of Boston, driving a 40-60-horse power gasoline car, reached the summit in 20:58 2-5, the new record. S. T. Kellogg of Springfield, Mass., drove a 3-horse power motor cycle up the steep grade in 20:59 1-5. Burt Holland of Newton, Mass., in a 15 horse power steam runabout, made the ascent in 22:17 3-5, and Oscar Hedstrom of Springfield, Mass., on a 3-horse power motor cycle, covered the distance in 22:42.

Waterville Has a Deluge

Waterville, Me., July 19.—A torrent of rain and a gale of wind which relieved the city of oppressive heat caused heavy damage in this city and vicinity late yesterday afternoon. Chimneys were blown over, many young orchard trees were ruined and grain, corn and other crops injured. Hail stones broke hundreds of panes of glass in the green houses and also damaged windows in other buildings.

Discovered In Nick of Time

Naugatuck, Conn., July 19.—Thomas Kenney and Michael Toomey, aged 15, descended in a sewer to search for a lost baseball. Not finding the ball, they started to walk along the pipe. An hour later a searching party found them unconscious fully 300 yards from the place where they entered, having been overcome by gas. It was three hours before the boys regained consciousness.

Johnson Wins From Furguson

Chelsea, Mass., July 19.—Jack Johnson of California won on a foul from Sandy Ferguson of this city in the seventh round here last night. Johnson had the better of the contest and in the seventh round fell over the local boxer. The latter struck him in the groin three times. Had he won, Ferguson would have challenged Marvin Hart, the heavyweight champion.

Automobile Caught Fire

Newburyport, Mass., July 19.—J. B. Lunt was filling the tank of his automobile last night when the gasoline became ignited. The machine was destroyed, together with the stable in which it was kept. The loss is estimated at $2000. Lunt had great difficulty in escaping from the burning building. One arm was severely burned.

Not to Change to Electricity

New Haven, July 19.—When asked in regard to a story that plans are being made for the electrification of the New York division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, President Mellen denied that any negotiations had been entered into for the electrification of any part of the main stem of the road.

Relatives Suspect Poisoning

Burlington, Vt., July 19.—State Attorney Austin is investigating the death of Mrs. Edward J. Cammorell of Fletcher. Some of her relatives assert that the woman was poisoned. Dr. S. K. Phelps pronounced her trouble acute indigestion. Later Dr. M. H. Powers diagnosed the case as cerebro-spinal meningitis.

Participated In Fenian Raid

Medford, Mass., July 19.—The body of Daniel Vaughn, a member of the Fenian company that invaded Canada after the Civil war, was found lying across the stair railing of his home here with his neck broken. It is supposed that he fell from an upper landing. Vaughn was 86 years old.

Fatal Shock From Guyrope

Manchester, N. H., July 19.—Lucius Brady, aged 18, an inmate of the state industrial school in this city, was instantly killed by an electric current in a metallic guyrope, which had become crossed with a light wire. He playfully jumped to catch the rope, which hung over the road.

Predicts Canadian Republic

Chautauqua, N. Y., July 19.—Dr. Mark G. Pearse of the West London mission, London, in an address in the assembly here, predicted that Canada will some time be free from Great Britain and be in alliance with Great Britain and the United States.

Liner's Trip Delayed

Montreal, July 19.—The Allan liner Mongolian, which sailed on Thursday for Glasgow with passengers and a full cargo, is returning. A flaw in the propeller shaft has been discovered. Repairs will delay the liner 48 hours.

PEACE IS UNCERTAIN

Pessimistic View of High Japanese Diplomat

DISTRUST OF RUSSIANS

No Reason For Thinking That Japan's Terms Will Be Moderate--Ready to Continue War If Suitable Terms Are Lacking

London, July 19.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister here, says that Russia has appointed good men as peace plenipotentiaries. Nevertheless, even M. Witte and Baron Rosen have not inspired Japan with confidence in a favorable outcome of the negotiations.

"We do not know," the minister said, "what powers have been delegated to them, and after the events of the past 18 months Japan puts faith only in accomplished facts. The terms will be communicated only at the conference. Then we will discover what powers the Russian plenipotentiaries possess."

The press representative suggested that the general opinion prevailed that the Japanese terms will be moderate.

"I cannot see where people get such an idea," replied the minister. "The public evidently mistake the Japanese for angels."

Minister Hayashi intimated that Japan was ready to continue the war unless she secures suitable terms. He called attention to the fact that practically the entire sum realized by the last two loans was unexpended and said the capture of the Island of Sakhalin was not precipitated by the approach of the conference, but was a natural sequence of the Japanese campaign, the plans for which had not been altered since Russia acceded to a conference. An earlier attack on the island was not undertaken principally because of the severe winter and because the summer season was more preferable for campaigning and the establishment of a new government in the island.

A Case of Give and Take

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 19.—No advices have reached President Roosevelt which would warrant a pessimistic view of the result of the forthcoming peace conference between the plenipotentiaries of Russia and Japan. The president believes, inasmuch as the negotiations thus far have proceeded smoothly and are so proceeding now, that an agreement reasonably satisfactory to both countries eventually will be reached. That it will be a compromise agreement, and that both nations will have to give as well as to take, is quite certain.

Additions to Japanese Navy

Tokio, July 19.—An officer who has returned from Port Arthur reports that the extent of damage to the sunken Russian ships was slighter than was anticipated. It has been known that the Russians applied explosives inside the vessels before they were abandoned and the resulting damages were expected to be serious. It has been found, however, that the vital portions of the ships were strangely unhurt. The Bayan and the Peresviet will soon be brought here to complete the necessary repairs. Even the Palada, which sustained the heaviest damage, is expected to be refloated by the middle of August, and before this the Retvizan and Pobieda will be afloat.

Story of Mutiny Denied

St. Petersburg, July 19.—The admiralty announces that reports from Cronstadt to the effect that the crew of the battleship Imperator Alexander II had mutinied and that the men had put to sea without their officers are pure inventions.

Japanese Army In Russia

London, July 19.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says that a Japanese army has been landed north of Vladivostok and that a complete envelopment of the fortress is imminent.

Won't Go Before Legislature

Albany, July 19.—Governor Higgins has not changed his mind concerning the wisdom of submitting any aspect of the life insurance situation to the legislature at its present extraordinary session. He says that conditions do not warrant the submission of the matter at this time and that the state superintendent of insurance is fully able to cope with the situation.

No Defense In Land Frauds

Portland, Or., July 19.—In the land fraud cases District Attorney Heney delivered his opening argument against Congressman Williamson, Dr. Van Gessner and Commissioner Biggs. At the conclusion of Heney's argument, the defense announced that its case would be submitted without argument.

Excursion Train Wrecked

Lynchburg, Va., July 19.—An excursion train on which 400 persons were returning from a three days' outing in Roanoke was wrecked at Prospect. Two women sustained slight injuries. The accident was due, it is said, to repairs being made on the track.

Crush Accident Insurance Fakirs

New York, July 19.—President Armstrong of the Casualty Company of America has announced a committee of 26 accident insurance companies to devise plans for an organization to eliminate the accident fakir from the insurance world.

An Invitation.

"Stop off at Spokane" is prominent on every page of a richly illustrated pamphlet issued by the Chamber of Commerce of that wide-awake city in the State of Washington which was unknown in 1870 but today has a population of 70,000. It anticipates a large number of visitors from the East to the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland, and evidently a trip will not be complete without a "stop off at Spokane."

No second invitation would be necessary to the editor of the Daily Ledger should he journey that way, as B. J. Weeks, formerly of Quincy, is manager of the Spokane Traction Company.

President Roosevelt stopped off there and the citizens will long remember these words that he uttered: "I never saw two such cities anywhere as Spokane and Seattle. If my eldest boy was large enough to be choosing a place, I would advise him to locate in one or the other of those cities, and it is a shake-up between them."

The illustrations show the beautiful scenery, some of the pleasure resorts, forest scenes, agricultural scenes, mining scenes, residences, schoolhouses, business blocks, etc.

A hearty western welcome is promised all who stop off.

—King Edward is an admirer of Mr. Roosevelt, and follows the American President's movements with interest. He was considerably amused when he once read that at the invitation of the pastor of a new Dutch Reformed church at Washington, "Brother Roosevelt" delivered an impressive address. "Anyhow," exclaimed His Majesty with a laugh, "I shan't follow him in that line."

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For a Smart Separate Coat Designed by Martha Dean—No. 6500

One of the season's smartest features is its separate coats, which are displayed in more fascinating array than the devotees of fashion have for some time seen. Taffetas, pongee and linen develop many of these and will be much worn for warm weather. The model might also be reproduced in broadcloth or other woolen suiting. These coats are convenient for wear with a thin gown or any street costume, and few well dressed women will be without one. The coat shown is developed in white rajah, with trimming bands of eyelet embroidery. The making of the coat is an easy matter, the style depending almost entirely upon the cut and material. The back is circular and without seam. A double box plait at each side of the front extends from the shoulder and gives lengthening lines to the wearer. The underarm seam may be left open for a short distance up if desired, and these, like the other edges, may be trimmed with embroidery. The sleeve may be in single or double puff and finished with a deep gauntlet cuff at the wrist. Taffetas, burlingham, linen or pongee will develop this coat for nice wear during the summer, and the beautiful wood fiber lace may be used for adornment. Sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

VICIOUS PRACTICE

Opinion of Government Cotton Estimates

AN ADVERSE SENTIMENT

Washington Reports Lend Authority to Speculation Which Should Not Be Given--Manufacturers Suffer From It

Fall River, Mass., July 19.—One of the best known cotton manufacturers in New England makes the following statement in relation to the issuing of a government report on cotton conditions:

"It is my belief, and that of hundreds of others, that the present is an opportune time for abandoning the government practice of issuing reports showing the condition of the growing cotton crop. This practice serves no good purpose, save to the extent that it benefits speculators.

"The manner of gathering the facts is not wholly above criticism, but if it were there would still remain the impossibility of issuing an intelligent statement of what the conditions are or may be. The government's name attached to these reports creates mischief. It lends an authority to speculation which should not be given.

"In the past two weeks we have seen business prospects for cotton manufacturing all over the country turned from almost certain prosperity into uncertainty. Buyers of cloth are as much disturbed as manufacturers. The planter is not benefited, for, in the long run of trade, he secures only the value of his crop. Why then should the government lend itself to a practice which is vicious for the manufacturer, the dry goods dealer, and not helpful to the planter?

"If the country is to have a short crop of cotton or a large one it will be ample time to know of the fact when the users of cotton come to purchase it. There is no valid excuse to be given why this government should continually keep issuing bulletins that unsettle trade, lend aid to public gambling in a staple product, and tend only to keep to the front a discussion of conditions that are best faced when they have to be faced by those who are affected. People seldom stop to think that every unsettling factor which enters into manufacturing increases the cost of production and has to be paid for by the common people who purchase.

"I know what farming is, and I know what weight an estimate of a crop of any kind carries. In an experience of 35 years there has been no time when I have relied on a government crop report, yet at all times I have been compelled to take cognizance of it. From the time a government stamp is put on an estimate, there enters into the situation an air of authority. The estimate is not a bit better or worse than those of hundreds of others, but the fact that the government issues it carries weight that gives life to the gamblers and death to the manufacturers.

"It is full time that the whole system of issuing these reports was abandoned forever, and I know of no better time than at this moment to press the thing to the attention of intelligent and right thinking government officials."

Resignation of Chief Hyde

Washington, July 19.—The resignation of John Hyde, statistician and chief of the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture, was handed to Secretary Wilson yesterday and promptly accepted. Willet N. Hays, the assistant secretary of agriculture, has been placed in charge of the bureau temporarily, and will continue to act pending the investigation of the cotton scandal and until a competent statistician is found.

Mr. Hyde's withdrawal from the department created wide interest. Secretary Wilson and other officials of the department have stated that Hyde has not been implicated in any manner in the irregularities that resulted in the dismissal of Edwin S. Holmes, the associate statistician, whom secret service operatives charged with being guilty of giving to brokers advance figures of cotton crop statistics. In his letter to the secretary, Hyde takes notice of the fact that he will be criticised for resigning under fire and, in defense, says there never has been a time when he was not under fire. He declares that an organization, meaning the cotton growers, is bent upon getting him out of the government service and that his health will not permit him to continue so unequal a struggle.

To Get Away From Speculators

Washington, July 19.—An apparently well organized movement started by the cotton manufacturers of Great Britain to encourage the growth of cotton in the British possessions and countries other than the United States, where natural conditions favor profitable cultivation, is reported by Consul Halstead, at Birmingham, Eng. This movement is being directed by the British Cotton Growing association and was started to liberate the British cotton trade from the danger of American speculators.

Knocked Out by Centre Pole

Hoosick Falls, N. Y., July 19.—Ernest S. Bishop died here from injuries received by the fall of the centre pole of a carousel of which he was the proprietor. Until recently he was a teller in the Berkshire National bank of North Adams, Mass.

TO EXHUME A BODY

Doubt as to Cause of Death of Carlton's Two Wives

New York, July 19.—An indictment charging grand larceny in the first degree was returned by the Kings county grand jury in Brooklyn against Frederick E. Carlton, who was arrested on complaint of Henry J. B. Schuab, who charges that Carlton obtained $700 from him by a fraudulent real estate transaction. Carlton now is in jail a default of $2000 bail, which was fixed when he was arraigned on the larceny charge.

District Attorney Clarke says that he will ask that this amount be increased when Carlton is called to plead to the indictment in the higher court, because an official investigation is to be made into the manner in which Carlton's second wife, Mary G. Carlton, came to her death.

The body of Mrs. Carlton will be exhumed and the internal organs will be removed and subjected to chemical analysis. Mrs. Carlton died after a brief illness and tetanus was assigned as the cause of her death. The first wife of Carlton died of the same disease and under almost identical conditions. Both women were insured in favor of their husband.

Dr. C. A. Goldsmith of Stamford, Conn., has identified Carlton as a man who, he says, on July 30, 1890, drugged him and robbed him of $500 in cash and $1000 worth of jewelry in a hotel in Manhattan. Carlton made no comment when Goldsmith accused him of being the man who robbed him.

Mortally Shot Three Men

Pensacola, Fla., July 19.—William F. Williams, a salesman in the clothing store of John White, shot and killed his employer, turned his revolver upon another salesman, Edward Dansby, mortally wounding him, and then fired upon James White, the manager and son of the proprietor, causing a wound from which he will die. Another clerk was fired upon, but the bullet missed the mark. Williams, who had been drinking heavily, had been accused by James White of appropriating money from the cash drawer and had reported it to his father. Williams was arrested.

A Royal Arcanum Protest

Detroit, July 19.—At a convention here of delegates representing local councils of the Royal Arcanum throughout Michigan resolutions were adopted expressing confidence in the principle of fraternal insurance, but strongly condemning the recent action of the supreme council regarding assessments. Fell 2000 Feet to Death

San Jose, Cal., July 19.—Daniel Maloney, who had made numerous successful ascensions with Professor Montgomery's aeroplane, fell 3000 feet to his death at Santa Clara. The aeroplane turned in the air, the wings came together and the man and the machine plunged straight downward, while 2000 horrified spectators gazed helplessly. Maloney's skull was fractured and he died within a short time. The aeroplane was demolished.

Contest Over Ziegler Will

New York, July 19.—Declaring that William Ziegler, the millionaire baking powder manufacturer and backer of Arctic expeditions, was insane and incompetent to make a will, his widow has begun suit in the supreme court to determine the validity of the will. Ziegler left an estate of $30,000,000 to his adopted son, who will be 14 years of age next Friday. At the age of 40 the boy is to have complete control of the entire estate.

Auto Landed In Canal

Easton, Pa., July 19.—A party of six automobilists were hurled backward from the road into the canal at Durham furnace. All were rescued except Emily Kinney, not quite 2 years old, and she was drowned. The party had taken the wrong road and in trying to turn the machine on a hill the brake refused to work and the automobile sped down the incline backward into the canal.

Children Killed by Toadstools

Vineland, N. J., July 19.—Two children of Joseph Franzoi died from poison after eating toadstools. The fungi were gathered by the family, who thought them mushroom. The parents and children ate them and the whole family became ill. A doctor was sent for, but the two children died before they could be relieved. Mrs. Franzoi is in a serious condition.

Hooker Hearing About Finished

Albany, July 19.—Every indication favors a decision by the legislature not later than tomorrow night in the case of Supreme Court Justice Hooker, charges against whose fitness for his position have been under consideration in joint session of the two houses during the past week. The taking of testimony for both sides has been completed.

Y., July 19.—President Roosevelt with his three eldest sons, accompanied by a party of cousins and friends, left Sagamore Hill late yesterday afternoon on their annual camping expedition. After packing away the provisions, blankets and camp outfit into the boats, the party rowed to the place of camping, about five miles from Sagamore Hill. The president himself was camp director and chief cook. Around a good campfire the president related some of his experiences, which always appeal to his youthful companions. The party returned to Sagamore Hill this morning.

Lightship Was In Great Danger

Port Townsend, Wash., July 19.—Carelessness in displaying signals explains a totally erroneous report of a fatal boiler explosion on board the Destruction Island lightship No. 67. The vessel was in immediate danger of going on the rocks when a tug sent a line aboard and towed her into Neah bay.

SHOULD GO SLOW.

Little Appropriations Which in the Aggregate Are Large.

Editors Daily Ledger:

In reading over the doings of the City Council this week I noticed under the heading of "Appropriations," approved by the Committee on Finance, several small sums for various street improvements. Now, before the Committee on Ordinances pass these appropriations, would not it be well to stop and consider of what benefit some of the improvements would be to the public at large.

Take for instance, Glendale road. Why should $600 be spent for laying out that road? Who lives on it? Who asks for it anyway? It winds in back of Presidents hill through low lands; is not used by people on foot or in carriages. There is no demand at present for a road here.

Quincy has so much need for money in other directions, would it not be well to go slow on some of the new street appropriations, as every $600 counts. The city is expending altogether too much annually for interest. It is proposed to raise all these sums by a loan to extend over several years.

TRIED SUICIDE.

Schidlofski Attempts to Strangle Himself with Suspenders.

A dispatch from Lajunta, Colorado, reports that the Braintree barber, John Schidlofski, held for the murder of his wife at Belmont, attempted to strangle himself on Tuesday afternoon with a pair of suspenders, while in his cell.

The discovery was made about 5 o'clock, when the evening meal was served. It was only a short time before that the prisoner was in conversation with Sheriff George Barr, his captor.

It is the opinion of the jailor that Schidlofski would have been successful if the suspender noose had slipped more easily.

The Magazines.

The New England Magazine for July hold its own well among current publications. The number opens with some illustrated material on the quaint and historically interesting town of Kingston, Mass., by Ethel Hobart. Mary Stoyell Stimpson, writes most entertainly of the celebrated portrait painter Gilbert Stuart, in his role of "old-time Bostonian," and the famous Stuart portraits of the first five Presidents are reproduced in this connection.

From the standpoint of fashion the August Delineator is a most attractive number, portraying the midsummer styles in all their charm and variety; and it contains, besides the fashions, many features of interest to the general reader and practical householder. The first chapters of a new serial story by Helen M. Winslow is an item of note; it is called "At Spinster Farm" and relates the actual experience of a woman who forsook the busy city for the countryside and found there real peace and happiness.

—The deplorable results of industrial troubles in Fall River are shown in the recent local census, which indicates a falling off in population since 1900, counting the ordinary ratio of increase in addition to the actual loss, of fully 10,000. Meantime further agitation and the strained relations between the mills and the operatives call for patience and moderation on both sides to prevent another disastrous conflict.—Banker and Tradesman.

WAR ON YELLOW FEVER

Panama Nurse's Experience In Fighting the Disease.

TRIPS OF THE "DEAD TRAIN"

Miss A. A. Robinson Says It Certainly Runs to the Cemetery Once a Day, Sometimes Oftener—Physical Discomforts Great, but They Are Nothing, She Finds, to the Mental Starvation—Many Nurses Coming Home.

"There is no doubt that the yellow fever situation on the isthmus of Panama is grave and growing rapidly more acute," said Miss A. A. Robinson of New York, one of the nurses who returned to New York recently from Colon by the steamship Advance, says the New York Tribune. Miss Robinson has been a year on the isthmus, first as nurse at the Ancon hospital and later as matron at the hospital in Colon.

"Governor Magoon is very anxious, and so are the physicians, for yellow fever strikes down the white man, while the negro is immune. Some of the finest young men who have gone to the isthmus since I have been there have died of it, and they were well set up, clean boys, with good principles. Deaths occur right along. It doesn't seem to be the fault of the government or of any one in particular, but it is agreed on all hands that what should have been done before a spadeful of earth was dug out of the canal was to provide good sanitary quarters for the engineers and others who were to work there. Why, these poor fellows have been drinking unfiltered rain water, and a number of them came down without mosquito bars, which are a necessity of life in a region where the mosquito carries the yellow fever infection."

Asked as to the "dead train" which, it has been stated, runs from Colon to Monkey Hill cemetery, a mile and a half south, always once and sometimes as many as fourteen times a day, Miss Robinson replied: "The train certainly runs to the cemetery once a day, sometimes oftener, but I never knew it to run fourteen times. The truth is that, while there has been just as much yellow fever in the isthmus since the American occupation as before, the deaths are fewer by far. There are now about fifty American trained nurses down there. Before we came there the two hospitals were in charge of the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul. In those days there was a steady procession of the dead on their way to the cemetery. The sisters used to lock up the wards at night and go home. In the morning they would come and unlock them and find some of their patients dead. They were lovely women, but quite innocent of all the elements of modern nursing, as we found when those who remained for awhile after we came helped with the diets. They thought it so cruel in us to have a nurse or orderly sit up all night in each ward and held up their hands in amazement at the mention of ice bags, typhoid baths and antiseptic surgery."

Miss Robinson is a Boston girl and a graduate of the Hartford Hospital Training School For Nurses. She went out with a party of eight other nurses on July 12, 1904.

"No more isthmus of Panama for me," she said. "The physical discomforts are great, but they are nothing to the mental starvation. There is absolutely no recreation—no music, no churches, no bathing, no books or magazines, no driving except round and round inside the towns. Nobody ever walks, and athletic sports are impossible in a climate that has six months of rainy season and is all the time like a warm vapor bath. The bare monotony of the nurse's existence is appalling.

"The food is good, although American food was at first very hard to obtain, and fresh vegetables are scarce and fish rare on account of a tax that is placed on it. The hospital buildings are good, the nurses' quarters are comfortable, the hours are no longer than here in New York, but the absolute stagnation of the mental and emotional life wears one out. Many of the nurses are coming home, though there is no organized strike or revolt. Fifty dollars a month is what they get to begin on. If they give satisfaction it is later raised to $60. Of course board, lodging and laundry are found.

"Under Governor Davis the hospitals were sorely handicapped for supplies, owing, I suppose, to the desire of the governor to keep expenses down to their minimum.

"To illustrate: It used to be my duty as matron to make out the requisitions for each day's supplies. Fifty pounds of ice was just sufficient to give us what we needed for the twenty-four hours. Day after day Governor Davis would cut this down to twenty-five pounds, with the result that our American boys would toss about for eight or ten hours burning up for lack of a cooling drink. Under Governor Magoon all this has been changed."

Why should the trained nurse who can earn her $25 a week straight along in New York city elect to nurse in a government hospital in Panama for $60 a month, with no end of privation thrown in? Miss Robinson scouted the notion that patriotism had anything to do with it.

"They are mostly either army nurses or nurses who are tired to death of private nursing and want a change," she said. "That was why I went—I wanted a change."

Sleep is the medicine of nature and if you can command sleep you can snap your fingers at work. By all means own a good mattress, with one third of your life spent in bed, a good mattress will make life worth twice the living.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

After an operatic career of forty years Mlle. Bauermeister, the well known singer, has retired from Covent Garden, London.

Miss Katherine Noyes of Milwaukee is accorded this year the much sought distinction of being the handsomest girl in Smith college, Northampton, Mass.

Mrs. Bonaparte, wife of the new secretary of the navy, for a number of years has been in ill health. She is fond of music and is herself a fine pianist and has a keen appreciation of the best in literature and art.

Mrs. James W. Smith of Newark, N. J., has in her possession a highly treasured bit of verse from the pen of John Greenleaf Whittier. It is one of the few productions of the poet that have hitherto escaped publication.

Dr. Florence Sabin, who has been promoted to the post of associate professor of anatomy in Johns Hopkins university, enjoys the distinction, according to the Indianapolis News, of being the first woman to attain a professorship at Johns Hopkins.

Mrs. Astor is said to be the most methodical woman in society. She lives by the clock. It was on the minute of 10 when she descended the grand staircase in the twin houses to greet her guests at her big ball, although she was fully dressed an hour before.

Mrs. Fairbanks holds three collegiate degrees. She was graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware in 1872 in the same class with her husband. Afterward she took the degree of bachelor of laws and then took a full course in parliamentary and international law.

BASE HITS.

Fultz is the star base stealer of the American league.

Manager Jake Stahl of Washington is regaining his former health.

George Davis is playing gilt edge ball for the Chicago White Sox.

Jesse Tannehill is the leading Boston pitcher so far this season.

Napoleon Lajoie is striking his gait at the bat. Watch him go up the ladder.

Outfielder Dan Sullivan, who couldn't bat at all for Detroit and Washington, is now hitting for over .300 in the American association.

George Stone of the St. Louis Americans, who has twice been on the Boston American muster roll, but never got a trial, is batting hard.

No major manager has developed more star pitchers in his short major league career than Armour of Detroit. He has a hobby for tall pitchers.

THE BUTTON FAD.

Buttons are in infinite variety.

Some are so jeweled they look like brooches.

Many show two colors to match checked materials.

Small ball buttons of pearl are used visibly on wash frocks.

Black cut jet ones have come in again and look well on the shepherd checks.

Those made in red or bronze metal resemble oriental pins and are most attractive.

Round buttons of imitation coral edged with rhinestones, the whole as large as a quarter, are nice for red figured frocks.

For blue gowns there are amethyst buttons, and for white or gray or black gowns the black glass buttons surrounded by sparkling rhinestones are attractive.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

German newspapers speak of a new typewriting machine which prints syllables and short words instead of single letters, attains much greater speed than others and, it is claimed, will revolutionize the art of typewriting.

It would hardly seem likely that there would be any demand for a bucket capable of being carried in the pocket, but such a device has been recently placed on the market. The device is made of waterproof material, fastened to a jointed frame.

A novel automatic door has been invented recently which opens by itself whenever any one steps on a platform placed near. It is intended for use at theaters, and the platform is not intended to be placed on the street side of the doors, but where it will facilitate the hasty exit of an audience.

TRAIN AND TRACK.

The Baltimore and Ohio has ordered 2,000 steel underframe box cars of 80,000 pounds capacity.

A railroad line from Hattiesburg to Pascagoula, on the gulf coast, is the next big project to be taken up for the development of southeast Mississippi.

Chests containing supplies for "first aid to the injured" are now carried on all trains on the Southern Pacific lines in Texas, including passenger trains, freight trains (cabooses) and work trains.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford, it is reported, will spend $1,000,000 for new locomotive repair shops at Norwood, Mass., and the New Haven plant will be practically dismantled.

LIFE INSURANCE.

The great need of the Equitable and of some other insurance concerns just now is a revival of public confidence.—Portland Oregonian.

Life insurance has become a necessary detail of the economical and prudent life. The idea that the shameful scandals of the Equitable are going to stop people from insuring their lives is all nonsense.—Hartford Courant.

Egg-O-See.
Egg-O-See Commands Success By Newspaper Advertising proving that reliable business methods, aided by strong publicity, need not fear competition. The Mahin Advertising Company of Chicago, has just secured the contract for advertising the flaked wheat cereal, Egg-O-See. This is the largest advertising contract placed with any Chicago agency since the Mahin Company secured the N. K. Fairbank Company order six years ago. The Company demanded the best California wheat; put in the most perfect machinery; devised and expensive, moisture-proof package; systematized their factory so that the human hand never touched the wheat while it was being cleaned, flaked, cooked and packed. They established relations with the trade on the most solid business basis. They have never indulged in the use of premiums in any way, depending entirely on the merit of their goods. When all other features of the business were established, they began to advertise—aggressively, persistently, confidently.

HOT AIR SYSTEM

In Public School Buildings of the City

Is Condemned by Board of Health.

Bad Condition of Affairs at the High School.

The Board of Health in a communication to the City Council last Monday evening gave the result of its recent investigation as to the sanitary condition of the several school buildings of the city.

After going into the conditions of each building in detail the Board say: "We feel that it is our duty to condemn the hot air system. Especially does this apply to the Massachusetts Field and High schools. Both of these buildings abut the public sewer and should be connected immediately. In the case of the Massachusetts Field school the sewer was built for the purpose of connecting, and at the High school as a sanitary arrangement may be placed in the present basement, it would be avisable to remedy the matter now. We consider it very poor economy to expose hundreds of children attending these schools to such a stench as arises from the use of this system."

Of the Cranch school they say the conditions are fair. There is considerable odor arising from the boys' urinal which is not properly taken care of. If a vent was put in the stack heater this odor would go up the chimney instead of the rooms. As it is at present there is no adequate means of properly ventilating the boys' toilet room.

At the John Hancock the sanitary conditions are good but the ventilation is poor. The poor condition could be obviated by the modern system of ventilation instead of through wooden ventilators, as now used.

At the Willard the sanitary condition is good but fixtures should be thoroughly cleaned and painted.

The hot air system is used at the Gridley Bryant and the sanitation is as good as could be expected under these conditions.

The sanitary fixtures at the Wollaston school should be thoroughly cleaned and painted. The building, especially the boys toilet room, was very dirty at time of visit.

The hot air system is used at the Quincy and there is more or less odor. The toilet rooms need cleaning and painting.

The Lincoln school is in good condition except that the slate floor of the boys' urinal should be given a greater slant.

The condition at the Adams is already known but the proposed connection with the sewer will remedy this.

The vaults at the old High school are in a filthy condition. There is no plumbing as outside vaults are used.

The hot air system is used at the Massachusetts Fields school and the odor at times is very strong both inside and outside the building.

The conditions at the Coddington can easily be remedied. The fixtures need cleaning and painting. The boys' urinal was in a filthy condition.

At the Washington everything is in perfect condition.

The hot air system is used at the High and the accommodations are entirely inadequate. The odor is very bad and the ventilation in the toilet rooms is bad. The woodwork about the boys' urinal is saturated and the odor goes all over the building, so that at times it is almost uninhabitable. The girls' cloak room has no means of ventilation and on a wet day the odor is very strong.

Autoists Fined.

Eight automobile drivers were arraigned before Judge Cook in the district court this morning for exceeding the speed limit at Quincy and in the Metropolitan Park Reservation.

The first case was Henry M. Whitney, who was arraigned for exceeding the limit at Quincy. Mr. Whitney said that he was not driving the car and was not present but that the car was in charge of his chaffeur Thomas Ayers. Upon this statement the case against Mr. Whitney was dismissed. A new complaint will be issued against Mr. Ayers.

Fines of $10 were imposed on Renton Whiton of Boston, William A. Cross of Milton and Charles N. Fitts of Newtonville for exceeding the limit at Quincy.

A Letter from Miss Julia E. Underwood.

While At the World's Fair City

In Good Health and Sends Greetings to Friends.

From a personal letter written by Miss Underwood at the American Inn, Portland, last Friday, the following is taken:

We are having a delightful time; every one is so happy. Just think, I have taken a sail this afternoon around the lake in a steam launch and enjoyed it very much—an auto ride—steamboat sail—and had an invitation last evening to ride on the camel's back in the Streets of Cairo on "The Trail." But my courage failed me there.

I met Miss Dearborn and Miss Lingham in the afternoon. They came in the evening to see me ride. We took a "Trip to Siberia" which all enjoyed.

We had a reception this afternoon in the Massachusetts Building. Ice cream and cake were served. We were taken through the Oregon and California buildings. Yesterday we took a lovely ride around the city in the observation car; beautiful scenery and many fine buildings. Passed a Chinese burial ground. So many trips are planned for us we find little time for aught else.

I have been very well all of the time thus far. We take in the Fair tomorrow, July 15, and leave at 11.30 P. M., on our homeward trip. Sunday expect to be in Seattle at the beautiful Washington Hotel, to take our meals.

We have had remarkable weather only one rainy day since we left Boston—a shower early yesterday morning. Then the sun shone, and it was a lovely warm day.

The electrical display in front of the Inn, evenings, is very beautiful. Thanks for the Daily Ledgers which greeted me at Portland.

HOT IN ROCKIES.

School Teachers, However, Have Great Day at Bauff.

The party of New England school teachers, of which Miss Julia E. Underwood is one, are now travelling homeward night and day as fast as an express train will bring them. There will be no more long stops. They are due in Montreal on Sunday morning and will reach Boston on Sunday evening, at 8.10, at the North station.

A dispatch of Wednesday to the Herald from Banff, N. W. T., reads:

As might be expected, the last day on shore was busy for The Herald Educational party which began early to size up the surroundings and stayed late at the work. It is indeed the garden spot of the Canadian Rockies. There is nearly every grade of difficulty for a taste in tramping, from a quiet stroll in the cool pine woods to a tooth and nail scramble up a steep cliff.

A small party went up Bow river on a launch for a 16-mile trip. Nearly all hands went up to the hot springs in the morning and 20 of them drove up and down Tunnel mountain, saw the buffaloes and as a wind-up, the cave, the crater of an extinct geyser. The weather discouraged the climbers, for though a bright clear day, it was undeniably hot. As nearly everything can at least be seen on the hotel veranda there was an epidemic of teacher laziness in the mid-hours of the day.

As a matter of history the day is notable for producing the worst "break" of the trip. While viewing the buffaloes, which by the way are moulting just now, with tufts of the old fur hanging from them in patches, one of the brightest members broke forth: "Why, see they are shearing them. I thought they had to kill the buffaloes to get the Buffalo robes." It was too much for the driver.

Brainard Will Allowed.

The will of Amos H. Brainard, late of Hyde Park, was allowed by Judge Flint at Dedham on Wednesday. It leaves $15,000 and furniture to widow, $10,000 each to son and daughters unmarried; $5,000 each to married daughters, and also remembers grandchildren. There was a movement to contest the will but there has been a compromise on private terms.

DOVE CEREMONY.

Gov. Hoch Would Imitate Japanese at Battleship Christening.

The romantic nature of Gov. Hoch of Kansas has been struck by the recent account of the launching of a Japanese battleship in England, in which the release of a number of doves signalized the naming of the vessel, and he has proposed an imitation of the Japanese ceremony for the battleship Kansas, which is to be launched on Aug. 12, at Camden, N. J., says a dispatch to the Boston advertiser.

He says the more battleships the nation has the more likely is peace to be preserved, and since the dove is the emblem of peace he thinks it about right to use the dove ceremony.

Miss Anna Hoch, the governor's daughter, who will name the ship, confesses that she has never seen a bottle of champagne. It had been suggested that she might use crude oil, or water from the John Brown spring instead. A bottle of water has been sent to the governor.

Q. Y. C. LADIES' DAY

Ideal Weather and Many Go to Houghs Neck.

The Quincy Yacht Club is favored with an exceptionably fine day for its annual ladies' day. The weather conditions are ideal. There was a good sailing westerly breeze this noon which should give the yachts plenty of wind.

The indications this noon were that there would be an unusually large attendance. The crowds commenced to go down at 1 o'clock, and every car after that including the special car at 1.50 was full.

The House Committee were on hand early to welcome the guests at the club house and a grand good time is assured those who participate.

Gen. Blackmar's Funeral.

The funeral of Gen. W. W. Blackmar in Boston, on Sunday, will be a notable one, and in keeping with the high position that he filled.

The body will arrive in Boston on Friday evening, and will be escorted by Edward W. Kinsley Post 113, G. A. R., to Waterman's chapel, at Roxbury. On Sunday the same Post will escort the body to the State House, where it will lie in state that day from 9 A. M. to 12.30 P. M. The general public will be admitted.

The funeral service will be at the Second church at 2 P. M., and will be conducted by the Rev. E. A. Horton, the chaplain. The burial ritual of the Grand Army will be by Kingsley Post.

The burial will be at Cedar Grove, Dorchester.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ We have passed through the commercial age when the chief end and aim was to acquire wealth; we are now entering into the age of high ideals. The question is now, not to get rich, but how to do right. The rule of the dollar is not so potent as it was, and the reign of law is becoming more accepted. We are passing from evil to good, and from darkness into light.—Gov. Folk of Missouri.

☞ The Kline murder is one of many where money was the stake played and to be paid for with human life. Education and radical reform in immigration laws can accomplish much in making life more secure. The solid ground of safety can never be absolutely reached, however, until a specific shall be found for the dollars and cents fever which has become a national malady. Restore mental and moral attributes to the position of first importance with money kept in its natural subservience and the time may again come when murders of the Kline type will be practically unknown. It will then matter little whether murder shall be punished by execution or life imprisonment.—Gloucester Times.

☞ Gratuitous advice is not always welcome, but now that one or two hot spells have come and gone, while others may not be far distant, it should not be out of order to suggest that communities can avoid many of the discomforts to which they are subjected if they will observe two very simple rules.

The first thing to do in this connection is to give away or destroy all thermometers, taking care, of course, to use tongs or asbestos wrappers to avoid blistering the hands. Thermometers are untrustworthy in summer as well as in winter. Rarely do they agree and as a rule they exaggerate. Last week many a man did not know how "pizen" warm and moist he was until he telephoned to the Journal's news room or searched its columns; then he gasped and talked after a fashion that was evidently not intended for publication. Some smote themselves on the breast and lamented because it wasn't as sultry as they thought it ought to be and some raved because it was sultrier than they supposed it could be. But in neither case did the information which they were seeking afford relief.—Providence Journal.

☞ June is a suggestion of all that is perfect, and the June bride has long been the season's most loved and admired beauty of creation. A world of interest centres in her. How she will look, what she will wear, the variety of her trousseau, the harmony of its colorings which frock will receive the most attention and which hat is the most becoming—these considerations for ages have commanded woman's mind and man's pocketbook. A visit to the School of Domestic Arts and Science reveals some of the benefits of evolution. The school has been in session all the year, but in order to accommodate the large demand of patronage, it has opened a summer term. The school instructs in the art of cooking, millinery and dressmaking—all the things that especially interest a young bride. Time was when the all-absorbing question was what gownmaker and what milliner were responsible for the bride's loveliness; but time is when the most marvellous development is how much the prospective bride is doing for herself. Today she is not only a thing of beauty, but promises to be a joy forever, for she is learning to care for the inner man and the outer woman.—Chicago Tribune.

INCREASE IN MORTALITY

Wednesday's Deaths From Heat In New York City Alone Numbered Seventy-Five--A Prediction of Moderate Temperatures For Several Days to Come

New York, July 20.—While the record of deaths and prostrations greatly exceeded that of Tuesday there was a distinct diminution yesterday in the temperature prevailing throughout the eastern section of the country. Although the mid-day heat was everywhere terrific, it was broken by scattered thunderstorms, many of a violent character, and towards evening the temperature fell rapidly, until normal summer conditions were reached. Following are the maximum temperatures, the maximum humidity and the deaths and prostrations from the effects of the heat:

	Max Temp	Hum	Deaths	Pros
New York	95	70	75	167
Philadelphia	95.8	48	10	40
Baltimore	92.2	77	4	5
Washington	92	95	1	14
Boston	94	63	1	25
Pittsburg	87	70	5	6

In the above table the number of prostrations does not include deaths.

As usual the maximum temperatures were everywhere exceeded by those prevailing in the crowded streets, where the actual temperature frequently exceeded 100 degrees. The cumulative effect of the continued torridity of these days was evident in the enormous increase of the number of deaths in New York. While the death roll of Tuesday was only 26, that of yesterday reached the appalling total of 75, while over double this number were treated for heat prostration. This was almost entirely due to the collapse of young children and aged persons whose exhausted vitality was unequal to the strain of further suffering.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon came the long prayed for relief, when a terrific thunderstorm and a deluge of rain burst over Brooklyn and the lower part of Manhattan and sections of New Jersey. While the storm lasted only a few minutes and left the upper part of the city untouched, the relief was almost instantaneous and from then on the mercury fell steadily.

Even the seashore resorts in the vicinity of New York did not escape the heat and many prostrations occurred among the thousands that flocked to Coney Island and the other beaches on the Long Island shore.

Among the distressing incidents of the day was the killing of her infant in Brooklyn by a young woman who was suddenly driven insane by the heat. She stabbed the child to death and then made a vain attempt on her own life.

Leonard Sanders, a negro from New Haven, went mad in a public park and leaped into the river from the Harlem bridge. He was rescued by three boatmen after a struggle, in which he upset the boat and nearly drowned his rescuers.

The suffering among animals during the day was intense, hundreds of horses, many of which died, being prostrated. An extraordinary mortality among dogs and cats, of which hundreds of bodies were picked up in the streets, was reported by the police.

Deaths In New England

Boston, July 20.—It is the belief of the Boston weather officials that the sojourn in New England of the most intense heat wave so far this season is about ended. As temperatures of 90 and over again prevailed in many places, the burden of another day of torrid weather proved too great a strain and at least seven deaths and more than two score of prostrations were reported from New England points. It is estimated that 25,000 factory hands in New England were obliged to cease work on account of the weather. The afternoon brought welcome showers practically throughout the entire section and last night the average temperature from seven points in New England was 74.

Connecticut Suffered From Heat

New Haven, July 20.—Eight deaths due to the hot weather were reported from different places in Connecticut yesterday. Thirty cases of heat prostration were reported. Work in foundries and factories in all parts of the state was suspended in whole or in part during most of the day. Building operations also were suspended and railroad track crews and stevedore gangs were laid off.

Weather Bureau's Promise

Washington, July 20.—The heated term has somewhat abated in New England, portions of the middle Atlantic states and the upper Ohio valley. In these districts thunderstorms and showers were general Wednesday afternoon. The showers were caused by the rapid development of an area of low pressure over the mouth of the St. Lawrence and New England.

The weather will be showery in the middle Atlantic states and New England. The heated term in New England and the middle Atlantic states will be temporarily broken today and moderate temperatures will prevail for several days.

SCIENCE PREVENTS BALDNESS.

The Fatal Germ and Its Remedy Now Facts of Science.

It is the rarest thing in the world for a man to be necessarily bald. No man whose hair is not dead at the roots, need be bald if he will use Newbro's Herpicide, the new scalp antiseptic. Herpicide destroys the germ that cuts the hair off at the root; and cleans the scalp of dandruff and leaves it in a perfectly healthy condition. Mr. Mannett, in the Maryland Block, Butte, Mont., was entirely bald. In less than a month Herpicide had removed the enemies of hair growth, and nature did its work by covering his head with thick hair an inch long, and in six weeks he had a normal suit of hair. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

MURDER O[illegible]

Boston Police Think They Are on Trail of the Guilty Man

Boston, July 20.—The police are working on the murder of Pantaloni Lucci, an Italian laborer, who was found literally [illegible]ttered to death on the roof at 50 Battery street. They have a faint clue to the identity of the assassin, and an arrest is likely to be made soon. What the clue is and to whom it points cannot be learned, as the police are working very quiet and fast.

The last seen of Lucci by friends on the night of his death was at 9 o'clock, when, in company with a number of friends, he was playing cards at 6 Canney place, accompanied by his friend, Michele D'Attanazio, who left him shortly after and went to his room.

The next heard of the man was when the police were notified by three men who reside on the top floor of the tenement where the murder was committed. They had heard the scuffling and, being roused from a sound sleep, hastened to the roof just in time to see a man running toward the open door of No. 48.

Later developments and investigation show, however, that the murderer must have gone to the portion of the building overlooking that of the Merchants and Miners' docks and dropped to the top of that shed, inasmuch as there are bloody finger prints that would denote such a move.

Father and Son Badly Wounded

Boston, July 20.—Because he had been suspended by his employer, Thomas McNally, an express team driver for John Timmins, is alleged to have made an attack with a revolver and butcher knife upon Timmins at his place of business last night. Martin Nevins, in an attempt to disarm McNally, was severely wounded. Edward Nevins, who came to the rescue of his father, received a dangerous wound. McNally made his escape.

Cyclone In Connecticut

Bristol, Conn., July 20.—This place was hit by a small cyclone which did considerable damage. It was accompanied by a deluge of rain and hail. The wind blew 60 miles an hour and tore off the roofs of three houses and leveled two barns. About 50 trees were torn up by the wind and leveled. The big tobacco barn of Frederick Fry was blown down and several men who had sought shelter in it were injured by falling timbers.

Insane Murderers Transferred

Boston, July 20.—Henry F. Boles and Joseph Hastings, who have been serving life terms in the state prison, have been transferred to the Bridgewater institution for the criminal insane. Both were adjudged hopelessly demented. Boles murdered his wife and Joseph McMurray, a Brookline policeman who had attempted to arrest him. Hastings was convicted of killing Mrs. E. A. Trask at Beverly.

To Investigate Drowning Case

Bridgeport, Conn., July 20.—As the result of the drowning of Lillian Bradner, aged 14, at Seaside Park, Joseph Bassett will appear before the coroner. On reaching shore Bassett was hooted at and nearly mobbed by a big crowd, who claimed that while fooling Bassett held the girl under the water too long, causing her death. Bassett claims the girl was seized with cramps and that he tried to save her.

Lightning In Power Station

Taunton, Mass., July 20.—Lightning entered the high tension power station of the Old Colony Street Railway company, which supplies the entire system from Boston to Newport, R. I., with power, and burned out two transformers, paralyzing the system for 80 minutes. Lightning also entered the Brockton sub-station and burned out three transformers there.

Naval Apprentice Drowned

Rockland, Me., July 20.—Officers of the monitor Florida, from New London, Conn., report that Apprentice F. W. Roberts, aged 26, was drowned when the ship was 40 miles from this port. Roberts had leaned over the rail to rinse a swab and fell overboard. Being unable to swim, he was drowned before a boat could reach him.

Wanted For Stabbing

Fall River, Mass., July 20.—Inspector Henry of the Pawtucket, R. I., police department came here and arrested Gus Bolo on a warrant charging assault with a dangerous weapon on Herbert Gorman of Pawtucket, who is at the Pawtucket hospital suffering from stab wounds in the abdomen. His recovery is considered doubtful.

Mind May Be Unsound

Augusta, Me., July 20.—Elmer L. Keyes of Bangor, who is being held for the August grand jury on a charge of murdering his wife, has been taken to the state hospital here for observation to determine his mental condition. Keyes was formerly a representative in the legislature.

Drowned In Sight of His Family

East Hampton, Conn., July 20.—William P. Reim was drowned while bathing in Lake Pecolopaug. He sank in sight of his wife and children, who were on the bank of the lake watching the bathers. Reim was seized with cramps.

Fisherman Full of Water

Pasque Island, Mass., July 20.—The fisherman Maude Andrews of Dennis, Mass., struck a rock in the middle ground of Vineyard sound and was beached to save her from sinking. She filled immediately after reaching shore.

Broke His Neck In Diving

Bridgeport, Conn., July 20.—Thomas Beady, 24 years old, of Ansonia, was brought to the Bridgeport hospital with a broken neck. Beady dove from the top of a 15-foot pier into three feet of water and probably will die.

The Magazines.

Patriotism, pleasure and profit are the happy ingredients which go to make up the contents of the July number of The American Boy. Among the patriotic stories and articles in this number are: Archie Comstock's Celebration, which will simply tickle the boys all over with its humor; What Has Happened on the Fourth of July, of other interesting events which have taken place on that day. American Boy Day is also made a feature of the paper and tells of celebrations to be held at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, Portland, Ore., and elsewhere.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Patterns For Lady's Shirt Waist Costume Designed by Martha Dean—Nos. 6269 and 6140

The steadily increasing vogue of shirt waist suits has brought out a number of novelties, all good in their way; but, when it comes to a serviceable suit, easily made and easily laundered, there is nothing that compares with the tucked or plaited modes. In the model shown the blouse is made with three rather deep tucks, which extend entirely across the shoulder. The front is finished with a box plait, and the back is plain except for a few gathers at the waist. The sleeve is of the newest shaping in shirt waist lines. The tucked skirt in five gore style is of round length. The mode is a most suitable one for washable stuffs as well as for mohair, silk or lightweight woolens. No. 6269, 32 to 42 inches bust measure; No. 6140, 20 to 30 inches waist measure.

GRAFT SCANDALS

Zest For Unearthing Them at Washington

HOLMES' EASY METHODS

Unscrupulous Clerks Might Be Tempted to Follow His Example--The Government Printing Office May Be Reorganized

Washington, July 20.—The spirit of investigation which has been awakened by the publication in so many magazines and newspapers of stories of graft in municipal and state affairs seems to have seized upon the national capital. Petty pilferings and small stealings that have apparently been going on for years are now the subject of private comment.

The Holmes "cotton leak" scandal in the department of agriculture, and the disclosures in the alleged scandal following the purchase of 72 Lanston type-setting machines for the government printing office, coming just after the appointment of the Keep inquiry committee, has served to bring that body of young office holders very prominently into the public eye, and to give them a temporary importance which it was not originally intended that they should have.

The committee was formed to make investigations and to suggest to the president where the business methods of the departments could be advantageously changed, to find means of bringing about a greater economy and better methods in the transaction of departmental business; in fine, to devise some plan of correlating the identical business of the departments, as it might be done in a great mercantile or manufacturing organization.

They had hardly got done with an inquiry in the chief clerk's office of the treasury department, before the printing house stories with their imputations of scandal became afloat, and Mr. Keep and his associates became scandal probers. The commission had ended its work for the summer when the printing office case came up. Now that all the testimony has been taken in that case, there is reason to believe the committee will not do any more probing until the coming September. That the methods of the departments will bear a general overhauling is the testimony of all who have had any business before them, or any knowledge of their inside workings.

There are little grafting enterprises going on in various underhand ways that, while not diverting large sums of public money from legitimate ends, are sapping the spirit of the service. As soon as Holmes was found out and dismissed there were plenty who came forward to testify, on the information and belief, that he was not the only person in the department who was making a little something "on the side." These tale bearers declared that such practices as Holmes covering an extended period could not go on without arousing the suspicious of his subordinates and immediate associates.

Pernicious examples of this sort breed imitators. Clerks, without strong moral scruples, who might become aware of Holmes' easy methods of making money, would be filled with the spirit of emulation and try to seil such scraps of information as came their way. A scraping of the barnacles from the departments, it is everywhere believed by intelligent observers, would reveal some curious practices and situations.

If the present zest for unearthing scandals is kept alive, and vigorous inquiry set on foot, a vast deal of good can be done and the public service greatly improved. The danger is in delay and the falling into routine channels. There is a right way of doing this work and a government way; the first yields results and the second platitudes.

It has already become apparent that whatever the Keep commission's verdict on the purchase of the Lanston type-setting machines may be, a shakeup in the government printing office must follow. General conditions in the big printing shop, as revealed incidentally in the testimony taken before the commission, insures as much. No inquiry was made except into the Lanston contract, but disclosures as to the methods of business in the office revealed extravagance and wastage in almost every department. It is even declared that government printing is costing $1,000,000 annually more than it should. A member of the cabinet to whom this remark was repeated commented, "Yes, probably more."

Within a few months, the president is declared to have offered the position of public printer to two different men. Neither of them was able to accept, and further choice has been delayed until a competent man can be found.

Vice Governor of Finland Comes Very Near Meeting Death

Helsingfors, Finland, July 20.—Last evening, two hours after Karl L. Hohenthal had been sentenced to imprisonment for life at hard labor for the assassination of Procurator General Soininen on Feb. 6 last, an attempt was made to assassinate Vice Governor Deutrich as he was leaving the senate.

The vice governor had walked across the square when suddenly, as he neared the police master's office, a man on the curb threw a bomb from a distance of 50 paces. The bomb fell short, but the vice governor was blown off his feet by the terrific force of the explosion, which shattered the windows in the neighborhood for a distance of hundreds of yards.

Deutrich was assisted to the police station. He was burned and otherwise injured about the legs and bled profusely, but his wounds are declared not to be fatal. The bomb-thrower was pursued by naval cadets, but escaped.

SUIT OF INGRAHAM

Asks Court to Make Wife Pay Him $5500 a Year

HAS CONTRACT AND BOND

Woman Says That They Were Obtained by Fraud--Plaintiff Induced Her to Get Divorce From Her First Husband

Edinburgh, July 20.—Singular documents were submitted in the suit of Nathaniel G. Ingraham, formerly of New York, against his wife, formerly Edyth N. Ward, now pending before the court of sessions here. Ingraham asks that his wife be ordered to carry out their ante-nuptial settlement, under which he claims he is entitled to $1500 a year and also claims $4000 a year by virtue of a bond granted in his favor.

The wife contends that the contract and bond were obtained by fraud. She alleges that after her separation from her first husband, Reginald H. Ward, the plaintiff induced her by various insidious devices like fortune telling to institute divorce proceedings against Ward and also induced her husband to consent to the proceedings.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward were divorced in 1903 and Mrs. Ward then married Ingraham. Before the marriage Mrs. Ward says she was taken to a lawyer's office and was induced to sign an ante-nuptial settlement contract without reading the papers or knowing what they contained. The plaintiff says the defendant proffered marriage to him first and he declined, but afterwards consented to please her, as she was in poor health.

Mrs. Ingraham was Miss Edyth Newcomb of Kentucky, daughter of H. V. Newcomb, at one time an important factor on Wall street. Reginald H. Ward, who was known in London as Count Ward, was at one time Roumanian consul there. At one period of his career Ward was known as the "copper king." He is a Bostonian by birth and a great grandson of the Revolutionary soldier, General Artemus Ward. The Wards were married in New York Nov. 26, 1889, and were divorced here May 25, 1903.

Ingraham is a grandson of Justice Ingraham of the appellate division of the supreme court of the city of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Ingraham were married Sept. 22, 1903, in London, Mrs. Victor Newcomb of New York and Miss Danforth of Louisville, respectively the mother and aunt of the bride, being present at the ceremony.

Was In Business at Boston

Boston, July 20.—Reginald H. Ward was, for a number of years, a stock broker in this city and a member of the firm of Clarke, Ward & Co., with offices in the Equitable building. He was also a member of several local clubs, but moved to New York soon after his marriage to Miss Newcomb.

Gomez Making Trouble

Havana, July 20.—General Gomez, the fusion candidate for president, is charged with causing various difficulties for the government in the province of Santa Clara, of which he is governor. A commission sent to inspect the municipal affairs of the town of Vueltas was prevented from so doing and a squad of rural guards has been sent to the scene to enforce the carrying out of the government's order Gomez, it is also alleged, has been to an undue extent granting his followers the privilege of carrying arms.

QUINCY HOME.

How the City Cares for Its Unfortunates.

Inspected by Mayor and City Officials.

Followed by Shore Dinner at Houghs Neck and Sail.

That Quincy looks well after its poor was made evident Wednesday to the party of city officials and others who accepted the invitation of Overseer Green to inspect the Quincy Home.

In the party were Mayor Thompson, Commissioner Burke, City Physician Hallowell, Principal Assessor Johnson, City Messenger Tirrell, George W. Prescott of the Patriot, T. J. Collins of the Globe, W. H. Cobb of the Herald, George T. Magee of the Ledger and Robert T. Johnson.

The party was received at the home by Supt. and Mrs. Vaughn, who showed them about the grounds and building.

The lawns about the home were well trimmed and were dotted here and there with flower plots, while seats were placed under the large trees, for the inmates.

Inside the home everything was as neat as wax. The walls were tinted in light colors. The rooms, plentifully lighted with windows were pleasant.

On the first floor are the apartments of the superintendent's family and office. A store room upon the shelves of which are canned goods and other articles, the quality of which was beyond question. It is from this store room that the city supplies its local outside poor and those at the home.

Then there is a large roomy kitchen and the dining room where tables are arranged for seventeen.

The table was set for dinner when the party arrived and the menu provided was good enough for anyone. It consisted of cold meats, potatoes, beets, hot baked beans, wholesome bread, cake, tea and coffee.

The rooms for the inmates are located on the second and third floors. Those on the second floor being for the women and those on the third floor for the men. There is a large bath room on each floor; store room for bedding, etc., on the second floor, and a men's clothing room on the third floor.

The old method was for the men to keep their clothing in their own room, but now when not in use it is hung in this large airy room where it is kept clean.

The sleeping rooms are square and good sized. They are provided with iron bedsteads and chairs. The women's rooms also have a bureau and mirror.

An air of neatness prevailed in the whole building, and it was evident that Supt. and Mrs. Vaughn thoroughly understand their business, and that the city has here provided a home for its unfortunates of which it need not be ashamed.

After the inspection the party accepted an invitation of Overseer Green, and went to Houghs Neck where one of Norteman's famous shore dinners was enjoyed. The menu included everything that goes to make up a genuine clambake dinner. The dinner was well cooked and well served, and as good as they make them.

After dinner Councilman Burgess extended an invitation to the party to take a sail in his launch, the Addie M. which was readily accepted.

Former Teacher Hurt.

Mrs. Frank Hannigan of Brockton, who was seriously injured in an automobile accident at Stoughton on Tuesday evening, was formerly a teacher at Quincy and attended the reception given in May to Miss Julia E. Underwood.

In the auto at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Hannigan and their three children, all of whom were thrown out, when the machine was overturned. Mr. Hannigan and the seven-months old baby escaped injury. The boy, Kenneth, a lad about 10 years of age, was slightly cut on the lip and on the forehead. Dorothy, about 13 years of age, was badly shaken up, but not seriously injured. She was picked up unconscious, but soon recovered. Mrs. Hannigan was shaken up considerably.

Mr. Hannigan was driving at a moderate rate of speed, thus averting what might have easily been a fatal accident. The running gear of the anto broke and was the cause of the accident.

Houghs Neck Complaint.

A complaint against some of the clubs at Houghs Neck, signed by a large number of residents, was filed with Mayor Thompson this morning by Henry H. Faxon. Mayor Thompson turned the matter over to Chief of Police Burrell for investigation.

HIGH TAX RATES.

Cities in Metropolitan District are "Catching It."

The new tax rate of $21.80 in Medford will set some of the taxpayers in the Metropolitan district to thinking. This is an increase of just $3 over last year. The cause of the increase is attributed to the increased state tax and the metropolitan sewer, water and park tax.

The valuation of the city is as follows:
Real estate, $18,393,550.
Personal, $2,846,600
Net total of $21,240,150, an increase over last year of $198,000.

The number of polls is 5695, as against 5583 last year.

The total amount to be raised by taxation this year is $496,943.24 as against $461,176.92 last year, an increase of $35,766.32. The building of new schoolhouses and the increased cost of education the principal factors in the total tax to be raised.

Conductor Found Guilty.

The continued case against Peter J. Moran, a conductor for larceny from the Old Colony street railway was heard Wednesday before Judge Avery and occupied a greater part of the day. There were three complaints against Moran, all for small amounts. He was found not guilty on two of the complaints. Upon the third complaint he was found guilty and sentenced to three months in the house of correction. Appealed.

To Go It Blind.

They do things differently in Woburn than in Quincy, if we may rely on a Boston paper. In Quincy no work can be started on a public building unless sufficient money is appropriated to complete the building.

The Herald says: The Woburn board of public works will this evening, consider the lowest proposal for erecting the new high school building, and, as the estimate of cost for the completed structure is about $50,000 more than the appropriation, it is possible an arrangement may be made with a contractor to erect so much of the structure as can be undertaken at a contract figure of about $60,000, which is said to be available.

The Limit to Their Credulity.

Kansas editors are skeptical. An exchange asked: "What do you think of an artist who painted cobwebs on a ceiling so naturally that the hired girl wore herself into an attack of nervous prostration trying to sweep them down?" Most of the editors say that there may have been such an artist, but there was never such a hired girl.—Kansas City Journal.

A Timely Warning.

Jimmy—What's the matter with you? You don't never go in for any fun at all nowadays. Tommy—No, I'm bein' good because I'm goin' to have a birthday purty soon an' I want to git a present. Jimmy—Better be careful an' not be too good or mebbe they won't give you nothin' but a Bible.—Philadelphia Press.

Out of Pocket, Though.

When General Lafayette attended Lamarque's funeral the crowd took the horses out of his carriage and drew him home themselves. "Were you not honored and pleased?" asked a friend. "Very much pleased," replied Lafayette, "but I never saw my horses again."

Appalling Suggestion.

Bride—My dear, this hat has been crushed beyond redemption, and I must have a new one. Bridegroom—Very well, my darling. I'll stop in somewhere on my way home and buy you one. (Bride faints with horror.)

Unanswerable.

Husband—Do you really need a new hat? Wife—I always need a new hat. Husband—Then what's the use of getting this one?—Life.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Mitchell, John Newman, Martin Swanson, Antone Magnussen and Morris Nelson were arraigned for digging clams for sale at Quincy. Cases continued until next Tuesday.

William G. Nickerson of Dedham and Ephriam Gulison of Boston were fined $10 each for exceeding the limit at the Blue Hills reservation.

The case of Clarence C. Hollidge, for exceeding the e i lence of his speedometor was taken in preference to the officer's stop watch, and the case dismissed.

—Of course a man does not have to be a millionaire to own an automobile, but it is helpful.

—Old Sol may not ride a bicycle, or drive a motor car, but he is something of a scorcher in his way.

—The proposition to revive war taxes to provide against further increase of the national deficit is not popular.

SPIRIT OF THE PIANO.

More Adapted to the Parlor Than to the Concert Hall.

The fact that the piano is descended from the spinet and the harpsichord is still a stumbling block to amateurs of music. The fact that in tone and resonance it has lately been enormously developed is also a stumbling block to those who write for it. The first class have entirely neglected the harpsichord, a perfect and fully evolved instrument, the spirit of which is altogether different from that of the piano. The second class have been tempted by the dynamics of the piano to treat it too much like an orchestra and to forget that it is not only a solo instrument, but really a chamber instrument.

Its utterance, which Chopin understood so well, is really chamber music, and there is always something lamentable to me in the contemplation of a great artist distressing himself and his instrument in the attempt to fill a large concert room with exaggerated expressions of a delicate and intimate temperament. The effect is never entirely satisfactory, however great the artist may be, for that note of intimacy which is surely the very essence and spirit of the piano cannot possibly be maintained in the presence of a large and miscellaneous audience.

When we consider among all our impressions of pianoforte music the moments that have given us memorable pleasure, we find that they took place in intimate assemblies where some one played and some one sang and where the atmosphere thrilled with just that amount of electric disturbance which we call sympathy, which is born with the meeting of friends and dies when they disperse.—National Review.

THE DEEP SEA DIVER.

His Calling About the Most Grewsome of All Occupations.

Beyond all question, the calling of a deep sea diver employed in examining and clearing away sunken wrecks is the most grewsome. Putting aside the fact that his life is in constant danger from the results of submarine enemies or accident to his diving dress and apparatus, the sights that he is called upon to see, and to see, moreover, amid the most horrible surroundings, exceed in ghastliness even those which the hospital or the army surgeon is called upon to confront. Nowhere else on land or sea are so many accumulated horrors to be found as in the hull of a ship which has sunk with crew and passengers.

The hideous condition in which the diver finds the victims of the wreck, some half devoured by fish, some standing upright and floating to and fro with a ghastly parody of living motion, some still locked together as though yet in the last agony of the death struggle, and some floating about the interior of a ship and knocking and rubbing up against him with a hideous lifelikeness that is utterly indescribable. These are some of the horrible sights which deep sea divers have to work amid when they are employed on sunken wrecks. When to all these are added the awful gloom and silence amid which the work has to be performed, there will not seem to be much doubt that of all modern callings that of the deep sea diver is the most grewsome.

Washing In Naples.

Washing in Naples is done in any old tub, barrel or dish and generally outside of the house, and by the amount of water used one would judge it to be scarce. Instead of a board a broad stone is used, supported by one stick underneath and the edge of the tub. Water is cold, and the clothes are hung out to dry in every conceivable place. I saw some towels hung out of a window in the palace. No clothespins are used. When one can afford it rings are strung on to the line; otherwise strings are tied to strings, to which a double piece of short string is tied; one corner of the article to be dried is slipnoosed into this and never becomes loose.—Chicago Tribune.

A Curious Fruit.

A writer in the National Geographical Magazine tells of a tree growing in the Malay archipelago, the Andaman islands and Ceylon, which produces a fruit used in fishing, with results of a remarkable character. The fruit is pounded up into paste and left in bags overnight, after which it is sunk at low tide in deep holes along the reefs. The fish soon begin to appear at the surface, some of them lifeless, others attempting to swim or faintly struggling, with their ventral side uppermost. In this condition the natives have no difficulty in picking them out of the water with their hands.

The Short Eared Owl.

The natives of Alaska say that the short eared owl, which is rather stupid and has a peculiarly shaped head, was originally a little girl. For some reason she was turned into a bird with a very long bill, much like a curlew's. Finding herself thus transformed, she started up in a wild, confused way and flew plump against the side of a house, compressing her bill and flattening her face.

Pleasant Relief.

Mrs. Spenders—George, I've got lots of things I want to talk to you about. Mr. Spenders—Glad to hear it, my dear. Usually you want to talk to me about lots of things you haven't got, but must have.—Philadelphia Press.

The Better Part.

It is much more comfortable, both to yourself and the rest of the world, to be a pleasant ass than to be an unpleasant bear.—Florence (Ga.) Times.

Unpunctuality is the secret of success—for the punctual.

THE LOAN ORDER.

Will Require Sixteen Votes in City Council Tonight.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. The meeting is an important one. It was called principally to hurry along the loan order. One of the items in this order is for $2,750 to connect the Adams school with the public sewer. It is very important that this work should be done during the summer vacation and in order for it to be done, the order must pass tonight as it is the plan now for the Council to adjourn until August 21. It takes sixteen votes to pass the order. Several of the Councilmen are out of town at present so that it is important that every member, in town, should be present.

Aside from this order there is in the calendar the orders granting pole locations.

The Committee on Ordinances will report on the orders for a gravel sidewalk on Faxon road, laying out Farnum street, Glendale road, Holmes street, Freeman street and Coe street. Also on orders for $500 for suppression of the Gypsy and Brown-tail moths and $1,000 for raising the grade of Centre street.

The Committee on Streets will report orders for public hearings on the petitions to lay out Cottage avenue, Eustis street, Curtis street, and the widening of Granite street. They will also report on the order to accept Phillips street, and orders for public hearings on petitions for pole locations and attachments. Also orders granting pole locations and attachments.

The Committee on Licenses will report on the petition of L. B. Titus for license to plant and grow oysters at Squantum, and on a number of petitions for minor licenses.

The Committee on Finance will probably report on the order making transferrs.

On the table are the orders for $25,000 for sewer extentions and $125 for fire alarm boxes.

Installation.

D. D. G. P. Nellie E. Hallett and suite paid Maple Lodge, 313, an official visit Wednesday evening, for the purpose of installing their officers. There was also present a large delegation from Waverly lodge of Charlestown.

The following officers were installed:
Past Protector,—Bertha M. McLeod.
Protector,—Agnes E. Fletcher.
Vice Protector,—Laura E. Holt.
Secretary,—George D. Langley.
Chaplain,—Cora Curtis.
Guide,—Albert H. Taber.
Guardian,—Samuel Oxford.
Sentinel,—Thomas Hewson.

After the installation, the entertainment committee served ice cream and cake, and a social hour was spent, which was enjoyed by all present.

Two Rescued.

"After being thirty hours astray from their vessel, the schooner Masconomo, of Gloucester, says the Herald, Jules Davis and Manfred Griffin, two of the crew who were lost in the fog on Georges, last week, reached Seal Islands, N. S., Saturday evening, and were taken to Yarmouth in the schooner yacht 'Romance,' of Wollaston."

Wollaston readers will be interested because Frank Burgess of Beach street is the owner of the yacht "Romance," and while on his vacation cruise to Nova Scotia picked up the two men who had been drifting about for so many hours in the fog.

Flying Home.

The Herald teachers reached Moose Jaw, N. W. T., on Thursday, homeward bound, having left the Rocky Mountains behind. They found the ride over the prairie rather hotter than in the mountains. Moose Jaw is 1,084 miles from Vancouver and 1,818 miles from Montreal.

Today the train passes through Winnepeg, and reaches Fort William this evening. Saturday evening they will be at North Bay, and early Sunday morning at Ottawa, reaching Montreal at 7 A. M. and Boston at 8.10 P. M. Sunday night.

The Census.

Randolph now has a population of 4,034 a gain of 340 in ten years. Other towns reporting gains are: Bourne, Falmouth, Lenox, Dighton, Raynham, Essex, North Andover, Colrain, Erving, Ludlow, Hadley, Shirley, Sudbury, Carver, East Bridgewater, Hanson and Charlton. The best precent was in Ludlow with Carver second.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Manning pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law at Randolph, and was fined $50.

The temperature is somewhat cooler today, and it is quite a relief.

Fair Ladies Were the Guests

LADIES' DAY

Of Quincy Yacht Club a Great Success.

Hundreds Enjoyed a Sail.

Music, Refreshments and Dancing Follow.

There was a very large attendance Thursday afternoon at the annual Ladies' Day of Quincy Yacht club. The broad piazzas of the club house presented a gay scene both before and after the sail, thronged as they were with hundreds of ladies.

As a rule the ladies were in gowns of white, while the yachtsmen wore white ducks and navy blue jackets and caps.

At one time it looked as though a downpour of rain might be expected at any minute but only a few drops fell.

While the ladies were being transported from the float to the white winged fleet, the wind was fresh from the north west and inclined to be squally. It looked as though their might be some wet jackets before the sail was over.

The skippers of yachts anticipated a squall and the sails were close reefed.

The Dorothy III, the flagship of Commodore F. F. Crane, was moored off the float. She was gaily bedecked with the flags of the international code and was the centre of attraction. At the mast head was a beautiful bouquet of flowers, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Newcomb.

The low boom of a gun from her decks at 2.45 was the signal to make ready for the review and sail. At the same time a flag bearing the number 2 was run up on the mast at the end of the float denoting the course to be sailed.

The 55 ft. schooner, Edith A., owned by G. C. Sherburne & Son of Marblehead, which was the guest boat was anchored some distance from shore and launches were kept busy taking parties to her from the float. She was in command of ex-Commodore Pettengill.

Fleet Captain George H. Wilkins and members of the House Committee remained on the float until the last and everybody who wanted a sail had it.

At 3 o'clock another gun was fired from the flagship. This was the signal to pass in review. As each yacht passed the flagship the Commodore saluted, dipping his colors and firing a gun.

At this time the wind was still quite fresh and the boats made a pretty sight as their close reefed sails filled and they headed toward Pig Rock buoy.

Hardly had the buoy been turned when the wind began to flatten, and the reefs were quickly shaken out.

When off Sheep Island it died down almost to a dead calm and there was a drifting match. Then the wind shifted to the northeast and freshened a little. It was but for a few minutes however, and then it flattened out again so that some of the yachts had difficulty in getting home and had to be towed in by launches.

The return to the clubhouse was made however before 5.30. Then a lunch was served by Whittemore & Girard. There was no scarcity of anything and everybody had all they wished. For a time, however, they kept the House Committee busy. The committee stood between the table and the rope stretched the length of the hall, and handed out plates of ices, etc.

The arrangement for serving lunch this year was admirable. It worked well and saved much of the confusion of former years.

While this was in progress Handley's orchestra gave an excellent concert, the program being as follows:

Concert Overture, Selected
Intermezzo Petite, "In Roseland," Eugene
Waltzes, "Madcap Princess," Englander
Popular Airs,
"I Can't Do the Sum"
"Under the Shade of the Old Apple Tree"
"How'd You Like to Spoon with Me?"
Serenade, "Moonlight," Moret
Selection, "Earl and the Girl," Caryll
Excerpts from "It Happened in Nordland"
(a) "Knot of Blue"
(b) "Absinthe Frappe," Herbert
Radium Dance from "Piff Paff Pouff," Schwartz
Waltz, "Armouresse," Berger
March, "International," Roberts

In the evening Chinese lanterns were hung about the piazzas and there was dancing until 10.30.

Nothing occurred during the day or evening to mar the pleasure of the occasion. Everything went off like clock work. Commodore Crane, the House Committee and every member of the club worked hard to make everybody have a good time and it was the unanimous opinion that the affair was one of the most successful of the many social events of the club.

The yachts to participate in the review and sail, with their guests, were as follows:

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Do not overtax your strength, eat lightly, leave liquor alone, move easily through those things which have to be accomplished, keep cheerful, and don't worry. All this in view of the depressing fact that no abatement of the extreme heat is yet promised us.—Springfield Republican.

☞ Senator Depew has at last been startled out of his poise and decides to shorten his vacation, come back and find out what all this fuss is about. It is high time, for his stock is rapidly depreciating, and something ought to be done. The country has heard only one side of the case, and judgment may have been too hastily taken, but it looks as though the junior Senator from New York had a hard task before him to re-establish his damaged reputation.—Lynn Item.

☞ It is certainly a far more beautiful ceremony to let loose a flock of doves at the launching and naming of a battleship than to smash the bulky bottom of the customary bottle of wine on its bows. The way the Japanese have of bespeaking good fortune for their navy and their faith in the omen has been fully justified. Considered in the light of that fact the ceremony bears a significance not attaching to the usual forms of warship christening. It may easily be seen that it is a preparation for having peace, though it must be fought for, while a deeper look into its meaning reveals that a humane nation prays first of all for peace, but neglects not the material means for preserving it.—Boston Transcript.

☞ The American "lady" is one who has agreed, before a church altar or in a registry office, to live together with the man of her momentary choice, as long as it suits her or the man, in a suite of rooms or a house for the purpose of enjoying and hunting material pleasures. It is a ladywho has abolished the home as a relic of a barbarous age, and turned it into sitting, talking and sleeping rooms, with comfortable or luxurious conveniences; who has made over the kitchen, and housekeeping to hired cooks and maid-servants or housekeepers to escape the bother of the wordly worries; in many cases abolished it along with the home, preferring to eat ready-cooked foods in hotels and restaurants. It is a lady who tries to expiate the sin of her share in "race suicide" by caring more for a baby dog fed to square proportions or a cat indulged out of all proportions than for a human being. It is a lady who knows no more of bringing up children than she knows of keeping a house or cooking, both of which she hates.—Baba Bharati of India.

REMAINS A JUDGE

Resolution For Hooker's Removal Defeated In Assembly

76 IN FAVOR, 67 AGAINST

Constitution Required 100 Votes to Pass the Resolution--Outline of Queer Doings Revealed During the Investigation

Albany, July 21.—The assembly, by a vote of 76 to 67, saved Justice Warren B. Hooker from removal from the supreme court bench on the charges concerning his connection with appointments in the Fredonia postoffice and with the "Wirtner judgment" affecting property of the city of Dunkirk, adjoining the Dunkirk postoffice building, owned jointly by him and State Tax Commissioner Stearns. Forty-one Republicans and 35 Democrats voted for removal; 58 Republicans and 9 Democrats voted against removal. Under the constitution, it would have required 100 votes to pass the resolution.

The worst feature of the case of Hooker is the character of the defense. When the charges against Hooker first attracted the attention of the public, many months ago, the friends of the judge confidently declared that a mountain was being made out of a "spoils" molehill, and that an investigation would disclose their triviality. A committee of the State Bar association subsequently conducted an inquiry and submitted a report declaring, in effect, that the "graft" charges were as grave as they were well founded.

But a meeting of the association—a "packed" one, according to the independent press—while sustaining the committee's findings, resolved that in view of the fact that the reprehensible transactions had no relation to the administration of justice in Hooker's court, and reflected upon his personal rather than upon his judicial honor, the interests of the public required no further action in the premises.

This illogical conclusion satisfied no one, not even Hooker's friends, and a legislative investigation was demanded and obtained. Before the committee appointed to make this investigation the charges were practically admitted, and the only point that was made in the judge's defense was that since he was a congressman before he became judge and since members of congress are entitled to perquisites in the shape of appointments and favors the judge thought that his claims as congressman survived the change in his status and that he had the right to insist on his perquisites up to the moment of his actual assumption of the judicial role, and to benefit by them even after that time.

Justice Hooker was charged with having conspired to stuff the payrolls of postoffices, with having helped defraud the federal treasury by getting the now notorious Beavers, former postal official, to pay a higher rental for certain premises than they were worth and with having obtained a corrupt judgment against Dunkirk. The removal of Hooker was recommended by the legislative committee in very strong language.

One important charge against Hooker, substantiated before the legislative committee, was not even touched on by the State Bar association—an attempt to deprive the city of Dunkirk of the use of its own land. Without going into all the details, it is enough to say that Hooker and Lester F. Stearns, one of the state tax commissioners, were joint proprietors of a building which adjoined property of the municipality of Dunkirk. For the sake of giving this structure more light and making it more valuable, Hooker used his influence with a fellow justice of the supreme court, White of Buffalo, to secure an injunction forbidding Dunkirk from building on its tract. Justice White signed the order without giving it much attention, but when he learned of the irregularity of the proceeding, he himself had the order vacated.

The building just mentioned is the one in regard to the rental of which Beavers was so accommodating.

Miss Katherine K. Clark of Fredonia, appointed to the Fort Plain office in order to evade the civil service laws, never rendered any service at Fort Plain, but she was in due time transferred to Fredonia. Some of Hooker's letters to Beavers in behalf of Miss Clark were written on notepaper of the supreme court. Ora Caldwell, Thomas O'Neil and Minerva Jeffrey were put on the Fredonia payroll, but none of them did any work there. Then Hooker got his nephew, Maurice, a student at the Fredonia normal school, enrolled as a laborer in the postoffice at $400 a year. Maurice received in all $600 and rendered no services.

Frank P. Ball, a ticket scalper in Dunkirk, was partner with Mrs. Hooker in a disastrous mining enterprise; and in 1898 he owed her $3085, for which he gave a note. At the request of Hooker, Beavers made Ball a laborer in the Fredonia office. In something more than four years Ball drew $2532, nearly every cent of which was applied in liquidating the note to Mrs. Hooker. Ball rendered no services and, in fact, lived most of the time in Dunkirk. The local postmasters, who were merely tools of Hooker, have been forced to refund the wages of Maurice Hooker and Ball, but Hooker himself has firmly refused to aid in the restitution.

INDICTED FOR MURDER

Grand Jury Holds Schidlofski For Killing His Wife

Cambridge, Mass., July 21.—The Middlesex grand jury sitting in special session on the Schidlofski murder case, reported murder in the first degree against John Schidlofski, the murdered woman's husband, who is now being held by the authorities at La Junta, Col.

The witnesses examined were Nicholas Channen of Boston, who sold the clothes to Schidlofski and received blood-stained bills in payment; Peter Igo of Belmont, who discovered the body of the murdered woman; Medical Examiner Swan, who performed the autopsy; Isabelle Schidlofski, who was bridesmaid at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Schidlofski; Mrs. Goodwin of Belmont, who is understood to have seen people resembling the murdered woman and her husband in the lane near the scene of the tragedy; Joseph Woysan of Campello, who knew of the Schidlofski trunks being shipped; Peter Jackovanis of Brockton, the expressman who moved the trunks; Agent Loftus of the West Shore railroad, who redeemed the second ticket which Schidlofski had purchased; C. J. Bresnan of Belmont, who had employed Schidlofski for two years; State Officer McCauley of Boston, and Mr. and Mrs. Kazimar Girdvin of Boston, at whose house Schidlofski and his wife were married.

Building Partially Collapsed

Fall River, Mass., July 21.—The occupants of a two-story brick building on Third street were driven into the street last night by the partial collapse of the structure. The walls buckled and the floors gave way to some extent. The collapse came without the slightest warning, and the terrified occupants rushed into the street, expecting that the entire structure was about to give way. The city building inspector will make an examination of the building to ascertain the cause of the collapse.

Bay State Arcanians' Request

Boston, July 21.—Members of the Massachusetts grand council of the Royal Arcanum sat through heated discussions in Chipman hall in the effort to advance one step further toward a reconsideration of the increased rates of insurance, which have been raising a disturbance in the order ever since their adoption by the supreme council two months ago. Resolutions were adopted requesting the supreme council to reconsider the rates recently adopted.

Mother Tongue Declining

Boston, July 21.—At an important meeting of the Boston Turnverin it was voted to discontinue the instruction of German and gymnastics and to dismiss the instructors. This action was taken because the offspring of German parents are not inclined to continue the mother tongue, the American spirit largely dominating the club life. For 56 years the Turnverin has had instructors in German, gymnastics and music.

New York Insurance Concerns to Be Investigated

ORDERED BY GOVERNOR

Bank Examiner Finds No Trace of Loan of $685,000 Made by Mercantile Trust to the Equitable Society

New York, July 21.—With the state legislative committee preparing to investigate the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance society and State Bank Examiner Judson trying to find the security held by the Mercantile Trust company (a creation of Equitable interests) for a supposed loan of $685,000 to Messrs. Alexander and Jordan, recently president and comptroller of the Equitable, interest is again centred on the great corporation.

Jordan, whose salary was $35,000, is a wreck since his dismissal Wednesday, and Assistant United States Attorney General Day succeeds him. Day is the man who led the prosecution of the Northern Securities case. He combines the rare qualifications of expert accountant and able lawyer.

Negotiations are under way already for the restitution of sums paid to certain persons who have become scared by the investigation, just as restitution has been made by most of the Equitable directors who participated in the syndicates of James H. Hyde and associates. But apart from these minor restitutions speculation centres on the $685,000 loan.

Bank Examiner Judson's formal statement reads: "I have now examined all of the assets of the Mercantile Trust company, and not only find no trace of a mortgage for a loan of $685,000 to the Equitable Life Assurance society, or to James W. Alexander, or Thomas D. Jordan, as trustees, but I find no record of any such loan to any person connected with the Equitable."

Mr. Judson in a further conversation explained that though he was absolutely certain the loan did not at the present moment appear on the books of the Mercantile Trust company, there was nothing in his examination to show whether or not it existed a few weeks ago, and had since been taken up.

President Deming of the trust company declined to make any statement when informed of the announcement made by Judson. "I have really nothing to say," was his answer to all inquiries.

According to Thomas F. Ryan and Paul Morton, the message of Governor Higgins, ordering an investigation of all insurance companies in the state, pleases them. The governor's message thus referred to the Equitable:

"The unfortunate scandals recently made public by the internal dissensions in the Equitable Life Assurance society and by the comprehensive investigation of its affairs by the superintendent of insurance, have, not without just cause, aroused a feeling of intense alarm in the breasts of the thousands of our citizens who have invested their money in policies of life insurance, and of thousands of non-residents who have been taught to respect the New York companies as safe and secure."

The World says: State Banking Superintendent Kilburn said to The World correspondent in Albany last night: "The loan of $685,000 was made by the Mercantile to President Alexander and Comptroller Jordan of the Equitable."

"Was there any security?"

"No; it was a note made by them as trustees. I ordered it paid, and it was taken up on July 14 by them or on their accounts. I believed that it was mixed up with the affairs of the Equitable and should not be carried."

Diplomats Have Falling Out

Berne, July 21.—Diplomatic circles here are interested in an incident concerning the American minister, Brutus J. Clay, and the French ambassador, M. Raindre, in which the former alleges a breach of the usual etiquette in the exchange of official visits. The question has been submitted to the state department and the French foreign office, which are mutually seeking to adjust the incident.

British Captain a Smuggler

Baltimore, July 21.—Captain Moar of the British steamer Oakmore was fined $2100 by Collector of the Port Stone, in addition to having 801 pounds of tobacco seized, on the charge of attempting to smuggle the goods into Baltimore. The tobacco was found in the bunkers covered with coal.

Involved In Devlin Failure

Kansas City, July 21.—The City National bank has failed to open its doors. The bank held paper of C. J. Devlin to the amount of upwards of $500,000, and the failure is the direct result of the closing of the First National bank of Topeka, of which Devlin was the principal stockholder.

Stumbled Into a Brook

Granby, Mass., July 21.—Patrick Scanlon, 80 years old, was drowned in a brook near the Amherst road. It is believed that he stumbled into the brook and, being quite feeble, was unable to regain his feet and drowned.

Lochinvar Takes Cranston Stakes

Providence, July 21.—The Cranston selling stakes, value $1000, was won by Lochinvar, a 6 to 1 choice, in a strong finish by a length and a half.

CHINA HEARD FROM

Must Be Consulted In Regard to Manchuria's Fate

OFFICIAL NOTICE GIVEN

Insistence That Chief Zone of War Operations Be Restored to Her--She Has Sympathy of Washington Government--Peking Likely to Have a Hand In the Peace Conference

Washington, July 21.—China's official notification to the powers that she will not recognize any arrangement regarding Manchuria concerning which she has not been consulted beforehand has reached Washington and will be forthwith forwarded to the president at Oyster Bay. Before addressing this note to the neutral powers China sent to St. Petersburg and Tokio an identical note containing this notification.

The Chinese communication is briefly worded and is so expressed that it calls for no reply. It disposes of the unofficial report reaching Washington recently from Europe, which found credence in official circles, that China had requested that she be allowed to participate in the conference.

China has not yet taken this step for several reasons. The Chinese government is anxious that, so far as possible, the belligerents be allowed to negotiate directly with each other, and is averse to being forced into the negotiations. China's motive in addressing to Russia and Japan such a notification was to remind them that she had never acquiesced in the alienation of the province of Manchuria from Chinese sovereignty, and that she expected as the first result of the war the full restoration to Chinese control of that province. That this position might receive the continued support of the neutral powers, copies of the note were forwarded to the other capitals for presentation by the respective Chinese representatives.

Advices reaching Washington indicate that the insistance upon the unconditional restoration of Manchuria without condition finds favor in the Chinese capital and this, it is realized, opens up an important subject in connection with the Washington conference. Having been the chief zone of operations, Manchuria will naturally figure prominently in the conference.

China's insistance that she be consulted about any arrangement concerning Manchuria will, if respected by the belligerents, it is believed, necessitate an indirect participation in the negotiations by China. It is learned that the Chinese government is inclined to trust Japan to execute her many pledges regarding Manchuria. On the other hand, Russia, it is said, will come to the conference ready to forfeit her sphere of influence in Manchuria only on condition that China give to Japan no privileges there not accorded to all the powers. Therein lies China's best assurance that little headway can be made regarding Manchuria without communication with Pekin.

There are, however, elements at Pekin which are uneasy regarding the result of the Washington conference and the Pekin government has reiterated that its apparent inactivity at the present moment is only tentative. Indications that Russia and Japan were coming to an agreement about Manchuria which did not provide for an effective and real Chinese administration of the province would immediately arouse the Pekin government to action. Such an action will probably take the form of a direct appeal to the Washington government for assistance in defending the Hay doctrine of "the preservation of the territorial and administrative entity of China," to which all powers, under the leadership of the late secretary of state, were recommitted since the present war began.

China's insistance that Manchuria be returned to her sovereignty has the full sympathy of the Washington government. In the preliminary negotiations here it was more than once made plain to the belligerents that whatever the result of their negotiations it was expected that China would be left intact.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Child's Bloomers by Martha Dean—No. 4420

We are accustomed to seeing little boys wearing bloomers, and perhaps a few of us have seen little girls wearing them, but this season the little man must not only condescend to wear the same style garment as his little sister but his bigger sister as well, for girls up to ten years of age have adopted this most practical garment. They take the place of petticoats, and scarcely a wash dress is seen in the shops that has not the bloomers with it. They are made of the same material as the dress, and besides being most comfortable to wear they are such a saving in the family laundry bill. In the model shown here the bloomers are in one piece. They are of circular shaping, with no fullness around the waist. This is a feature worth considering, for at this age children usually possess their share of "pudginess," and then, too, with warm weather coming on any extra material should be avoided. Many mothers make these little bloomers of striped or checked gingham, but material of the same color, if not the same quality, should be chosen for girls. Sizes, 3 to 10 years.

DIRECTIONS FOR ORDERING

COMPLETE SURRENDER

Chicago's Striking Teamsters at Last Submit to Defeat

Chicago, July 21.—The teamsters' strike, that has so greatly disturbed business conditions in Chicago for the last 105 days, was at 12:30 o'clock this morning officially declared off by the members of the teamsters' joint council.

The men have been ordered to seek their old positions, and it is estimated that less than one-half of them will be re-employed. The strikers have made a complete surrender, and will apply for work as individuals and without an agreement of any kind with their employers.

The action of the teamsters' joint council was taken at the end of the day whose events clearly foreshadowed the collapse of the strike. Three of the unions had already voted to return to work if possible and it is certain that the unions which had not yet voted on the question of ending the strike would take similar action. The council, believing that further effort was useless, decided to call off the strike at once.

Ballots Mostly Fraudulent

Philadelphia, July 21.—Thomas H. Hartman, a city employe and Republican leader, was held in $2000 bail; Otto T. Kurz, judge of elections; Charles Jude, inspector, and Benjamin Williams, election clerk, were each held in $1500, and E. M. Gunkel, also a clerk, was held in $500 bail on the charge of ballot box stuffing and conspiracy. Evidence was produced showing that out of a total of 374 votes in one division 201 were fraudulent.

Park Cleared of Suspicion

New York, July 21.—Dr. Edward Park, arrested in Norway as he disembarked from a steamer from America and there charged with the theft of about $25,000 worth of jewels which recently disappeared from the residence of J. J. Higginson of New York, has been cleared of all suspicion in connection with the theft. The warrant drawn for his arrest and the application for extradition papers have been both withdrawn.

Scollans Case In Jury's Hands

Boston, July 21.—The case of Thomas J. Scollans, who has been on trial here, charged with being accessory to an act of bribing a juror when Scollans was on trial in connection with the municipal teaming frauds, went to the jury this morning. Scollans admitted having had business relations with the alleged go-betweens, but contended that he paid them to look up the qualifications of the jurors and not to influence their verdict.

Hot Wave Has Passed

Boston, July 21.—The people of New England are able to pursue their daily tasks with some degree of comfort as far as the weather is concerned. After three days of excessive heat a cool northwester kept the mercury yesterday down to 86, and with the air comparatively dry, the day was well nigh perfect. A continuation of the present conditions is looked for by the weather bureau for some days to come.

Defeat For Balfour Ministry

London, July 21.—The government was defeated in the house of commons last night by a majority of three on the motion to reduce the membership of the Irish land commission. A scene of the greatest excitement was produced by the Liberals and the Irish members yelling "resign." Russian Prince Disowns Country

New York, July 21.—A young Russian, claiming the title of Prince Potemkine, arrived in this city on La Bretagne. He made the trip in the steerage, although when his property was examined it was found he had nearly $25,000 in cash. The young man said he had sold his estates in Russia, had divided the equivalent of $10,000 among his tenants, and had left Russia for all-time. He declaimed against existing conditions in Russia and said he did not desire to live longer in that country.

Russian Crops Ruined

St. Petersburg, July 21.—The crop conditions in several of the governments of Russia have become worse, owing to dry, hot winds, which burn up the crops almost in a day. In the Bogoroditsk district the wheat, rice and other grains have been practically destroyed by a sirocco. Last year's surplus of grain and fodder has been consumed, the cattle are without fodder and the poorer peasants will soon be facing a famine.

TONS OF DYNAMITE

To Be Used on Blast Tomorrow in Portsmouth Harbor.

Forty tons of dynamite will be used tomorrow in the removal of Henderson point in Portsmouth harbor. It is expected to dislodge some 70,000 tons of rock, and change the Narrows from a place of danger to vessels to a wide, safe channel.

This will be the greatest blast ever known in the history of the world, the amount of explosives used being just twice what was used at Hell Gate, New York, in 1885.

So stupendous is the extent of this explosion that it is hardly possible to picture it in the mind's eye. It is believed that the sound of the concussion will carry a great distance. As nothing like it has ever been tried before, it is impossible to say just what will be its effect.

The last of the dynamite was placed in position Wednesday afternoon. The explosive is connected by wires with Waterhouse Hill, 4000 feet away, where is the switch which will start the blast.

It will take many months to remove the debris of the explosion, and it is not expected that the channel will be clear before Jan. 1. When all is cleared, the Piscataqua river will be 400 ft. wider at this point, and will be 35 ft. deep at low tide.

Rear Admiral W. W. Mead has sent out a letter of warning to the people concerning the explosion, which he states will be fired at 4 o'clock. The letter states that it will be well for people to leave their windows and doors open at the time of the blast, that is, those living at Newcastle and about the South End, the part of the city nearest the blast. He suggests that people would do well to remove the bric-a-brac from the walls and to take down china and other breakable stnff, for fear that the shock may jar it off the mantles and shelves.

TRIAL OF ENGINES.

Steam Up This Week on the Battleship Rhode Island.

One of the boilers in the battleship Rhode Island, now at the dock of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, was "fired" this week and on Thursday there was a preliminary trial of the port engines.

The engines were started up at a rate of 30 revolutions to the minute at first, and were kept going at that rate for a long time to get the stiffness out of the joints. Toward the end of the test the engines were run up to nearly 100 revolutions a minute, but not for long, as the one boiler was not sufficient to supply the necessary steam. The engineers in charge were very much pleased at the way the engines worked throughout.

The trying out of the engines will be done gradually until everything is ready for the final dock trial, which will probably be next week. The propellers will then be attached and all the engines set to work. The forward turret for the 12-inch guns was placed on the Rhode Island today. It is of the superimposed pattern, is of harveyized Krupp armor, 11 inches in thickness, and weight 70 tons. Its revolving weight will be 220 tons. The broadside batteries of 8-inch guns are already in position on the Rhode Island.

TODAY ALL RIGHT.

Lower Temperature, Pleasant and Comfortable.

It should be recorded—
That today is comfortable.
That it is almost an ideal day.
That the wind is east.
That the maximum temperature was about 80.
That Gen. Humidity has taken a day off.
That he should have a long vacation.
That others will have to take a vacation if he returns.
That another hot spell is not wanted.
That such continuous hot weather is seldom experienced in New England.
That no part of the country seemed to escape.
That the thermometer has been higher in Quincy.
That exceptions are rare.
That 94 was the highest noon temperature in 1904.
That the only days when the mercury climbed to 90 last year were: June 16 and 18, July 19, 20 and 21, and Aug. 1.
That thus far in July there have been seven days with temperature above 90 at noon.
That on January 14 last, the noon temperature was 14 above zero.

Wednesday night about ten o'clock the Atlantic people were aroused by the violent and constant ringing of the bell on Memorial church. An officer was on hand at once, but no reason for the tolling could he find. The mischief makers had earlier in the evening attached a string to the tongue of the bell and were safely hidden in a neighboring field when the ringing was going on. No one is in doubt as to the identity of the boys.

REVIEW AND SAIL

And Other Attractions for Wollaston Yacht Club Ladies' Day.

Fair weather and a little wind is all that the Wollaston Yacht club desire to make their annual ladies' day event on Saturday a success. There is a large fleet of boats belonging to the club which will be at the disposal of the ladies.

The program for the day includes a review and sail, orchestra concert at the club house, and dancing in the evening. The review and sail will take place at 3 o'clock. After passing in review of the flagship the fleet will sail about the bay for two hours.

Lunch will be served at the clubhouse on the return. As night approaches, the clubhouse will be illuminated with Chinese lanterns and there will be dancing from 8 to 11 o'clock.

The arrangements for the day are in charge of a committee which includes besides Commodore Wiley and Secretary Dill, Joseph A. Fenno, Vice-Commodore William M. Chase, E. G. Roberts, Albert T. Barstow, R. H. Fraser, J. J. Henry and George Winslow.

QUINCY---EVERETT.

Our Rival City Also Cramped at Her High School.

Bids were opened in the city of Everett on Thursday by Mayor Newton for an enlargement of the High school building, as follows:

D. B. Fessenden & Co., Everett, $65,022.

Morris H. Manley, Boston, $67,425.

F. C. Alexander, Somerville $64,700.

Arthur W. Berry, Somerville, $74,378.

C. M. Davis & Sons, Boston, $69,447.

P. H. Jackson & Son, Brockton, $62,031.

Marr Brothers, Boston, $72,308.

J. E. Locatelli & Co. Boston, $62,812.

In addition to the above, there were bids for heating and ventilating ranging between $12,357 and $14,115; also for plumbing ranging between $3,922 and $4,95744.

Figures were given last week comparing Quincy and Woburn. The latest returns available for Quincy and Everett are:

	Everett.	Quincy.
Population, 1900,	24,336	23,899
Population, 1880,	4,159	10,570
Valuation, 1903,	$18,793,893	$20,956,671
Valuation, 1884,	$4,782,803	$7,997,580
School children, 1902,	5,533	5,500
Average attendance,	4,819	4,584
No. of public schools,	128	123
No. of teachers,	149	134
High school pupils,	330	551
High school teachers,	13	16
Pupils to teacher (High)	26	35

It will be seen that Everett has more school children but not so much valuation as Quincy. This city has many more pupils in its High school but practically the same number of teachers.

UNIQUE LITTLE HOUSE.

Modern, Cozy and Convenient, With All Improvements—Cost, $1,500.

[Copyright, 1905, by Stanley A. Dennis, 234 Broadway, New York.]

The plans and elevation here shown represent a model little home of six rooms possessing many good features for any one desiring a low priced home with modern improvements. It can be erected on a narrow lot, or it will show to equal advantage on a larger lot or plot.

The frame of the house is of hemlock lumber and timber, balloon style, sheathed with matched boards and covered with two ply paper and cedar random width shingles on the first story and cement on the second. Other exterior woodwork is of cypress and pine lumber and moldings. The main roof is lathed with narrow spruce strips and covered with clear butt cedar shingles. The hips are doubled, and both valleys and hips are counter flashed, which makes a perfect job.

The windows are of double thick American sheet glass set in putty. The entire building except the cellar has outside blinds. The floors are laid with narrow North Carolina pine tongued and grooved flooring boards. The interior walls are lathed with the best spruce laths, and the plaster is scratched, browned and properly smoothed off for tinting.

The trim is cypress on the first floor and whitewood on the second floor. The stairs are cypress, with yellow pine treads. Rails, balusters, newels, etc., are oak. All rooms contain picture moldings. The interior woodwork is finished in the natural wood, with dark liquid fillers on soft woods and paste fillers on hard woods, well sandpapered, rubbed down smooth and finished with two good coats of light brilliant flowing varnish.

The parlor and dining room contain cherry mantels with bevel plate mirrors and solid slabbed tile openings. The interior walls are tinted with water colors of such shades as are desired.

The kitchen and bathroom have complete modern open plumbing and fixtures. The hardware is of colonial dark bronze, with light apple wood knobs, roses and escutcheons. The entire house is piped for gas and wired for electric lights.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

The exterior is painted with two good coats of white lead and linseed oil paints. The main body is pea green, with trimmings of zinc white. The blinds are dark red, and the main roof is stained moss green.

There is a brick cellar under the entire house, with cemented floor, coal bins, hot air furnace and storeroom.

This plan has been used a great many times by home builders in various sections. The cost should not exceed $1,500 where labor and materials are not abnormally high in price.

New Process of Wood Staining.

A late innovation among Swedish woodworkers is the staining of wood before seasoning, the idea being that of an Austrian inventor. The sap is driven out by pressure, and the coloring liquid, which may be one of the more permanent aniline dyes, is introduced. Birch, beech, alder, plane, elm and lime may be so treated, the color not being taken uniformly by oak, fir and pine. The stained wood is not only adapted for furniture, but is recommended for doors and window frames and even for outside finish.

SLEEP FOR SALE.

Registered Trade Mark.
Copyrighted by Ostermoor & Co. N.Y.

If you wish to travel all the way to old age without missing connections at any stage of the journey you must command sleep. Sleep is the medicine of nature and if you can command sleep you can snap your fingers at work. It is a surprising thing how few people own a really good mattress, yet they spend money in a reckless manner for other things and sleep on a mattress that is hard and uncomfortable and that plays the old jinks with sleep, keeping them rolling and tossing all night and in an unhappy state of mind all day.

By all means own a good mattress, with one third of your life spent in bed, a good mattress will make life worth twice the living.

Make your selection at once. Any one of these mattresses will make you wonder why you waited so long.

The Social Realm.

What glad release from care and crowded street,
To bar thy city door and fare away
Among the hills! And when the opal ray
Of evening falls, to seek some fair retreat
By spring-fed stream, where field and forest meet;
To stretch amid the scent of pine thy bed;
And, yellow orbed Arcturus overhead,
To sink at last in slumber, deep and sweet.
Then at approaching dawn's uncertain beams
To linger in the borderland of dreams,
Till every elf that pipes and plays along
The tender aspen boughs, is changed again
To golden oriole or russet wren
And morn bursts forth in blithe full-throated song!

—Leon J. Richardson.

ON BENNINGTON.

One from Quincy in List of Dead.

Josephus Newcomb of Federal Street.

No News from John Karlberg, an Apprentice.

A disaster like that to the ill-fated U. S. Gunboat Bennington in San Diego bay, reported at length on page 2 is far reaching, as all parts of the country were represented in the officers and men. There were at least a dozen from New England, and two of these were from Quincy.

In the list of the dead is Josephus Newcomb of this city. The other, who is not mentioned in the dispatches, is Joan Karlberg whose father lives at 17 Cranch street.

Newcomb was the coxswain. During the battle of Santiago he was a member of Admiral Sampson's flagship, the New York. He was of English birth, and an orphan. His next of kin was Mrs. Eliza E. Barnicoat of 66 Federal street, Quincy, who has been his affectionate guardian since he was 7 years old, when his father, Ambrose Newcomb, was drowned off the Irish coast.

He was born in Cornwall, Eng., May 24, 1879, and when 10 years of age, accompanied his aunt to this country. He attended the Adams school in Quincy, and when 14 years old enlisted as an apprentice in the United States navy. He was first assigned to the Essex, and afterward served on the Hartford, the Lancaster, the New York and the Bennington.

Mrs. Barnicoat was greatly affected by the news of her nephew's death. "The last letter I got from him," she said to a reporter last night, "was about a month ago. He wrote very cheerfully, said he was well, and sent me a proof of a photograph taken in his uniform." The young man is spoken of highly by those who knew him, and his affection for his aunt, who had been a mother to him since his chidhood, was manifested by many little remembrances sent by him from distant lands.

Newcomb's term of service would have expired in August, when he would have completed his fourth term of enlistment, 12 years in all.

Joan Karlberg, who was an apprentice seaman, is a son of Carl Karlberg of Quincy. He is a native of Dargberg, Sweden, where he was born Dec. 24, 1886. He came to Quincy in 1893 with his mother, his father having proceded them. He attended the schools of Quincy, graduating from the John Hancock school in 1901. He enlisted in the navy in May, 1904, and was attached to the training ship Buffalo. Recently he was transferred to the Bennington.

Littlefield—Wild.

Cards have been received in Quincy announcing the marriage of Miss Louise Caroline Wild, daughter of the late J. Q. A. Wild of this city and Mr. Frank Oscar Littlefield of Boston.

The wedding was solemnized at eight o'clock, Wednesday, July 19th at the home of Mrs. J. Parker Buntin of Dorchester, an intimate friend of the bride, by Rev. Charles H. Beale of the First Congregational church of Dorchester. They were unattended.

The bride was lovely in a gown of white lace.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served by Hendrie, covers being laid for fifteen which included the immediate families of the bride and groom. Over the table hung a large white floral wedding bell tied with pink ribbon and at each plate were small white bells as souvenirs of the occasion. The house decorations were beautiful, the favorite color of the bride, pink, predominating in masses of pink and white roses, pink and white sweet peas and pink and white pinks.

Mr. and Mrs. Littlefield are to spend a month at St. Johns, New Brunswick, and a few weeks with his people at Dover, N. H., returning to Boston in the fall where they will receive their friends after September first at 279 Dartmouth street.

—Miss Florence Turner went strawberrying the other day on the cultivated beds on her father's farm in North Reading. On a single row, 100 yards in length, she picked 100 quarts of berries. During the rest of the day she gathered 68 quarts, giving her a total of five and one-quarter bushels for the 10 hours' labor.

ANOTHER CUP.

Seawanhaka to Keep the Quincy Trophy Company.

Two or three years ago the Manchester Yacht Club captured the Quincy Challenge Cup, and now it looks as if it was also to have the Seawanhaka cup.

THE QUINCY CUP.

At Quebec yesterday the Manchester boat won the second leg from the Alexandra, the defender, in the second race, by 2 minutes, 52 seconds. The elapsed time was:

	H.	M.	S.
Manchester,	1	33	56
Alexandra,	1	36	48

There was a stiff 15-knot breeze.

Today the race is over a straightway course, 12 miles, six legs of two miles each.

Home Tomorrow.

The Herald prints a dispatch today from Ignoae, Ontario, announcing the safe arrival at that place yesterday afternoon of the New England teachers.

A thunder shower early in the day dispelled the torrid wave. The teachers are not burning the bridges behind them, but have just heard of the burning of a bridge over White river about 300 miles ahead which may delay them, and possibly necessitate a change of cars, the "Arden" having been with them since leaving Boston,

White river is 743 miles west of Montreal where the party was due at 5.40 this morning. The excursionists are due in Boston at the North station at 8.15 P. M. on Sunday. Several Quincy friends will be on hand to welcome Miss Underwood.

THIRTY-NINE DEAD SEAMEN

Result of Catastrophe on the Gunboat Bennington

SCENE OF HORROR AND SUFFERING

Eighty Men In Hospital, Many of Whom May Die--Warship Is Much Shattered by Explosion In San Diego Harbor--Boiler Which Was Regarded as "Partially Unsafe" the Primary Cause of Disaster--Interior of Vessel Resembled a Charnel House, Many Bodies Being Mangled Beyond Recognition --Ship Beached to Prevent Her From Sinking and May Prove a Total Loss

San Diego, Cal., July 22—One officer and 33 members of the crew of the United States gunboat Bennington were killed and about 80 sailors were injured, some fatally, by a boiler explosion that disabled the warship in San Diego harbor. Fifteen sailors are missing. There were more than 250 men aboard when the accident occurred, and many were hurled or forced to jump into the sea by the terrific explosion, which lifted part of the deck and compelled the beaching of the ship.

The Bennington at the time of the accident was lying in the stream just off the Commercial wharf. The ship had received orders from the navy department at Washington to sail for Port Hartford to meet the monitor Wyoming and convey her to Mare Island navy yard, San Francisco.

Steam was up and everything was in readiness for the departure of the Bennington when the starboard forward boiler exploded with a deafening roar. The explosion was terrific. People standing on shore saw a huge cloud of steam rise above the Bennington. Columns of water were forced high into the air.

On board the Bennington were presented terrible scenes. The force of the explosion had torn a great hole in the starboard side of the ship and the vessel was already commencing to list. A section of the upper deck was carried away from stem to stern. Blood and wreckage were strewn over the entire ship, the after cabin and that part of the ship adjacent to the exploded boiler resembling a charnel house.

An awful sight awaited those who hastened to the ill-fated ship, from which steam continued to pour in great clouds. Everywhere was blood and in all directions were bodies. The after cabin was smeared with blood and the walls, ceilings and floor splotched with red. In the depths below, from which heat and steam rolled in volumes too great to face, came the groans and wails of the dying and shrieks of the wounded. Tugs and launches soon were headed for the shore, bearing those whose injuries permitted removal and the bodies of the dead.

Almost every man on board at the time was injured, many of them so badly that death is inevitable, many so painfully that screams of agony are forced from their lips, and others so severely that they will be confined to sick rooms for days or weeks The force of the explosion was terrific beyond conception. Human bodies were hurled into the air to a height probably not less than 200 feet.

Great damage was done in all parts of the vessel. The boiler which exploded, it is said, was regarded as partially unsafe. Commander Young stated that during a recent return from Honolulu the steam pressure was kept reduced in that particular one. At the time of the accident Commander Young and Surgeon Peck were on shore. The two officers, as soon as they learned of the disaster, hurried to the waterfront. Commander Young as soon as he reached the ship gave orders that the air-tight compartments be closed to prevent the listing ship from sinking and that the magazines be flooded to avert further explosions. He then beached the ship at high tide.

The ferryboat Ramona, which was crossing the bay at the time of the accident, changed its course and hurried to the aid of the stricken warship. The government launch General De Russey and a large number of other launches and water craft which were near the scene at the time also rushed to the assistance of the Bennington.

By the time the Ramona reached the Bennington many of the sailors who had jumped into the bay to escape the scalding steam had been rescued by small craft. The removal of the wounded from the ship was conducted in perfect order. The crews of the De Russey and the boats aided in picking up the wounded sailors and transferring them to shore.

The news of the explosion spread over the city like wildfire. At first reports were that half the crew had been killed. The hurrying ambulances and carriages of every description which had been summoned added to the excitement. Every physician who could be reached by telephone was at the waterfront. Within a short time a score of physicians were attending the wounded.

The bodies of many of the men taken from the wrecked interior of the ship were mutilated almost beyond recognition. The faces of many were covered with blood and ashes. Some bodies may never be identified.

Temporary quarters ashore were arranged for the wounded and 60 citizens volunteered and hurried in launches to the relief of those on the ship. Some of the volunteers were unable to stand the sickening sight which met their gaze on the Bennington. As fast as the wounded could be removed they were hurried in ambulances, carriages, wagons and automobiles to hospitals. For a long time the hot steam prevented access to the space between decks, where most of the dead bodies lay, and it was not until late in the afternoon that the last were removed from the boiler rooms. Several bodies were so tightly wedged in by a bulkhead that the woodwork had to be hewed away to free them.

When the explosion ocurred, the chief engineer was inspecting the boilers. He was not seriously injured Officers and men who were able to assist in the rescue acted in a brave and collected manner. Pumps were manned to keep the water from the upper compartments, the magazine was flooded and men fought their way through the steam into the darkened hold. Many slightly injured sailors remained in the ship and assisted in rescuing the more severely injured.

The ship's inner works are a tangled mass of machinery and the vessel probably will have to be dismantled to repair the injuries, if, indeed, the warship is not a total loss.

WASHINGTON APPALLED

The Worst Disaster In Our Navy Since Maine Was Blown Up

Washington, July 22.—Officials of the navy department and naval officers on duty in Washington were appalled when the news came from San Diego telling of the disaster to the gunboat Bennington. Their first information was received from press dispatches. Later a telegram came from Commander Young, captain of the Bennington, announcing the explosion and stating that nearly everybody was killed or wounded.

The Bennington is a sister ship of the Yorktown and Concord, having the same dimensions, tonnage, speed and armament. The Bennington takes rank among the efficient little cruisers designed for special duty in shallow water. She cost $490,000. Her complement is 16 officers and 181 men.

Not since the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor has the department been obliged to record a disaster to one of the American men-of-war so fearful as that of yesterday. Engineer officers do not recall when a boiler has exploded aboard a warship of the United States. Mishaps have occurred in the boiler room, but with slight loss of life or injuries. A steam pipe on the Concord, which has boilers identical with those of the Bennington, burst at one time, killing two men.

Acting Secretary Darling and officers of the bureau of navigation were at the department last night awaiting the details which Commander Young sent the department. Upon the receipt of the message giving the list of killed and injured, Mr. Darling at once had a telegram sent to the next of kin of the dead as follows:

"Department regrets to report that ——— was killed this morning by bursting of a boiler on the Bennington. You have the sincere sympathy of the department in your loss."

The Bennington was a three-mast rigged vessel. She was built by N. W. Palmer & Co. of Chester, Pa. She was commissioned for the first time June 20, 1891. The Bennington's engines were twin screw horizontal triple expansion. She attained a speed of 17.5 knots on her trial trip. Her main battery consisted of six 6-inch breech-loading rifles and her secondary battery of four 6-pounders, four 1-pounder rapid-fire guns and two 30-calibre Colts.

The Bennington had four cylindrical straightway boilers, commonly called locomotive gunboat boilers. Each boiler was 17 feet 9 inches long and 9 feet 9 inches in diameter. They were originally designed to carry 160 pounds of steam, but the last log received at the department shows that the safety valves were set for 145 pounds, and that she carried from 135 to 140 pounds of steam in cruising.

The boilers were 15 years old, according to records in the department, but were retubed in 1903-1904. The admiral of the Pacific fleet in 1904 reported to the navy department that the boilers were in need of repairs, but that the repairs were not urgent. A report from the engineer officers received at the navy department about the same time was that the boilers generally were in poor condition, but that the internal conditions of the boilers were good. A detailed report on the condition of the boilers was received by the department last March.

In May last the Bennington was sent to the Mare Island navy yard, when temporary repairs were made on her boilers to put her in cruising condition. It is stated at the bureau of steam engineering that there has been nothing in the reports coming to the department to show that the boilers were in an unsafe condition.

Ensign Newman K. Perry, Jr., was the only officer of the Bennington who was killed. He was appointed as a naval cadet from the Fourth district of South Carolina on Sept. 9, 1897. He joined the Bennington as a watch and division officer on March 9, 1903. His wife lives at Stockbridge, Mass.

Young Violinist.

Albert Spalding Highly Praised Abroad at His Debut.

That Albert Spalding, the sixteen-year-old son of J. W. Spalding of New York city, is destined to become one of the most famous violinists of the day there seems to be little doubt.

Mr. Spalding made his professional debut recently at the Nouveau theater, Paris, and on this occasion his rendition of Saint-Saens' "Concerto," Bach's "Chaconne," Beethoven's "Romance" and Sarasate's "Zigeunerweisen," a most difficult programme, held the full seating capacity of the theater spellbound.

Mr. Spalding is rich in capability, plays with great sentiment and perfection of technique and at this early date is pronounced a "finished virtuoso."

Henry Mapleson of operatic fame (son of Colonel Mapleson, who brought out Patti) in a letter to young Spalding's parents says: "Let me again express to you my positive conviction that your son Albert is destined to occupy a very prominent position in the musical world. * * * I was delighted with his playing last night and saw at once the brilliant career open to him."

The European press comments following Albert Spalding's appearance are very flattering and bespeak for him a bright and successful future. The following are extracts:

The violinist Albert Spalding has just conquered the Parisian public. His name will henceforth be classed among those artists whom our music lovers cherish most. A born violinist of strong and healthy temperament, among the virtuosos of the first school, the morning of a remarkable career dawned upon the destiny of the young artist yesterday.—Le Gil Blas.

Mr. Spalding excited the applause of the public which crowded the Nouveau theater by the freedom of his style and the depth of his musical understanding.

An American, young Albert Spalding—he is only sixteen years of age—has all the charm which the young men of his race possess. The violinist in him is indeed indebted to the excellent lessons which the master, Jean Bruitago, gave him in the conservatory in New York. But we must render to Caesar the things which are Caesar's—that is to say, we must tell that young Albert Spalding studied also at Florence, with Professor Chiti. It is likewise at Florence, at the age of ten, that he was introduced for the first time in a charity concert, in which he gained an enormous success, related in all the Italian press. Two years later he played again in a concert given at the Metropolitan Opera House of New York, then again at Florence, at Rome and at Livourne. He would then have been able, like so many others, to carry on the career of a little prodigy, but he preferred to perfect his art. At fourteen he competed for the diploma as professor of the violin at the Conservatory of Bologna and obtained it with unanimity.—Le Figaro.

ALBERT SPALDING.

Burton Holmes, the lecturer on travel, is at present in Oberammergau, attending the performance of the religious drama, entitled "The School of the Cross," which is being presented for the first time publicly this season.

The Passion play, for which Oberammergau has been noted for many generations, has been given regularly, with a few exceptions, on the even decades, but it is now the purpose of the people of Oberammergau to give "The School of the Cross" every ten years, halfway between the performances of the Passion play.

The play dramatizes the life of King David, who will be the central figure in the piece, while parallel episodes in the life of Christ are interwoven as tableaux." In other words, the present play is just the reverse of the Passion play in that Old Testament scenes are reproduced in dramatic form, while the New Testament are given exclusively as tableaux.

Oberammergau, with its present dramatic production and with reminiscences of the Passion play, will form the subject for one of Mr. Holmes' travelogues to be given in the United States next fall.

Winifred Goff, principal baritone and technical director of the Savage English Grand Opera company, sailed recently for Europe. Mr. Goff will visit London, Paris, Berlin, Milan and other musical centers with a view of engaging artists for Mr. Savage's English Grand Opera company.

Over $10,000,000 was spent in theater going last season in New York, and about 18,000,000 people attended the play during the course of the year. Despite this, big successes were few, "The College Widow" being the only comedy drama that ran the entire season in New York.

Who Gets the Most Out of Life?

Not the wealthiest, not the most learned, nor the idler—but the man who has good health and works for his living. This truth is trite, but not trivial.

Every man should guard his health as his most valuable possession. The more so because health is easier to retain than regain.

Keep your grip on health by regular exercise, reasonable care in eating and requisite sleep. Take Beecham's Pills occasionally, to tone the stomach and keep the liver and bowels in good working order. And don't worry.

REAL KING OF STANDARD OIL

H. H. Rogers the Man. Personal Side of a Striking Figure In the World of Finance.

Began to Work For Fifty Cents, Now Worth Over Fifty Millions—Left School Before Sixteen—Always Won His Battles, He Said, "By Getting There Fust."

A Minuteman Who Never Loses Time. Socially a Charming Companion, but In Business the Stern Warrior Only — His Passion Is to Control—Builder of a Model Town.

By GILSON WILLETS

NINE men command the kingdom of Standard Oil. Eight of them are controlled by the ninth—not Rockefeller, but the one addressed by his intimate friends as "H. H." Rockefeller abdicated two years ago. He was succeeded by one who long was the power behind the Standard's throne, who today is actual monarch of the kingdom of oil, who is the one man above all others whom Lawson is attacking.

The office door of this ruler at 26 Broadway is lettered merely: "National Transit Co. H. H. Rogers, President." Those words mean the famous pipe line of Standard Oil, 20,000 miles of underground pipe across twenty states, through which flow billions of gallons of oil, occupying twenty huge refineries. What else? Ten refineries abroad, for the kingdom zigzags around the earth; then 4,000 tank cars, 200 steamships, 40,000 miles of railway, 8,000 delivery wagons and 4,000 oil tanks holding half a billion gallons of oil, employing 30,000 hands receiving $100,000 a day.

You enter the king's throne room in New York—by appointment only. Mr. Rogers points to a big, comfortable leather chair beside his desk. That chair is low, in it you face the light. Mr. Rogers' chair is high, the light is behind him. Thus in two respects, physically and psychologically, Mr. Rogers has you at a disadvantage. To become a victor in business Mr. Rogers must vanquish. Many a man in a battle of millions sitting in that low chair facing the glare has known defeat. Many a Wall street magnate in that room with Rogers has stood through the interview rather than sit in that big, low, comfortable chair.

First Worked at Chores For Neighbors.

Mr. Rogers began his working life doing chores for the neighbors after school for 50 cents a week. Now he's worth over fifty millions, rises every morning twenty thousand richer than when he went to bed, accumulates two thousand while going from his office to his uptown house, gains 60 cents with every tick of his watch. His success is gauged, however, by achievements other than the building of Himalayas of cash. Yet of money he says: "My rule is to make everything count in money. To succeed, get ahead. You can't get ahead if you go into financial ventures indiscriminately—gaining today, losing tomorrow. You must gain always." Of his only son, H. H., Jr., Mr. Rogers says, "I am not teaching him to make money, but how to take care of it."

Now aged sixty-five, Mr. Rogers left school before he was sixteen and went to work in the Union grocery store in his native town, Fairhaven, Mass. He was paid a dollar a week and "found." He took the job because it was the first that offered and because he wasn't lazy. Later he drove the grocery delivery wagon at $3 a week, also found." In 1858 he went into business for himself as a newsboy. In 1861 he became a baggage master on a New England road at $1.16 a day. As an independent news "merchant" and as baggage master he saved $200. With that money he left Fairhaven to make his way further in the world. With Charles Ellis, a school friend, he went to the oil fields of Pennsylvania and opened an office for the buying and selling of oil on commission. "You attend to the office, I'll learn oil," he said to Ellis. And in overalls as a by-the-day hand he labored first at a well, then in a refinery. Next he entered the office of Charles Pratt & Co., oil refiners, New York, as a clerk and bookkeeper at $8 a week. Soon he became a member of the firm. When Pratt & Co. began the manufacture of kerosene by the then new patents Rogers' ascent to fortune began.

A Minuteman Who Gets There "Fust."

He often speaks of the answer General Forrest gave when asked why he always won his battles, "I get there fust." That is one of Mr. Rogers' dominant characteristics, getting there "fust." He's a minuteman. For the detective who guards the portals of the Standard Oil building Mr. Rogers is a chronometer. One morning as Mr. Rogers stepped upon the rubber doormat marked "S. O. Co." the detective looked at his watch, then put it forward five minutes. Mr. Rogers always arrives exactly at 10:30; hence the detective assumed that the 10:25 of his watch must be wrong. A watch might lose time, Rogers never. "Mr. Rogers never says the words 'good morning,'" says the detective. "Yet he always bids me a cheery good morning like this," and he moved his hand after the manner of a music teacher beating march time.

Charming Companion Socially.

Socially Mr. Rogers is a charming companion, mild mannered, greeting his personal friends with genial warmth and a kindly light in his eyes. In business, the stern warrior only, for to him business is war, the reward going to the hardest fighter. He is two men. A man who knows him intimately only in a social way described him to one who knows him intimately only in business. The description thus given by the one who knew only the Dr. Jekyll was not believed by the man who knew only the Mr. Hyde. One described the amiable, hospitable, domestic, art loving man of feeling, the other knew only the merciless, cold, close fisted, barely civil man of dollars.

His passion is to control. When a schoolboy with his fellows, if he suggested playing tag and the others assented, all right. If they dissented and played ball instead, Henry would have nothing to do with the game. He didn't rage, didn't sulk; merely held aloof.

Always Practiced "Stickedness."

He has always practiced what he calls "stickedness." "Consider the postage stamp," he says. "It's success lies in its ability to stick to one thing till it gets there." As the grocer's boy he lost the top button from his overcoat. He would not permit his mother to sew it on until his savings reached a certain amount. Later when he drove the delivery wagon he vowed he would not get his hair cut until his wages were raised. He kept the vow, going for weeks with his hair hanging over his collar.

He is more fond of the more humorous of "Mark Twain's" stories than of any other books. On his steam yacht Kanawha, with Mark Twain among the guests, Mr. Rogers pointed to an ocean liner, saying, "There he goes," emphasizing "he." "Thought a boat was a she," replied Twain. "But that's a mail steamer," retorted Rogers.

In the days when he was poor, in the oil fields with his friend Ellis, Rogers said, "Charlie, some day I want to be worth a hundred thousand dollars." Not long ago Mr. Rogers built at the Fairhaven of his youth, the town he still dearly loves, the Millicent library, costing a hundred thousand dollars. It was in memory of his daughter Millicent. Then he endowed the library with a hundred thousand dollar fund. Finally he gave to that same institution the city waterworks, which he owned, the income to be used for the additional support of the library. He gives his residence address always "Fairhaven, Mass." There in his mansion, in the town of his early struggles, he spends as much time as he can. He has made it the model town of New England, paying the entire cost not only of the library, but also of a fine stone church, an imposing town hall and a hall for the Masons, the Rogers High school, the Rogers Grammar and Manual Training school and miles of good roads. In the most conspicuous place on the wall of his New York office in a cheap wooden frame hangs a "reward of merit to Henry H. Rogers," dated 1850, from the village school at Fairhaven.

Of all the positions which he holds in a score of corporations the one in which he takes most pride is that of superintendent of streets of the corporation of Fairhaven. His cast iron rule is never to spend more than fifteen minutes at a directors meeting. He votes and hurries on. "All meetings where I sit as director," he says, "vote first and talk after I have gone." Yet to the meetings of the street commission of Fairhaven he gives whole evenings, and always upon his arrival in the town he becomes indeed the superintendent of streets, driving around on a tour of inspection. He gave hours to a mock session of the old village school, from which he holds the "reward of merit," himself reading an essay on "The Hen." Many a summer evening he sits in the drug store at Fairhaven enjoying his ice cream soda like any lover and his lass and swapping yarns with townsmen who drop in. At one of these drug store sessions he was asked concerning a college education. "Education ruins some men," he replied, "just as an attempt to polish sandstone results in a crumbled mass." One evening one of the high school boys asked him the old, old questions regarding how to succeed. "Never make a promise," said Mr. Rogers, "and always keep your secret."

He is woefully sensitive. Some years ago he rented a safe deposit vault in a bank, wherein he stored papers that arrived in six large sheet iron boxes. The clerk in writing on the receipt the required personal description of Mr. Rogers wrote, "Hair, white." "Oh, no!" protested Rogers. "Not white—not yet. Make it black. When my hair is properly brushed you can't see the white." Being so sensitive, it is no wonder his friends say that the Lawson attacks are "wearing him down" and that he shows "outward signs of the strain on his nerves." He is not now the personification of health he used to be. Recently he came to his office only one day in six, then only for an hour. His physician pleads with him to take the long vacation he has postponed for years.

Drives to Mother's Grave Once a Week.

Once a week in Fairhaven he drives to the grave of the mother he so loved. In that mother's cottage in Fairhaven he put a long distance telephone. Then every morning in his New York office he dropped the whole battle of dollars to "telephone mother." Near her grave he has built his own last palace.

He has seldom been interviewed. A besieging army of reporters waited forlorn the other day without his office walls. "Mr. Rogers is too busy," said his secretary, a woman who receives a bank president's salary. Just then a waiter came with a tray bearing the oil king's modest luncheon. "Surely we can see Mr. Rogers now—he's only eating," said the army. "But," the secretary replied, "he works while he eats."

HENRY H. ROGERS.

Cakewalk on a Skyscraper.

More than a thousand persons stood in the public square at Cleveland, O., the other afternoon gazing at two boys doing cakewalks and other stunts on the coping of the Williamson building, 200 feet above the ground, says a special dispatch from Cleveland, O., to the Chicago Tribune. Russell Lowell Mock and a boy named Burton were the two lads who thus recklessly took their lives in their hands. Russell has charge of the observatory on top of the Williamson building and collects dimes from those who visit it. Burton was visiting him the other morning. Trade became dull, and the lads conceived the idea of doing perilous antics to draw people to the observatory. They succeeded, as many persons wended their way to the top of the building to get a closer view of the daring youths. The boys are now contemplating giving a performance daily.

To Collect a Mile of Cents.

The Ladies' Aid society of Trinity Methodist church of Jersey City has undertaken the contract to collect a mile of cents by next December. A string of cents a mile long, one woman said, would count up $840, and nobody seems willing to question it. The money will be used to furnish a new parsonage.

My Lord and His Daughter

By CONSTANCE TYLER

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

Mr. Thomas Hope of Chelmsford was not only the proprietor of Hope's bank, the owner of three or four factories and the recognized business head of the town, but he was president of three or four societies and charities and of high standing as a church member. Whatever Mr. Thomas Hope said or did was always the correct thing. He and his wife could have existed without Chelmsford, but had they departed for other climes that town would have died—socially.

It happened that Mr. Hope had to make a trip to Paris in financial interests. He spoke to no one on his way over. Several strangers dropped remarks to which he could have replied consistently, but he held himself aloof with true British reserve. When British reserve has money behind it, it is a stone wall. Mr. Hope might have replied to an earl or a lord had such a personage addressed him and had he been certain that there was no imposition. The banker shuddered as he looked over the common travelers.

Mr. Hope was not impressed with Paris. He had been there before. It was his duty to impress Paris instead, and when he departed, after a stay of three or four days, he felt sure that he had done so and was very complacent over it. This self complacency served to a certain extent to thaw out his reserve. That is, he deigned to show himself among his fellow passengers on the boat instead of locking himself up in his stateroom, but at the same time he let it be seen that his dignity was not to be trifled with.

Suddenly something happened to the great man. A good looking young woman approached him and, addressing him as "My lord," asked the privilege of speech. Never before in his life had he been addressed by a young woman—a strange young woman. His dignity would have received a fatal shock had she not used the prefix. His flattered vanity offset the shock. His wife had several times averred that he looked like an earl, and now here was living proof that she was right. He put up his eyeglass and gave the young woman a critical glance and indicated by a cold bow that she might proceed.

She had a story to tell. She was an English governess who had passed the last three years in a Parisian family. As she had great property expectations the family wanted her to marry one of the sons. Because she would not—because she had said that as an English girl she would not marry an enemy of her country—she had been charged with purloining certain articles of jewelry and driven from the house. The incensed family might even seek her arrest.

It was a pathetic story, with many embellishments, and Mr. Hope's heart was touched—his British heart. It wasn't touched because the young woman was good looking, but because she had continually addressed him as "My lord" and had appealed to him as the British lion itself. She wanted his protection while landing. That French family might have set the minions of law at work and she might be arrested and haled back to Paris and thrust into a dungeon for years without trial. Under the protection of "My lord," what officer of the law would dare look twice at her? If they looked many times it would mean war between the two countries.

Thomas Hope listened, was flattered, and his iron bound dignity became as putty. For the first time in twenty years he had some human feeling about him. He came out of his shell and discovered that there were joints in his backbone. Had that young woman made the mistake of appealing to him as "Mr." or even as "Viscount" her petition would have been ignored, but that little trick of "My lord" worked like a miracle. She should land under his protection, and if interfered with grim war and all its horrors would burst on the country within two hours. Thanking him over and over again and with tears in her eyes as she repeated her thanks, the young woman returned to her stateroom and made some trifling changes in her attire. Shortly afterward the boat reached its dock on the English side of the channel.

Mr. Hope was ready to rise to the occasion, and the girl walked ashore leaning on his arm. He had a cane in the other hand, his monocle in his eye, and he walked erect. He was the British empire!

While the baggage was being inspected there was a delay—that is, others were delayed. As for Mr. Hope and the young woman hanging on his arm, they walked up to a customs inspector. A card was produced and thrust into his hand, along with a Bank of England note, and there was no inspection of the woman's four trunks. It never occurred to "My lord" that a girl flying from enemies would hardly have four great trunks along with her. He saw them loaded into a van which was suspiciously convenient and was about to hand his protegee into a cab and resume his interrupted dignity when they were approached by a common looking British subject with what looked like a warrant in his hand.

"Excuse me, please"— he had begun when Mr. Hope interrupted him with:

"Sir, are you addressing me?"

"Y-yes, sir. I have here a warrant for the arrest of"—

"A warrant, sir?"

"Yes, sir. A warrant for"—

"What have I to do with you and your warrants, sir?" thundered Mr. Hope.

"But I"—

"That is enough, sir! There is my card. I will communicate with the government at once regarding this outrage. I will see whether British citizens must submit to such humiliation while traveling about in a peaceful manner."

"But may I ask, sir"— persisted the officer as he nodded his head toward the young woman.

"You may, sir," replied Mr. Hope, rising to the occasion. "This young lady is my daughter, sir!"

"Then I beg a thousand pardons—a thousand pardons, sir," said the abashed officer.

The cab drove off. Mr. Hope raised his hat in answer to the smile and the "God bless you," and he never, never again saw the distressed English governess who had been obliged to flee from the enemies of her country. He resumed his dignity and boarded a train for home, and to make up for having temporarily thawed out he greeted Mrs. Hope with a grunt as he arrived.

Three days later a man who would not be denied had an interview with him in his private sanctum at the bank. The great Mr. Hope met him with a glare and a frown and began to read him a lesson on his impudence in interrupting business men when they were engaged in financiering the government of Great Britain. But at the end of a very brief quarter of an hour the banker was a much humbled man. He learned that he had assisted a noted character to escape with four trunks full of plunder from a daring Paris robbery and that he had lied to do it. Not only did the breath of scandal menace his name, but the law was after him in several directions. Even being Mr. Hope of Chelmsford would not save him.

Mr. Hope had to go up to London, accompanied by his solicitors. He had to tell his story to police officials and others and submit to criticism. He had to advertise a reward for the capture of the young woman, and he had to sign statements and affidavits until he was tired of them. Being the great Mr. Hope he managed to get his neck out of the noose after much bother, but the authorities did not succeed in arresting his "daughter."

Answering the Emperor.

The following story of Kaiser William II. and one of his generals is told by a biographer of the German emperor:

At a review in Berlin the kaiser impatiently reprimanded old General von Meerscheldt for losing his wits at a critical moment.

"If your majesty thinks I am getting too old, I beg of you to allow me to resign."

"No, no," replied the emperor. "You are too young to resign. Indeed if your blood didn't course through your veins quite so fast you would be a more useful army leader."

On the evening of that day the kaiser and the general met at a court ball. The general was talking to some young ladies.

"Ah, Meerscheldt," cried the emperor, "that is right. Get ready to marry. Take a young wife, then that excitable temperament of yours will soon vanish."

The general bowed low as he retorted:

"I beg to be excused, your majesty. A young emperor and a young wife would be more than I could possibly stand."

Why the Bears Fought.

C. M. Russell, the western painter, tells an amusing story of a bear fight which he thinks is funnier than any humorous sketch he has ever seen portrayed on a vaudeville stage. He had been out with a guide all day, and toward evening they saw far down the road two bears sauntering along quite oblivious of the presence of human beings, as the wind was in the wrong direction. Russell and his guide quickly jumped behind a small thicket, and when the bears were within shooting distance the painter let fly and struck one of them fair in the side. The shot stunned the animal for a moment, and he was under the impression that his mate had struck him a terrific blow when he was not looking. As there appeared to be no reason for this chastisement, he proceeded to retaliate by attacking the other bear. About this time the guide took a shot at the assaulted animal, with the result that the brute was infuriated and imagined he had been struck with undue force by his comrade. Upon this the two bears set to and had a terrific fight.—Success Magazine.

A Close Bargain.

The reputation held by Mr. Cobb of Canby for making the closest bargains of any man in the region was sustained during the summer by his dealings with several of his neighbors from the city.

"Mr. Cobb," said one of these neighbors whose orchard was in need of pruning, "the man says he must have a longer ladder than mine, for when he's finished the orchard I want him to trim that scraggly elm just this side of the apple trees. Have you a ladder I could hire?"

"Um-m, well, I s'pose I hev," said Mr. Cobb grudgingly as he turned his lean face half away from his visitor's gaze. "I've got one, but it's kind of loose j'inted toward the top. I'm not cal'latin' to put any repairs on to it, for I don't ever go clear to the top myself. I'm willin' to let ye take it, but I shall hev to charge ye thutty cents, I guess, on account of the resk of your man's breakin' through the top rungs, he bein' so much heftier anyway than I am, and along of not intendin' to have it hired out, as a rule."

GOOD AFTERNOON.

If Japan will just hurry, and take Vladivostock, there will be nothing at all to negotiate about at Portsmouth.

Its rather audacious of China to talk about being represented at the peace conference. Did she ever own any territory in Manchuria?

Neither Senator Burton nor Senator Mitchell has yet announced his intention to go on the stage. However, theatrical managers look several seasons ahead.

In the powerful plea for the overthrow of "The Greatest Trust in the World," in the August Everybody's, Mr. Charles Edward Russell concludes his strong series of articles. For the Beef Trust and its evils "there is no remedy," he says, "unless we are willing to look upon the issue as essentially an issue of morals and not of business. We shall have to come to a state of mind in which we oppose such a combination as this, not because it compels us to lose dollars, but because it is fundamentally and eternally wrong, because it means high treason to the Republic and all the Republic stands for. Until we are willing to admit that what is involved here is a principle vital to human liberty and progress, and until we are willing to make sacrifices for that principle and to stand for it through any chance of personal loss, we do but waste time to cry out against any trust. Opposition based upon balance-sheets is mere foolery. At any moment a slight change in market conditions sweeps such an opposition from existence. We have seen the fight against the Beef Trust staggered before the temporary increase of $1.50 a hundred pounds in the price of cattle. Courts may order competition until they are blue in the face; Congress may pass any kind of legislation it may see fit to amuse itself with; the President may send many eloquent messages; individuals may complain and conventions may resolve; the present conditions will go on unchecked. A thousand statutes will not be worth the paper they are printed upon until the country gets ready to have them enforced and is willing to endure the results of the enforcement, whatever the results may be. It will come to this and nothing else; for the moment we admit that there can exist a power like the Beef Trust, greater than the law, independent of the Government, and inimical to the general welfare, that moment there is no more republic, but only an irresponsible and arbitrary oligarchy against which, logically, no citizen can have protection or any certainty of his rights."

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The Republican state committee meets tomorrow, it is said, for the purpose of fixing up a slate for the state convention. It is further said that Lieut.-Gov. Guild, who is deeply interested in the coming state convention, is decidedly opposed to fixing up a slate and wants to have the convention get as far away from the cut and dried policy as is possible. The lieutenant-governor has evidently had his ear to the ground and knows what the people want. An honest representative convention of the Republican party of Massachusetts, whatever it did, would be assured of the hearty support of the party at the polls and of the election of its nominee. Whether a convention organized and dictated to by a few, composed of delegates picked out under instructions for certain interests, governed in nominations and resolutions by the wishes of the few can expect or will get as much, remains to be seen, but there are a few careful observers who have their doubts about the matter. —Haverhill Gazette.

—William P. Kelly has resigned as superintendent of schools at Attleboro, to go to a similar position in Meridan, Conn.

AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Last Saturday Was Joaquin Miller Day—Poet Present.

Portland, Oregon, July 15.—Thousands of admirers greeted the Poet of the Sierras, Joaquin Miller, today, at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, the day being named in his honor. In the afternoon a reception was held in the Oregon State building, where the people shook hands with the poet. Mr. Miller delivered an address and recited some of his popular short poems, by request.

The New England school teachers who are here as guests of the Herald had the privilege of shaking hands with Mr. Miller during the reception. Many of them wanted his autograph and the poet was kept busy supplying the demand.

The day's ceremonies closed with a dinner to Joaquin Miller at the American Inn, where several speakers paid tributes to the veteran poet.

During the week two other parties of young ladies chosen by vote to enjoy free trips to the fair at the expense of their home newspapers arrived. Sixteen girls from Ogden, Utah, and a like number from Boise, Idaho, came in and took possession of the grounds. They received much attention, and thoroughly enjoyed every feature of the exposition. They also took side trips to the Pacific ocean and up the Columbia river, to see the wonderful natural scenery along that stream.

The American Medical Association has been holding its annual convention at Portland this week. Nearly 2000 doctors, many of them accompanied by members of their families were present. At the exposition several functions were given in their honor. There was a reception, and dance at the American Inn, Tuesday evening, and a reception at the Oregon state building, Wednesday evening.

Braintree Hearings.

By the vote of Braintree the citizens of Mayflower Park are to have water and before the pipes are laid to that pleasant locality the board of water commissioners desire a re-location of the electric car tracks over Hancock and Washington streets to the Holbrook line. At present the rails cross the street about four times in Mayflower Park and the commissioners desire to have the rails entirely on the east side that they may lay the water pipes on the west side away from the deadly electricity.

The Old Colony Street Railway Co. upon receiving a letter from the clerk of the water board acted promptly in the matter and at a hearing Tuesday evening in the Town hall were represented by their efficient superintendent, Mr. J. T. Conway.

Plans were exhibited by White & Wetherbee of the entire line through Braintree over Washinton, and Hancock streets and Independence avenue.

Among those who made speeches were James T. Stevens, John Kelley, Dr. T. H. Dearing, George D. Willis, Henry R. Smith, James W. Colbert, Elmer E. Abercrombie, William H. Cuff and Henry W. Mansfield.

There was no opposition to relaying the tracks through Mayflower Park as desired by the board of water commission but there was several protests against granting more turnouts and to the extension of the turnout in South Braintree square.

About 35 gentlemen were present and the hearing was open nearly two hours.

Up to the time of going to press the Selectmen have not granted the petition.

AT THE SEASIDE.

All the Cottages at Houghs Neck Are Occupied.

The season at Houghs Neck is now at its height. Nearly every cottage is occupied. During the past few hot days there have been hundreds of transient visitors. These are largely women and children. The children have a grand time in the water while the mothers keep their watchful eyes upon them.

Nothing has been said as yet about the annual illumination and the chances are that there will be none this year. The trouble is that sentiment is divided between a one and three days' celebration. The result of this controversy is that the carnivals for the past few years have been failures.

J. L. McIntyre of Nashua, N. H., have moved into their new cottage on Rogers street.

The Mt. Kineo cottage on Darrow street is occupied by B. J. Hughes.

H. J. Harvey and family of Charlestown, are in the Madeleine cottage.

The family of Frank L. Monihan of Brockton are in the High Jinks cottage on Winthrop street.

The Fleur de Lis cottage on Charles street is occupied by Mrs. E. J. Trainer and family of South Boston.

John Courtney of Boston and family are in the Bostonian cottage on Crosby street.

F. K. Kelley and family of Roxbury enjoy the sea breezes at the Kenwood cottage.

Theodore H. Smith and family of Jamaica Plain are rusticating in the Moyland cottage on Malvers street.

The Foxey cottage on Winthrop street is occupied by Joseph P. Flynn and family of South Boston.

J. A. Buckman of Somerville is occupying his new cottage on Nut Island.

Mrs. K. S. Sweet of Wollaston is at the Highland cottage on Great Hill.

Philip L. Geabau and family are pleasantly situated at the Clara Finch cottage on Charles street.

Slade, and was the first flagship of the Quincy Yacht club.

☞ Josh Billings' malediction against the fly, while commonly receiving the endorsement of mankind, will have to be waived in behalf of that solitary Tanchina fly which survived the voyage from its native clime in Japan, and upon which so many hopes rest for the destruction of the gypsy and brown-tail moths. That fly is expected to achieve wonders, and if his appetite comes up to the anticipated taste for the moths, he and his kind will be entitled to places of honor in Massachusetts—that is until they become too numerous themselves, and we have to go looking for something to kill them off.—Haverhill Gazette.

—Lightning struck Senden Olsen, of Woodburn, Ore., and cleanly shaved one side of his face, removing an eyebrow, and half of his mustache. He was unconscious for an hour, but received no injury. On looking at his face in the mirror, he couldn't believe that the lightning had shaved him, and declared that he had been the victim of a practical joke.

Will it Pay?

Every business man asks this question when he considers an outlay of money. Thousands of dollars are wanted this summer for the "fresh air fund" Boston, and its patrons have a right to inquire whether this is a good investment. For reply they are invited to examine the results of the past twenty-five years. People do not continue to give, year after year, to an object which has nothing to show for the money expended upon it. Beginning with the distribution of street car tickets, the work has expanded into four forms:

Open car rides for children, invalids and tired mothers.

Day excursions to Nantasket.

Picnics at Franklin Park.

Two weeks' vacation at Rosemary Cottage, Eliot, Maine.

Number one costs only ten cents; number four only seven dollars, which includes transportation to and from Eliot. But, remember, there are more than twenty-five thousand persons to whom are extended the benefits of the Fresh Air Fund.

Does it pay? Yes, for the children's sake. Who does not wish to "lend a hand" in making them happy? Yes, for the joy it puts into the lives of those whose pleasures are few. Yes, for it will give an added zest to your own vacation. Its power to renew physical strength and to brighten life is only limited by the income it receives from generous friends.

A hard-working mother, who inclosed a small sum to help send some one else to Rosemary cottage, wrote: "Through the kindness of Miss C., whose mothers' meetings I enjoy so much, I, with my little son, have enjoyed every minute of the last two weeks. I can't find words adequate to express my appreciation. It seems just like a dream of heaven. I shall never forget this vacation, and shall pray for God's blessing on each individual who is sent here, as I feel I need it myself. It has the effect of making me realize how weak I am in my efforts to always do just the right thing. I appreciate all that is being done for our comfort in every way by our dear matron and all her staff. I have much pleasure in asking your acceptance of the inclosed, as I would like to feel the pleasure of having a share in such a noble work."

Such a letter is a sufficient answer to the question, Does it pay? Contributions sent to D. W. Waldron, 14 Beacon street, Room 602, Boston, Mass., will be promptly acknowledged.

After the installation the brothers retired to the banquet hall where ice cream, cake and cigars were partaken of.

The committee on the excursion have posted the bills announcing the excursion to Salem, N. H. The tickets can be obtained of any member of the committee. Round trip from Boston to Canobia lake ninety cents. This includes the electric car ride from the Salem station to the lake. The committee in charge of the excursion ar F. M. Buzzell, H. S. Bates and H. L. Tobey.

Paragon Park.

It seems to be the general impression that Paragon Park is an expensive place to visit. As a matter of fact one gets more for his money and need spend less money at this "city of pleasure" than at any other place of its size in the world. The admission fee is ten cents and for this, a show worth at least a dollar is given without extra charge. To see the electrical illumination at night, with the 100,000 electric lights or the park itself in the day time, is a sight worth far more than the price of admission. But in addition to this the management gives twice every day a free circus which contains acts which are so expensive that the average circus could not afford to have more than one on its program, and vaudeville houses seldom if ever have them.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Patterns For a Neat Shirt Waist Suit Designed by Martha Dean—Nos. 6309 and 6310

Styles may come and styles may go, but the shirt waist is here to stay until something far superior can be found to fill its place. The modes of today are of comfort and grace, and the shirt waist suit is a part of every feminine wardrobe. It is not only comfortable and graceful, but a most economical fashion, because it is so simply constructed that any one may make one at home. Here is a pretty model developed in white linen for which madras, gingham or any of the popular woolen materials might be substituted. The shirt waist has a plain back, which extends over the front in yoke effect. The front receives its fullness from gathers at the shoulder and has a duchess closing. The sleeve is fashioned after the bishop model and finished with a narrow cuff. The skirt has seven gores and flares gracefully at the bottom. The seams may be stitched flat or in regulation manner. Waist, No. 6309, 32 to 42 inches bust measure; skirt, No. 6310, 20 to 30 inches waist measure.

DIRECTIONS FOR ORDERING

Send 20 cents to this office, give numbers of these patterns, Nos. 6309 and 6310, and state sizes desired. They will then be sent to you by mail postpaid. HEALTHY PLANTS

Require the Most Careful Attention as Well as Good Soil.

Did you ever see a rosebush which—despite the most beneficent environment of soil—of sunshine—and of atmosphere,—seemed never to achieve a healthy growth.

A ton of manure will not help a plant that has a canker eating out its heart.

You must destroy the cause before you can remove the effect.

You cannot cure Dandruff and Baldness by rubbing on hair lotions, and rubbing in vaseline, etc.

You must look to the cause of the trouble—it's a germ at the roots of your hair which causes it to fall out.

Newbro's Herpicide destroys the germ, and healthy hair is the sure result.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

BRITISH MINISTRY

His Own Supporters Responsible For Defeat

HAD FALSE CONFIDENCE

Opponents Kept In Background Until Critical Moment Arrived --Dissolution of Parliament Probable In October

London, July 22.—It is understood that Premier Balfour has decided to remain in office until the end of the session and to dissolve parliament in October. No authoritative statement, however, will be made until Monday, and in the interval this decision may be modified.

The crisis has assumed a serious aspect, owing more to the circumstances attending the defeat of the government Thursday night on the vote for the support of the Irish land commission than to the intrinsic importance of the vote itself. The vote was actually due to the slackness or to the indifference of the government's own supporters, who, despite the strongest possible whip enforcing the necessity of their attendance on that particular night, allowed themselves to be lulled into a false confidence by the ruse of the Liberals and Nationalists in keeping their men in the background until the critical moment arrived.

That this was allowed to happen immediately after Balfour had called a meeting of his party to impress upon his supporters the need of their absolute loyalty seems to convince Balfour of the uselessness of attempting to face another session of parliament, but as the holding of elections in August on account of the harvest and for other reasons would be most inconvenient to the country, he decided to wait until autumn before dissolving parliament.

At Premier Balfour's audience of King Edward yesterday it is supposed that he intimated the foregoing decision to the king.

The Unionist newspapers, while professing to be delighted over the prospect of "leaderless Liberals" lacking a policy or a program, being forced to form a ministery bound hand and foot to John Redmond and his Nationalist following, who engineered the defeat of the government, contend that the delicate situation of foreign affairs dictates that Lord Lansdowne shall remain in control of the foreign office and forbids the risking of any change in the government.

The forthcoming peace conference in the United States, the Anglo-Japanese alliance, the international conference over Moroccan reforms, the Anglo-French entente and South African affairs are all represented as matters too serious to be entrusted to a liberal or a radical ministry.

Disaster Overtakes Autoists

NEW ENGLANDERS' IDEAS

Recommendations Submitted to Equitable Life Trustees

Boston, July 22.—Nine recommendations have been submitted by the New England policyholders' protective committee to the Equitable Life Assurance society trustees of stock, according to the report sent out for publication from the office of the committee. Eight of these recommendations are deemed to be dependent on the ninth, which is the necessity of bringing the society under the absolute control of the policyholders.

In its communication to the trustees the committee point out that the sole aim of the society should be to furnish insurance of absolute safety at the smallest possible cost; that to this end radical changes in system must be introduced; that lavish payments for agents' commissions and for advertising must be discontinued; that the society should, as to each policyholder, be conducted as a benevolent institution; that the issuance of deferred dividend policies should be discontinued or greatly limited; that the same legal safeguards should surround the investments of the society as are now supplied in the case of savings banks; that executive officers should not be allowed to engage in any other business or hold office in any other corporation, and that methods of accounting should be introduced by which the directors may be at all times advised in detail of the conditions and the operations of the business.

Victim of Wood Alcohol

Newport, R. I., July 22.—Albert A. Robinson, a seaman apprentice of the naval training station here, died as a result of poisoning from wood alcohol, said to have been given him in a local barroom. Robinson came ashore on the night of July 16 and was placed under arrest on a charge of drunkenness. The following afternoon he was brought to the training station. He was under treatment at the naval hospital, where he became completely paralyzed. He told the medical officers of having been poisoned by wood alcohol and the post mortem examination showed the truth of his assertion.

Counterfeiter Again Arrested

Boston, July 22.—Dr. Robert Thompson, who was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment for counterfeiting, but who is out on bail, pending exceptions now under consideration, has been again arrested for illegally using the mails. Inspector Snow has been in correspondence with Thompson, who unconsciously furnished the evidence desired. Arraigned before a commissioner, Thompson was held in $1000 for a hearing next Tuesday.

Preferred Work to Pension

Greenwich, Conn., July 22.—Notified of the critical illness of his aged gardener, Joel Charles, E. C. Benedict hurried from New York to his residence here and remained at the old man's bedside until he died. Charles had been in the employment of Benedict 37 years. He had recently refused Benedict's offer of a pension equal to his salary as gardener, preferring to continue active work.

Scollans Is Convicted

Boston, July 22.—Thomas J. Scollans is guilty of being an accessory before the fact to the bribery of Juror Charles H. Milliken during Scollans' trial for complicity in the teaming frauds cases. This was the verdict returned by the jury charged with weighing the evidence in the case. Judge Bond postponed sentence until next Friday.

Paid Too Much For Meals

Salem, N. H., July 22.—After being out on strike one day, the 230 Italian laborers employed in the construction of a race track here returned to work. The men struck because they objected to paying the price demanded for their meals. The builders of the track acceded to the demands of the laborers.

Nephew Contests Day's Will

New Haven, July 22.—The will of Professor G. E. Day of the Yale Divinity school was admitted to probate and a notice of an appeal to the superior court was immediately filed by a nephew, Robert E. Day of New York. The ground of objection to the will has not been announced.

Runs on Water

Arthur T. Sadler of Boston an Expert With "Sea Shoes."

"I challenge any one in the world to defeat me in a foot race on water."

Such an announcement could well be made by Arthur T. Sadler of the Boston Athletic association. Sadler has invented and perfected two "shoe boats" or "sea shoes," which enable him to walk on water, and he has developed considerable dexterity in their use.

In and about Boston Sadler has become known as "the damp way pedestrian."

Dwellers on the water front of the Charles river, Boston, in the vicinity of the B. A. A. boathouse, of which Mr. Sadler has charge, have become accustomed to seeing him sauntering and actually running about in his boat-like shoes and no longer run excitedly to windows for a view when somebody calls attention to the strange sight. But with other people it is different, and at times when Mr. Sadler is doing a heel and toe stunt out in midstream crowds gather along the sea wall railing and on Harvard bridge to watch for a possible upset and wonder how in the world he manages to make headway.

Since his first attempt to walk on the water two years ago he has suffered but one mishap. That was caused by the toe strap in one of the shoes giving way, letting him down and under in surprisingly quick time. Often while trying to walk in rough water he has to do some tall teetering to keep his balance, and he has also to exercise a great deal of caution when trying to turn around. This coming to right about face has always been a poser for water pedestrians, but Mr. Sadler has mastered this phase of the game and can come about almost as quickly as a state of Maine lime schooner.

The shoes he wears are double ender boats in miniature. They are about six and one-half feet long and perhaps a foot wide and ten inches deep. They carry centerboard-like fins in the center of the bottom, and along the flat underbody from stem to stem are valve-like paddles, which close flat against the bottom when the foot is pushed forward and open and grip the water on the back stroke. Were it not for these many little open and shut paddles walking on the water would be about as progressive as trying to file with a piece of glass. There would be nothing to catch hold.

Mr. Sadler does not claim that even with absolutely perfect water shoes anything of worth would be added to the many good things contrived for the betterment of mankind. Somebody awhile ago mentioned that he thought the perfected shoe would work wonders in the way of equipping life savers, but Mr. Sadler said he'd give a good deal to see himself going out to save human life in such a rig. Something would surely happen were the person in distress to suddenly give one of the shoes a last despairing hug for safety.

"Excuse me," said Mr. Sadler when asked if he thought life saving would be made easier were the water shoes to be brought to a state of perfection. Then he laughingly went on to say that in any kind of shoe, good or bad, a walker on the water would have quite all he wanted to attend to in keeping one shoe from wandering too far away from the other and to preserve his balance when the ripples began to grow and roll up to whitecaps.

It is likely that racing in water shoes will this year be a novel attraction put on at some of the swimming and other competitions decided in the water. Mr. Sadler has been asked to make up half a dozen pairs of shoes for such a purpose, but as yet he has not decided to do so. The shoes he now wears are not to his liking, notwithstanding that he has made the distance between the Craigie and Harvard bridges in fairly good time and has succeeded in making progress against the swift current of the outgoing tide. He would not advise a person who cannot swim to try any walking on the water stunts where the deep is over one's head. Mr. Sadler is a lieutenant of one of the Charles river volunteer life saving crews

WORLD'S POLITICS

Asiatics Will Soon Become an Effective Factor

WILL FORM AN ALLIANCE

Far-Sighted Men of Japan and China See Realization of Their Dream Under Prestige of Conquerors of Russia In Battle

Washington, July 22.—Far eastern advices reaching Washington tell of the marked effect upon the Chinese of the unbroken series of victories gained by Japan over Russia. Not only has the government been affected, but the people have come to regard Japan in a new light and the diplomatic corps at Pekin has already begun to discuss the probabilities of an alliance between China and Japan.

On this point a high official, a diplomat thoroughly cognizant of the situation at Pekin and in touch with official and popular feeling in China, said:

"It will not come today or tomorrow, this alliance with Japan, but it is only a question of time when China and Japan will enter into a strong alliance, the keynote of which shall be the development of the Far East under the administration of Far Eastern peoples. China would be the loser by such a union at this time, because she has not enough to offer Japan to insure an alliance of mutual benefit. But, say, 10 years from now, it is the dream and I believe it will be the realization, of those to whom 'Asia for the Asiatics' is a real principle to be worked for, and if necessary fought for, that China and Japan will form a strong defensive alliance which will insure the preservation of their sovereignty over all territory now in their possession.

"Advices from the best official sources in China tell of the increasing regard felt by the Chinese for the Japanese, and the far-sighted men of both countries believe they see in this the cornerstone of what 10 years from now will be one of the strongest alliances the world ever saw."

"You do not think that Russia and Japan, after the treaty of Washington is signed, will become allies?" this official was asked.

"I do not believe the Japanese will accept any such offer," he replied. "With China rehabilitated, her legal system reformed, modern ideas introduced, and the country developed along the lines of Japan, I believe Tokio will welcome, in fact, seek from China, some sort of alliance. But as I said at the outset this will not come in a day or a year. China is not ready for it yet.

"The first effect of the war to be noticed in China, once peace is declared, will be the prestige of the Japanese there. Their promoters, their instructors, their tradesmen will all be welcomed as they have never been before, and Japan will undertake the preparation for an alliance which I firmly believe will become an effective factor in the world's politics 10 years from now, or even within five years, provided China's progress be rapid."

The position of the speaker and the fact that he has spent some time in China gives a weight to his words, the significance of which finds further strengthening in advices recently reaching Washington from China.

"THE OPEN DOOR"

China's Recent Note Is Fraught With Deep Significance

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 22.—President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Root were in conference last night at Sagamore Hill. Among the many questions considered by them none is fraught with deeper significance and importance to the United States than is that relating to an identical note which the foreign office of China, within a day or two, has sent to the powers neutral in the Far Eastern contest between Russia and Japan.

The text of the note, which is brief, was made public last evening by President Roosevelt. It is as follows:

"Having viewed with profound regret the unfortunate interruption of peaceful relations between Japan and Russia, the imperial government now learns with sincere gratification that negotiations are about to commence for the restoration of peace and amity. But in the present conflict Chinese territory has been made the theatre of military operations. Therefore, it is hereby expressly declared that no provision affecting China without the approval of China being previously obtained which the treaty of peace may contain will be recognized as valid. The diplomatic representatives of China in Japan and Russia have been instructed by telegraph to communicate this declaration to the governments of Japan and Russia respectively."

On its face, the note appears to be a simple declaration that no determination of the peace conference affecting Chinese territory would be recognized as valid "without the approval of China previously obtained." It really means far more than that, as it is construed here. The United States, in common with other nations, is interested particularly in the "open door" to Manchuria, and behind China's simple declaration lies the whole question of the commerce and the commercial relations of a great empire.

The note apparently calls for no reply and the probabilities are that none will be sent, except, possibly, an acknowledgment of its receipt.

Careers Of Popular Players

Pat Dougherty Began Diamond Life In New York State, Later Going to New England. Coughlin of Detroit. Flaherty of Pittsburg.

Patrick Dougherty, the star left fielder of Clark Griffith's New York Americans, was born at Bolivar, a town about seventy miles south of Buffalo. His first engagement of note was with Canandaigua, N. Y., in 1898. He next played with the strong Homestead

THIRD BASEMAN COUGHLIN OF DETROIT.

(Pa.) independent team in 1890 and with Bridgeport in 1900 and 1901. Here he blossomed forth as a pitcher.

After playing in the east Dougherty decided to play on the Pacific coast, signing with the Los Angeles club of the California league. He easily led that league in batting, making the record of leading two leagues in batting within a year. Manager Collins had had his eye upon Dougherty for some time and induced him to join the Boston American team.

In 1904 he was transferred to the New York Americans, for which team he has since covered the left garden in excellent fashion.

William P. Coughlin, the noted third baseman of the Detroit club, was born in 1873 at Scranton, Pa. He began his professional career in 1896, when he was brought out by ex-Player and Umpire Larry Ketrick, who recommended him to the Pawtucket (R. I) club, of which John F. Smith was then manager.

With the Pawtucket club Coughlin made such a great reputation that he was purchased by Manager Jimmy Manning's Kansas City club, which he served for three years. When the Kansas City team was transferred to Washington by the American league in 1901 Coughlin went with it and soon ranked as one of the star third basemen of the major leagues. He remained with the Washington club until the middle of the 1904 season, when his release was sold to the Detroit club for $8,000.

Patrick J. Flaherty, the clever south paw pitcher of the Pittsburg club, was born at Carnegie, Pa., on June 28, 1878, and learned to play ball on the lots of that town. He began his professional career in 1898 with the Jackson (Mich.) club. He was a member of the Paterson (N. J.) team of the Atlantic league in 1897 and 1898 and pitched for the Richmond club of the same organization in 1899.

He started the season of 1900 with Pittsburg and finished it with the Hartford club of the Eastern league. He did splendid service for Toronto in 1901 and was signed by Manager Clymer in 1902 when he organized the Louisville team. Flaherty made a wonderful record in the American association and was purchased by the Cincinnati club for 1903, but was later released to the Louisville club, from which he was purchased by Pittsburg last spring.

Turkish Ruler Near Death

London, July 22.—The Turkish censorship is evidently suppressing the news regarding the attempt on the life of the sultan yesterday. A dispatch received by the Turkish embassy says: As the sultan was issuing from the mosque at the conclusion of the ceremony of the selamlik, a bomb burst in the courtyard of the mosque. Divine providence miraculously preserved his majesty. A few persons were killed or injured.

Berlin, July 22.—An account of the attempt on the life of the Sultan of Turkey received here says that 40 persons were killed, all native Turks and soldiers.

More Graft Indictments

Milwaukee, July 22.—Twenty-four true bills against 14 persons were returned last evening by a grand jury which has been investigating alleged "grafting." This was the third batch of indictments handed down since the jury went into session on June 20, the grand total thus far numbering 129 indictments. Last night's list includes Chief Clancy of the city fire department, who is indicted on a charge of perjury.

Bright Business Prospect

New York, July 22.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that hot weather tended to retard activity in many productive undertakings and postponed forward business that could be delayed without loss, but accelerated the consumption of seasonable merchandise and advanced the crops much nearer maturity. Inquiries indicate a general disposition to provide for a large volume of fall and winter business.

Direct Advertising to Continue

Washington, July 22.—W. L. Pepperman, acting chief of the office of the Panama canal commission, states that the information developed through the examination of bids submitted by request of the Panama canal commission for advertising from newspaper advertising agencies has resulted in the decision to secure the advertising from newspapers direct, as heretofore.

Fought to the Limit

San Francisco, July 22.—"Kid" Sullivan made an excellent fight against Jimmy Britt in their fight here last night. The betting was heavily in favor of Britt, but instead of Sullivan being quickly disposed of, as some people had expected, he gave Britt all he wanted during the early rounds. Britt got the decision at the end of the 20th round.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

The continuation of the summer season of the Castle Square Theatre dramatic stock company at the Empire Theatre has already proved the loyalty of the patrons of this well know organization and there is every reason to anticipete a continued active interest in the productions made by the Castle Square players in their new home. Next week the attraction announced is the famous Irish drama, Dion Boucicault, "Arrah Na Pogue" which has not been seen in this city for several years. It has never failed to prove a popular attraction for the local play going public and its revival next week will without doubt appeal strongly to the stay-at-homes and visitors to Boston. A number of unusually strong attractions are to follow this at the Empire Theatre during the summer season of the Castle Square company.

LADIES' DAY.

Wollaston Club Have Ideal Weather.

Many Yachts Take Out Parties.

Delightful Sail, Fine Concert—Dancing in Evening.

Fair skies, a good south-easterly sailing breeze, daintily gowned ladies and gallant yachtsmen were the elements that combined to make the annual ladies' day of the Wollaston Yacht Club an event long to be remembered by the club and those fortunate enough to partake of its hospitality.

The committee in charge of the affair, headed by Vice-Commodore W. M. Chase saw to it that nothing was left undone for the pleasure and comfort of the guests. That they succeeded in making everybody feel at home and have a good time, was a fact without question.

The program for the day included a sail in the harbor, a concert at the club house, dance and refreshments in the evening. There was a very large attendence, but so well was it carried out that every one who wished had an opportunity to enjoy the sail.

It was about 3.30 when a gun fired from the flag-ship Premier, which was anchored just off the club house, announced that the yachts were to pass in review of Vice Commodore Chase, in the absence of Commodore Wiley who is away on a cruise. As each yacht passed the flag-ship the Vice Commodore dipped his colors and saluted with a gun. The yachts then bore away toward Houghs Neck. S. S. Delano was fleet captain.

The wind was fresh from the southeast, and while a few of the yachts went away under a single reef the majority carried whole sail. After sailing for an hour or more a return to the club house was made. Later in the evening ice cream and cake were served and there was dancing. In the evening the club house was illuminated with Chinese lanterns and made a very pretty sight.

During the afternoon, while the sail was in progress the Manet orchestra gave a concert. The concert program included the following selections:

"Yankee Grit," Two Step,	Holyeman
"Meet Birdie Tonight," Waltz,	Theo Morse
"Centurion," March,	W. Corry
"Ventas," Two Step,	Densmore
"Angeleus," Schottische,	O'Connor

HOME AGAIN.

Miss Underwood as Young as the Youngest.

Very Enthusiastic Over the Trip.

Enjoyed Every Minute of the Long Journey.

The New England teachers returned from the World's Fair at Portland, Sunday evening, as the press representative says, in better health than on the day of departure. Not one stood the long journey of 8,000 miles better than Miss Julia E. Underwood of Quincy, and it was a great pleasure to to the friends from Quincy and Lynn who welcomed her at the North station to find her so well and so enthusiastic over the trip. She did not appear a bit fatigued, but as young as the youngest, and as fresh as on the opening day of the school term.

During the trip she was not only the favorite with the thirty teachers who constituted the party, but somehow the people en route and at Portland had learned that there was in the party a lady who had taught school in Quincy fifty years and they were anxious to see her and to meet her.

Miss Underwood told the Daily Ledger representative many little incidents of the trip, of the kindness of Miss Gertrude L. Brinkhaus, the director of the party, and her fellow travellers, also of the representatives of the Herald and the railroads; of the efforts of the Woman's Press Association at Montreal to show the attractions of the city.

Of special favors on the steamer between Vancouver and Seattle; by the Governor General at Victoria; by the President at the World's Fair. Of a delightful launch ride; of receptions, interviews, etc., etc.

Miss Underwood's climb onto the summit of the glacier of Glacier was perhaps her most wonderful achievement, as some of the party gave it up. The only thing she declined on the trip was the camel ride at the World's Fair, but only two of the party had enough courage for that.

The teachers organized as the Boston Herald Educational Association with these officers:

President,—Miss Mary F. Collins of Lawrence.

Vice President,—Miss Julia E. Underwood of Quincy.

Secretary-Treasurer,—Miss Grace T. Pratt of Somerville, a sister of Rev. Frank W. Pratt formerly of Wollaston.

The association will hold a reunion in Boston on the Friday of Thanksgiving week.

The director of the party told the Ledger representative that she could have married off all her children while away, and that "her youngest," Miss Underwood, was always talking with a man when opportunity offered.

Miss Underwood went directly to Lynn, Sunday evening, where she will spend the remainder of her vacation with her sister at 32 Mudge street.

CLUBS RAIDED.

Several Places at Houghs Neck Visited Early Sunday Morning.

Chief of Police Burrell, accompanied by Lieut. McKay, Inspector Bradley and Officers Murray, Goodhue, Milford, Olsen and Maloney, paid a visit to Houghs Neck at 2 o'clock Sunday morning armed with search warrants, and made unceremonial calls upon a number of the clubs.

The raid was the outcome of the petition signed by a number of residents and handed to Mayor Thompson last week by Henry H. Faxon.

This petition as noted in the Ledger at the time, complained of the free use of liquor by these clubs and the conduct of the members.

Mayor Thompson turned the petition over to Chief Burrell, who acted promptly.

Six clubs in all were visited, and in all but one the inmates were abed, and in one place the parties did not even awake during the officers' visit.

The Beausong cottage on Darrow street, occupied by the Blue Bell club, was first visited. Here a quarter barrel of beer and three empty quarter barrels were seized.

At the Mt. Kineo cottage on Darrow street, occupied by the Navahoe club, a half and a quarter barrel of beer and three quarts of whiskey were seized.

At the Maizie cottage on Charles street occupied by the Riverside club a quarter barrel of beer was found.

At the Majestic club headquarters in the Linden cottage on Taber street, a sugar barrel full of bottled beer, ten dozen bottles of beer in an ice chest and a barrel of empty bottles were taken.

Nothing was found at the Sunlight club cottage on Bird street. Here the occupants were all asleep and were not awakened by the raiders.

At the Neponset Outing club cottage on Winthrop street, only a few bottles of beer were found and some empties.

All the liquor seized was taken to the police station and the parties from whom it was seized will later be summoned into court.

Eclipse Led Fleet.

The only scheduled race of the Squantum Yacht club for the season was held Saturday afternoon in a good wholesail southeasterly breeze. The yachts were not divided into classes but all sailed in one class under the handicap rule.

There were nine starters and they were sent away at 3 o'clock. The Eclipse with Vice Commodore Sawyer at the helm got way first, but came within an ace of fowling one of the other boats when rounding the turning point into the channel in front of the Wollaston club house float.

Only good seamanship on the part of skipper Sawyer saved a bad mixup. The Eclipse was an easy winner beating the Zoe by nine seconds on corrected time.

The judges were A. E. Hill, W. F. Johnson, E. J. Patterson and J. Hildebrand.

The summary;

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Life insurance as it is asserted costs too much by far in America. This is the great lesson of the Equitable scandal. The public may demand that state or nation run the insurance business. In Germany the government's industrial insurance is run at a cost for administration of only 7 per cent., of the receipts; in England the cost is only 9 per cent. of receipts in the government's ordinary life insurance, but in the average American company it is 34 per cent. Out of every dollar paid for life insurance in this country 34 cents goes for expenses, while government insurances in England is run at one-fourth this expense. America may well take a lesson in life insurance from Germany, and Europe. It is too sacred an institution to be allowed to continue without suitable regulation in the interest of the insured.—Gloucester Times.

THE PEOPLE ALL

In Chorus Cried, Give Us Newbro's Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes," Now "Herpes" is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; this is the microbe that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE promptly destroys; after which the hair grows. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Forty-Seven Men of Gunboat Bennington Buried

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES

Total Number of Casualties Are Placed at 125--Secretary Darling Gives an Official Statement to President Roosevelt Regarding the Disaster

San Diego, Cal., July 24.—Forty-seven of the gunboat Bennington's dead were buried yesterday in a common grave in the little military cemetery on the crest of the promontory of Loma, high above the waters of San Diego bay on the one side, and within sound of the booming surf of the Pacific on the other. Without the crash of drum or the sound of brass, without pomp or parade, yet with simple impressiveness, all honor was paid the nation's dead.

Army and navy paid their last tributes no less sincere than the grief of the representatives of peace who made the journey across the bay. From Fort Rosecrans came the 115th company, coast heavy artillery from the city of San Diego, the naval reserves; from the Universal Brotherhood's home on Point Loma, a company of khaki-clads, and from the government ship Fortuna a dozen sailors. But the most impressive body of mourners was the 52 men from the battered Bennington. Besides there were hundreds of civilians.

San Diego was a city of mourning yesterday. Thousands filed through the morgues with arms filled with flowers which were laid on the draped coffins. Other thousands gathered in the plaza, whence the procession of coffin-laden wagons was to start.

Promptly at noon the long line of vehicles began the journey around the bay to the burial place. Owing to the steep hills and rough roads it was found impracticable to use hearses or even dead wagons, and the bodies were stacked in heavy express wagons. Every casket bore a beautifully executed wreath of asparagus ferns, white carnations and immortelles, sent by the San Diego commercial bodies. Every one of the plain stained caskets was draped with the national emblem and the dead wagons were disguised under the folds of the national colors. From noon until 3 o'clock these dead-burdened wagons tolled toward the burial grounds, and not until almost 4:30 o'clock was the last casket placed in the long trench.

Hundreds of other vehicles stirred the choking dust of the 10-mile road throughout the forenoon, all making for the same point, while every craft that could be had carried across the five-mile stretch of water hundreds who, unmindful of the precipitous heights to be scaled, climbed 500 feet to the crest of the ridge.

The deep trench in which the bodies were placed is 60 feet long and 14 feet wide. Around it were drawn up in long lines the artillery company from the fort on the west; the naval reserves, bearing arms full of flowers, on the north; the Bennington's survivors on the east, and the Universal Brotherhood on the west. Just outside the simple picket fence enclosing the burying ground the public stood.

Shipmates from the Bennington lifted the coffins from the wagons. Squads of six came forward from their ranks in rapid succession, lifted the bodies and deposited them in the trench. The board placed at the head of each body was properly marked and numbered.

It only remained for the representatives of the church to pronounce final blessings for the dead. Rev. J. A. M. Richey, rector of St. Paul's, read the Episcopal burial service. Father A. D. Ubach of the Catholic church then stepped forward. He read the service of the dead and blessed them with water and incense.

Commander Young of the Bennington stepped out from the group of officers at the head of the trench and, raising his hand, commanded instant attention. In a deep, gruff voice—the voice of a typical sailor—he said:

"Captain, commander of Fort Rosecrans and his successors: I commit to your tender care the bodies of our unfortunate shipmates and patriotic dead. May their graves never be forgotten by the hand of affection. May there rise above this, their last resting place, marble slabs to mark the place as sacred to the nation's care and may the morning sun ever kiss the green sod above their dust, emblematic of our love and affection."

"I accept the sacred trust of the honored dead," replied Captain Scott. There was many a tear brushed from moistened eyes by this simple, but impressive, scene.

"Attention" came the command in sharp tones from the sergeant in command of the artillery company. There was a rapid, concerted movement along the double file of soldiers at the head of the grave. Another command and every gun was pointed over the long rows of caskets. In quick succession three sharp volleys were fired. Out of the ranks stepped a bugler and with impressive deliberation the solemn notes of the last bugle call over the dead sounded far out over the bay.

A careful compilation of the Bennington casualties is as follows:

Buried in military cemetery at Fort Rosecrans, 47; dead now in morgue, 11; dead in fire room of Bennington, still

FUNERAL OF BLACKMAR

Old Comrades and the Public Pay Tribute of Respect

Boston, July 24.—Veterans of the Civil war, Sons of Veterans, members of the Wamen's Relief Corps and other patriotic societies paid honor to the late Wilmon W. Blackmar, whose funeral was held in this city, where, at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, he was elected commander-in-chief. General Blackmar died suddenly a week ago yesterday in Boise, Ida., while on a trip of official visits to western departments.

During Sunday morning the body lay in state in Memorial hall at the state house, surrounded by the blood-stained battle flags of the commonwealth and floral tributes from many departments and associations. The casket was draped with the national colors, and guarded by comrades of the E. W. Kinsley post 113, of which General Blackmar was the first commander For three hours a throng, estimated at 10,000 persons, passed silently through the hall and gazed on the face of the dead commander.

Early in the afternoon 30 Massachusetts posts of the Grand Army, followed by the Massachusetts division of the Sons of Veterans, company K., of the Fifth infantry, M. V. M., the funeral party and troop D of the first battalion of the state cavalry, escorted the body to the Second Unitarian church, of which General Blackmar was a member.

The service began with music by a quartet. The invocation and Scriptura lesson followed with another song by the quartet, and the address by Chaplin Horton. Prayer was followed by a hymn and the burial ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic. At the conclusion of the ritual National Bugler Flockton sounded taps from the choir loft and the service ended.

Fixing Up Conferees' Quarters

Portsmouth, N. H., July 24.—Preparations for the peace conference are progressing rapidly and satisfactorily and by Aug. 5, the day on which the plenipotentiaries are expected to reach Portsmouth from Oyster Bay, all will be in readiness for their reception. Mr. Peirce, third assistant secretary of state, who is directing the arrangements, left last night for Washington, where he will provide for the shipment of the necessary furniture for the equipment of the navy general store, which is to be used for the sessions of the conference.

End of Henderson's Point

Portsmouth, N. H., July 24.—Thirty-six tons of dynamite disintegrated the rocky promontory known as Henderson's point, and converted the dangerous "Pull-and-be-damned" whirlpool into a peaceful current, which will have to be renamed without profanity in order to conform to existing facts. The explosion marked the passing of a landmark dreaded by shipping men, and the opening of a new era for the seagoing business of this port. A huge wall of water thrown up was the only feature of a spectacular kind.

Lived With Heart Exposed

Richford, Vt., July 24.—Benjamin Martin, aged 50, while at work in a sawmill here, slipped and fell on a moving circular saw. The teeth of the saw struck him in the left thigh and worked up through his left side to the lungs, cutting them apart and laying bare his heart. Martin scarcely lost consciousness and suffered great agony for 24 hours until his death.

Accident to Autoists

Medfield, Mass., July 24.—A large touring car containing four Hopedale residents was overturned here and two members of the party were seriously, but not dangerously, injured. The automobile was operated by its owner, Fred S. Howard, who sustained a fractured hip, and two of Mrs. W. D. Hadley's ribs were broken. The touring car was wrecked.

Fatally Burned by Bonfire

Pawtucket, R. I., July 24.—Thomas Gorman, 5 years old, while at a bonfire which four of his companions had made, was either pushed or fell into the flames, and, although he jumped out immediately, his clothing was ablaze. He rushed home and died within a few hours in fearful agony. None of the boys was over 6 years old.

Chauffeur Perhaps Fatally Hurt

Newton, Mass., July 24.—Eugene Delbert, chauffeur for Julius Harran of Cambridge, while driving Harran's automobile on Commonwealth avenue last evening was thrown from the car through a collision with a tree and probably fatally injured. Three other occupants of the car, said to be Harvard students, were not injured.

Three Blocks Burned

Skowhegan, Me., July 24.—Three business blocks, a dwelling house, a blacksmith shop and a barn, all situated on Water street in this town, were destroyed by fire. The loss is about $17,400. The fire started in the rear of the second story of a sale stable. The origin is unknown.

Favorite Second In $15,000 Race

New York, July 24.—S. S. Brown's Accountant, quoted at 20 to 1 in the betting, won the $15,000 Brighton Junior stakes for 2-year-olds, six furlongs, at Brighton, defeating the favorite, Pegasus, by a length.

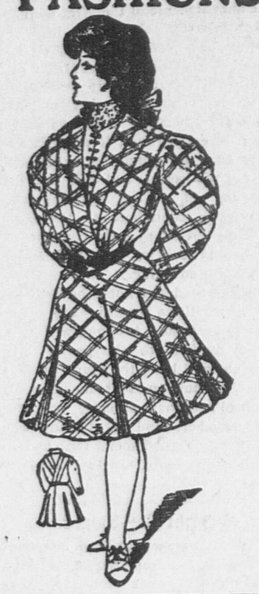
NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Girl's Surplice Costume Designed by Martha Dean—No. 4646



Nothing could be more attractive for everyday or Sunday wear than this model shown here. The model is one of the newest, and one might think at first glance that it would be hard to make, but it is the very opposite. The broad plaited portion crossed in surplice effect is simply laid in deep tucks and then sewed to the outside portion of the blouse. The sleeve is the new leg o' mutton style, with plaits at the lower edge. The skirt is in seven gores, with underplaits at each seam. These underplaits are extensions of the gores, and it is a very simple matter to seam the skirt and then lay the extra width in plaits. For a smart new design that is a combination of new ideas in both blouse and skirt this is a good model to fellow and will be as pretty in a cashmere, challie or pongee as in gingham, linen or madras. Sizes, 12, 14, 16 years.

COTTON SCANDAL

Matter Put Into Hands of the Grand Jury

A STATEMENT BY BEACH

District Attorney Wants No Inquiries on the Subject Until Result of Investigation Is Made Known In Open Court

Washington, July 24.—The grand jury of the District of Columbia will today take up the allegations that there has been jugglery in the cotton crop statistical reports of the department of agriculture, with a view to possible indictment or indictments.

This action is the immediate result of the recent disclosures in the department which culminated in the dismissal of Edwin S. Holmes, the associate statistician. The announcement that the grand jury would meet to consider the subject was made in a statement issued by United States District Attorney Beach. Today's meeting is in pursuance of a call issued by the district attorney July 20 and is to consider among other things "certain criminal practices alleged to exist and to have existed in one of the executive departments." Mr. Beach absolutely refuses to admit which one of the departments this statement has reference to, but it is known that it relates to the department of agriculture.

Mr. Beach's statement adds: "Pending action by that body, it is earnestly hoped, as it is confidently believed, that no inquiries will be made of the district attorney's office upon the subject. To inquire of any member of the grand jury, or of a witness, either under subpoena or after discharge, as to anything transpiring before that body, constitute contempt. This general statement is made to excuse the district attorney from personal interviews with gentlemen of the press. They have always shown his office the greatest consideration and preserved his confidence inviolably. But the very limited time and force at his disposal render this course imperative and no further statement will be made until the grand jury announces in open court the result of the investigation. There may be much or little, or nothing to report, but while the examination is pending, it must, as the law commands, be entirely secret."

Samuel C. Smoot, a merchant, is foreman of the grand jury.

There was no noise; ship filled from stem to stern with scalding steam, soot and ashes; many men blown overboard, others jumped overboard for air, many of whom were drowned. Survivors comfortably quartered in army barracks; wounded are scattered about in three hospitals, those but slightly wounded in private residences.

Later and fuller particulars are expected, which will be transmitted to you by wire at once."

DIPLOMATS UPSET

Russian and German Rulers In Private Conference

SUGGESTION OF KAISER

Meeting Arranged Directly Between Them--Interpreted as Assurance of Germany's Moral Support of Russia

St. Petersburg, July 24.—On the eve of the peace conference, and with a suddenness already disconcerting to diplomatic and court circles, the czar left Peterhof yesterday on board the imperial yacht Polar Star for a conference with Emperor William, who is cruising on the Hohenzollern in Finnish waters.

The first interview of the sovereigns was expected to take place last evening off the Finnish port of Borgo, at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland. This will be followed by another interview today.

The czar is accompanied by his brother, Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, and a considerable suite, including Count Benkendorff, marshal of the court; General Fredericks, minister of the imperial house; Count Heyden, chief of the imperial chancellerie; Admiral Birilloff, minister of marine; Captain Von Essen, who commanded the battleship Sevastopol during the siege of Port Arthur; Captain Chagin, who commanded the Almaz, the only cruiser of Rojestvensky's fleet to reach Vladivostok, after the battle of the Sea of Japan; Captain Hintze, naval attache of the German embassy; also a party of courtiers and the czar's escort of sailors and marines, with a guard commanded by Admiral Neeloff.

It is noticeable that there is no representative of the Russian foreign office among the czar's entourage, nor is the German ambassador, Count Alvensleben, on board the Polar Star. This gives color to a report that the meeting was arranged between the two rulers directly, without recourse to the usual diplomatic channels, Emperor William suggesting the rendezvous by telegraph from Hernoesand, Sweden. The idea, the report says, met with the czar's favor, but the final arrangements were only completed Saturday and some members of the imperial family were hastily commanded Saturday night to accompany the czar.

Many diplomatists were taken completely by surprise by the news, the rumors that a meeting was contemplated which were current since Friday having met with the flattest denials in official quarters and the German ambassador having stated that he knew nothing of any such plan being on foot.

Like the last meeting between Nicholas and William at a hunting seat in Russian Poland, where European and eastern situations were discussed and Russia was assured that she need have no anxiety regarding her western frontier while engaged with the Japanese, the conferences in the cabins of the Hohenzollern and Polar Star will be probably without secretaries or other witnesses.

There is no set program of subjects for discussion aside from a general consideration of the factors in the present situation affecting the two empires, but it can be stated that the coming meeting of the Russo-Japanese plenipotentiaries will occupy a place in the foreground.

The action of the German emperor in seeking a conference at this moment is generally interpreted as an assurance of his moral support of Russia in the coming pour parlers at Washington and Portsmouth. Emperor William has also taken advantage of the occasion to discuss the details of the Russo-Japanese war with eye-witnesses, and the presence of the naval officers who distinguished themselves in the Far East is due to his special request.

Speculating on the Result

London, July 24.—The London newspapers note with inquietude the sudden resolve of Czar Nicholas to visit Emperor William and all kinds of speculations are indulged in as to the possible motives for and the results of such a momentous interview at a time when so many difficult problems are facing European diplomacy. The Moroccan and Scandinavian questions are regarded as possible objects for discussion, and it is also supposed that the reactionary party in Russia may have succeeded in persuading the czar of the impolicy of permitting Witte to conclude peace on a basis acceptable to France and Great Britain.

All the correspondents agree that the interview was of Emperor William's seeking and the result is awaited with the greatest anxiety.

No news of Emperor William's whereabouts has reached London since he left Gefle, Sweden, and was cruising northward. There is no harbor at Borgo and the imperial yachts must be in the open sea.

Telegrams from Berlin indicate that the meeting between the emperors is as great a surprise there as elsewhere, official circle protesting their utter ignorance regarding it.

Japanese Land In Russia

St. Petersburg, July 24.—The correspondent of The Novoe Vremya with the Russian Eleventh army corps says says that Japanese torpedo boats, during a thick mist and rain, approached several bays near Vladivostok and sent a landing party ashore in the Gulf of Gashkevitch, near Possiet bay.

Crew of Four Missing

Lewes, Del., July 24.—Four men are believed to have been drowned by the sinking of the yacht Marekoete in Delaware bay. Dr. H. A. Hare and L. S. Landreth of Philadelphia were rescued and brought here. The four men believed to be dead constituted the crew. The Marekoete grounded on Brandywine shoals during a storm. No Trace of Author of Outrage

Constantinople, July 24.—Three commissions are inquiring into the attempt on the life of the sultan on Friday, but they have not yet been able to find the slightest clue. The scene after the explosion of the bomb was heartrending.

Records Won't Be Inspected

Havana, July 24.—A sequel of the government's insistence of the examination of the municipal affairs of the town of Vuletas was the destruction by fire of the building containing the records and all its contents a few hours before the members of the commission sent by the government were to have begun the inspection, protected by rural guards sent there by the government.

Our last wish is to be buried side by side."

Atlanta, July 24.—The Constitution says: A persistent rumor is afloat in railroad circles here to the effect that John F. Wallace, formerly chief engineer of the Panama canal, is to be made president of the Seaboard Air line. The report cannot be verified, but comes from an apparently reliable source.

TWO DEAD.

Construction Men on Street Railway.

Car Crashes Into a Repair Wagon.

Two Other Employes Now at the Hospital.

As a result of a collision between a construction car and a wire wagon on the Old Colony street railway at Hingham, on Saturday afternoon, Patrick F. Larkin of Quincy and Joseph A. Vaughn of Dorchester, lost their lives, and two others are at the Quincy City Hospital.

The accident happened at the foot of Old Colony hill. The wire wagon stood on the track when the construction car came down the hill. It is said that the brake on the construction car failed to work, and the car came down the hill at a great speed crashing into the wire wagon.

The men were on top of the raised platform of the wire car and were unable to get off. Edwin Ross, driver of the wagon, jumped into the street in time to save himself.

The wagon was practically demolished and the four men on the platform hurled to the ground.

One of the horses was so badly injured that he had to be shot.

Patrick F. Larkin was alive when picked up, but died in a few minutes in a barn where he was taken.

Joseph A. Vaughn was unconscious and Robert Stitt and Leon Casey were dazed.

Later these three were conveyed to Quincy in a special car and taken to the City Hospital.

Sunday afternoon Vaughn was so delirious that he could not be managed and the police were requested to send up an officer.

Officer Johnson, who is on his vacation, volunteered and remained with the injured man at the hospital until he died early this morning.

Larkin was a brother of Officer Larkin and lived at 133 South Walnut street, Quincy.

Vaughn lived at 349 Freeport street, Dorchester.

Casey, Stitt and Ross also lived in Quincy.

Casey's right shoulder and right hip were sprained and he was severely bruised.

Stitt suffered from a shock and bruises, and Ross had his left wrist fractured.

Ross and Casey who are at the Hospital are reported as comfortable.

Clam Farming.

Dr. James L. Kellogg of Williamstown, professor in biology at Williams college, is in Chatham, under the direction of Dr. Field, chairman of the Massachusetts fish and game commission, for the purpose of making an experiment in the artificial culture of clams.

In conversation with a correspondent Dr. Kellogg said: "The growing of clams is entirely feasible and much easier to carry on than the propagation of oysters, which has been proven so successful as to have become a profitable investment for millions of capital and it furnishes employment for thousands of men.

"If the Massachusetts legislators could only be brought to see the wisdom of so amending our state laws that sections of beaches could be leased to individuals who would be protected thereby from unscrupulous poachers. I am confident, this could soon be made very profitable to thousands of fishermen.

"Clams will grow so rapidly and increase so fast after the spawning period that it is best to plant them, if they are an inch long, some distance apart in regular rows so they will not be crowded within a year or so, and even then they need thinning out at intervals. After a man should therefore have a good sized clam garden he would need to be taking out quite a good many to prevent them getting too thick for a healthy growth, thus supplying his customers regularly and keeping his farm in good condition."

Dr. Kellogg is enthusiastic regarding the very few obstacles to contend with in the propagation of clams, as compared with that of oysters and other shell fish, and is extremely desirous for the fish and game commission of Massachusetts to be given an opportunity to prove what can be done in this respect.

He is greatly concerned over the rapid depletion of the clam supply and holds that it is entirely unnecessary for that condition regarding this palatable shell-fish to exist if fishermen and their lawmakers would work in harmony to increase the supply and at the same time build up a very profitable industry.

CLOSE SCORES.

Merrymounts Defeat the Boston Unions.

South Quincys also Win.

Sacred Hearts Victorious Over Arcadia Team.

The Merrymounts defeated the strong Boston Union team on Saturday by the score of five to four. Both pitchers were very steady, neither Kolson nor Kelley gave a base on balls.

In the first inning, the Unions were blanked after the first ball was hit for a clean single, while Taylor managed to get around with the aid of three corking singles.

In the second, the Unions again went out without making a tally this time in order. The Merrymounts got four runs in their half of the inning. Drake drove the ball to left for two bases, and Kolson followed for two more scoring Drake. Mr. Farland knocked out a Texas leaguer placing Kolson on third where he scored on a wild pitch. Granahan struck out. Taylor reached first on an error, and was given third, after Cole failed to reach first, on account of the tactics of Galvin in holding him, Taylor then scored on a hit by Baker, and Donaher was out at first.

That ended the scoring for both sides until the eighth when Foley knocked a doubtful homer into the hole in right field. This was the last run scored by either, leaving the score five to four in favor of the Merrymounts.

Another for Sacred Heart.

The most exciting game of ball this year on the Ward Six play ground was played Saturday, when the Sacred Hearts defeated the strong Arcadia A. A. by the score of 4 to 3. Dolan pitched a fine game, striking out 14 men. The batting of Prescott was one of the features. The fielding of Duggan, Gerry, Granahan, Davis, Cameron and Davidson was good. This makes ten games the Sacred Hearts have won this season. The Arcadias were strengthened by three of the Suffolks of Dorchester.

Cymrodorion Picnic.

The Welsh people of Quincy and Boston held their annual picnic under the auspices of the Order of the Welsh Associates on Great Hill, Houghs Neck, on Saturday afternoon. It proved to be a most popular and enjoyable event from the time it opened with an address by the president of the society, and the singing of the opening hymn, until it closed at 7.30, when the whole concourse sang "The Land of our Fathers." Every minute of the time was occupied by running races, jumping and all manner of innocent games.

After the games were over and everybody had eaten their lunches, an adjournment was made to Nanzanalia hall, where everyone was presented with a ticket for ice cream and refreshments.

Another feast which was far superior was then commenced, and continued without interruption for over an hour; singing the old and new melodies of Wales, for which the Welsh people are celebrated. It is no exaggeration to say that Houghs Neck never was visited before by a jollier and happier crowd.

Incendiary Fires.

The alarm from Box 143 at 12.15 Sunday morning called the department to a fire in two small barns on Station street. One of the buildings was owned by George King and the other by a Swede. There were two cows in one of the buildings but they were gotten out. The two buildings were damaged about $200. The fire is thought to have been the work of an incendiary.

The alarm from Box 441 at 8.33 Sunday evening was for a fire in a small paving cutters shed on Quarry street owned by John Swanson. The building was damaged $40. This fire was also the work of an incendiary.

A small quantity of powder in the building exploded during the fire but did but little damage, and no one was injured by it.

Autoists Fined.

Another bunch of automobile speeders were arraigned before the district court this morning for exceeding the speed limit. One of these was the chauffeur of Henry M. Whitney, for speeding at Quincy. All of the others were at Milton. Fines of $10 each were imposed as follows: Thomas Ayers, Fred B. Lund, James T. Knowles and Jesse H. Marston, Myron W. Riel, Andrew Lumsden, Charles F. Symonds, William D. Smith and Arthur R. Jones. A fine of $15 was imposed on Lewis H. Burnham.

West Quincy Picnic.

The annual picnic of the West Quincy M. E. Sunday School will be held at Randolph Grove, Wednesday, July 26. A special car will leave East Milton at 9.05 A. M. The round trip from East Milton, including admission to the grove will be 20 cents. Children under six will be carried free, if properly accompanied. A committee will take charge of the baskets and will set the tables for all. Any, however who prefer not to contribute to the common fund, but to enjoy the contents of their own baskets, will find ample facilities for so doing.

If those who desire not to be impeded by baskets will see that they are at the parsonage by 8.30. A wagon will convey such baskets to the grove. The special car will leave the grove at 6.45 P. M. Not only present members of the school and their parents, but also former members and all friends who desire a day of good social time and an old-fashioned picnic, are invited to be present.

Midnight Car Stoned.

As the 12.20 street car from Neponset was crossing the Neponset bridge Sunday morning it was stoned by four young fellows. The car crew gave chase but the gang got away.

Later in the morning four young fellows apparently under the influence of liquor, staggered into City Square. As they answered the descriptions of the four fellows wanted, Officers Crooker and Stewart gave chase. The fellows became sober in an instant and ran like the wind.

Later a young fellow was captured on Coddington street, but the car crew could not swear to his identity.

ABOUT THE DEPOT.

Improvements Being Made That Are Appreciated.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

The writer notes with a great deal of interest and pleasure the improvements being made about the railroad station. It has been so long since anything has been done along the line of improvement, that the patrons of the station appreciate the work now underway.

In previous years the plot opposite the station was put in order and shrubs planted. Through neglect these were allowed to run to waste and were finally dug up.

It is earnestly hoped by the writer and others as well that this new work will not be allowed to die out, but will be carefully kept in shape.

If the agent, whose duty it is to see that the surroundings about the station are kept in order, is occupied by other duties, he should see that someone else takes the matter in charge and that it is well cared for. Some may say, "What difference does it make whether these things are kept up or not?" The writer wishes to impress upon such and the officers about the station, that it does make a vast difference, in public opinion, as well as beautifying the station grounds.

CAPT. S. B. BROWN.

Sudden Death of Commander of the Myles Standish.

Capt. Samuel B. Brown of the Nantasket steamer Myles Standish and a native of Quincy, died suddenly in Boston on Monday, having been operated upon the previous Tuesday for appendicitis.

Capt. Brown was the son of Foster and Mary Hamilton Brown, both well known in Quincy years ago. He had an early liking for the water, and when a boy went on a whaling voyage. He became a master mariner and commanded several fine merchantmen, engaged in the foreign carrying trade. He first became connected with the Nantasket Beach boats some 30 years ago, and before 1881 was mate and pilot of the Governor Andrew. He was given command of the William Harrison in 1890; of the Governor Andrew in 1892; of the Nantasket in 1895; and when the Myles Standish went into commission he was made her captain. Capt. Brown was held in the highest esteem by the officers of the company and was a general favorite with all the men of the fleet, owing to his big heartedness and genial disposition.

The funeral services will be held at his late home, Thursday, at 1 o'clock, and the interment will be at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, Quincy. He leaves a widow, one son, a brother and sister.

Funeral of Mr. Larkin.

The funeral of Patrick F. Larkin, who was killed in the railway accident at Hingham last Saturday, was held this morning from St. Johns church. The services were largely attended, and there were many flowers. These included a cross from the street railway men and a pillow from Division 5, A. O. H.

The services were conducted by Rev. Julian E. Johnstone. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, the bearers being Patrick Morris, John D. Moriarty, John J. Connor, Thomas Sheahan, Andrew Casey and Dennis Ford.

Unhappy Dickens.

Dickens had to confess, after a severe trial of married life, that the skeleton in his domestic closet was becoming "a pretty big one." Then, in 1857, came the crisis.

"Poor Catherine and I are not made for each other," he wrote in a letter to Forster, "and there is no help for it. She is exactly what you know in the way of being amiable and complying, but we are strangely ill assorted for the bond that is between us. God knows she would have been a thousand times happier if she had married another kind of man, and her avoidance of this destiny would have been at least equally good for us both. The years have not made it easier to bear for either of us. There is plenty of fault on my side, I dare say, in the way of a thousand uncertainties, caprices and difficulties of disposition, but only one thing will alter all that, and that is the end which alters everything."

Where Silence Is Golden.

This story is illustrative of the absolute silence and loneliness of the typical Australian bush camp:

Two men were camping together, but rarely exchanged a word.

One morning one of the men remarked at breakfast, "Heard a cow bellow in the swamp just now."

Nothing further was said, and they went about their business for the rest of the day. Twenty-four hours later, once more at breakfast, the second man said:

"How d'you know it wasn't a bull?"

Again no comment. Again a pause of twenty-four hours. Next morning the first man began to pack up his "billy" and "swag."

"You going?" inquired the other.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because," said his friend, "there's too much argument in this camp."—Kansas City Star.

Seventeenth Century Wagons.

The introduction of stage wagons in England about the middle of the seventeenth century led to many abuses. In London they were known as "hell carts" on account of the hot time they gave the unfortunates inside. Their drivers were said to be "seldom sober, never civil and always late," and their size—copied by other vehicles—was such that when they broke down all traffic behind "was necessitated to stand stock still on most beastly deep, wet ways till it pleased them to jog on." During the reign of Charles II. parliament passed an act concerning the size of carts and wagons, with extremely heavy penalties for infringements, but when the act came to be applied it was discovered that the model prescribed by it was impracticable to such an extent that the judges gave directions not to enforce the act.

Mayor Keith.

Mayor Thompson has gone away on a vacation trip. During his absence City Clerk Keith is acting Mayor.

The district court will not sit for trial of civil cases until the first Tuesday in September.

LEAPED TO DEATH.

Electric Car Passenger Killed by Jumping from Car.

A passenger on the 8 o'clock car from East Weymouth to Quincy thought to be E. M. Bond, was instantly killed last evening. He gave no signal that he desired to alight, but without warning jumped from the car near the Weymouth High school on Middle street. His neck was broken and he received other bruises, and death was instantaneous.

The conductor says the man boarded his car at Jackson square, East Weymouth, and gave him a transfer from Hingham for Central square.

In the man's pocket was found a blank from Dr. Charles M. Whitney of 591 Tremont street, Boston, who thinks the man may be E. M. Bond, a former patient, who was employed by a Brookline family as chauffeur.

The man was identified this morning as James T. Flood. His home is in Boston, corner of Oak street and Harrison avenue, where he leaves a widow.

He originally came from Stoughton and has sisters at Stoughton and Brockton.

TODAY'S COURT.

The continued case of Charles R. Greeley and Bertha Loud of Weymouth for adultery was called. They waived examinations in the lower court and were held in $1,000 each for the superior court.

John Rusenanty was arraigned for vagrancy at Cohasset. Case placed on probation for one month.

Napoleon Maugeau pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law at Quincy and was fined $50.

ANNUAL OUTING.

Plans for Entertaining the Barre Manufacturers.

Will be in Quincy on Friday.

Both Associations to Make Excursion on Saturday.

The Granite Manufacturers' Association invites the business men of the city to join them on Saturday on their annual outing to Crescent Park, Rhode Island. The tickets for the round trip, including dinner, are but $2.50.

The association has prepared a grand time for the entertainment of the Barre association and other New England granite manufacturers. The Barre men will start Thursday night, and are due in Boston early Friday morning. They will spend the forenoon in and about Boston, and at 1.27 P. M. will take the train for Quincy, arriving at 1.49.

For their entertainment in the afternoon a special car will be taken immediately for the plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding company, the visitors having expressed a desire to see the battleship Vermont and other warships under construction.

Friday evening at 7.45 there will be a joint meeting of the associations at Malnati hall, South Quincy, when business of general importance will be discussed.

Saturday, however, will be the big day, when the Quincy and Barre Associations will make an excursion to Crescent Park. Special cars will be attached to the train leaving Quincy Adams at 7.51 and Quincy at 7.54 for Boston. There will be no long wait in Boston, but at 8.25 the "Granite Manufacturers' Express" will leave the South station for Crescent Park, being due at that popular resort at 9.25 A. M.

The excursionists will parade with a band to the sporting field and a base ball game between teams representing the two associations is scheduled for 10 A. M. There will be other sports including a tug of war, races, etc.

The grand shore dinner will be served at 1 P. M., the excursionists marching to the banquet hall with a band. The numerous attractions of Crescent Park will claim attention during the balance of the stay, the special express leaving the park for Boston at 8 P. M.

The Barre men will leave that night for home.

HOUGHS NECK RAID.

One Man Pleads Guilty to Illegal Keeping.

Chief Burrell, Lieut. McKay with Inspector Bradley, and Officers Goodhue and Curtin made another visit to Houghs Neck Monday night. Armed with search warrants they visited Baxter's hotel run by P. H. Baxter; the Brockton Cafe, run by Napoleon Maugeau, and the barber shop of E. P. Pows.

Nothing was found at Baxter's hotel.

At the Brockton cafe five gallons of beer and 75 empty bottles were seized.

At Pows' barber shop a lot of empties were secured.

Maugeau was arraigned in court for keeping and exposing liquor for sale. He pleaded guilty and was fined $50.

AN IMPROVEMENT.

Much Need of Relocation of Cross Walks in City Square.

Before the post office is removed to the Granite street location, the cross walks should be relocated or new walks put in for the accommodation of the people.

The present walks have never been convenient for people who approach City Square from the west side of Chestnut street and desire to go either to the depot or to Granite street. They simply ignore the walks, even when the streets are muddy.

The walk across Hancock street at the head of Granite street, in particular, should be relocated, so that it will be nearly at right angles to the edgestone. It would not only be more direct, but shorter.

Another walk should start near the driveway to Bethany church and cross to the Dr. Welch block near the store of the F. D. Fellows Company.

A permanent sidewalk in front of Bethany church would also be appreciated and would connect the concrete walk on Chestnut street with the brick walk on Hancock street.

Grocers' Excursion.

Wednesday, Aug. 2d, will be "Grocers' day." The grocery stores throughout the city will be closed. The proprietors and clerks will enjoy a trip to Crescent Park, Rhode Island, and a sail in Narraganset bay. A special train will convey the party to Fall River where a steamer will be taken for Crescent Park.

Dinner will be served at the Park, after which the steamer will again be taken for a sail in Narraganset bay. The return will be made by train from Fall River in the evening.

K. of P. Installation.

Quincy was represented by two or more Monday evening at the public installation of Monatiquot lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Braintree. There was a short parade previous to the meeting, in which members of the Marathon uniform rank made a good showing. The installing officer was Deputy Grand Chancellor Thomas Fallon. Walter S. Ramsdell of Lynn, the Grand Chancellor, was present, also George W. Penniman of Brockton.

Prize Fruit.

Dr. W. G. Kendall of Atlantic took several prizes for fruit at the exhibit of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society last Saturday, including a first prize for Wilder currants, in competition with two quarts of any red variety; also a third prize for White Grape in competition with two quarts of any white variety. Also first prize for his Bates gooseberries in competition with two quarts of any variety of American origin.

A Poor Estimate.

Mayor Reade of Woburn has asked the City Council to appropriate $22,000 additional for High school enlargement, the previous sum being too small.

—Only about one-third of the houses in Brockton are connected with the sewer, according to the clerk of the Board of Health. There are 6,651 residences in the city.

What It Costs
... AND ...
What It Pays

are two values of newspaper advertising ;that the merchan has to consider. But the most important thing is

WHAT IT PAYS.

The merchant can get space in papers of small circulation and little influence for a little less money than the same size space would cost in the DAILY LEDGER and the QUINCY PATRIOT.

DOES IT PAY

to throw away the certainty of the profitable returns which are sure to LEDGER and PATRIOT advertisers, because it costs less to advertise in cheaper paper?

Demand Pure Food.

"A class of young women in the normal school at Westfield spent the last two weeks of the school year in testing foods for the Westfield grocers. The grocers of the town were invited to the laboratory and a demonstration was given of the practicle nature of the work.

The young women found these tests the most entertaining part of their chemistry course and they trotted everything into the labratory from chewing gum to spice.

Prof. L. B. Allyn, the head of the chemistry department, directed the work, and it attracted the attention of many women's clubs in the vicinity, the members of which favor a pure food bill.

The girls drank coffee at breakfast, and they tested coffee after the morning meal for chicory. Then they probed into breakfast food for injurious adulterations. The milk, which was served with their breakfast food, was next put to the test, and even the sugar was given a rigid examination.

One by one the articles sold by most grocers came under their supervision, and the tradesmen sent them new foodstuffs as they came on the market, depending a great deal on their analysis as to whether they would keep the goods in stock or not.

Cigars, cigarettes and liquors went under their searching eyes, and they reluctantly put confectionery to the test. Experiments with the last-named article have proved rather discouraging, for a large amount of candy has been found colored with aniline dyes, a product of coal tar. The aniline dyes in some instances were powerful enough to color pieces of white cloth.

This same dye the young women have found also to a great extent in summer drinks and in jellies. Catchups and other highly colored bottle goods of the sauce variety have been found to contain a large quantity of this coal product.

Among the whisky specimens that have been tested the young women say that only one out of 70 was found pure, and they say that if men knew the stuff that was sometimes sold them for pure tobacco they wouldn't enjoy their smokes so much.

The grocers are gladly taking advantage of the opportunity which these tests give them, and Westfield is rapidly becoming a pure food city."—Boston Globe"

A FACT PROVEN.

Should Convince Even the Most Skeptical of Its Truth.

If there is the slightest doubt in the minds of any that Dandruff germs do not exist, their belief is compelled by the fact that a rabbit innoculated with the germs became bald in six weeks' time.

It must be apparent to any person therefore that the only prevention of baldness is the destruction of the germ—which act is successfully accomplished in one hundred per cent. of cases by the application of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is caused by the same germ which causes baldness and can be prevented with the same remedy—Newbro's Herpicide.

TO INSURE PEACE

England Desires an Understanding With France

WOULD CHECK GERMANY

Great Britain Would Have Stood by France If a Conflict Over Morocco Arose, but Used Good Offices to Prevent It

London, July 25.—From a high official of the foreign office an interesting statement has been obtained regarding the relations of Great Britain, France and Germany. Beginning with a declaration that Great Britain would welcome a defensive alliance with France because it would insure a long continuance of European peace by acting as a check to German ambitions, the official characterized the charges made in the German press against Great Britain of seeking to involve France in a war with Germany as absolutely contrary to the facts. He said:

"France certainly is not desirous of war with Germany, and if Great Britain, as alleged, urged France to fight, the French government and press would not now display that friendliness towards us which is apparent on all sides.

"When Germany created the controversy with France over Morocco, the British government informed the French government that it would support it in whatever policy it decided to pursue. Accordingly, Great Britain declined to participate in the international conference when France declined, and accepted when France reconsidered its decision; but any charge that we sought to bring about war or failed to use our good offices to prevent a conflict is absolutely false. We would undoubtedly have stood by France in any conflict over the Moroccan question, but we do not want a conflict and desire an understanding with France solely to insure peace.

"Great Britain at war would suffer infinitely greater commercial losses than her adversary. For one thing, our entire shipping would go to America and the people would overthrow any government assuming an aggressive attitude."

Regarding the diplomatic relations between Germany and Great Britain the interviewer was informed that they were not in the least strained and that there never had been any serious difficulties between the two governments. It has always been considered here that Germany's attack on the French Moroccan policy dealt directly with the Anglo-French entente, while well-founded opinions have been expressed that Germany would welcome an understanding with France on Far Eastern matters, in which the interests of the two countries are similar.

It would seem that France, instead of occupying a begging role, is the fortunate possessor of two suitors in the greatest rivals in Europe.

Not Worried Over Conference

London, July 25.—The British foreign office does not appear to anticipate that the meeting between Emperor William and Emperor Nicholas will be followed by any startling developments. The officials here are inclined to attribute the meeting primarily to the German emperor's desire to remove the resentment which is known to have been growing in Russia against Germany since the cordial reception of Prince and Princess Arisugawa of Japan. The foreign office adds that there is no doubt that politics were discussed between the emperors and that there is also no doubt that Emperor William's advice will be in the direction of the conclusion of peace.

Deserves Love of the Poor

Baltimore, July 25.—Dr. Michael K. Warner, who died last Saturday, is found to have destroyed all books containing accounts with his patients in order that they be not pressed for payment by his administrators. A great many of his patients were poor people and Dr. Warner gave as his reason for destroying the books that his patients knew what they owed him and he had no doubt that they would pay his heirs when they were able to do so.

Will Not Embarrass Investigation

Albany, July 25.—Governor Higgins' attention was called to the discovery that there was no actual provision for paying the expenses of the legislative insurance investigation committee. "The expenses will be met by legislative appropriations at the next session," said Higgins, "and meanwhile the comptroller will borrow the money. Rather than see a delay from this cause I would advance the money myself."

Four Killed by Toadstools

Philadelphia, July 25.—Toadstools mixed with mushrooms and eaten at a birthday party caused the death of four members of the family of Joseph Franzor, a farmer of Landisville, N. J. One of the Franzor children gathered some of the fungi and the mother, supposing they were mushrooms, added them to mushrooms taken from the garden.

Marshall Islands Devastated

Sydney, N. S. W., July 25.—News has been received here that a hurricane has devastated the Marshall islands.

The Marshall islands form a large archipelago of small islands of coral formation northeast of the Ladrone islands, Polynesia.

FISHERMEN'S LUCK

Record Fares of Mackerel and Groundfish Reach Boston

Boston, July 25.—All known records for mackerel and groundfish were broken yesterday at T wharf, the best known fish dock of this port, and fishermen are making small fortunes from the catch this season. A fleet of 11 mackerel seiners brought in 202,000 fresh and 1555 barrels of salt mackerel, while the fleet of 34 groundfish schooners brought in 1,000,000 pounds of haddock, 300,000 pounds large cod, 175,000 pounds market cod, 100,000 pounds hake, 100,000 pounds pollock, and 75,000 pounds cusk, while in addition there came 319 swordfish, or over 60,000 pounds.

That fortunes are being made this season from mackerel is to be seen from the figures of Captain Morgan of the seiner Constellation, who has stocked $15,000 for his vessel since July 10. In 13 days he has made four trips, catching at the rate of $1000 a day or more. A close competitor is Captain Welch of the Lucania, who has laid aside $12,000 as the vessel's share of the 14 days' earnings.

Ban on Cigarets

New York, July 25.—An order has been issued by Commissioner Watchorn prohibiting the sale of cigarets on Ellis island. The order was issued at the request of the authorities of the several western states which have recently passed laws prohibiting the smoking of cigarets within their borders. These authorities informed Watchorn that immigrants straight from Ellis island were bringing west cigarets in large quantities with which to supply their friends and relatives who were unable to buy them.

Yellow Fever Situation Serious

New Orleans, July 25.—Mayor Behrman, in view of the presence of yellow fever in New Orleans, issued a proclamation last night to the people of New Orleans, calling special attention to the necessity of screening houses and placing nets over all water which might breed mosquitoes. Up to date there have been 17 cases of yellow fever in New Orleans and six deaths.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Lady's Dressing Sack Designed by Martha Dean—No. 6247

The feminine wardrobe has no more satisfying feature than the dressing sack, which is ever ready to rest the weary and offer relief from tight, uncomfortable garments. It is always convenient to slip into for breakfast with his lordship or don for the quiet noonday repast. The model shown is very simple of construction, yet its very simplicity is grace. The full body part is gathered on to a yoke and falls thence to a little below the waist line. The broad shaped collar is its only adornment, and this is a very becoming feature. Challies, French flannel, one of the oriental silks or a washing fabric will develop it into a very pleasing accessory. Lace, embroidery or ribbon may trim the collar and cuffs. Sizes, 32 to 42 inches bust measure.

AS TO MANCHURIA

China's Note Issued Upon Her Own Initiative

BOYCOTT ON OUR GOODS

Organized by Commercial Guilds, Over Which Chinese Government Has No Control--Effort to Allay Anti-American Agitation

Amherst, Mass., July 25.—That China, in communicating to the powers her unwillingness to recognize any arrangement regarding Manchuria about which she had not previously been consulted, acted entirely upon her own initiative, is the emphatic statement of Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, the Chinese minister, who is spending the summer here, where he went to school 25 years ago.

"The note just made public by the Washington government," declared the minister, "was addressed by my government first to the belligerents and later to the neutral powers. Previous to this my government had sounded its governors and viceroys and ministers abroad regarding various phases of the Manchurian question and the notification to the powers that we should not recognize any arrangement regarding the Chinese province of Manchuria about which we had not been consulted beforehand was not prompted or even suggested, so far as I am aware, by any other government, but emanated directly from the Pekin government, which acted in this matter entirely on its own initiative."

The minister has received brief advices about the boycott declared against American goods by Chinese merchants. On this point he said: "The Chinese government has done what it could to discourage this boycott, which is not in any way a governmental affair, but emanates from the commercial guilds, over which the government has no control."

The minister added that his government would continue to do what it could to allay the agitation and expressed the hope that it would not interfere in any way with the cordial relations between the two governments. At the Chinese legation the hope is expressed that when the willingness of this government to interpret the present immigration law in a broad spirit and to afford to the non-laboring class of Chinese proper facilities for travel in this country becomes generally known throughout China, the present anti-American feeling will subside.

The outlook for a new immigration treaty is not regarded as bright at this time. A more immediate means of relief, it is believed, will be found in an amendment of existing laws under which only Chinese laborers would be excluded from this country. It is probable this matter may be taken up at the next session of congress.

No attempt is made at the legation to conceal the seriousness of the present boycott or the fact that feeling against American restriction of Chinese immigration of the better class runs high in Chinese commercial circles.

Boycott Gaining Strength

Paris, July 25.—First Secretary Lien of the Chinese legation, in an interview in The Matin, says: "The boycott of American goods is gradually extending and will probably gain considerably in northern China. The Chinese press is taking an active part in the boycott, in the struggle over which China has nothing to lose. The movement is very popular and will only cease when the United States modifies certain laws affecting our countrymen.

Still Infected With Strike Fever

Chicago, July 25.—At a mass meeting of employers, at which representatives of 200 business houses were present, it was unanimously decided that no more of the teamsters who were recently on strike would be reinstated until all of the unions involved have called off the strike. The teamsters are in a belligerent mood and threats are freely made that unless the employers recede from their position there will be a general strike of all the union teamsters in Chicago, numbering 35,000 men.

Carter's Resignation Declined

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 25.—Governor Carter of Hawaii came to Oyster Bay determined to resign his official position to escape the annoyance to which he has been subjected since he succeeded Sanford B. Dole as governor. The president not only declined to accept his resignation, but told him to go back to Honolulu and he should have the full support and sympathy of the national administration.

New York, July 25.—The appraisal of the estate of Frank H. Croker, son of Richard Croker, who was killed in an automobile accident in Florida, was filed last evening. As he died intestate his father is entitled to the whole estate. Croker left no personal estate, and his real property, after deductions for debts and expenses of administration, amounts to $491,386.

Steerage Rate War to End

New York, July 25.—In an agreement which, it is believed, will be signed by the representatives of all the 13 lines running to the Mediterranean, the steerage rate, which has been at a minimum of $16, will be raised to $26 and the long rate war between the lines will be over.

LITTLE BOAT WON

Talisman Had Tempestuous Run In Power Boat Race

Marblehead, Mass., July 25.—After a daring run of 288 miles along the New England coast in unusually tempestuous conditions for midsummer, the 28-foot motor launch Talisman, owned by William Saville of Boston and built in that city, won the Knickerbocker Yacht club's long distance power-boat race from New York to this port.

Battered by heavy seas for nearly 24 hours, with her seams started and her wet and hungry crew pumping vigorously, the Talisman, the smallest of the fleet of 12, which started in the contest at noon on Saturday, struggled into this harbor shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning, the winner of the $250 silver cup.

Late yesterday afternoon another Boston boat, the Blink, owned by C. W. Esterbrook, and the largest boat of the fleet, came into the harbor, finishing at 5:27:10. As the Blink allowed the Talisman 16h. 46m. 19s., she was beaten by the smaller boat in corrected time 24h. 48m. 33s.

About two hours later two other boats came neck and neck for the finish line. They were the Aquilla, owned by A. H. Chase of Providence, and the Glissando, owned by F. L. Andrews of Fall River. The former finished four seconds in the lead. As both the Blink and the Aquilla allowed the Glissando considerable time, the last named yacht probably won the second prize for the contest, a bronze cup,

At dark last night none of the other contestants had arrived.

Won't Build Four-Tuack Subway

Boston, July 25.—The Boston Elevated Railway company last night notified Mayor Daly of Cambridge that the directors of the company declined to accept the provisions of the act of the last legislature, which provided for the construction of a four-track subway from Scollay square, this city, to Harvard square, Cambridge, because of the great cost of a four-track subway, but express a willingness to build a two-track subway.

Explosion In Silk Mill

Norwich, Conn., July 25.—The mill of the Norwich Silk company in Thamesville was wrecked by the explosion of the boiler and Joseph E. Hopkins, aged 65, engineer and fireman at the plant, was fatally burned, dying a short time after the explosion. The fifty other employes in the building escaped without any serious injuries. The mill had been in operation only three months.

Boston, July 25.—Governor Douglas informed a special representation of the Democratic state committee that he would not be a candidate for re-election this year. Several months ago the governor made an announcement to the same effect, but he was asked yesterday to reconsider his decision by a committee of prominent Massachusetts Democrats.

Children Had Narrow Escape

Lynn, Mass., July 25.—Several children had a narrow escape from injury or death in this city last night when a three story tenement building under construction suddenly collapsed. The children were playing in and about the building at the time of the accident. It is believed that a lot of timber placed on the second floor caused the collapse.

Boston, July 25.—Just as four Worcester lads were about to board a train from this city for New York last night, they were placed under arrest by Boston police and locked up to await the arrival of officers from Worcester, where they are charged with the larceny of money and silverware. The lads' ages range from 14 to 15 years.

WILL BE THOROUGH

Wreck of the Bennington to be Investigated

RECORDS PERHAPS LOST

Steam Engineering Bureau Has Not Received Report For the Quarter Ending Last of June --Death List of Fifty-Eight

Washington, July 25.—Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte says that the public may rest assured that the Bennington disaster will be thoroughly investigated and that whatever action the results of the investigation may show to be proper will be taken by the department promptly and effectually.

Secretary Bonaparte held an extended conference with Assistant Secretary Darling and found that Darling had done everything possible to alleviate the sufferings of the wounded and for the proper care of the dead, as well as to lay the foundation for the investigation of the explosion.

When Admiral Goodrich reaches San Diego it is expected that the board of investigation which Captain Drake ordered to determine the extent of damage to the hull and engines also will be ready to report the results of their investigation to the admiral. It is suggested at the navy department that some of the steam engineering records of the Bennington may have been destroyed when the ship was blown up. The quarterly report, covering the period from March 30 to June 30 has not been received at the bureau of steam engineering. It is possible, it is stated, that the mailing of the report may have been delayed, and that it was aboard ship at the time of the explosion.

The department has telegraphed to Captain Drake for a list of the survivors. This was done because of the numerous inquiries that have come from relatives of the sailors who have not been reported among the dead or injured. The department has directed that a report be sent to the department daily from San Diego.

Admiral Dewey has received from Vice Admiral Lord Beresford, commanding the British Mediterranean fleet, now stationed at Gibraltar, a message of condolence, to which Dewey sent an appropriate response.

An expression of regret and sympathy came to Assistant Secretary Darling from Bennington, Vt., the town after which the ill-fated ship was named.

Fifty-Eight Men Dead

San Diego, Cal., July 25.—All the men connected with the gunboat Bennington at the time of the fatal boiler explosion in San Diego harbor have been accounted for. Exploration of the vessel's hold continues as it is rapidly emptied of water.

The summary of the situation is: Dead, 58; wounded, 46; uninjured, 92; deserter, 1. Total number of crew before accident 197. C. A. Mumper has been found alive and uninjured, blotting out any missing list. Seven injured men are in a critical condition.

The Bennington's interior now presents a less disordered appearance. Boiler B, which exploded first, is seen to have moved 15 feet aft, and the two exploded boilers are jammed against a steel bulkhead. In the starboard storeroom is a mass of water-soaked and ruined ship goods. A board has been appointed to attend the work of condemning the stores. The conditions in the engine room are such that it will probably take two days to discover the full amount of the damage there.

The name of the deserter is said to be Grove, a San Diego boy, who left the ship the night before the explosion. Had he been aboard he probably would have been with those who were instantly killed.

Commander Young and the officers of the ship have begun an investigation into the cause of the explosion.

Sailors Thought Boilers Unsafe

Honolulu, July 25.—G. A. Whitlock is under arrest on a charge of having deserted from the gunboat Bennington. He says he missed the vessel and is congratulating himself on his failure to reach the wharf in time. He says he did not intend to desert. According to Whitlock, it was common talk among the members of the Bennington's crew that the boilers of the gunboat were unsafe. Whitlock also says that the chief machinists of the Bennington told him that the boilers of the boat were unsafe.

Won't Countenance Blackmail

New York, July 25.—W. D. Mann, principal owner of Town Topics, was among the passengers on the Zealand, which arrived last night from European ports. Mann was asked concerning the district attorney's investigation being conducted in connection with "Fads and Fancies." He said: "If any of Town Topics men have been guilty of blackmail I hope they will all go to jail and I'll help to put them there."

Detention Camps Necessary

Washington, July 25.—Acting Surgeon General Glennan of the public health and marine hospital service has been informed that there was a death from yellow fever in New Orleans yesterday outside the district which previous deaths had occurred. Detention camps will be established at all small places on the railroads near New Orleans.

Refuse to Answer Questions

St. Paul, July 25.—Investigation of the business methods of the General Paper company was begun here before Robert S. Taylor, special examiner. The General Paper company was represented by J. G. Flanders, who instructed witnesses to refuse replies to all questions bearing on the existence or non-existence of a combination to equalize profits or prices. To every question asked that could by any possibility have borne on the issue under investigation replies were refused. The government will appeal to the court for an order compelling witnesses to answer questions.

Loss of Twelve Lives and $650,000

Houston, July 25.—With probably 12 persons dead, the fire in the Humble oil fields is still burning fiercely, but remains confined to the tanks of the Texas company. The burned men were all negroes employed to prevent the spread of the flames. Forty-three mules perished. The managers of the Texas company say that the tanks contained approximately 2,500,000 barrels of oil, valued at 25 cents a barrel, and that none of the oil will be saved. In addition, the big pumping plant was destroyed, making a total loss of more than $650,000.

To Get Taxes From the Rich

St. Petersburg, July 25.—The ministry of finance is elaborating a scheme for the imposition of additional taxes to the amount of $50,000,000 annually. This will constitute a new departure in Russian taxation, the new taxes being imposed principally on the well-to-do classes. The principle of a tax on incomes and also on inheritances will be introduced.

RAILWAY RATE PROBLEM

Why Trainmen Oppose Control by Government Commission.

P. H. MORRISSEY'S EXPLANATION.

No Mercenary Stand, Says Grand Master of Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, For Wage Cutting Would Not Follow Rate Reduction. Discriminations and Alleged Rebates, He Says, Come From Trusts.

P. H. Morrissey, grand master of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, discussing at Cleveland, O., with a representative of the New York Globe what he considers the most important matter now before railroad employees, the proposition to regulate railroad rates by a government commission, said:

"The strength of unions has developed in the United States, and particularly that of railroad unions, because of their ability to demonstrate to the railroad officials the soundness of any proposition it may be necessary to present. By care in selection of members and by presenting only proper claims the unions have arrived at a position where the railroad officials respect them the more because they have shown that there is a mutual interest between the railroad management and the unions. It is this mutuality of interest that leads me to depart from our usual custom and discuss this railroad rate regulation, although as a rule I am averse to newspaper controversy.

"Railroad employees cannot expect high wages and reasonable hours unless the railroads are making money. It has been stated that if rates were reduced, and rate regulation means nothing else, the first reduction in expense would be a cut in wages. This is not so, and proper consideration of the situation will prove it. The railroads realize the necessity of employing intelligent, experienced men and of having them satisfied both with their work and with their wages. The result of a cut in wages would be, first, to dissatisfy the employees and make them seek employment elsewhere, and, second, to force the railroad officials to accept in their places men who are inferior both in mechanical work and in judgment, which is a necessity to every man who works on a railroad.

"The railroads would never do this, if for no other reason than because they appreciate that the pecuniary disadvantages which would result from the employment of incompetent help would more than offset the difference between the wages now paid and those which would be paid if a cut were made. So it is not from the viewpoint of immediate personal injury that we are earnest in discussing this matter, but from the viewpoint of the greatest good to the greatest number.

"Those of us who have been in the service ten or twenty years remember the hard times of the railroad wars and the cut rate periods. We, perhaps better than the shipper, were impressed with the disadvantages resulting therefrom. We had to handle defective cars and attempt to move trains with locomotives which needed repairs. At times and on some railroads we went for months with but part of our pay, and we know how disastrous and disorganizing such a situation is.

In the past ten years we have seen the railroads rebuilt and re-equipped. We have assisted, in fact, I do not think it is too strong to say we have forced better wages for the men and the employment of a better class of men, and during this time the public has not suffered, because rates have not been increased.

"Because railroads have been able to find the money with which to rebuild tracks and buy new cars and locomotives without raising the rate is no argument that if the rates be reduced they will be able to continue to do so. We are in constant touch with and know all the patrons of the railroads. We know the shippers and the travelers, and we know the patrons of the railroads which we serve are satisfied with the present passenger and freight rates. The discriminations which we hear about, the alleged rebates and things of that kind, come principally from the greedy trusts, and we are not overanxious to assist them."

Jeannette Gilder's Cut on Verbs.

Jeannette L. Gilder, editor of the Critic, was at Cleveland, O., a few hours recently on the way to Duluth. In an interview she startled the reporter by dropping as many verbs as possible, says a Cleveland dispatch to the Chicago Tribune. She said:

"Queer thing about Cleveland. Must be rich city. More automobiles than in New York. So many women drive them, the big ones. Cleveland women of more rugged type than New York women. New York women content to amble about in little electric runabouts. No dash, no go. Great difference here. By the bye, what about the poor horse? One this morning hitched to a dirt wagon. Only one I saw. Poor, bony animal. Sorry for him, honestly."

Japanese on Texas Rice.

Baron Masano Masudaira, a Japanese nobleman, has been traveling in Texas, which he declares to be a great country for rice. He regards Texas rice as almost on a par with the product of his native country and feels sure that it can be raised there with good profit. The baron is of opinion that in a reasonably short time many Japanese of wealth and standing will become residents of the Lone Star State.

ROMAN DICE THROWING.

Devices Used to Prevent Fraud in the Days of the Caesars.

The number of dice used was three, being marked with a minimum of one and a maximum of six spots. The most fortunate throw, called venereus by Cicero and basilicus by Plautus, was when the dice showed three seniones, or eighteen spots. The gravity of the losses depended naturally upon the amount of money at stake and the fines that were paid when the dice showed one or more aces.

It is difficult to explain what skill had to do with such a game. Still Isidore describes how inveterate gamblers could succeed in throwing the six and in avoiding the unit. In a graffito at Pompeii an honest player congratulates himself for having gained a good sum of money without fraud. Plautus dwells on these dishonest practices, to avoid which several instruments were invented, such as the horn and the fritillus.

It seems, however, that these instruments did not always fulfill their purpose. A third one was consequently invented in the shape of a tower, with a spiral staircase inside and a funnel on top. The dice, shaken first in the horn or in the fritillus, were thrown into the funnel and rolled down the spiral staircase until they landed on the table. Such precautions rendered cheating almost impossible.

INK THAT LIVES.

The Indelible Writing Fluid Used by the Old Irish Monks.

It is impossible to read the most ancient histories of the Irish saints without noticing how large a part books play in their lives.

In the library some cut the sheets of parchment or even sewed together in the neatest way the odd shreds, for the monk must not waste the gifts of God, especially when they are rare and dear. They polished it on one side until it was smooth and laid it near the scribe. Others prepared the peculiar thick inks of the Irish writers, very much like varnish, in different colors. The red was the most beautiful, and after 1,000 years it yet shines as the day it was first used. It was got from a kind of cockles collected on the seashore. Then there were black and green and golden inks, used in various thicknesses by the illuminators and the artists in miniature.

All these inks will resist chemicals that corrode iron. The ink was placed in thin conic glasses attached either to the side of the desk or to the chair, sometimes to the girdle of the writer, often fixed to the end of a pointed stick placed upright in the ground. It is owing to this peculiar skill in making ink that so many of the old Irish manuscripts have come down to us.—London Answers.

MISSING PERSONS.

Thousands Yearly Disappear and Are Never Heard From.

More than 5,000 persons annually disappear in the United States and are never heard from again. At first blush the assertion seems incredible, but police statistics furnish confirmation. The actual figures, based on a conservative calculation, are even more alarming than those given.

The tragedies of real life hidden within these peculiar cases, if they could but be brought to light, would rival many of the novels penned by the world's greatest writers. No subject that can be imagined has such weird fascination as that of the thousands and thousands who have gone down this grand canyon of oblivion.

It would be possible to fill many pages with the absorbing stories of these curious cases, but nearly every reader of the newspapers, whether he lives in village, town or city, is probably acquainted with some instance of the kind concerning either friend or relative. Men and women who have lost all they treasured most in life in this manner go about vacantly, numbly, ever waiting for the return of the missing one—a dream that never comes true.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Trousers In England.

Strange though it may appear to the present generation, it seems that trousers when first introduced into England were regarded as anything but a mark of respectability. In the original trust deed, drawn up in 1820, of Bethel chapel, Cambridge street, Sheffield, there was a clause containing the following prohibition: "Under no circumstances whatever shall any preacher be allowed to occupy the pulpit who wears trousers." It is scarcely necessary to add that knee breeches and gaiters were then the correct attire.

A Flier.

"What's the reason you are so late?" demanded Mrs. Suburban.

"Well, you see," explained her bemuddled husband, "the train I came in on went so fearfully fast that we skipped several towns and had to go back after them!"—Detroit Free Press.

His Enviable Position.

"Are you in any way related to the nobility, Mr. Goldwaller?" inquired the reporter.

"Nope!" replied the rectangular but eminently astute old millionaire. "You see, all my children are boys."—Puck.

Our Flexible Language.

"Pa, what does it mean when you say that one man completely overshadows another?"

"Why—it means that he outshines him."

"Oh!"—Cleveland Leader.

Mean.

First Fair One—How dreadful it is to have a skeleton in the family! Second Fair One—I know, dear. Have you ever tried exercise?

At Commencement

[Original.]

The decennial meeting of my class at college was a very enjoyable affair. Having been out in the world ten years, we had had some experience and were still young. At the banquet, held at a place where other class dinners were in progress at the same time, we exchanged experiences, and it came out that every man had been at least reasonably successful.

When I had had enough of the speaking, in order to escape the heat and air laden with tobacco smoke I went out on to a balcony. The only seat was by a window opening into a small room where sat four venerable men at dinner. I could not help overhearing what they said and soon became deeply interested. I made out that they were graduates celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their graduation. It was not long before I had all their names. They were Alcott, Bates, Oviatt and Wells. They were telling their experiences.

"My life," said Alcott, "has been one succession of failures. As you all remember, I was graduated one of the lowest men in our class."

"That's because you wouldn't study. You might have been one of the first," said Bates.

"At any rate, I stood low. I found a job at reporting and slaved along, trying to make a decent living and rise to something better. But whenever a man was wanted for a first class position some one else was chosen. I did some scribbling and occasionally hit off something that pleased my friends, but not the public or the publishers, which brings the same result. In my old age I am still scribbling and for small pay."

The next man's experience was that of Bates. "I was a good man at talking in a crowd while in college and, as you remember, was the orator on class day. Soon after getting out into the world I drifted into politics. Most of my life has been spent in congress. I was supposed to represent the people of my district. That was all bosh. I represented the political boss. There were certain perquisites to my office that enabled me to accumulate some money, but I was obliged to divide with the boss, and he finally wanted the lion's share. Then I announced that I would retire. I went out of office with a fine send off. I should have been sent to—but I'm getting too confidential. I wish, Tom Alcott, I had your record. It is at least clean."

"Come, doctor," said Wells, "it's your turn next."

"My record," said the doctor, "is worse than Bates'. On graduating I chose medicine for a profession. At that time we doctors knew very little, comparatively, and worked in the dark. I had a streak of bad luck that would have consigned me to expulsion from the profession had it not been for a plausible, sympathetic way I had with me that especialy caught the women. By dint of overcharging the rich I managed to make a few fees every year that gave me a living, but it's only lately since some new discoveries in medicine have been made that I can say my fees have been honestly earned."

"Well, boys," said Wells, "I suppose it's up to me to give you the worst failure of the lot. I have no right to be here, for, as you know, I was rusticated three times and shortly before graduation was fired by the faculty for general cussedness. If I had known these confessions would be in order I would have stayed away. However, mean as I am, I'm not mean enough to let you fellows do all the confessing. I made up my mind to get rich, and I have got rich. And how have I done it? It would take a volume to tell all of the mean things I've done. I began by trying to get things for less than they were worth and to sell them for more than they were worth. I jewed everybody down to starvation prices for what I bought, irrespective of their necessities or the value of their wares. By this means I rose steadily until I organized my own company to do business and elected myself president. I soon saw that if I didn't kill off competition, competition would kill me. The consequence is that I've ruined everybody that has sought to succeed in my line except a few who are now with me in the trust. That's my record, and if you can find a meaner one I'd like to know it."

Soon after the confessions were all in the old men broke up from their last class meeting, and I went back to the banquet room of my own class in a very thoughtful condition. Commencement took place the next day, and among the oldest graduates I found a man who was in college with the men whose confessions I had overheard, and I asked him if he knew them.

"Know them! Of course I do! I knew them in college, and know them now. Bates represented his district in congress for thirty years and was an honor to his country. Dr. Oviatt stands very high in his profession and would have been rich had he not spent the most of his time attending the poor with no pay. Wells is one of the most prominent business men in the country, and his success is only equaled by his munificence. Alcott is the only one who has not accomplished much at earning money, but he is truly artistic, and true art is unremunerative. Alcott has written some beautiful things, but they are all too refined for the public taste. There are not four better men in the world than Alcott, Bates, Oviatt and Wells."

What meant the discrepancy of these two views? Were the men who had made confessions right, or was their standing in the community as they deserved? I leave the problem to be solved by better minds than mine.

A NAKED MAN

Seen in the Woods at East Braintree.

May be Missing Insane Man.

The Search for Him Thus Far Fruitless.

The residents of East Braintree, especially the female portion, are considerally stirred up over the thoughts that a naked wild man is running about their neighborhood, who has up to the present time eluded all attempts to locate him.

The woods along Quincy avenue have been thoroughly searched but he can not be found. He was seen Tuesday by Mrs. B. J. Loring. When the man saw her he plunged into the woods and made off.

Mrs. Loring lost no time in notifying the police. A searching party was immediately organized and the woods in that section were thoroughly searched. While the search was in progress the police learned of other people who had seen the man.

According to Mrs. Loring the man answers the description of one George Henry Pratt, an insane man, who is missing from Sheldon, Conn.

One of the circulars sent out by the authorities at Sheldon was sent to her husband, who is an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and Mrs. Loring says that the man she saw tallies with that description.

Another search is being made for the man today, although the chances are that he is far away by this time, if he is the party he is supposed to be.

TROUBLE FEARED.

Mrs. Bertha Loud on Warpath for Dr. Greeley.

The case of Charles R. Greeley and Bertha Loud of East Weymouth, who were in court Tuesday for a statutory offense, has assumed a more serious aspect. The couple according to the police have had frequent quarrels of late, because Greeley does not marry her. As neither of the parties are divorced they can not well marry.

Mrs. Loud has taken possession of Greeley's office, and installed herself there, and has armed herself to keep him out.

The police fear trouble between the parties and are on the watch to prevent murder.

Plead Guilty.

Isabelle C. Baxter of Pierce's hotel at Houghs Neck, one of the places that was raided by the police Sunday morning, was summoned into court this morning and arraigned upon a complaint charging her with keeping and exposing liquor for sale. She waived the reading of the complaint and entered a plea of guilty. The court imposed a fine of $50 which she paid.

To Examine Plumbers.

The board of examiners of plumbers met Tuesday night and organized with William H. Teasdale as chairman and William A. Bradford as secretary. The third member of the board is Warren S. Parker. A session for the examination of applicants for plumber's licenses will be held next Monday.

A small party from Quincy Point enjoyed a trolley trip to Concord and Lexington on Wednesday.

—Arrangements are completed for the 20th annual camp meeting of the Salvation army of New England to be held at South Framingham, July 30th to Aug. 6, inclusive.

—"Give me a little time, judge, and I'll be good," sniffled the accused. "Ten days," said the judge.

—The assessors of Waltham gave out the tax rate Saturday at $16.80, last year it was $16.50.

Fearless Report on Life Insurance.

Insurance Commissioner Raps Three Big Companies

THE EQUITABLE SCANDAL

Opening of Chasm Showed Hidden Secrets of "Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde" Company--Royal Arcanum Case Dealt With

Boston, July 26.—Scathing criticism, pointed condemnation and fierce denunciation of the methods and course of the big insurance companies characterizes the annual report of Frederick L. Cutting, commissioner of insurance for Massachusetts, just issued. The report is exhaustive in its review of methods employed by high insurance officials during the past several years and contains a recommendation that the legislature at its next session take up the matter of deferred dividends and the relation between insurance companies and their allied trust companies and other questions, with a view of compelling reform.

The report considers insurance in connection "with the gambling instinct," and tells of the influence upon the officials of insurance companies from the "dubious schemes," "schemes for getting enormously rich," the "graft by city officials, state officials, national officials, petty legislators, congressmen, United States senators and courts subservient to the great Moloch, money," that they have seen all about them, and they also saw "tainted money eagerly sought by college and pulpit."

Commissioner Cutting names several companies. Of the Equitable Life, the Mutual Life and the New York Life, termed the "big three" and the "racers," the report says that they have been largely responsible for the excessive expenses of the business, "to swell the volume of which and become the biggest has led each to pour out money like water;" and it recommends an immediate and complete reform of these in respect to the extraordinary deposits made by them with a few favored banks and trust companies. It approves the smaller companies "that have been content with a moderate pace," and says that "in times of doubt and stress the public, suddenly grown conservative through the educational effect of a great scandal like the one recently developed, will turn to them as a safe refuge."

Referring to the Equitable Life Assurance society, the report says: "To all outward appearances, life insurance has been booming along serenely and beautifully during the past 25 years, with money rolling into the treasuries in broad streams. But a rude awakening came. A chasm opened, showing the hidden secrets of a great 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' insurance company. It had suddenly dawned that during these 25 years of peaceful conquest of millions of public money there had been Judases at work betraying their trusts for financial gain."

Fraternal insurance and the case of the Royal Arcanum are dealt with at some length in the report, the commissioner expressing his opinion that the new rates recently adopted by that order and causing such a stir within its ranks are not too high, and states: "The fraternity does not exist, nor, in view of the inexorable law of nature, will it or any other kind of insurance company exist, which can continue to pay death claims indefinitely if it merely collects the cost of insurance for age of entry."

After dealing at length with the subject of life insurance, of the enormous amount of money involved and of the close relations between the companies and the subsidiary trust companies, the commissioner says, referring to last year's report:

"It must be said that the situation constantly presents the temptation to directors, who also have stock in the trust company, to give the latter all the advantages they possibly can in the way of deposits and loans. The interests of their pockets are in perpetual conflict with their duties as fiduciary agents of the policyholders and stockholders of the insurance company, a most unfortunate state of affairs, from which, sooner or later, in some instances, the insurance company is coming out second best."

The Massachusetts department called attention to these conditions a year ago and of this Commissioner Cutting says: "The department had hopes that the daily press would put matters of such importance before the public, but in most cases their columns were practically closed against the revelations. The majority continued to eat, drink and make money. But a rude awakening has come."

Held on Bigamy Charge

Catskill, N. Y., July 26.—Charles F. Christian, wanted at Torrington, Conn., on a charge of bigamy, was lodged in jail here last night to await requisition papers from Albany. Miss Eva Ruwett of Torrington, whom Christian is said to have married, is at a hotel here. Christian is said to have represented to her that he was divorced from his first wife.

EVIDENCE FOUND.

That an Incendiary is at Work in Quarry Section.

The alarm from Box 41 at 9.20 Tuesday night was for a fire in a carriage shed on Garfield street, owned by McDonnell & Sons which was damaged $10. The cause was incendiary.

This morning Inspector Bradley found a glass quart milk jar that had contained oil near the building. This makes it quite evident that an incendiary is at work in that section of the city.

TO CHEER JAPS.

Song by James C. Dunn to be Sent to Soldiers at Front.

James C. Dunn of this city has written a song which may be sung by the Japanese soldiers at the front. The words (with music) were composed a few weeks ago and sent to a prominent Japanese merchant of Boston, who forwarded them to Japan, where they are to be printed and placed in the hands of the Japanese soldiers.

The song is entitled "The open door, the Japs have won," and the sentiments are very good. The words are given in full:

God bless the valiant Japanese and humane emperor of the east,
Who drove the Russians from Yalu, on land, on sea, they are the best,
They've captured horses, men, and guns, the tyrants in Manchuria crushed,
Who claimed the region as their own and to the natives were unjust.

CHORUS.

We give the victory to the Lord, his power will guard the Rising Sun,
They fought for every nation's cause, the open door the Japs have won.

They won the battle of Kinchow and drove them back on Nankin hill,
Eight times the heroes charged in vain and thousands there are sleeping still,
But in the nick of time aid came, God bless the fleet and Togo's skill,
They charged the canon's mouth again and drove the Russians from the hill.

(CHORUS)

That charge they never will forget until the earth her course has run,
Because the forces of the Czar went down before the Rising Sun.
They've bluffed the Chinese, Finns and Poles, God only knows what they have done,
They would have ruled the Orient shores, but Jap torpedoes they have won.

(CHORUS)

Quincy vs. Nantasket Tonight.

This evening the local bowling team journeys to Nantasket for a line-up against the bowling team of that popular summer resort. Many of the local rooters and fans are to accompany the team and a close and exciting game is looked for. Prof. Ferris of the Quincy team was up from his summer place of business at Nantasket on Monday, calling on old friends and incidentally getting his pet team into proper shape for tonight's game.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The Greeks believed that the length of a woman's head should be one-eighth her total height. American women's heads average longer in proportion. Some foolish student of Greek art announced that this bigness was all wrong; and that the American women were of bad proportions. The answer is, of course, that the American women have bigger brains than the Greek woman had, and need more room for them; and anyway, if you take the American women for the standard, the Greek statues will be found to be all out of proportion. Discretion and experience impel us to decide in favor of the American woman.—Everybody's Magazine.

VIEWS OF KOMURA

Expects That Peace Will Be Declared Next Month

NO EXCESSIVE DEMANDS

Japan's Expense Has Been Great and She Feels Entitled to Indemnity--Not Seeking Territorial Aggrandizement and Is Friendly Toward America

New York, July 26.—That Japan will demand an indemnity of Russia in the negotiations for peace and that the war will be declared at an end at the conclusion of the negotiations at Portsmouth, N. H., next month, is the belief of Baron Komura, head of the Japanese peace delegation, as voiced by Aimar Sato, who is the official spokesman for the baron on this mission. Mr. Sato, in an interview last night, said:

"I am confident that peace will be successfully negotiated by the appointed delegations. The Japanese will be guided by moderation and no excessive demands will be made, but the sentiment in Japan and Russia is for peace, and in the interests of humanity and propriety there must be peace.

"The cost to Japan, however, has been very great. On both sides the loss has been 570,000 men, Russia losing 870,000 of these. The war is costing Japan $1,000,000 a day and there is a feeling that there ought to be an indemnity."

The peace terms, while held inviolate by those who know their text, were formulated by the Emperor of Japan and his council. Mr. Sato was asked if, in the flush of victory, the Japanese people would not feel entitled to more than any treaty would allow, and Sato said: "The Japanese are not so gentle as to abide by any decision we may make, but they pay great respect to the offices of President Roosevelt and his acts have done a great deal to emphasize the need for peace."

Of the attitude of the Japanese plenipotentiaries toward the Russian delegates, Mr. Sato said: "We admire M. Witte and Baron Rosen. The announcement of Witte's appointment to the peace party was more welcome to us than that of any other person could have been. We recognize him as a great statesman."

Of the future of China, Sato said: "If the central government could work in harmony with the district or provincial governments China would become a great power, but at present that seems to me impossible. Japan's attitude toward China is most friendly. While maintaining no moral Monroe doctrine over the empire, Japan feels that China is more or less under Japan's protection. This protection, by way of illustration, is not so strong over China as that of the United States over South America."

Mr. Sato emphasized the announcement made frequently before that Japan does not seek territorial aggrandizement, and on this point the speaker said: "We want in Manchuria equal opportunity, or what Mr. Hay called the open door." Mr. Sato said Japan is overpopulated and that in the opening up of Manchuria and Korea an attractive field for immigration would be nearer home than offered in Hawaii or America. Mr. Sato said that while a desire for peace was the sentiment of Japan, it was not a desire for peace at any price. Japan is in a very prosperous condition at present, he said.

As to Japan's attitude toward America Sato laughingly asked: "You mean the yellow peril?" and then became more enthusiastic in his conversation than upon any previous topics. He said: "We are almost boyish in our enthusiasm and friendship for America. While we are friendly with China as Orientals our greatest friends are America and England. Why, the first monument ever erected to any foreigner in Japan was that to Commodore Perry, and the policy and conduct of the American people for the last 50 years has been one of help to us. We regard America as an ally without a treaty."

The question was put to Sato as to any possibility of conflict with the United States in the future, as suggested by some of the American press at the outbreak of the war and Sato asked what could bring about such a conflict. When suggested that Japan might covet the Philippine islands, he replied that Japan would not have the Philippines as a gift, even though a bonus accompanied the gift.

Baron Komura and his party are at the Waldorf-Astoria, where they will be quartered until his departure for Portsmouth.

Baron May Call on President

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 26.—Baron Komura probably will pay his respects to President Roosevelt in advance of the formal presentation of the Russian and Japanese plenipotentiaries to the president. Both the president and Komura are graduates of Harvard and, having become personally acquainted with each other several years ago, have some personal matters in common. The call of Komura on the president, if made, will be entirely informal.

NOT MADE PUBLIC

Bennington's Steam Records In Navy Department's Hands

Washington, July 26.—The steam log of the Bennington for the second quarter, covering the period between March 30 and June 30, has been received at the navy department. This does not include the trip from Honolulu to San Diego, but will show the report of the inspection for that quarter. The department concluded not to make public these records until after the investigating board is convened by Rear Admiral Goodrich at San Diego.

A brief report of a preliminary examination by Naval Constructor Evans of the inside of the gunboat Bennington, whose boilers exploded last Friday, was received at the navy department from Captain Drake of the Mare Island navy yard, who is now at San Diego.

The constructor found no leaks through the hull plating, and all the leaks through the sea valves and the broken pipes have been stopped. It is proposed to make an examination of the outside hull, secure boilers to replace those damaged by the explosion and to tow the gunboat to Mare Island with an escort.

Action by Bennington Folks

Bennington, Vt., July 26.—The citizens of this town last evening took official notice of the tragedy on board the town's namesake in the navy, the Bennington. A telegram of condolence for the loss of life in the boiler explosion was sent to Washington and a committee was appointed to consider what further action should be taken by the town. Two propositions were made, one to build a monument in memory of the dead, while the other was to raise a relief fund for the benefit of their families.

Death List May Increase

San Diego, Cal., July 26.—There is little hope that the burial chapter of the Bennington incident is finally closed, for half a dozen badly injured sailors are lingering between life and death. A temporary hospital has been arranged at the army barracks in the city and to this all the injured who could be safely moved were taken from the hospitals.

Senator Mitchell's Sentence

Portland, Or., July 26.—United States Senator Mitchell, convicted of using his office of United States senator to further the law practice of the firm of Mitchell & Tanner of this city, was sentenced to pay a fine of $1000 and to six months penal servitude. Pending a review of the case by the supreme court of the United States, execution of the sentence will be deferred. Meanwhile, Mitchell is under bail of $2000.

A Protest From Poles

St. Petersburg, July 26.—Three hundred leading representatives of the better classes in Poland have presented a memorandum to the committee of ministers appealing against the policy of the government looking to the Russification of Poland, which has been pursued for 40 years with no result except to alienate and aggravate the Poles, bringing dangerous and regretable results to the whole country.

Big "Killing" at Brighton Beach

New York, July 26.—One of the biggest killings of the year occurred at Brighton Beach, when Huntington came home an easy winner. Huntington opened up at 8 to 1, but money began to pour into the ring until his price fell to 2 to 1. It is estimated that at least $50,000 was taken out of the ring on the Huntington victory. Martin had the mount on him and won by 2½ lengths.

New Steamer Wrecked

Eureka, Cal., July 26.—The new Norwegian steamer Tricolor, Captain Wold, went ashore a quarter of a mile from the Cape Mendocino light. A tug arrived here last evening with the entire crew of 27 persons. Captain Wold lost his reckoning and believed the ship safe up to the time she struck the rocks. The vessel is a total loss. She was valued at $200,000.

Fever Cases at New Orleans

New Orleans, July 26.—There has been no material change in the fever situation. Two more deaths are reported. There is no absolute record of the number of cases under treatment at the present time, but it is believed to be about 50. Steps are being taken to prevent a mosquito infection.

Invitations Not All Answered

Tangier, July 26.—Ten powers, signatories of the treaty of Madrid, have officially accepted the sultan's invitation to the international conference on reforms in Morocco. The United States, Sweden, Norway and Portugal have not yet replied to the invitations extended to them.

Peary Expedition Delayed

Sydney, C. B., July 26.—The pumps of the Arctic steamer Roosevelt were discovered to be in bad condition last night, and 15 riveters were taken on board to fix them. It was expected that the Roosevelt would leave for the north last night, but the repairs to the pumps will delay her starting.

Eight Charred Bodies Found

Houston, Tex., July 26.—The fire in the Texas company's tanks at the Humble oil fields is practically extinguished. The charred remains of eight persons have been found and the search for bodies continues.

The Weather Forecast

Almanac, Thursday, July 27.
Sun rises—4:32; sets—7:10.
Moon rises—12:38 a. m.
High water—7 a. m.; 7:30 p. m.
Generally fair weather is indicated for New England. The temperature will rise slowly.

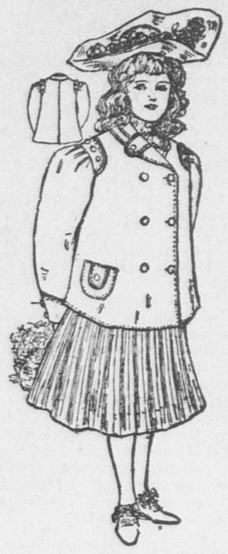
NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Misses' or Girl's Coat by Martha Dean—No. 4658



The loose box coat in short three-quarter length is one of the staple modes for misses and girls, and a design that is both practical and attractive is here depicted, made up in tan covert. The smartly shaped shoulder pieces, pocket and collar tabs add materially to the attractiveness of the mode, although if one prefers a plain tailored coat these little accessories may be omitted. The front is slightly double breasted, and the back having a seam down the center insures a good fit. The sleeve is in coat style, finished by a pointed cuff. The mode is not only smart in design, but simple in its construction. For general wear for summer these coats will be made of pique or linen to match the skirt, or for a heavy suit covert, mohair, serge or silk may be used. The model is an excellent one to follow in making over an older sister's coat; for, having the seam down the center back and only slightly double breasted front, the pattern may be laid on the old goods to very good advantage. Sizes, 8, 10, 12 years.

SEEKING A CHANGE

Porto Ricans to Ask Congress to Frame New Laws

TOO MUCH AMERICANISM

Delegates of Sixty-Five Municipalities Demand Amendments to the Foraker Law--Growing Feeling Against Us

San Juan, P. R., July 26.—Delegates representing 65 out of the 66 municipalities of Porto Rico and both political parties assembled in convention here to memorialize congress, with the view of bringing about sweeping changes in the government of the island.

The memorial to congress adopted by the convention recites that this is the seventh anniversary of the American invasion of Porto Rico and complains that the preponderance of power still rests with an executive council composed of heads of departments appointed by President Roosevelt.

"These heads of departments," it says, "arrive here knowing nothing of the language, customs or needs of the country and 24 hours after disembarking take their seats in the executive council and determine the fate of the island."

The memorial calls for no change in the composition of the house of delegates, which consists of 35 members elected by the people, but demands the following amendments to the Foraker law:

"First—The organization of an insular senate, to be composed of two senators each from seven districts in place of the executive council.

Second—That the proposed senate and house possess the same privileges granted to the house under the Foraker law.

Third—That the secretary of Porto Rico, the attorney general, the treasurer, the auditor, the commissioner of education and the commissioner of the interior continue in their present office under their present titles, but that they form no part of the executive council.

Fourth—That the officials named be appointed by the governor with the consent of the insular senate and not by the President of the United States.

The memorial was adopted by a rising vote, the delegates cheering for five minutes.

The convention also adopted a petition for presentation to the insular legislature for the protection of the municipalities and the granting to them of autonomy. Several speeches bitter in tone were made against centralizing the power in the island in the hands of the secretary of Porto Rico and the executive council.

The gathering was serious and dignified and several of the delegations present were headed by mayors. Mayor Todd of San Juan initiated the movement and was the chairman of the convention. His reason for calling the members of the municipalities together was the growing anti-American feeling throughout the island. One result of the convention is the permanent establishment of the organization known as the Porto Rico Municipal League, with Mayor Todd as president.

Notable features of the gathering were the total absence of politics, the unanimity of purpose and determination and enthusiasm of the delegates.

Crops Thriving Everywhere

Boston, July 26.—While crops of all kinds have flourished well within the past week, due to the extreme heat of the first part of last week, with warm nights and occasional showers, rain is now much needed to still further benefit their growth. But all vegetation has made great progress in the past week or 10 days, according to the weather bureau.

ABOVE THE LIMIT.

Medford Appropriations too High--- Tax Rate Excessive.

The aldermen of Medford, at a special meeting Tuesday evening, voted to reduce by $6,000 the annual appropriation budget of the city, passed last February, as the Mayor called their attention to the fact that it was in excess of the $12 limit allowed by law.

The fact was not discovered until the assessors announced a tax rate of $21.80. Now it is expected to reduce the tax rate to $21.40.

But a city tax rate above $20, when there is a law limiting current expenses to $12 per $1,000, is radically wrong. The tax rate of Quincy is too high, but was never in excess of $19.20, and the average in the sixteen years of the city government has been below $16.64.

Sons of St. George.

The Grand lodge, Sons of St. George, held its annual session on Tuesday, at Lowell, Grand President Thomas A. Mort presiding.

The membership in the State is now 3,720, and there were 56 deaths during the twelve months.

The grand lodge degree was conferred upon ten candidates.

The new Grand President is John Palmer of Jamaica Plain, with William Taylor of Northampton as Grand Vice President.

The delegates were welcomed to the city by Mayor Casey. They visited the textile school and other places of interest in the afternoon. In the evening they were the guests of Waverly lodge at a banquet at St. Charles Hotel.

A BOLD ONE.

Phillips Who Broke Jail at Dedham Has a Record.

The Boston police regard William R. Phillips who broke jail at Dedham last week as a tricky and dangerous crook. He has several aliases, being known also as H. Miller and Charles R. Carlton. According to his own confession since his arrest at New Haven on Tuesday he has been going it fast.

The young fellow was arrested March 17 last for breaking into the house of Etta C. Littlefield, 516 Harvard street, Brookline. Concerning this burglary Phillips says that his father kept him so short of money that he joined a gang and stole first at hotel Touraine. His father's influence averted punishment that time, but he concluded to go it alone in future operations of the kind.

Learning that the Littlefields were away from home he drove to the house in a fashionable turnout and sent for an expressman to cart away the goods he had packed up. Everything he could conveniently take he sent to a Boston hotel and later to Brockton.

When the Littlefield family returned, he met them, helped them in the discovery of the burglary, and himself notified the police. The officers came to the Touraine, where he was staying, to arrest him. He was taking a bath, saw them, slid down the fire escape to another floor, stole a suit of clothes and got away.

He was later arrested and sentenced to two years in the house of correction at Dedham. July 15, while out for exercise in the jailyard, he covered his prison clothes with a few strips of white cloth and walked out of jail unhindered. On the way to Boston he broke into the house of Charles A. Carlton in Dorchester, and stole a suit of clothes and some money.

In Dorchester, also, he says, he went to the house of a friend, borrowed $25 and another suit, which he substituted for that of Mr. Carlton. He then fled to New Haven. There he went to James Cox' garage and said he was told by Rev. Dr. Baker to get his automobile for the purpose of making alterations on the machine. He was given the machine and a chauffeur with it. He gave the name of Charles A. Carlton. That night he ran the machine to the house of Prof. C. R. Clarke in New Haven. The family was away, and Phillips broke into the house, loaded a trunk with silk dresses and silverware, and placed the trunk in the automobile.

He then drove to Hartford, sent his chauffeur back to New Haven and went on himself to Springfield, where he was arrested. Mr. Cox having wired to Rev. Dr. Baker and thereby discovered the deception practiced by Phillips. On the way back to New Haven, in the automobile, in custody of detective James Ward, Phillips and the detective were arrested for speeding in Manchester, Conn. They were released after the detective had established their identity.

A Modern Duel

[Original.]

Surgeon Schuler and Lieutenant Wright were rivals for the hand of the colonel's daughter. Schuler was a close student of the germ theory and in high favor with the colonel. As to the daughter, she preferred the fighting arm of the service, though she really liked Schuler. This irritated Wright, who called Schuler a germ eradicating soldier. Schuler retorted that he could kill more men with germs than a whole army could kill with ammunition. One reply led to another till the doctor referred to officers of the line as unscientific butchers, whereupon Wright declared that he had insulted the service. Wright withdrew and sent Schuler a challenge. Since the challenger would be on duty as officer of the guard the next day, the meeting was to come off the next day but one.

In the morning the colonel was sitting at breakfast with his family when the officer of the day entered.

"Colonel," he said, "I deem it my duty to report that a challenge has passed between Lieutenant Wright and Surgeon Schuler."

"The dickens you say. We'll see about that. Go report them both under arrest," said the colonel.

The officer was about to withdraw when the colonel, catching a glance from his daughter Alma, added: "Never mind the arrest, captain. I'll send you orders during the morning."

After breakfast father and daughter held a consultation in the library.

"Papa," said Alma, "won't you let them fight? I know it's all about me, and it would be so nice to be fought over."

"You little goose, do you suppose I'm going to permit such a breach of discipline simply to gratify your whim?"

"But I'd like to see if Dr. Schuler will fight. Somehow I can't think a bug hunter can have any pluck."

"Ah! That's the rub, is it? Well, I'll think it over and see if I can find a way to give him a chance without injury to the service. Now, run along, little girl."

Guard mounting was barely over when the officer of the day received a note from the hands of the colonel's orderly. The officer at once transmitted an order it contained to Surgeon Schuler. Schuler read the order and immediately proceeded to his laboratory to obey it. He remained there an hour. The work assigned him could have been done in much less time, but he was ordered to use great care.

Retreat was sounding when the colonel's orderly stepped up to Lieutenant Wright and handed him an order to report in person at the colonel's quarters. The same orderly then went to Surgeon Schuler and handed him a similar order, at the same time instructing him to take with him the articles he had been ordered to prepare. When he reached headquarters he found Lieutenant Wright waiting in the colonel's office while the colonel was pacing back and forth with a storm cloud on his brow. Neither of the young men knew it, but Alma had her eye at a peephole. As soon as Schuler entered the colonel sat down behind his desk.

"I understand," he said, "that you young gentlemen, having no enemy to shoot, are going to shoot each other. Dueling is not permitted in our service, and I can't allow any such breach of discipline. Nevertheless I am willing that you should both have an opportunity to show your mettle, provided it can be done without attracting the attention of the command. I understand that you, Mr. Wright, consider yourself aggrieved and have challenged Dr. Schuler?"

Wright bowed an assent.

"And you, doctor; have you accepted?"

"I have," said the doctor.

"Very well. You, being the challenged party, have a right to a choice of weapons. I will choose for you. Have you executed the order I sent you this morning?"

"I have, colonel," he replied wonderingly, and, unrolling a paper, he displayed the sausages, laying them on the table.

"These, gentlemen," said the colonel, "are your weapons. One of them is loaded with trichinae germs, the other is perfectly healthy meat. Mr. Wright, you, being ignorant of which is the infected sausage, have first choice; the other will remain for your antagonist. At a given signal from me each will proceed to eat his sausage. Mr. Wright, you may draw."

Wright picked up a sausage. Schuler turned pale.

"Dr. Schuler," said the colonel, "take your weapon."

Schuler reached for the sausage and took it up gingerly.

"Gentlemen, proceed."

Both raised their sausages to their lips, but before either had bitten a whirlwind of white muslin stormed into the room, and Alma Kendall, rushing up to Dr. Schuler, seized his sausage and threw it out of the window.

"Gentlemen," said the colonel, "you are both brave men, and, having proved your courage, it is not necessary that you should fight. I trust I shall hear no more of this affair. You may withdraw."

"I have no further cause for quarrel with Dr. Schuler," said Wright, "and I must congratulate him upon having received evidence of the tender solicitude of Miss Kendall."

"It is 'Hobson's choice,'" said the girl, pouting. "Either 'a germ eradicator' or an 'unscientific butcher.'"

Both men hung their heads and withdrew without further comment. A week later the engagement of Surgeon Schuler and Alma Kendall was announced by a general order from the young lady's mother.

SPECIAL TRAIN.

Barre Manufacturers Will Start Tonight.

Not to Bring Their Troubles.

Requested to Lock Them in Office at Home.

The granite manufacturers of Barre, Vt., and other New England granite centres will be with us tomorrow and there will be something doing all the time until they start for home on Sunday.

The Quincy men feel very grateful for the hospitable manner in which they were entertained at Barre last year, and every member of the Quincy association has appointed himself a committee of one to see to it that the visitors have a good time.

While the majority of the visitors will make their headquarters at Boston hotels several will be entertained at the homes of personal friends in Quincy.

A few will land in Quincy bright and early tomorrow morning, but it will not be until afternoon when the majority of excursionists arrive.

The afternoon will be passed inspecting the plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., where they will find much of interest. In the evening there will be a union love feast at Malnati hall and lots of shop talk.

These gatherings will serve to cement more closely the bonds of friendship between the two associations and can produce only good results to the trade.

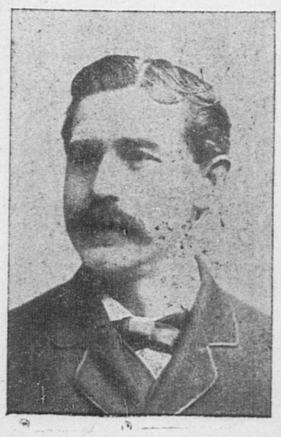
Saturday morning, bright and early, the party will leave for Crescent Park, Rhode Island. Those who visited this resort two years ago need not be told what is in store for the party there upon arrival.

A series of sports have been arranged to be followed by a clambake dinner. In the afternoon there will be shooting the shoots, bathing, boating and other pastimes that will make the afternoon pass all too quickly.

The Barre Daily Times says the granite cutting industry of Barre and Montpelier will be at a standstill for two days, beginning tonight when the manufacturers leave on their annual excursion to Quincy, Mass., and various attractive outlying districts. Work will be resumed in most of the sheds again on Monday morning.

Secretary James Campbell of the association outlines the plans in the following:

Arrangements have been made with the M. & W. R. R., for a special train, made up of two Pullman coaches and two regulation cars to leave Barre at 9.30 Thursday evening, July 27. Returning, leave Boston Sunday night, July 30, at 11 o'clock, arriving in Barre 6 A. M., Monday.



JAMES H. ELCOCK.
One of Quincy Committee.

The committee at the Quincy end have been busy getting satisfactory arrangements made whereby everybody that goes will be assured a good time. Permission has been granted to visit the Fore River Ship Building Co.'s plant, so we will have an opportunity of seeing a battleship in process of construction.

The committee at this end of the route have made arrangements with the railroad company for a $6.50 rate to Boston and return.

At this gathering there will be representatives from all the New England granite centers. On the evening of Friday, July 28, there is to be a meeting held in Quincy, where we will have an opportunity to get acquainted with one another and in all probability there will be some interesting topics discussed which will be of material benefit to the trade in general.

"It is the earnest wish of the committee that each member will consider it his duty to be present. On Thursday evening, when you lock your office door, please lock in your troubles, and come and have a good time with the boys. It will certainly do you good in more ways than one."

HARD CIDER MILL.

Special Officer at Randolph Arrested under Liquor Laws.

Robert Hoke, a special police officer of Randolph, was before the district court this morning for violation of the liquor law. Hoke runs a cider mill, and it is alleged that hard drinkers are in the habit of visiting his premises and buying hard cider with which they get intoxicated.

On Wednesday, Officers Heaney, Jaquith and Paine visited the premises and found six old rounders intoxicated under the trees near Hoke's premises.

The men said that they had purchased the cider of Hoke and drunk 18 quarts within a few hours.

The court continued the case until next Monday.

Exceeded the Limit.

Several automobile speeders were brought into court this morning for exceeding the limit on the Blue Hills Reservation. Fines of $10 each were imposed on George W. Beal, George W. Craig, Fred F. Spooner, Albert Sulcliffe and Richard D. Gladwin all of Boston.

—The assessors of Lynn report an increase of $1,300,000 in valuation over 1904, and a tax rate of $18.40, which is 40 cents more than last year.

QUARRY FIRE BUG.

Another Unoccupied Building on Fire Last Night.

The alarm from Box 442 at 3.34 Wednesday afternoon was for a fire in an unoccupied blacksmith shop on Quarry street, owned by the Quincy Quarries Co. It was damaged about $15. Appearances would indicate that this fire was also the work of an incendiary.

There have been several fires in the quarry district of late and in every case they were of a suspicious nature and evidently the work of an incendiary. If a fire fiend is at work among the buildings in the quarry district it will not be long before he graduates from unused blacksmith shops and touches off some larger building.

It is believed that this work is that of boys and that the buildings are set fire to out of pure deviltry. It would be a good thing to catch the fiends and make an example of them before serious results follow.

Off for World's Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Falconer 46 Independence avenue leave this afternoon for the Lewis and Clark Exposition, Portland, Oregon, via the Northern Pacific route and Yellowstone Park, returning via California and Union Pacific route.

Against Attleboro Man in Second District.

For some time at has been rumored that Hon. Charles M. Bryant, the ex-Mayor of Quincy, would enter the field this year for the Republican nomination for Councillor from this district, to succeed Frederick S. Hall of Taunton who retires.

Boston papers now announce the candidacy of Mr. Bryant, and say unless Col. Sidney O. Bigney of Attleboro keep a sharp eye on his fences, the ex-Mayor is likely to give him a stiff contest.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Never has the boy left Theodore Roosevelt. He has added manhood—and superb manhood, too—on to boyhood, and is all the better and more lovable for it. He can get back to boyhood without an effort and still lose nothing of the manful dignity and self-reliance we all admire. It is, in fact, largely because there is so much of the boy, the big, glad, self-assertive, kindly, generous, unconquerable American boy, about Theodore Roosevelt that he is equal to all his tasks. The "solemn ass," as Tom Corwin used to call the statesman that couldn't unbend, does less work because he does it all mechanically, and has to look constantly at his official tools to see that they are tempered to the work expected of them.—Louisville Herald.

☞The rural town is fast becoming a city in its general appointments, accommodations, manners and style, and it is the means of disseminating the latest ideas and conveniences among surrounding farms.

Through investments and improvements the country is getting nearer to the city, nearer to the myriad advantages of comfort which human ingenuity is devising. The present is an era of luxury.

Every urban home has the investiture of a palace in a former period; in fact, it offers, with the common exception of size and yard area, more and better facilities for easy living. Every country home is comparatively as well furnished.

Almost all the comfort which is found in the city home can be installed and enjoyed in the most isolated farm houses lying in an out of the way locality.—St. Louis Republic.

☞The Secretary of the Navy has issued a statement regarding the Bennington, to this effect: "The public may rest assured that this distressing affair will be most thoroughly investigated, and that whatever action the result of this investigation may show to be proper will be taken by the department promptly and effectually." It is reported that there was only one officer doing engineering duty on board the gunboat, and he an Ensign who had been assigned less than six months ago to the work, without previous experience. There should have been two or three warrant machinists on the Bennington, and that they were not, is taken to be proof that the vessel was under officered. There were 1,190 souls on board, and a navy tug would have had as good a supply of engineering skill as was given to this cruiser. Secretary Bonaparte will be expected to fix the blame where it belongs, whether on Congress that changed the law, or on the Navy Department that failed to properly officer the ship.—Lynn Item.

RIVER EXPEDITION

Indicated by Landing of Japanese In Siberia

IT OPENS WAY TO HARBIN

Mere Threat of Advance May Compel the Russians to Move--Japanese Army In Korea Not Very Far From Vladivostok

St. Petersburg, July 27.—A dispatch from Russian headquarters in Manchuria says that on July 24 two Japanese torpedo boat destroyers approached the port of Dekastries, Siberia, and took bearings of the isthmus on which the lighthouse stands. The Japanese subsequently landed and seized the lighthouse and hoisted the Japanese flag.

London, July 27.—The Japanese landing at Dekastries, which is the terminus of the only cable line connecting the mainland with the island of Sakhalin, is regarded by the London newspapers as an attempt to seize the mouth of the Amur river in order to enable the Japanese to dispatch an army up to that great waterway for the purpose of threatening the Russian communications.

Japanese gunboats and torpedo boats could thus reach Harbin and give effectual assistance to another attack on the Russian fortifications. Both the Ussuri and Sungari rivers are navigable for vessels of light draft and thus the Japanese could advance inland in three different directions for a considerable distance.

If, as is supposed, Japan has a river expedition in readiness, the mere threat of its advance may suffice to change the plans of the Russians and compel their retirement from the Kirin and Fengwa districts upon Harbin.

An official report from the headquarters of the Japanese army in northern Korea says: "On July 24 the army succeeded in dislodging the enemy from the neighborhood of Puku and Purinong and occupied a line to the northward."

The news of the Japanese advance toward the Tumen makes the conclusion of an armistice of immediate importance to Russia, so that General Hasegawa may be kept from Russian territory, which begins just north of the Tumen. Purinong, mentioned in the dispatch, is a town in northeastern Korea, about 45 miles southwest of the Tumen river and about 100 miles in a direct line from Vladivostok.

Puku, or Puku-Chin, is a town directly east of Purinong, on the coast, and its occupation leads to the supposition that Hasegawa's advance is being supported by the fleet. It is possible that Hasegawa, who may be dependent on supplies brought by water, will continue his advance along the coast, and will cross the Tumen near its mouth, instead of following the trade route, which leads almost due north from Purinong.

The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Tokio sends a report received from Osaka, Japan, to the effect that a Japanese army of many thousand men is already attacking the Russian position on the Tumen river.

Smoking Out a Murderer

Plainfield, N. J., July 27.—In a treacherous swamp and thick woods a posse of farmers and police has surrounded Charles Long, a negro, accused of murdering Matthew Cunningham of Trenton. More than 15 acres of shrubs and bushes have been fired in an effort to drive the man out of his hiding place. It is not thought that Long will be able to stay where he is and live. In readiness for his appearance the members of the posse are armed with shotguns.

To Decline Judicial Position

Portland, Or., July 27.—W. W. Cotton, with a commission already in his possession, has concluded to decline the appointment as United States judge for the district of Oregon. It is generally believed that inducements have been offered him that make it worth while for him to decline the bench and remain where he is as general counsel of the Harriman Northwestern lines, with additional powers and financial considerations.

Lynching Barely Averted

Erie, Pa., July 27.—Police rescued John Puskus, aged 19, last night from a mob that had already placed a rope around his neck and appeared ready to lynch him. The crowd was led by John Semple, father of a 9-year-old girl whom Puskus is said to have attempted to assault. The mob refused to give Puskus up until convinced that he would be severely punished by due process of law.

Novel Excuse For Double Killing

Chicago, July 27.—John Mueller, charged with killing his wife and child, makes the novel plea of epileptic somnambulism. Mueller declares there was no motive; that he slew his wife in his sleep and that his actions were due to a blow on the head received during a labor riot two years ago. He is conducting his own case.

New York, July 27.—After being arraigned in the Brooklyn police court, Mrs. Anna Gades, who, while insane, murdered her infant son, attempted suicide by jumping from the window of the court. She was prevented and returned to a hospital where she has been a prisoner since she committed the crime.

SAILOR WITH A JAG

Calmly Dived Off Ferryboat, to Consternation of Passengers

Boston, July 27.—There was great excitement among the passengers and crew of the ferryboat Hugh O'Brien last evening when a husky looking sailor jumped up on the rail of the boat and deliberately dived into the water.

The crew of the ferryboat were summoned and the lifeboat lowered, but Captain Wall of the tugboat Hamilton A. Mathis, which was a short distance away, hearing the excited cries of women and men, hastened to the scene and with the aid of the crew of his boat rescued the man, but only with great difficulty and against strenuous efforts on his part to be let alone.

He was in for a sobering-up swim and wanted to complete the job. However, he was fished out and landed on the deck of the ferryboat, whence he was taken in charge by a patrolman and landed in station 7, where he had a chance to get dry and also sober.

Boy Killed In Peculiar Manner

Lancaster, Mass., July 27.—Roland Fentiman, aged 14, was instantly killed at a $3500 fire which destroyed the barn of Ebenezer C. Mann last night. The boy was on a shed with James Boydon, who had a hand chemical extinguisher when the extinguisher exploded. The disc-shaped cap of the extinguisher struck Fentiman in the neck, cutting the left jugular vein. It was found 75 feet away. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Young Shooter Held

Damariscotta, Me., July 27.—Dr. George E. Woodside of New Harbor, who was accidentally shot in the right temple by Arthur McFarland, aged 15, survived the operation to remove the bullet and has an even chance for recovery. McFarland was taken before Justice Webster and held in $1000. The charge was assault with intent to kill. Bail was furnished.

Car Plunged Into Pole

Randolph, Mass., July 27.—An electric car had just left a turnout here last night and was going at a good rate of speed when both trucks left the rails and the car plunged into a telegraph pole. Nearly all the 15 passengers were thrown out, but only Benjamin Moore was injured sufficiently to need medical attention.

Reciprocity Delegates Appointed

Boston, July 27.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce President Whitney was authorized to appoint delegates to attend the national reciprocity conference to be held at Chicago Aug. 16 and 17. President Whitney at once appointed nine men well known in the commercial world.

No Evidence of Violence

Newburyport, Mass., July 27.—As the result of an autopsy performed upon the body of Mrs. Daniel Shea, in connection with whose death her husband was placed under arrest, Medical Examiner Hurd gave his opinion that death resulted from natural causes. The husband was thereupon discharged from custody.

Boston, July 27.—Inspector Wolff of the Boston police department reached this city last night from Seattle, Wash., having in custody Louis J. Urann, who is charged with the embezzlement of $12,000 from a Faneuil hall market firm, by whom he had been employed as bookkeeper.

A Presidential Outing

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 27.—It has developed that President Roosevelt, accompanied by his three sons and some of their cousins, went Tuesday night on another camping expedition at a sequestered spot a few miles from the president's home. The party had a delightful outing and returned to Sagamore Hill after a breakfast of their own cooking in the open.

Blames Lightship For Wreck

Eureka, Cal., July 27.—The Norwegian steamer Tricolor, which went ashore at Cape Mendocino in a fog, has been given up as a hopeless wreck. Captain Wold declares that the Cape Mendocino lightship was silent when he ran past in the fog and that it did not start blowing until after he had struck the rocks.

A MONSTER PHANTOM.

The Ancient Norse Legend of the Flying Dutchman.

The old Norsemen had a curious and vague tradition of a phantom ship which they called Mannifual. The French maritime chronicler, Jal, gives an account of her. So likewise does Thorpe in his work on "Northern Mythology." She was so gigantic that her masts were taller than the highest mountains. The captain rode about on horseback delivering his orders. Sailors going aloft as boys came down respectable middle aged men, and in the blocks about her rigging were dining halls where they sustained life during their heavenward wanderings. When passing through the strait of Dover on her way northward she stuck, but the captain, with ready invention, ordered her sides to be liberally besmeared with soap, and she slipped through, leaving the cliffs of France and England white forever afterward.

Down to within a century ago this gigantic ship was known among English sailors by the name of the Merry Dun of Dover, but she seems quite to have disappeared from the maritime lore of Great Britain. Seamen of Normandy still believe in her existence and call her the Chasse Froude. They say that she is so immense that it takes her seven years to tack. On one occasion in turning her bowsprit swept away a whole battalion of soldiers from the Dover cliffs while her stern boom was demolishing the forts of Calais.

MEN WITH TAILS.

Queer Records of an Old Time Writer on This Subject.

Mention of an obscure belief in other countries that Englishmen used to wear tails has prompted a correspondent to submit some information regarding the subject of tails in general. Dr. John Wolff, an old time writer, said: "There is even in England a gentleman of dark complexion and of great talents who walks exactly as if he had a tail, and people of high rank told me that he and his family were known to have tails, and therefore in his carriage there is a hole in the seat where he sits in order that he may be able to sit comfortably."

Baring-Gould's "Curious Myths of the Middle Ages" contains the following: "Dr. Wolff in his travels and adventures says, 'There are men and women in Abyssinia with tails like dogs and horses.' Wolff also heard from a great many Abyssinians and Armenians (and Wolff is convinced of the truth of it) that there are near Narea, in Abyssinia, people—men and women—with large tails, with which they are able to knock down a horse, and there are also such people near China." A note in Baring-Gould's book adds: "In the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Dublin may still be seen a human skeleton with a tail seven inches long. There are many known instances of this elongation of the caudal vertebra, as in the Poonangs in Borneo."

Warning to Guests.

This notice greets one in a hotel opened by a foreigner who has just "mastered" the English language: "Gentlemen who come in this hotel not say anything about their meals they will be charged for, and if they should say beforehand that they are going out to breakfast or dinner, and if they say they have not anything to eat they will be charged, or unless they bring it to the notice of the manager. And no fuss will be allowed afterward about it, and nothing will be allowed to deduct anything out of it."—Paris English and American Gazette.

Not the Same.

On one occasion when "The Mikado" was being rehearsed Gilbert called out from the middle of the stalls, "There is a gentleman in the left group not holding his fan correctly." The stage manager appeared and explained. "There is one gentleman," he said, "who is absent through illness." "Ah," came the reply from the author in grave, matter of fact tones, "that is not the gentleman I am referring to."—Dundee Advertiser.

The Mayflower Compact.

During examination in American history in one of our big city schools the question was put, "What was the Mayflower compact?" This is the thoroughly logical reply of one good little American:

"The Mayflower and the Speedwell started together from England, and the Speedwell went to pieces and sunk, and they put all the people into the Mayflower, and so the Mayflower come packed."

How a Bee Gave Up Work.

On landing in Australia our hive bee industriously collected quantities of honey. Finding, however, that there was no winter such as we have in England, it gave up laying in stores. Its morals are corrupted, for it is no longer busy, and leads a butterfly life.—Nature Notes.

No Extension.

"Is the wind due east or due west today?" asked an evasive creditor by way of changing the subject of his debt.

"It's due now, and you'd better hustle to raise it," was the unfeeling reply.

His Defense.

The Count—You do me an injustice. I am not mercenary. The Heiress—No? The Count—No, I assure you. It is my creditors who are.—New York Press.

A very honest man and a very good understanding may be deceived by a knave.—Junius.

CITY BREVITIES

Mrs. Osborne Rogers has returned from a two weeks visit to Marshfield.

There will be but little work done in the stone sheds this week after today, and they will be closed down altogether Saturday.

Edward W. Millett, a former resident of Atlantic, has accepted a position as assistant storekeeper at the Boston Custom House. Mr. Millett now resides at Milton.

The pieces of burlap about the trees in City Square make good traps for the gypsy moths. They are examined every morning and the moths found hiding beneath the burlap are slaughtered with a knife.

Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow, of Wollaston, who are at the Elmwood cottage Newfoundlake, N. H., have the very much coveted honor of having captured the largest and finest looking trout at above mentioned lake. It being a splendid nine and one-half pounder.

Mrs. Arthur Curtis and daughter Lucille are visiting Mrs. Curtis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Evans of this city, at Bethesda cottage, North Weymouth. They have been stopping there for several weeks, but go to Sea View Aug. 1, for the remainder of the season, to stop with Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Curtis.

An Ideal Canoeing Country.

To the enthusiast in summer sports and pastimes, there is nothing so thoroughly delightful or more genuinely beneficial than a canoe voyage far up in the northern Maine woods. Thousands of men and women have already tasted the ecstacies of this sort of an outing and found supreme enjoyment in it—in the swift, noiseless gliding down lake and winding stream, or the exciting runs down stretches of turbulent water, or camping out in God's own country amid scenic environments of the most charming sort. Northern Maine with its fifteen thousand square miles of water-crossed playground, offers unlimited possibilities for canoeing, the hundreds of connecting and contiguous lakes, rivers, streams and brooks making canoe progress feasible and easy in practically every direction, even though one's route lies in the very heart of the untamed forest where no road or trail has yet been cut and where the canoe offers the only practical means of travel.

There are several particularly attractive canoe trips here which have been singled out of the many because of the ease with which they can be made and the comparatively short time it takes to make them. The list includes Allagash river trip (about 203 miles), Penobscot West branch trip (about 80 miles), Penobscot East branch trip (about 118 miles), Fish river system trip (about 111 miles), Allagash lake trip (about 99 miles), and the St. John river trip (about 231 miles). Special information concerning these, or any of the other popular canoe trips to be made in northern Maine, can be had promptly and in full by addressing C. C. Brown, G. P. A., Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, Bangor, Me.

Granite Cutters Grievance.

The Lynn Item says: At a special meeting of the Lynn branch of the National Granite Cutters' Union, Monday evening, two grievances at Peabody, which the Grievance committee had acted upon came up, but as the report was not satisfactory to the union, a special committee was appointed to take up the matter today. The two firms in question were among those that signed the new scale that was adopted by the several firms in Lynn, Salem and Peabody a few months ago. About 20 men are effected. It is said that if an adjustment is not reached today, developments may be looked for with little delay.

—Mrs. Drusilla Hall Johnson of Florence will celebrate the 100 anniversary of her birth Sunday and the event will be observed by special services in St. John's Episcopal church at Northampton in which her son and grandson, both clergymen will participate.

—The man who says the remains of John Paul Jones are not genuine should prove his assertion or forever after hold his peace on that subject.

THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide Is In Giving It a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair vigors may look nice and smell nice, but the point is—do they eradicate Dandruff and stop falling hair?

No, they do not, but Herpicide does, because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the papilla from whence the hair gets its life.

Letters from prominent people everywhere are daily proving that Newbro's Herpicide stands the "test of use."

It is a delightful dressing, clear, pure and free from oil or grease.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

NOTES ABOUT TOWN.

Seasonable temperature.

Pleasant weather continues.

James MacFarland of Arlington street is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Finch are in Wollaston for a week.

Mrs. Hazen Chapman of Beach street has returned from New Brunswick.

Earle Boyce of Farrington street is visiting William Weston at his cottage at Island Creek.

Gladys M. Parker of Winthrop avenue has returned from three weeks' vacation at Canobie lake, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pinkham of Grand View avenue are in New York city attending the Co-operative Bank convention.

Friends of Mr. I. W. Faunce of Arlington street will be glad to hear that he is slowly recovering from the effects of his serious fall.

Rev. Isaac Clark, LL., D., of Washington, D. C., a summer resident at Houghs Neck, will preach at the Union chapel on Sunday.

It is fortunate for strangers that a great many families in Atlantic who go away for the summer are willing to let their houses all furnished for the season.

The effects of Daniel F. French have been appraised by order of the Board of Health and the goods will be burned. Mr. French is now at the City Hospital.

Foresters' Convention.

The Catholic Order of Foresters will hold its 17th international biennial convention in Faneuil Hall on Aug. 1, 2, 3 and 4, with headquarters at the American House.

The most important business to be transacted probably will be a discussion of the insurance rate now in force. Some of the chief officials probably will advocate an advance to the standard fraternal assessment rate, which has been adopted by the Royal Arcanum, the Catholic Knights of America, and other fraternal organizations.

This order is the largest Catholic fraternal insurance society in the country, having at present 117,579 members in good standing. It was organized in Chicago on May 21, 1883, and has its permanent headquarters there. The international conventions are held biennially and never twice in the same state. This will be its first convention in Boston. Although this society has a state branch in Massachusetts, it has no connection with the society known as the Massachusetts Order of Foresters, and to distinguish it from that body is generally called in the West the Catholic Order of Foresters of Illinois.

South Quincy Game.

A good game is promised on Saturday afternoon at the Ward Three playgrounds when the South Quincys will meet the Dorchester A. C. The Dorchesters are a strong team and the South Quincys must hustle to beat hem. The game will be called at 3.30.

TO ABATE NUISANCE.

The Board of Health to Use Disinfectants.

There have been numerous complaints of the stench that arises from the ponds in the vicinity of Rufes Hummock and the National Sailors' Home.

The matter was turned over to the Board of Health, who made an investigation, and came to the conclusion that some time cesspool and vault matter must have been dumped in the ponds, and that the extreme heat and action of the tide had stirred the matter up.

The Board of Health have taken steps to abate the nuisance and have ordered 100 pounds of disinfectant lime.

Tomorrow this will be spread upon the ponds and marshes thereabout, and it is believed that it will abate the nuisance.

Attack by Dog.

While riding on his wheel to his work this morning, Arthur Charnock of Safford street, Wollaston, was attacked by a vicious dog, and had it not been for the quick work of Mr. J. B. Hart, would have been seriously injured. Mr. Hart seized a large stick and drove the dog away. Outside of few lacerations and a pair of torn trousers, Mr. Charnock was otherwise unhurt.

Q. Y. C. Hops.

The dates of the weekly hops at the Quincy Yacht club house have been changed from Saturday nights to Tuesday nights. The next hop will be Tuesday Aug. 1.

The Duck and the Orator.

Some day, my child, I will take you out into the wide, green country and show you a young Pekin duck. He is an active little tyke, is the Pekin duckling, even when he doesn't date back farther than day before yesterday. When it comes to swimming he is a sight reader, and he is more destructive to tender grass than a young Nebuchadnezzar. But unfortunately he is so constructed and flat of back that if by any chance he gets turned wrong side up he cannot turn over again unaided, and unless help comes he lies there and paddles the air with his little feet until he fans himself to death. He is cheerful about it, though, and makes no outcry, apparently thinking that because his legs are working he is swimming along according to Hoyle.

My child, a little duck on his back and the average after dinner orator on his feet are both deserving of the sympathy which we should be ever ready to bestow on the unfortunate, and therefore we should sign all petitions that are presented to us looking to the establishment of a commission to turn little ducks over and loquacious gentlemen down in the hope that if they are prevented from paddling and gabbling themselves to death they may be of some use hereafter.—Tom Watson's Magazine.

THE NOON ALARM.

Fire In Woods off Independence Avenue---Buildings in Danger.

The alarm from Box 32 at 12.08 this noon was for a fire in the woods in the rear of the residence of Marcus Hobart on Independence avenue. The fire was getting dangerously near Mr. Hobart's barn, and it was feared that it would take fire.

When the alarm sounded the Central Station Combination was at work extinguishing a still alarm fire on Presidents bridge. It therefore made a long run for this piece of apparatus.

Car Derailed.

About 10.40 last night an electric car, en route from South Braintree to Randolph, left the rails at Mt. Pleasant square, with about fifteen passengers aboard. Bernard Moore of Broad street, Randolph, was thrown into the street and was helpless when discovered. He received bad bruises on the leg and thigh. None of the other passengers were seriously injured. A wrecking car from Braintree soon put the car back on the track. It was not damaged much.

Wild Man Arrested.

The "wild man" of Braintree and Weymouth, who terrified the women in the woods was on Wednesday sent to the insane asylum. He was captured in "Goat Valley."

JAPANESE TERMS

What Will Be Asked at First Business Conference

TO START ON INDEMNITY

Will Not Fall Far Short of a Billion Dollars--Russia's Acceptance of This and Other Essentials Will Form a Basis For Treaty of Peace In Far East

Washington, July 27.—Whether there is to be peace in the Far East or a continuance of the war will practically be decided at the first business meeting of the Washington conference, which will convene at the Portsmouth navy yard about Aug. 5. Baron Komura will on that occasion communicate to M. Witte the essentials of Japan's peace terms for further negotiations.

This, it is declared, will not be done in a spirit of defiance. Indeed, there are many evidences in the possession of the neutral governments that Japan is coming to the Washington conference not imbued with a desire to humiliate Russia, but only to exact terms which will insure a lasting peace in the Far East, and which will in a measure compensate Japan for the financial losses in the present conflict.

Throughout the preliminary negotiations, however, Japan has made it clear at Washington that she wished to avoid unnecessarily tedious negotiations. "We are not going to the conference to write into the law of nations a new chapter," said a high Japanese official recently. For this reason the Japanese plenipotentiaries will adopt the program of at once laying on the conference table those terms, the acceptance of which without modification they are instructed to insist upon as a basis for further negotiations.

Although guarding with great care the official statement of her terms, Japan has not kept from several friendly governments the general character of these terms. Official Washington has been enabled to form within certain limits a general idea of their character.

It is known that Japan will demand an indemnity that will approximately cover the cost of the war to date. This was communicated to Russia early in the preliminary negotiations. The amount is still a secret, but it is based upon the most careful estimates of the war and will be accompanied by a more or less detailed statement showing the method by which the final figures were computed. It will not fall short of $1,000,000,000, according to advices reaching here from well posted sources. Besides the indemnity, it is believed Japan's other essentials to the continuance of negotiations are the cession to Japan of Sakhalin, and the transfer of Russia's lease of the Liao Ting peninsula and of the railway as far as Harbin; the recognition of Japan's predominating influence in Korea, and the return of Manchuria to China.

If the Russian plenipotentiaries are prepared to accept these essentials, the officials here are confident that the basis will be laid for negotiations sure to lead to the signing of the treaty of Washington, bringing peace in the Far East.

As for subjects remaining to be discussed, a tedious one, it is believed, and one which Russia will be disposed to negotiate with greatest caution, is the program for the restoration of Manchuria to Chinese control. Because of the confusion and general disorder likely to ensue in the province after the withdrawal of the foreign armies, Japan believes that a certain time will be required in which to restore public order and the establishment of a regular system of Chinese police administration. During the period Japan will insist that she remain in control of the administration of the province, at the same time giving a definite pledge finally to evacuate as soon as China shall be in a position to take up the reins of government there and maintain order. It is believed the policy to be suggested by Japan in this matter will not be unlike that followed by the Washington government with reference to Cuba. American troops being withdrawn from the island as soon as a stable government was in control of the situation.

A second subject for the plenipotentiaries to settle will be the surrender of all Russian ships now interned in neutral ports. Some officials are inclined to believe that this demand will form one of the "essentials," while others claim ground for believing that Russia may induce Japan to take these in part payment of the indemnity.

Europe believes Japan will demand the neutralization of Vladivostok. The Washington government does not share in this belief.

Expected to Pay Indemnity

St. Petersburg, July 27.—The interview of Aimar Sato, spokesman for Baron Komura, in New York Tuesday, is received with pleasure in many quarters as indicating that the Japanese are not disposed to insist upon terms which Russia will be unable to accept. Mild surprise is expressed, however, at the frank intimation that Japan would demand an indemnity, though that this would be one of the Japanese conditions had been taken for granted. Special dispatches from Berlin and Paris connect M. Witte's conference with German and French financiers as being for the purpose of sounding the markets on the prospects of issuing an indemnity loan.

A Street Scene, Bombay.

A man clad only in a yellow scarf and turban opens a mouth stained with the vivid vermilion of betel juice to show that the mango seed just swallowed has already become a small tree with green leaves pushing toward the light. A woman appears next upon the scene, bringing a crying baby in a closed hamper of bamboo. A dozen swords are instantly thrust through the interstices amid the ear piercing yells of the supposed victim, but as soon as the formidable blades are withdrawn the nine lived infant tumbles out of the basket and salaams to the assembled audience, holding out her tiny brown hand for the well deserved backsheesh.

As the fun waxes fast and furious sundry quarrels and recriminations between the rival magicians attract the intervention of the native police, who, "dressed in a little brief authority," symbolized by red turban and blue tunic, soon disperse the performers, bag and baggage, hastening the enforced departure with unlimited kicks and thumps, submissively received.

Peter the Great and Lawyers.

In Russia during the reign of Peter the Great private litigants might have their suits prosecuted free of cost by lawyers paid by the state. The emperor, discovering that his subjects were being imposed upon by their legal agents, who contrived to delay trials until they had sucked their clients dry, enacted that sufficient solicitors and attorneys should be employed at handsome yearly salaries to officiate for the public in every matter of law. He ordered further that these men should insert in a register written up daily the dates of applications to them and should proceed with the suits in the order in which they were received without respect of persons. If they failed to do so, if they accepted any bribe or fee or if they were dilatory these lawyers were to be knouted and sent to Siberia.

The Surgeon's Nightmare.

Two patients who called in company upon a noted surgeon found him bemoaning a twinge of pain in his right forefinger. The callers smiled.

"Great Scott, doctor," exclaimed one, "you don't mean to say that a pain in the finger bothers a man so used to scenes of suffering as yourself!"

"It certainly does," the surgeon answered, with a worried look. "How do I know that it isn't the first symptom of blood poisoning? That is the nightmare of the surgeon. No matter how careful he may be, he is liable to contract poisoning in operating, and that kind of poisoning is of the most virulent type. Any time a surgeon is complaining about a pain in the hand sympathize with him, for he is doing some hard guessing."—Philadelphia Record.

A Birth Watch.

When a child is born in certain English towns there is a race for the health department, especially if the event has occurred in the poorer district. The reason for the haste is not a desire to see that the record of vital statistics is properly kept, but because there is a reward of a shilling to the one who is first to notify the health officer, provided this notification is given within forty-eight hours. As soon as the tip is received the mother is visited and given a printed slip with directions as to the best means of caring for the child, and the officer who makes the visit is expected to see that the directions are clearly understood.

A Whip In the Pulpit.

A writer in an English review tells a reminiscence of a brother of a famous dean of Christchurch. The brother was rector of a small parish. His eccentricity was somewhat remarkable. He was a famous whip and drove a splendid team, of which he was very proud. He was fond of showing off how he could flick a fly from either of his leaders' ears without touching the horse. This accomplishment he transferred to a rather unexpected locality, for he always carried his whip up into the pulpit with him, and woe to the unfortunate member of his congregation whom he detected nodding.

The Stork's Balancing.

No one has really seen a stork until he has watched him stand on one leg beside his nest. After one has seen this feat he is sure it was a stork. Nothing in the animal kingdom is more marvelous than the way this great bird can balance his long body on a piece of bone which is no thicker than a wheat stalk and to behold also the perfect ease with which he goes to sleep while still poised in this critical position.

Not Interested.

Father—Robert, is it not about time that little boys were in bed? Robert (aged six, carelessly glancing at his watch)—Really, father, I must be excused from venturing an opinion. It is a subject in which I have little interest. I have no little boys, you know.

Fashionable Term.

"McBluff is suffering with rheumatism, I hear."

"No, he isn't suffering. He's got it, but he's quite proud and happy. His doctor calls it 'gout.'"—Philadelphia Press.

The Pain Part.

"Do you take pains with your eating?" asked the doctor.

"No," sadly replied the dyspeptic. "The pains don't come till afterward."—Philadelphia Record.

Still Worse.

NAVAL MAGAZINE.

Land Owned by Quincy Parties to be Taken.

Such progress has been made by the ordnance bureau of the Navy department in the work preliminary to establishing a naval magazine on the Weymouth back river, says the Herald, that, within a few days, the United States district attorney's office will begin proceedings in the federal court looking to the condemnation of about 800 acres of land in Weymouth and Hingham needed for this purpose. Capt. James R. Selfridge, ordinance officer at the navy yard, has had a survey made of the land the government proposes to take.

The ordnance bureau plans a magazine suitable for the storage of a large amount of explosives at a point available to warships. By dredging the river a waterway for vessels of heavy draught will be provided.

The department has $500,000 for the work, $70,000 for immediate use and $15,000 of this latter sum is to be used for engineering.

The geography of Hingham and Weymouth will be altered considerably. Only a comparatively small part of the land to be taken will be in actual use, the rest being taken to keep houses away from the magazine.

About two-thirds of the property lies in Hingham. The northerly border reaches to Bridge street, Weymouth, and the property has a frontage of 100 feet on Beal street, Hingham.

The building will be so far from any of the residences in either town that the inhabitants need have no fear. Following the condemnation the next step will be to make such terms as appear reasonable with the owners of the land, and the courts may have to be resorted to. It is expected the titles to the land are considerably involved.

Some of the land to be taken is owned by Lewis Bass and others of Quincy. Passengers on the electric cars between Quincy and Hingham have noticed civil engineers at work on both sides of the Weymouth Back river.

Floating Hospital.

On the Floating Hospital in Boston Harbor, on Thursday, three pairs of twins attracted attention, one pair being colored, and, although all were ill, the physicians expressed hope. It is remarkable how these wee bits of humanity recover under proper care and treatment on the hospital boat. One little Italian, Ernest Mazarella, 11 years old, brought his sick sister Mary, but 4 years old, and remained with her for the day. He was a little father to the tot, and caused no end of amusement by his exceedingly anxious attitude for the welfare of his charge. He looked so clean and fresh and wore a cap with a gold band around it.

A woman, fearing that the hospital might be short of food, brought a quart bottle of raspberry jam to feed her sick baby during the day, but it was quickly confiscated and was returned to the mother on her home trip. No child is given food brought from home on the hospital.

Thursday was the Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Converse day, and they defray all expenses. Friday was Arlington's second paid trip, and the ladies of that section provide the funds.

The guests were Mrs. A. S. Belcher, Mrs. J. P. Sears, Miss Carrie Parker, Miss E. Taber, Miss M. R. Dorr and Grace McEwan, the latter two coming from Whippany, N. J., while the remainder were from Quincy.

Good Field for Young Men.

No young man need be out of employment if he desires to work, for there is a great demand for men in all lines of trade and business. One of these lines is the street railway which is having considerable trouble this year in getting all the men it desires for conductors and motormen.

One of the reasons, perhaps, is because men have an idea that the road will only give them employment during the summer months, and that in the fall they will be laid off. Supt. Gammons, however, says that such is not the case. He says, we are always wanting men in some one of our lines and any man who proves himself competent need have no fear but that he will have steady employment the year round.

The pay is good, for some of the men are now making from $15 to $18 per week. A conductor or motorman starts in at 20 cents per hour the first year, and gets an increase every year, and if a man does not earn $12 per week during his first year it is no one's fault but his own.

Quite a few men are breaking in at the present time but there is room for more.

—"Marching Through Georgia" is said to be the favorite tune of the Japanese soldiers. Native music has no marches as it is without "time."

BROCKTON FUND.

How Relief Was Given to Shoe Factory Sufferers.

Those who have the distribution of the firemen's fund in Quincy will be interested in the apportionment and distribution of the $100,000 relief fund raised for the victims of the Grover shoe factory explosion at Brockton.

A statement of the general fund to date follows:

Orders paid, $56,505.91; orders appropriated unpaid, $2305; appropriated for children's fund, $40,000; additional for children's fund, $2500; additional appropriations, $2620; printing and incidentals, $100; total amount appropriated, $104,110.91.

Thirty-two savings bank accounts have been opened by widows receiving benefits, and seven mortgages discharged.

One man in the explosion, who thought at first he was not injured, was so grateful that he made a contribution to the fund. Later he had a nervous collapse from the shock. He has been granted assistance.

Two young men who were apparently uninjured have since become incapacitated through nervous disorders.

The children to benefit number 54. There is a prospective increase of three, and the children's fund totals $42,500. Each child is to receive not less than $500, payments beginning in October. A child has been born to the widow of Engineer Rockwell.

CAME EARLY.

Barre Men Not Expected Until Afternoon.

But Many in Town This Morning.

At Shipyard This Afternoon---Japanese Supper Tonight.

The Barre granite manufacturers, 100 strong, arrived in Boston this morning bright and early. Some of them came directly to Quincy and spent the forenoon in renewing acquaintances in the granite district.

The larger part of the party however spent the forenoon in doing Boston. They will all be in Quincy this afternoon, however, as an entertainment is planned for them by the Quincy association.

They will leave Boston on the 1.27 train and arrive in Quincy at 1.49. A special car will then be taken for the Fore River Shipbuilding Company plant. The battleship Vermont built by this company is nearly ready for launching.

The afternoon will be none too long for their inspection of this immense plant, and it will be night before they are aware of it.

Tonight there will be something doing for them at South Quincy, for there will be a business meeting at Malnati hall.

Matters of interest to the trade will be discussed, and the bond of friendship between the two associations will be cemented more closely.

The attraction tonight at Malnati hall will consist of a Japanese supper which will be served at 9 o'clock by a Boston caterer. This announcement should serve to fill the hall.

During the day, delegations from Concord, N. H., Hardwick, Vt. and Westerly, R. I. are expected so that there will be a grand reunion at tonight's meeting.

Tomorrow morning, bright and early, the train will be taken for Boston and a little later the "Granite Manufacturers Express" will leave the South Terminal for Crescent Park, R. I.

HERE TOMORROW.

Braintree Barber, Wanted for the Belmont Murder.

John Schidlofski, the Braintree barber, wanted for the murder of his wife at Belmont, will come back to Boston Saturday morning a prisoner.

State Officers Rhodes and Whitney having him in charge, arrived in Chicago on Wednesday from La Junta, Colorado, and left at 9.15 P. M.

Detective Whitney said in a special dispatch: "The prisoner is docile and well behaved, and there has been no attempt on his part to escape since we left La Junta. I cannot tell you whether or not the prisoner has made any further admissions to us. I am under orders to reveal nothing of the state's case against Schidlofski.

MANY CANDIDATES.

Who Would Like to Go to the Legislature.

Local politicians have already commenced to patch up their fences for the fall campaign. From present indications there will be an abundance of candidates for the Legislature. Richard R. Freeman and Harry S. Nicol both want to be sent back for another year and there are a number who think that they would like to represent the city at the State House next winter. Among the names already mentioned as candidates are George E. Adams, Edward J. Sandberg and Arthur W. Lovell. There are probably others who will enter the race when the time comes.

HIDING IN QUINCY.

Dedham Jail Breaker Here Two Days.

While the police of Norfolk county and all over New England were searching high and low for Phillips, the prisoner who escaped from Dedham jail, and was later arrested at New Haven under the name of Carleton, he was enjoying the sea breezes at Houghs Neck.

From developments which came to light this morning it appears that Phillips came to Quincy July 15, and secured rooms with Mrs. Emma Abbott at Houghs Neck. The same day that he came to Quincy it is alleged he broke into two houses in Dorchester, leaving his jail clothes at one of the places.

The plunder secured was brought to Houghs Neck where it was left, when Phillips made a hasty departure, for security for his board.

It was on Sunday, July 16, that Chief Burrell had a large squad of men at Houghs Neck to preserve order, and it is supposed that Phillips saw them and thinking they were after him got away as soon as possible.

He did not dare to move Sunday but Monday morning he skipped.

After his arrest early this week, Mrs. Abbott looked over the articles her boarder had left for security and found they consisted of an electric battery, opera glasses, rings and other jewlery.

She notified the police and this morning the family of G. Carlton Russell came to Quincy and identified the articles as part of the goods stolen from their house in Dorchester.

MOTHER'S PIES.

Burglar at Rockland Who Knew a Good Thing.

Chief of Police Snell and officer Kendrigan of Rockland arrested on Thursday evening a man whom they say is "Moonshine" Kelley of East Weymouth; who is wanted for alleged larceny at the house owned by Mrs. Julia Carey of North avenue.

While Mrs. Carey was calling on one of her neighbors some one forced an entrance through a rear window and ransacked the house. Mrs. Carey, who is more than 80 years old, returned while the man was in the pantry making free with eatables and some newly made berry pies.

Mrs. Carey asked him what he was doing and his reply was that he was hungry and that her pies looked so much like his mother's that he could not withstand the temptation.

He then locked the door of the room in which Mrs. Carey was and left the house through a window. Mrs. Carey's outcry attracted the attention of some neighbors who went to her assistance. It was necessary to force an entrance to the room in which she was locked.

An overcoat was missing as well as some jewelry, but a good-sized roll of bills had been overlooked in one of the bureau drawers.

Early in the evening the officers who had been informed of the affair found a place where the goods had been pawned and secured a description of the man who pawned them. They also learned that a man answering the description purchased some canned goods at a local grocery store, and they had little trouble in tracing his movements.

Very little is known concerning Kelley by the officers although it is said that he is a well known character in East Weymouth. Mrs. Carey is completely prostrated because of her experience.

Lower Tax Rate.

The tax rate of the city of Gloucester is $18.20, a reduction of 60 cents from 1904. The valuation of the city is $21,395,346, and the total tax raised is $405,387.30.

John W. Pierce was arraigned for larceny at Holbrook. Case continued until next Tuesday.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The scathing report of Commissioner Cutting of the Massachusetts department of insurance is interesting reading and a very dramatic arraignment which is right in touch with the sentiment of the times. But the reader wonders whether the Massachusetts commissioner has discovered all of this within the past year by arduous delving or why, if he has previously been so deeply impressed with the rottenness in these concerns, he has not given his Massachusetts constituency a tip before. —Haverhill Gazette.

YOUR HAT

May Be a Stylish One, But It Makes Trouble.

A man usually buys a hat that's "in style," but the modern hat for men has lots to answer for.

Baldheads are growing more numerous every day. Hats make excellent breeding places for the parasitic germs which sap the life from the roots of the hair.

When your hair begins to fall out and your scalp is full of Dandruff it is a sure sign that these countless germs are busily at work.

There is but one way to overcome the trouble and kill the germs—that way is to apply Newbro's Herpicide to the scalp—it will kill the germs and healthy hair is sure to result.

President and Japanese Peace Envoys Confer

RESULT IS KEPT SECRET

Armistice Was Probably Under Consideration--Komura and Takahira Locked In Car to Keep Interviewers Away

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 28.—President Roosevelt entertained at luncheon Baron Komura, minister of foreign affairs, and Kogoro Takahira, minister to the United States, the Japanese envoys to the Washington peace conference. Subsequently he had a long interview with them, at which all phases of the approaching negotiations were considered. Neither the president nor his Japanese visitors cared to discuss for publication the nature of their conference, except in the most general terms.

Baron Komura and Minister Takahira arrived here on a train to which had been attached a special chair car for their ccommodation. They were the only occupants of the car, both entrances to which were guarded by railroad porters. No one was permitted to enter the car. They arrived here at 12:20 and remained with the president until 3:30 o'clock, when they returned to the railroad station.

Minister Takahira, speaking for both Baron Komura and himself, said that they had had a delightful and satisfactory visit and talk with the president. Baron Komura, he said, had desired to pay his respects to President Roosevelt and, on behalf of the emperor, to thank him for his efforts to bring about peace in the Far East. This mission had been accomplished. In response to inquiries, Minister Takahira said it might be inferred that they discussed the pending peace negotiations, but added: "It would not be proper for me to give you the nature of the discussion. I could not do that."

The minister declined to say whether the subject of the terms Japan proposed to make to the Russian plenipotentiaries was one of the matters considered and would not indicate whether there was a probability of the arrangement of an armistice during the sittings of the conference.

While Minister Takahira was chatting with the newspaper men Baron Komura stood on the platform of his car, smiling interestedly. A photographer asked the minister to pose an instant with Baron Komura on the platform, but the diplomat shook his head emphatically and both he and the baron entered the car rather precipitately. The door was locked after them by the porter. The train left at 4:20 o'clock for New York.

President Roosevelt, when asked about the conference, replied that it was a subject which he did not feel at liberty to discuss for publication. It is expected that soon after the arrival of M. Witte, the principal envoy of Russia, he, too, will make a formal call on President Roosevelt in advance of the presentation to the president on Aug. 5 of the two sets of plenipotentiaries and their suites.

The president does not conceal his deep interest in the approaching conference of the envoys, but he lets it be understood that his interest will not lead him to interfere, even by indirection, with the work of the conferees. He had hoped that an early armistice might be arranged between the contending armies in Manchuria, pending the conclusion of the work of the conferees. It is not unlikely that the subject of an armistice may be one of the first questions considered after the arrival of the envoys at Portsmouth, but thus far no intimation of their possible action on that subject has been given. The plenipotentiaries have full authority to negotiate a temporary peace protocol, but whether they will do so or not will depend largely upon the situation at the time they begin their discussion.

The Sarcastic Novoe Vremya

St. Petersburg, July 28.—The substance of the interview in New York with M. Sato, spokesman of the Japanese peace envoys, on the position of Japan in the peace negotiations, was reproduced in the papers here. The Novoe Vremya says that "Japan has conducted the war quite economically, only a million a day, but she had better present the bill to those who are furnishing the sinews of war and not to the country upon which the war was forced."

Navy Yard Under Military Command

Vladivostok, July 28.—General Linevitch has issued an order placing all the employes of the navy yard here, including the detachments on certain cruisers, under military command, and ordering the post commandant to act as second in command to the military commandant, who will carry out all naval dispositions through the port commandant. The order concludes: "The commandant of the fortress shall entrust the naval forces with military duties, placing in their hands the maintenance of order among the men of the navy."

Russians Took Hasty Departure

London, July 28.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Osaka, Japan, sends the following: "Hearing of the advance of the Japanese, the Russians on Monday hastily retreated from Buryong and Fukyo, in northern Korea."

ELOPERS HELD UP

Will Be Sent Back to Their Homes Across the Water

Boston, July 28.—Pretty Emily Sale, a barmaid, and John Walwork, a saloonkeeper, and her former employer, of Manchester, Eng., were detained as they stepped ashore from the steamship Ivernia, from Liverpool, after the girl confessed to immigration officials that she and the man, who has a wife and children at home, were elopers. They had $87 when searched, and will go back to England, admission to the United States being refused.

The story of the parting of Walwork from his wife and his children is thus told by a passenger who knows the man and the woman:

"While I was standing near the rail watching the people come aboard, I was dumfounded to see Mrs. Walwork rush down the way, half-dragging one child while in the other arm she carried a younger child. She had no ticket that would allow her to go aboard the steamship.

"With the husband smiling and the wife weeping, the Ivernia slowly backed away from the stage. The wife had a warrant for his arrest, but was too late."

On the arrival of the Ivernia Walwork, clad in the height of fashion, with his mustache nicely waxed, and accompanied by the young lady, clad in a costly gown, appeared in line awaiting examination.

But the inspectors had their weather eyes peeled, and Walwork and the woman did not attain the freedom they figured on here.

Dunne Visiting Boston Democrats

Boston, July 28.—Mayor Dunne of Chicago arrived in this city last night, coming here on invitation of the Tammany club of ward 17 to deliver an address at the annual outing of the club, a Democratic organization, on Saturday. Considerable local interest has been aroused in the coming of Dunne because of a letter sent him advising him not to address the Tammany club, because its leader, Alderman Curley, had served a sentence in jail for violation of the civil service laws. Dunne consulted Mayor Collins and consented to address the club.

Boy Firebug Owns Up

Boston, July 29.—Dominico Palmerello, aged 12, smilingly confessed to Judge Wentworth that he had set fire to the building, 55 Haverhill street, on March 28. This was the time when firebugs caused thousands of dollars loss to business property. He gave as a reason that he "wanted to see the engines come. It was great sport." Judge Wentworth sentenced the lad to the reform school.

Four Straight For Consistent

Providence, July 28.—Consistent, Mrs. R. W. Walden's brown filly, who has outclassed her fields in the three previous events in which she has started here, made it four straight at Narragansett park by taking the Sound selling stakes, value $1000, from a very fast field with ease. She went the five furlongs in 1 2-5, bettering the best previous record of 1:01, made by herself.

Creditors Get Cash and Interest

Boston, July 28.—Creditors of R. B. Grover & Co. of Brockton are in receipt of cheques for 100 cents for every dollar of their claims, together with 6 percent interest to date. The Grover company was forced to assign as the result of the explosion and fire which totally destroyed its shoe factory in Brockton on March 20 last. The total claims of creditors amounted to about $237,000.

A Torpedo Boomerang

Newport, R. I., July 28.—While testing torpedoes in Narragansett bay torpedo boat Vesuvius was struck by one of the Whitehead models which turned in a circle after being launched from one of the Vesuvius' tubes. The torpedo was not charged with explosives, but so great was its speed that it dented one of the plates on the port side of the vessel.

Bostonian Dies In Korea

Boston, July 28.—Word has been received here by cable of the death in Seoul, Korea, of Arthur S. Dixey, 25 years old, son of Richard C. Dixey of this city. Dixey went to Korea last May as private secretary to United States Minister Morgan. He was graduated from Harvard in 1902. Dixey's parents are at present travelling abroad.

Salvationists' Camp Meeting

South Framingham, Mass., July 28.—The 20th annual camp meeting of the New England province of the Salvation Army opened at the Montwait camp ground last night, more than 300 members of the army being in attendance at the initial services. The camp meeting will continue until Aug. 7.

Engine Killed Car Inspector

Marlboro, Mass., July 28.—Daniel Calman, a car inspector, was killed in the yard near the station here. He attempted to jump upon the pilot of a switch engine, missed his footing and was struck by the engine.

In Need of Railroad Cars

Panama, July 28.—The great demand for cars for transportation of the material for the canal has caused serious congestion at both terminals of the railway. Steamers bound south, after remaining beyond their scheduled time for cargoes, have been compelled to leave without them.

Russian Cruiser Is Busy

Port Said, July 28.—The Russian auxiliary cruiser Kuban stopped and examined the British steamer Fazilka, London for Calcutta, in the Red sea July 25. The Fazilka was allowed to proceed after her papers had been examined.

The First Widow.

There is a Hebrew tradition that Eve survived Adam and was therefore the first widow.

An Egg.

The value of an egg does not depend so much on the size as on the quality of the yolk. The yolk is largely composed of a nutritious oil, and unless the hen is in prime condition this oil is deficient or of a poor quality.

Rare Autographs.

Collectors of autographs say that letters and documents of the first six colonial governors of Connecticut are seldom found. One of them, John Haynes, was governor of both Massachusetts and Connecticut, and his autograph in any form is eagerly and vainly sought by collectors.

Fond of Sugar.

No matter where the brute comes from, he loves sugar. This seems to be about the only thing that all of them agree is nice, and any one of them will eat the saccharine substance.

Violet Water.

The Germans gather wood violets in the spring, place the heads in bottles and fill them as full as possible with white wine vinegar. The bottles are corked and placed in a sunny spot for thirty days, and the liquid within is strained and ready for use. A teaspoonful diluted in water is said to cure headache.

Corroding Tin Roofs.

Rapid destruction of tin roofs may be charged to the use of green sheathing boards, the placing of tin on roofs where acid vapors arise through the building, the use of acid tar and acid tar papers.

Denmark's Dairies.

Denmark has held a high position for centuries in dairy products. Even in recent years her butter and cheese find ready markets in England. With only one-third of the area of New York state and one-third the population, yet Denmark has established within her limited borders 1,500 creameries.

Guatemala's Mountains.

The mountains of Guatemala (meaning full of trees) are covered with magnificent forests, and the country takes its name from them. One of its principal products is gutta percha. Dye woods and other tropical trees abound.

Taste and Smell.

Man has been proved by M. Vaschide to be more sensitive than woman to a salt taste and in less degree to a bitter taste, while the two sexes are about equally sensitive to acid and sweet tastes. With a better developed olfactory sense, however, woman is better able to distinguish flavors.

Cheese.

Cheese has great nutritive value, since it contains twice the nourishment of the same weight of beef. Raw cheese is more indigestible than cooked cheese and old cheese less so than new. Brie and Roquefort are French cheeses, ripened until soft; Camembert comes from Normandy, Parmesan and Gorgonzola from Italy, Gruyere and Sapsago from Switzerland and Cheddar from England.

The Niccoli Library.

The first public library in modern Europe was founded by Nicholas Niccoli, a Florentine, in the fifteenth century.

New Hampshire.

New Hampshire was formerly called Lacnia. It received its present name in 1629, being first called New Hampshire by Captain John Mason, who had been a resident of Hampshire, England.

The Peanut.

How the peanut found its way into this country is a mystery. There is a tradition that some of the slaves who were brought from Africa and sold in North Carolina introduced the leguminous plant into that state. The peanut is indigenous to Africa.

An Unruly River.

The famous Tugela river, in South Africa, is said on one occasion to have risen forty feet during a single night owing to thunderstorms on the mountains.

A Giant Perch.

A sea perch nearly seven and a half feet long and weighing 460 pounds was caught last winter in the River Hooghly, India. The condition of its scales indicated that the fish was very old. The largest India sea perch previously captured, as far as the records show, was taken in 1786. It was seven feet in length and weighed about 300 pounds.

The Great Pyramid.

Stonemasons will probably get a better idea of the immense size of the great pyramid when they learn that it consists of 89,028,000 cubic feet.

Russian Icons.

Over 2,000,000 icons, the sacred images so universaly venerated by orthodox Russians, are manufactured in Russia every year. The making of these figures is one of the largest household industries of central Russia.

Rice Water Ink.

Writing with rice water, to be rendered visible by the application of iodine, was practiced successfully in the correspondence with Jelalabad in the first African war. The letter was concealed in a quill. On opening it a small paper was unfolded, on which appeared the single word "Iodine." The magic liquid was applied, and therewith appeared an important dispatch from Sir Robert Sale.

CITY BREVITIES

The last Friday of the month.

Welcome to the visiting granite manufacturers.

It was inadvertently stated in Thursday's Ledger that Mrs. Osborne Rogers had returned from Marshfield.

There is a rush at City Hall every Monday and Thursday evening to pay poll taxes and thus save the expense of a summons.

Miss Effie Gordon and Miss Maggie Gordon of Kidder street have gone to spend a few weeks at their aunt's in New Hampshire.

The Rosebud Club held a meeting at the home of Miss Louise Dunn, Whitwell street, Friday evening July twenty-first. After the meeting the members were pleasantly entertained, and sherbet and cake served.

John Adams Commandery, No. 355, K. of M., held a very enthusiastic meeting Thursday evening, at which a good number were present. The lodge is attaining a good footing in this city, and is growing in numbers all the time. Four candidates will be initiated at the next meeting.

Birthday Party.

Little Miss Irene, youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs. G. A. Lyons of 68 Washington street, gave a party to her young friends and playmates Thursday afternoon, the occasion being her seventh birthday. She was the recipient of many gifts. Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake, fruit, etc, were served on the lawn. After an enjoyable time playing games, all departed, wishing her many happy returns and also wishing it were possible to have more than one birthday in a year.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Child's Dress Designed by Martha Dean—No. 4556

In this little dress we have the popular Russian style. The front is ornamented by a broad double box plait, and the sleeve is of circular shaping. The square neck is decidedly pretty. The garment is strictly a summer one, although it can be used at any season by wearing a guimpe. A charming development would be of white linen trimmed with cross-stitch bands. The model is suitable for all kinds of material and will not be hurt by frequent introduction to the washtub. Madras, linen, galatea, pique, canvas and gingham may be used to advantage in making this frock. Sizes, 2 to 9 years.

ABSENCE OF HYDE

Causes Him to Fall Greatly In Public Estimation

PRESIDENT IS DISGUSTED

Secretary Wilson "Broken Up" by Cotton Scandal Disclosures --Have Great Affect In Discrediting Our Government

Washington, July 28.—In its public announcements may be noted a change in the name of the agricultural department bureau, recently involved in scandals. It has been the bureau of statistics, and its head "John Hyde, statistician." It is now "the crop-estimating bureau," which differentiates it from statistical bureaus of other departments, and also defines accurately its work.

The findings of the board seem extremely damaging to Hyde, in marked contrast with the complimentary tone which Secretary Wilson took in accepting his resignation a week ago. The answer which Hyde will make to the charge that he took data showing a 14.9 decrease in acreage and summarized it for the public as showing 11.4 is clear. He will say that he had to give different weights to various evidence—a personal equation which all statisticians have to allow. His friends are saying this for him now.

But the thought which will next occur to everybody is why judgments upon which such tremendous property values depend should be left to the caprice of one man. Besides, this board consists of men who know how to weigh the evidence and they are unanimous in the charge.

Hyde has fallen greatly in public estimation by his resignation under fire, and then by his unannounced departure to Europe at a time when his testimony might be wanted. The president has been greatly disgusted by these two occurrences. The somewhat summary release from service of Mrs. Bertha Burch, Hyde's stenographer, was significant in the same direction.

Secretary Wilson is "badly broken up" by these experiences. His friends say it has added years to his shoulders. He has been intolerant of the suggestions of crookedness in this bureau as they have been made during several years, and never more so than when Mr. Cheatham arrived with the latest charges.

Hyde and Holmes always discussed the question calmly with all inquirers, and the virtuous Holmes assured newspaper correspondents, after the Cheatham charges were made public, that if the department could even get hold of an employe in any other bureau who was advising outsiders as to the general direction of crops information, it would go hard with him. He acknowledged the remote possibility of such perfidy. Secretary Wilson confided so absolutely in his subordinates that he would hearken to nothing.

The effect of these disclosures in discrediting our government can hardly be overestimated. A Lancashire cotton manufacturer, now in Washington, evidently voices prevailing British opinion when he says that the manipulation of the cotton market, causing unwarranted fluctuations, is highly prejudicial to manufacturers, and is compelling them to look more intently to the experiments in the British colonies, so that they will be less at the mercy of American speculators and manipulators in getting their raw material. He quotes Mr. Choate as saying that there is a higher standard of business and public morality in England than in the United States, and adds that the British public would rise vigorously against such an aspersion upon the honor of their government, upon the honor of their government

F. A. Peckham, a New York broker, refused to answer questions as to his dealings in agricultural products before the grand jury investigating the cotton report leakage. Peckham was thereupon told by District Attorney Beach that unless the witness changed his mind by the time the grand jury convenes today, his recalcitrancy would be reported to Judge Wright of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, who already has given public notice of his intention to punish any witness refusing to reply to proper questions. The penalty is imprisonment.

Another Case of Graft

Washington, July 28.—In a hearing at the department of agriculture, two representatives of an agricultural publication made charges that the wife of one of the scientists in the bureau of plant industry owned a block of stock in a concern manufacturing culture for soil inoculation, while the scientist was preparing and revising bulletins regarding the enrichment of farms and portraying the culture as containing virulent forms of bacteria for making poor land rich. It was alleged that publications revised by the official tended to direct the farmers to a commercial concern supplying the material because of the exhaustion of the supply by the department. At the hearing the scientist involved in the allegations admitted that his wife owned the stock. It was also alleged that the culture had been supplied by the department to the concern mentioned in undue quantities, the employe mentioned himself prepaying expenses. It is said that he admitted this and other shipments. The charges are under investigation by the department.

DEATH LIST OF 62

Investigating Board Has Bennington Disaster In Hand

San Diego, Cal., July 28.—The list of the Bennington dead now number 62, there having been two more deaths. H. A. Metius, a pay clerk, who died yesterday, was able to walk up town after the accident and was thought not to have been badly injured. After his wounds had been dressed he was out on the streets. Suddenly he collapsed and had to be taken to a hospital on a stretcher. It is supposed that the shock and a weak heart were the causes of his death.

The flagship Chicago, with Admiral Goodrich on board, has arrived. Soon after the Chicago came to anchor Commander Young of the Bennington and Captain Drake of Mare Island went on board the Chicago and were closeted with the admiral.

A board of investigation was appointed. With the report of this board in hand the admiral will decide whether to appoint a board of inquiry.

In the meantime the work of cleaning up the gunboat proceeds slowly. Scalings from the boilers will be examined by the navy yard chemist, it is said, to determine whether gases created by corrosion and chemical action caused the explosion.

The Haunted Man

The doctor said it was a singular case, but by no means a rare one. Gordon Combs by name—a bachelor of thirty-five, wealthy and taking life easy, had suddenly become possessed of the idea that he was haunted.

"Just what sort of a feeling is this that comes over you?" was asked.

"It is easily described. It is as if one were waiting for a dear friend to die—a feeling of awe—a state of suspense, and now and then I find myself cringing, as if some one was aiming a blow at me."

"Crash! Zip!"

"That was from an air gun," said the doctor after throwing up the window and looking out, and then turning to the bullet imbedded in the wall.

"And fired at me," added Combs.

"Undoubtedly, as you were facing the window and I could not be seen. Your enemy is in one of those houses. He fired from roof or window. One of them is a rooming house, and it was likely from that."

"It—it might have been an accident," suggested the patient.

"Possibly, but I don't think so. Your case has gone beyond me. Put it into the hands of the police."

Combs went to the police and reported the affair as probably an accident, but asked that they find out if any boy or man living in any of the houses had an airgun. There had been no report and no powder smoke. Inside of two days a detective assured him that such a thing as an air gun had never been seen about any of the houses. The bachelor made up his mind that it was an accident, but that the shooter had lied about it, and he tried to dismiss it from his mind. He had the feeling of fear yet, but he did not go back to the doctor. He determined to fight against and conquer it. Two days later at the club he ordered a drink, which was not brought to him immediately, as the waiter had to serve another order first. When the wine came it sat at his elbow untasted while he conversed with an acquaintance who had just come in.

"Hello," said the gentleman, as his eyes lighted on the glass, "but the color of that wine is way off tonight. Let me see."

He held it up between his eye and the light for a moment and then said:

"I don't like the looks of this at all. Let me take it to Peter's and have him analyze it."

"For what?"

"For knockout drops."

"Bosh! And in our own club too!"

Next day the chemist reported that the wine had been poisoned. The waiter explained that he had left it a moment unwatched before bringing it to Combs, but neither he nor any of the others had seen a strange person about. The matter was kept a secret between three or four members of the club, and Combs did not go to the police until a fortnight later. Then he went because a third attempt had been made.

"You have got a deadly enemy," said the detective to whom the case was given, "and you must set your memory at work and try to give me a pointer. This unknown is doubtless a man, and he wants your life mighty bad. What man have you ever had serious trouble with?"

"No man on earth, and I pledge you my honor on that," was the reply.

"Well, then, what woman?"

"None—absolutely none."

"Well, here are three dastardly attempts and no clew. I don't see what we can do but wait for the fourth and hope that something may turn up."

Combs waited. He could do nothing but wait. Three weeks later, as he went to the stables for his horse and a gallop in the park, he accidentally discovered a strong pin thrust through the flap of his saddle in such a way that it must have sharply pricked his leg had he been mounted. No man about the stables knew of the pin, and yet a chemist said that its point had been steeped in a deadly poison. Then the detective suggested that the victim make a secret departure from the city and go abroad for a few months. This advice was followed. The man was fast becoming a nervous wreck, and he realized that he must get from under the shadow or collapse. No one could have made a more secret departure, and yet when the steamer bound for London was three days out he discovered that his box of favorite cigars had been meddled with and probably poisoned.

On landing in London Combs employed a private detective to accompany him and started for Switzerland. Every precaution was used in getting away and in reaching a place off the traveled route, and for a month the hunted man had peace. There was no other guest at the chalet where the two found lodgings, and it was some miles to the nearest village or hotel. One day the bachelor, who was now regaining his lost flesh and spirits, went up the mountain to a peculiarly shaped spot called the basin. It was a quiet retreat, and it had become his habit to read and smoke there when the weather was pleasant. On this day the detective accompanied him, but had fallen asleep after finishing his cigar. Suddenly the old feeling came back to Combs. He fought with it for five minutes, and then started up with a groan on his lips. He had not yet reached his feet when a great rock weighing a ton or more came tumbling down into the sink and struck him fairly and crushed the life out of him in an instant. The detective awoke and sprang up and rushed up the path, but no one was in sight. He listened, and what he thought he heard was the faint sounds of footsteps running away through the fir trees. He saw no one; he could not be sure that any human being had been within half a mile of the place, and yet Gordon Combs lay dead beneath the rock that human hands had set rolling.

The roof of the pattern shop at the ship yard is being raised.

Mrs. S. A. Miller and children are guests of Mrs. N. Pratt at her home in Randolph.

Dorothy, the year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Seller of Edwards street, is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas J. Carter of Waterbury, Connecticut, are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, July 25th. Mr. Carter is the grandson of Mrs. W. W. Carter of this city.

Work has begun on the Hancock street bridge and the masonry has already assumed a finished appearance. It is a pleasing sight to everyone for nothing gives a town a look of unthriftiness like an unfinished piece of road work.

The directors of the Wollaston Co-operative bank, seventeen in number, under the supervision of President H. T. Whitman and A. L. Baker, will take an outing down the harbor next Wednesday on board the yacht Pochahontas.

What It Costs

What It Pays

are two values of newspaper advertising that the merchan has to consider. But the most important thing is

WHAT IT PAYS.

The merchant can get space in papers of small circulation and little influence for a little less money than the same size space would cost in the DAILY LEDGER and the QUINCY PATRIOT.

DOES IT PAY

to throw away the certainty of the profitable returns which are sure to LEDGER and PATRIOT advertisers, because it costs less to advertise in cheaper paper?

SEVERE CRITICISM

Another Life Insurance Company Under Fire

WHAT EXAMINER FOUND

Heavy Judgments Concealed and Surplus Exaggerated by Over $300,000--Procrastination In Payment of Just Debts to Policyholders

Albany, July 28.—Concealment of judgments against the company amounting to $182,767, exaggeration of its surplus by over $300,000 and a settled policy of delay in paying claims, are some of the charges made against the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance company by Chief Examiner Vanderpoel in his report submitted to Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks and by him made public. The company has headquarters in New York city and claims assets of over $5,000,000.

Examiner Vanderpoel says that the management of the company made no mention of these judgments in the item of liabilities reported for the year 1904.

"Of the $184,913.25 reported by the company in its last annual statement as being due or accrued for salaries, rents, office expenses, taxes, bills, accounts, etc.," says he, "$182,767.92 consisted of judgments entered against this company. I am constrained to believe that the return of this item after the manner stated could not have been the result of an inadvertence and certainly constituted a concealment of facts sufficient to render the company's sworn statement for 1904 materially inaccurate in its failure to return these judgments under their appropriate title.

"Further variations in addition to those appearing in credit assets and policy reserve, as between the figures published in the company's last annual statement and similar items embodied in this report, are produced in the item of unpaid death claims, Dec. 31, 1904. They are returned in the annual statement of the company at $769,704.31. As the result of this examination the amount is shown to be $831,429.59."

The company's last annual statement, says the report, produces a so-called surplus of unassigned funds amounting to $359,211.58. The examination just completed fixes this item at $38,492.16.

The report shows in detail how insurance at one time amounting to $1,923,000.73 finally yielded its beneficiaries $906,656.74, there having been deducted $293,655.30 on account of an indebtedness ascertained by the company to exist against the assured, with a further deduction of $722.688.69 retained by the company for the various alleged violations of contract by the insured.

"Making due allowance for the time it may occupy to thoroughly investigate all questionable death claims," says the examiner, "I think that as the result of this examination it is quite clearly in evidence that the company has adopted a settled policy of delay in withholding the approval necessary to constitute an admission by it of the receipt of satisfactory evidence of death in the case of all claims under policies or certificates issued while the company was operating under article 6 of the insurance law. From the date of such approval 90 days is the specified time within which payment is to be made. The average period elapsing between the filing of proofs of death which were, upon 'investigation,' ultimately found to be valid claims, is so lengthy as to properly subject the company to the severest criticism in its treatment of those beneficiaries, many of whom must be subjected to no little suffering and distress by this seemingly inexcusable procrastination on the company's part in the payment of its just debts to policyholders."

In 1895 the department recommended that the company establish a sinking fund to offset the depreciation of leases. The suggestion was adopted, but, says the examiner, the fund "appears to have been abandoned some time ago, for in 10 years it has reached but $56,948.76. The sum of $42,000 has, however, been borrowed from this fund and is charged to mortuary account. The balance, therefore, after the loan to the latter account, reduces the leasehold sinking fund to $14,948.76 instead of $165,000, the amount which should now represent it, under the recommendation made in 1895 by the appraiser of the insurance department."

The names of the nine executive officers of the company are given, their salaries aggregating upwards of $113,000.

Want Receivers For Equitable

New York, July 28.—In the form of an amended complaint to a bill filed last April, suit has begun in the United States circuit court here to throw the entire $421,000,000 assets of the Equitable Life Assurance society into the hands of receivers. More than 40 policyholders in the Equitable, representing a dozen different states, are included as complainants in the present suit, which is based in part upon the allegation that the society has no funds with which to meet its enormous losses and is insolvent.

In the amended bill, which is far more sweeping in its charges and in its appeal for relief than was the original bill of last April, there are incorporated many citations from the Frick and Hendricks reports, published some months later.

A Man Eating Tiger.

In 1891 one of the Hagenbecks and Herman Boger, a hunter in the family's employ, went to India for tigers. Hearing of a savage man eater in a certain district, they organized a party and sallied forth to find him.

Crouching like a cat, with back up and whiskers bristling, it waited its chance for a spring. One of the natives, more venturesome than the rest, boldly charged it. With a sudden blood curdling growl it was upon him and he was brushed from his horse like a man of straw. And then, though he was a man of fully 145 pounds weight, the great beast seized him as a cat seizes a kitten and started off with him toward the jungle. It was impossible to shoot for fear of killing the man, and so we had to make the chase one of strategy. Finally, near the edge of the undergrowth, we cornered the tiger, and it dropped its luckless burden. Then a bullet from an express rifle ended its days of pillage. It had carried the man half a mile, and, strange to say, he was little injured.—Leslie's.

Corsica and England.

It is an almost forgotten fact that for a period of a little more than two years during the Napoleonic wars Corsica was a British possession. After the evacuation of Toulon the British government felt it necessary to take the island, and Lord Hood, with Nelson as brigadier, was sent to drive out the French. With the capture of Calvi, July 12, 1794, where Nelson lost his eye, the island fell into British hands, and George III. formally accepted the crown of Corsica, appointing Sir George Elliot as British viceroy and allowing the Corsicans to retain their legislative assembly. In 1796 the activity of the French navy in other parts of the Mediterranean resulted in a sudden decision of the British government to withdraw from the island. The evacuation was completed on Oct. 26 of that year, and Corsica reverted to France.

Cooking In Naples.

In Naples cooking is done anywhere and anyhow—inside and outside, on sheet iron stoves, on tin boxes, in stone jars or in clay baked earth. Here a cobbler sits from early to late out on a corner of a sidewalk near a public "Latrina," to which he attends whenever necessary; when not, he mends; also makes shoes. Near him is a granite arrangement where he cooks his meals. It is about one foot high, square and open at the top, with space deep enough for some charcoal. Below the coal is a grate. On one side at the bottom is an opening for draft, and a savory smell always arises from a little black pot if one passes there at noon or toward the evening. I saw a stove and a woman busy cooking out on a balcony, with about six feet of stovepipe braced against the railing.—Chicago Tribune.

How Dew Forms.

Dew was formerly supposed to fall softly from the heavens, and to this belief may be ascribed many current and poetical phrases; but dew does not fall in the exact meaning of the term. The condensation of watery vapor follows upon the chilling of the air. This is seen as the earth cools toward night, and it takes place most rapidly near the ground. Grass and other vegetation cools more rapidly than the air above it. The air in contact with plants is thus chilled and deposits its moisture upon the leaves of the plants in dew. When the chilling of the air proceeds further, the moisture may be precipitated to a considerable height above the earth's surface, and it then becomes what we call fog.

The Muff.

In many of the portraits of the sixteenth century one often sees a strip of rich, soft fur wound around the wrist of a noble dame. This was used to cover the neck or fulfill the function of the muff, and to it was often attached a small animal's head or a skull cunningly wrought in metal and adorned with precious stones. The first Venetian muffs were small, made of a single piece of velvet, brocade or silk lined with fur, the opening enriched with gold or silver buttons set with stones. By 1662 the muff seems to have been recognized as the necessary adjunct of the wardrobe of a woman of fashion.

His Last Wish.

"What are you doing with that sheet of paper, Orville?" sharply asked his wife.

"I am making a wish," answered Mr. Meekun.

"A wish?"

"Yes, my dear. In your presence I shall not presume to call it a will."—Chicago Tribune.

A Cuckoo That Stutters.

Even the cuckoo, which has no home, is strangely faithful to locality. In an Essex district an old cuckoo, known to the whole place by a distinctive stammer in his speech, was seen and heard regularly in the same parish for seven consecutive years.—London Outlook.

Continual Opportunity.

Great opportunities seldom present themselves, but every moment of every hour of thy conscious life is an opportunity to improve thyself, which for thee is the best and most necessary thing.—Ruskin.

A Smart Woman.

"Bliggins' wife thinks he is the smartest man on earth."

"No," answered Miss Cayenne; "she doesn't think so. She merely makes Bliggins think she thinks so."

Gentleness and cheerfulness, these come before all morality; they are the perfect duties.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

WINE FROM NEAR THE POLE

Bottle Still Contains Liquor That Greely Left—Peary to Drink It.

Perhaps the most remarkable bottle of liquor in the world in many respects was exhibited to several members of the Peary Arctic club in New York the other night. It was left in the snows at Fort Conger by the ill fated Greely expedition, and it was unexpectedly produced by Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the club, says the New York Times.

Commander Robert E. Peary, who will again try to find the north pole, found the bottle, which is uncracked and full of ancient yellow Chartreuse, in 1898, where the Greely expedition had left it with other supplies that had to be forsaken. One year later he reached Grinnell Land and left it in a cache addressed "Herbert L. Bridgman." He tied a tendon of a walrus around the middle of the bottle and placed a letter inside the band. This is the letter as preserved by Mr. Bridgman:

Grinnell Land, June, 1899.

My Dear Bridgman—Don't think I have found a bar up here or that our repertoire of spirits includes such delicacies as liqueurs and the wherewithal for mixed drinks.

When I reached Fort Conger last June I found one bottle of Chartreuse. The contents may be good, bad or indifferent, but they have lain within 500 miles of the pole for eighteen years and for eighteen times have been colder than I hope you ever will be. PEARY.

The bottle was exhibited at a family party at the Hamilton club, Brooklyn. Among those present were Mrs. Bridgman, who has been a worldwide traveler, as well as Mrs. Peary and Mr. Bonsail, one of the survivors of the Greely expedition.

Mr. Bridgman said he would open the bottle when Peary returned from his search for the pole.

PANAMA CANAL LABOR TESTS

Experiments Are to Be Made With Various Nationalities.

In order to test the capacity for work of Italians, Chinese and Japanese and also the contract method of securing and handling laborers the Panama canal commission has decided to import 2,000 men of each nationality for a 500 day contract, subject to renewal, says the Washington Post. Proposals for furnishing these laborers will soon be issued. It is the object of the commission to reduce the amount of this sort of labor as much as possible by the introduction of modern machinery, but it will be necessary to secure several thousand additional workmen.

The number of 2,000 was chosen because of being the approximate capacity of one ship at a time. The laborers will be furnished by contractors and will have to be delivered before the 1st of December next. The government will furnish free hospitals and medical attendance, unfurnished quarters, fuel for cooking and water. Under a recent decision of the attorney general laborers will work eight hours a day.

The class of laborers going to the Isthmus will not be entitled to enter the United States because of an act of the last congress which made the immigration laws of the United States applicable to persons coming from the canal zone to the United States. All legal questions involved, as well as precautions to be taken to obviate injustice and hardship to laborers hired by contractors, are now under consideration by the legal advisers of the commission.

FAILURE OF A CLEVER RUSE

How Inventive Genius of Telegraph Operator Awakened Whole Town.

The inventive genius of a night operator on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad the other morning aroused and frightened the residents of Hartwell, O., almost wrecked his station, offended an engineer and caused detectives to be detailed whose investigation resulted in a ten day vacation for the operator, says a Cincinnati dispatch.

For three hours after midnight there are no trains, and the operators along the line try to get in a little sleep. The great anxiety is to wake up in time to give the morning flier the "block." Failure to do this would mean suspension.

The Hartwell operator strung a rope between two telegraph poles, many yards below the station, extending them over spools to his desk. On these he hung a coal bucket loaded with rocks. He figured that the train would cut the rope and the rocks fall with a din.

The rope used was too heavy to be cut. The bucket of rocks was jerked out of the operator's window, taking sash and all. It then swung into a residence, crashing the glass in a door, and took up its clattering way down the ties.

Half the town was awakened in a fright. The engineer pulled up after eight miles of the din, and, finding a can tied to his pet, No. 210, made a loud and long complaint. Detective Hart, the railroad sleuth, with the battered bucket and frayed rope, located the inventor of the effective alarm.

His Japanese.

A correspondent in Manchuria writes as follows to the Chicago News: "A Russian and a Japanese were found locked in a hand to hand struggle. The Japanese was taken prisoner, and the Russian was found to be severely wounded. The Russian refused to be taken to the ambulance unless the Japanese was taken with him. Together they were put into the same hospital train. The Russian refused to be separated from the Japanese and spent his time looking after him, fanning his head and telling all visitors that he was 'my Japanese.'"

The Social Realm.

Come to the woods, O weary one,
For faith and hopes are there;
Under the leaves God's will is done,
His glory fills the air;
There is joy in the piping from the pond,
There is triumph in the velvet frond.
Come to the woods, O doubting heart,
And learn that earth is fair;
The city and heaven are far apart,
But God is near, out there
Where all is obedient to His will—
The woods are His, as He made them, still.

THE BARRE MEN

Were Proud of Battleship Vermont.

Which They Inspected at Shipyard.

Secret Meeting at Malnati Hall and Japanese Supper.

The special train having on board the Barre men arrived at the North Union station Boston, at 5.08 yesterday morning. As the railroad wished to use the sleeping cars on other lines the occupants were not allowed to remain on board, but were immediately turned out in the street. It was a hungry crowd that hung about the street corners waiting for the restaurants to open.

When the train reached Concord some of the party left the train to buy cigars, and before they got back their train had gone and they were left behind. A later train however brought them to Boston.

The larger part of the Barre granite manufacturers arrived in town yesterday on the 1.49 train from Boston. A few minutes later they were seated aboard two special street cars bound for the Fore River Shipbuilding plant. Upon their arrival they were taken in charge by a guide and shown through the works.

They first saw the big hammer in the forge shop at work and from there they visited in turn the wood working shop, engine room, machine shop and ship tool and steel working shops.

They spent some time looking at the big battleships Rhode Island and New Jersey as they lay in the docks and then went over where the battleship Vermont is being made ready for her maiden dip.

They stood here a long time and they swelled out with pride when they thought that this vessel was to bear the name of their state. Questions about her were fired at the guide at the rate of sixty per minute and were as quickly answered.

Two hours was quickly passed at the works and then return cars were taken for Quincy. From then until evening each one did what his own desires prompted.

In the evening there was a joint meeting of the two associations at Malnati hall. Reporters were denied admission to the hall as it was said that some private matters were to be discussed.

This meeting was in session all the evening. During the latter part of the evening a lunch that had been given the name "Japanese supper" was served and likewise enjoyed. When the Vermonters get back home they will have something to say about this supper.

All hands were up bright and early this morning. The goal today is Crescent Park, R. I., and there will be something doing from the time they arrive until they depart for home.

A band met them at the train on its arrival and escorted them to the ball field where a series of sports were to be held.

At 1 o'clock the band is to escort them to the dining hall where a genuine Rhode Island clambake dinner will be served.

After which each man will do as he pleases until time to leave for home.

ARREST MADE.

Phipps Street Man Cut Wife and Others with Knife.

Word was sent to the police station yesterday afternoon that there was a row in progress on Phipps street, and that a man armed with a long sharp knife was threatening to kill everybody in sight.

Lieut. McKay went to the scene, and found that Daniel Clague, half crazed by a drunken debauch, had armed himself with a long knife and had been flourishing it about the house, threatening to carve anyone who came near.

The man's wife and others in the house had struggled with the man to get the knife away, and that they had succeeded in doing. Mrs. Clague, however, received several cuts. So had the others present, and Clague himself was bespattered with blood.

Clague was locked up on a complaint charging him with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Sudden Death.

Mrs. Annie S., wife of Mr. Edward S. Ago, died suddenly this morning at her home on Hamilton street, Wollaston Park, aged 29 years. Mrs. Ago, who was Annie S. Keenan, was married a year ago Thursday. Nine days ago she gave birth to a son. She was apparently getting along nicely. She sat up in bed and almost immediately fell backward and died.

AN ARMISTICE SOON

Japan Is Perfectly Willing to Agree to It

POWERS OF HER ENVOYS

Are Given Wide Scope, Subject to Sanction of Mikado--China Cannot Ask Indemnity of Japan--Americans Highly Honored by Japanese at Tokio

New York, July 29.—Inquiry was made of Mr. Sato, minister resident to the Emperor of Japan, who is the official spokesman for the commission, as to the attitude of the Japanese on the question of an armistice, and he replied: "Japan is perfectly willing to agree to an armistice after the credentials of both commissions have been examined and verified.

"The examination of credentials must necessarily be the first duty of the peace delegates to ascertain that all are qualified to act in the capacity to which they are represented. In the negotiations for peace that ended the Chinese war, I remember there was much delay because the credentials of one of the Chinese plenipotentiaries did not bear the emperor's seal granting him plenary powers.

"However, I think an armistice will be agreed upon after the commission enters formally upon their work. It has been the custom in all peace negotiations to cease hostilities during the convention of peace plenipotentiaries."

Mr. Sato was asked as to the definite powers of the members of his commission and he said: "They have power to reject any proposal and commit the Japanese government to any document they may sign, subject, of course, to the sanction of the emperor."

The reports that China intended asking an indemnity had been read by Sato, and regarding this he said: "China could not ask any indemnity of Japan. It was because of her inability or unwillingness to keep Russia out of Manchuria that forced us into the war."

Baron Komura has applied himself closely to his official duties. Many dispatches are transmitted to and from Tokio, and all the secretaries with the suite are taxed with an enormous amount of work. Last night Komura and his suite dined with the trustees of the Japanese club.

Mr. Sato commented upon the reception to Secretary Taft in Tokio and said he had read the reports with deep interest. The fact that the historic chrysanthemum gardens had been thrown open to the secretary, Sato said, was indicative of the feeling toward Americans in Japan. "These gardens are almost sacred in our country" said Sato, and this is the first time they have been opened to a foreign citizen. It is a marked distinction and honor. They are opened for own people but twice a year."

Japan Has Ample Funds

London, July 29.—The Statist publishes an interview with Koretyo Takahasi, the special finance commissioner of Japan, who expresses himself as hopeful that peace will result from the coming negotiations. He bases this hope on his personal conviction that Japan's demands will be reasonable and that the true interests of Russia require that she make peace. Should hostilities continue, Takahashi says, Japan is in a position to prosecute them successfully, as she has on hand the means to carry on the conflict for a considerable time and if the war should continue there is no question that she will be able to borrow further.

Russians Are Hemmed In

Tokio, July 29.—Luikoff, on Sagalien island, to which point the Russians retreated, is 30 miles southeast of Alexandrovsky, beyond a range of hills separating the Alexandrovsky district from the plain. Here the Russians are completely isolated, owing to lack of roads. It is impossible for them to make a long stand and it is expected that they will soon be subdued. A victory over them will make the Japanese virtually masters of the whole island. There is great rejoicing in Tokio over the success of the Sagalien expedition, and the landing at Krestakamp lighthouse is regarded as the first entry of the Japanese army into Russian territory.

Russian Guns Silenced

Tokio, July 29.—Admiral Kataoka reports that the squadron sent to Kastri bay on July 24 found the lighthouse at Krestakamp abandoned. The squadron proceeded to Basalt island and observed four guns in the direction of Alexandrovsky postoffice. These guns opened fire, but were immediately silenced. The city was burned and a building like a magazine exploded. Kastri bay is opposite Sagalien island.

Killed by Live Wire

Boston, July 29.—A New England Telephone and Telegraph company lineman, James Wilson, Jr., 28 years old, came in contact with a live wire while at work at the corner of Blue Hill avenue and Seaver street. He was thrown from a ladder, a distance of 25 feet, and instantly killed.

Pacific Schooner Probably Lost

San Francisco, July 29.—The American schooner Honolulu, now 125 days out from Shanghai for Puget sound, has been given up as lost, and further reinsurance has been refused. She is a four-masted steel vessel of 1053 tons.

FEVER CASES INCREASE

Now Thirty-Five Centers of Infection at New Orleans

New Orleans, July 29.—Although the unofficial reports show a larger number of yellow fever deaths than on Thursday and the appearance of a number of new cases, the men of science who are warring against the yellow fever plague are confident that the situation is well in hand, with no immediate prospect of becoming alarming. The health authorities hold that the plague remains an Italian infection.

The following is the report as to the progress of yellow fever in New Orleans up to last night: New cases, 21; total cases to date, 227; deaths yesterday, 3; deaths since July 12, 47; new centers, 8; total centers, 35.

Of the deaths yesterday one occurred at the Emergency hospital and was one of the cases transferred there Thursday. That institution now has 19 cases under treatment and yesterday discharged its first patient as cured.

The state board of health has divided the state into districts, comprising half a dozen parishes, each with a medical inspector in charge, and will immediately investigate all rumors and reports of yellow fever cases which come to light outside of New Orleans and that part of the state which is now included in the city for quarantine purposes.

Fever Quarantine at Memphis

Memphis, July 29.—The executive council of Memphis has voted a strict quarantine against New Orleans and other fever-infected points. The quarantine will become operative immediately. Every railroad train from the south will be closely canvassed before arriving in Memphis. Boats will also be inspected and no person from fever-infected points will be allowed to land in the city limits.

Italian Refugee Stricken

Jackson, Miss., July 29.—Secretary Hunter of the state board of health states that one case of yellow fever has been reported to him from Lumberton, Miss., which is directly traceable to an Italian refugee from New Orleans.

Sued For $7,000,000 and Lost

New York, July 29.—In the suit brought in the United States circuit court by John A. Thompson, a mining broker, against Thomas F. Walsh, a Colorado mine owner, for a half share of $14,000,000 for which Walsh is said to have sold the Camp Bird group of mines to an English syndicate, a decision was rendered for the defendant. Thompson claimed that there was an oral agreement between himself and Walsh that they should share alike in the mines.

Business Shows Improvement

New York, July 29.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says that commercial tendencies are still in the direction of improvement, although progress is hampered by some inflation of prices for the raw materials of textile and footwear industries. Confidence expands as the crops are secured, each day putting a large quantity of grain beyond danger.

Would Suppress War News

London, July 29.—Replying to a question in the house of lords, the secretary for Scotland stated that the admiralty hoped to make representations in responsible newspaper quarters regarding the danger of the publication of news in war times or times of national emergency. If these representations failed, he said, legislation might become necessary.

Won't Have Platt Appendix

Havana, July 29.—The house refused to include the Platt amendment as an appendix in the copies of the constitution which were directed to be printed for public distribution. The original proposition was to publish 50,000 copies without the Platt appendix and an amendment to include the appendix was defeated, 15 to 16.

Funeral of Ensign Perry

San Diego, Cal., July 29.—At St. Paul's Episcopal church was held the funeral of Ensign Newman K. Perry, the only officer who lost his life in the disaster on the gunboat Bennington. The body will be taken to Stockbridge, Mass., for burial. Among the bodies sent away yesterday was that of Joseph Newcomb of Quincy, Mass.

Health Row at Guayaquil

Panama, July 29.—Dr. Graver, United States health officer at Guayaquil, has had friction with the port authorities there. They refuse to permit him to board steamers that have been quarantined and he in turn refuses to issue a bill of health to steamers for Panama, even after they have been fumigated.

Permanent Suppression of Paper

St. Petersburg, July 29.—The suspension of The Novosti, the leading Jewish liberal organ, for three months, is to be made permanent. Interior Minister Bouligin recommended to the senate that the paper be suppressed for good and all, on account of its generally pernicious and provocative tone.

Cuban Steamer Sent to Bottom

Havana, July 29.—The coasting steamer Nueva Mortera was sunk last night in a collision with the British steamer Pocklington off Nuevitas. All on board the Nueva Mortera, including passengers, were saved. The Mortera is a total loss.

BRAVERY OF REGULARS

Exploits In Philippines Honored by War Department.

ONE FOUGHT OFF TEN FILIPINOS.

Billy Ballou's Deadly Fire on a Band of Insurgents—How Sergeant Bryan Shielded an Officer From Moros. Private Moreland Nursed a Comrade Stricken With Deadly Asiatic Fever.

Out with the regulars who are fighting in the rice fields and swamps in the Philippines there are not much gold lace and dazzling brilliancy of uniform, but there are plenty of chances for glory, says the New York Times. That is shown in the list recently published at Washington of the certificate of merit granted by the war department in the last six months.

In the long list of those on the nation's roll of honor the name of Billy Ballou, private of the Fifteenth cavalry, must have place. On Feb. 2, 1904, Ballou, who was a member of Troop D, with his captain and two other privates, was surprised by a band of insurgents, who to all appearances just "popped up out of the ground" near the village of Suclatan on the island of Mindanao. Before the quartet of regulars recovered from their surprise the captain and one of the privates had been killed and the second private severely wounded, and Ballou was left alone to make the best fight he could. The records show that he made a good one.

Ballou stood his ground, his faithful "Krag" all the time peppering an answer to the rifles in the hands of the attacking insurgents. The fight was ten against one, but so deadly was Ballou's fire that the number of his opponents decreased by one every time his rifle snapped, and finally those of the little brown men who were left alive retreated. When re-enforcements arrived they found Ballou, still on guard, nursing his wounded comrade and ready, should the occasion arise, to fight another battle single handed.

Travis T. Bryan, a sergeant in Company A of the Twenty-second infantry, is another soldier whose name will be remembered by the troops in Mindanao. Sergeant Bryan won the certificate of merit on Jan. 22 of last year. With his company he was on guard garrisoning a captured Moro fort on the banks of the Ramien river. On this occasion the Moros made a desperate attempt to recapture the fort, and in the action two of his company officers were wounded and fell in the doorway of the fort. They lay in the direct line of the Moro fire.

Bryan put himself in front of the worst wounded of the officers, shielding him from fire and in the meantime making it possible for the other officer to crawl to a place of safety. Bryan stood his ground until a rescuing party arrived, and when the smoke cleared away the number of dead Moros in front of the blockhouse showed what a marksman the sergeant was.

In the Twenty-eighth infantry one of the sergeants of Company I in February of last year was Bishop L. Morrow. Morrow won his certificate by going to the assistance of a wounded comrade who had been attacked by three Moros near Pantar, on the Ilogan-Lake Lanao road. Had he been a minute later the comrade would have been killed, but once Bishop got there he quickly fired three well directed shots. He had no reason to fire a fourth.

Otto Herter was a private in the hospital corps, when in an engagement in which the Americans were hard pressed by Ladrones, near Bago-Buntay, in Luzon, he stopped attending wounded, dashed to the firing line, grabbed the rifle of a wounded soldier and began to shoot. The general order awarding him his certificate of merit says that "he was cool and brave, setting an excellent example to the other men in the command."

John P. McSweeney was a member of the "Fighting Ninth" when he won his award. It was in China, and it happened near Tientsin. An officer of his command had been desperately wounded and was lying in an exposed place directly in the line of fire of the Chinese sharpshooters. McSweeney went to the officer's assistance, bandaged his wounds and was dragging him to safety when a shot put him out of action.

In the Forty-third United States volunteers there was a private named Schottler—Charley Schottler. Schottler was fighting in Samar, P. I. In action he saw a Moro lift a bolo to kill an officer. Running forward, he reached the side of the insurgent in time to divert the blow. He received it himself. He afterward got well, and the certificate of merit was his reward.

It was at Cabanos, in Guimiras, P. I., that George Moreland, a private of the Fifth infantry, voluntarily took upon himself the duty of nursing a comrade striken with the contagious Asiatic fever. The comrade died and was buried by Moreland, none of the other troops in the meantime having been exposed to the contagion. Moreland caught the fever, but he lives to tell the story.

In February, 1904, one officer and two privates on duty near Bacoor, P. I., were attacked by fifteen insurgents and were in desperate straits when Sergeant Fred Harrison of the Sixth cavalry came up and began to show his marksmanship. Ten minutes later the only insurgents to be seen were those who had stood in the line of Harrison's fire.

These are only a few of the men who have been awarded the certificate of merit since Jan. 1.

AN ATTRACTIVE HOME.

Designed For City or Suburbs—Cost $2,500 to $3,000.

[Copyright, 1905, by Stanley A. Dennis, 234 Broadway, New York.]

The elevation and floor plan given here show a very attractive and well arranged suburban or city home that can be built in many places at the present time for from $2,500 to $3,000 in the manner and with the materials below described.

There is a large wide piazza on the front and side of the house. The cellar runs under the entire house, the walls being of hard local brick laid up in red cement mortar. The cellar floor is covered with four inches of concrete and one-half inch of portland cement and sand in equal proportions.

The frame of the building is of hemlock timber. The walls are all sheathed with North Carolina pine sheathing boards and covered with two ply waterproof sheathing paper, while all the main walls are sided with narrow beveled white pine siding boards laid three inches to the weather. The gables are shingled with clear white cedar shingles, random widths, dipped in shingle stains. The main roof is covered with dimension cypress shingles dipped in shingle stain and laid five and a half inches to the weather. The piazza roof is tinned.

The floors throughout are laid with North Carolina pine flooring boards blind nailed. All the interior walls are plastered with one good coat of scratch and brown patent mortar put on thick and smoothed off for papering.

The trim is of clear kiln dried cypress of special design and is finished in the natural wood, with one coat of fillers properly rubbed smooth and two good coats of light interior varnish. The main stairs are of quartered oak finished natural and paneled.

The bathroom and kitchen contain full modern fixtures. All plumbing work is open, and fittings, etc., are nickel plated. The side walls of the bathroom and kitchen are laid off into small, neat tiles on plaster and covered with enamel paint. The whole house is fitted with up to date gas fixtures complete.

The exterior is painted with two good coats of prepared paints of such colors as may be desired. Tin work is covered with two good coats of red paint.

The attic contains two bedrooms and a storeroom. This makes a model home, is suitable for either city or country.

WOOD MEETS ITS FOE.

Papier Mache Driving It Out of Field of Interior Decoration.

"What will humanity do for structural wood when the forests of the world are destroyed?" This is not an idle question, and there are men who profess to give a fitting answer, says the Chicago News.

"Humanity will then resort to the use of papier mache as a substitute for wood in building," they say, and then they point to the rapid advancement made in the papier mache industry within the last ten years. Scores of Chicago homes, hotels, stores and other structures are, so far as interior is concerned, decorated throughout with paper work. Where formerly one would find heavy wood carving, rich wood panels, columns, capitals, caryatids, wreaths and moldings, now are to be seen such creations apparently of wood, but in reality made of papier mache. The latter is cheaper, lighter, more easily applied and in addition is fireproof, being partly composed of asbestus. The material takes a better finish than wood and costs about one-tenth as much. A few years ago there was only one small papier mache factory in the west. Today there are half a dozen large ones.

"When I began rebuilding the interior of my house," said a Chicago business man, "the builder asserted he was going to put a number of columns and capitals in the library. I said I guessed not and asked what such carving would cost.

"'The straight wood carved work would cost you about $1,200,' he replied, 'but I am going to use papier mache, and that will cost you just $120.' He did as he said he would, and I actually prefer the papier mache to wood because it looks just as good, is cheap and, besides, it is not combustible."

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists. When the Light Broke In

By Virginia Leila Wentz

Copyright, 1905, by Virginia L. Wentz

The rusty breasted robins were hopping about the lawn, and the crab apple trees were a splash of pink in the orchard beyond. The narrow beds that bordered the paths in Mrs. Ormsby's garden were gay with tulips and jonquils, and from the leafless branches of the wistaria vine hung delicate purplish clusters of blossoms. A flock of brown sparrows twittered in the cherry trees, a catbird was in the hedge over yonder, and already the wrens were building in the eaves of the summer house.

Somehow the smell of the sweet spring air seemed to have awakened something in Mrs. Ormsby's caller, a girl of six and twenty, as she sat on a rustic chair under the fast silvering maples. It was 5 o'clock, and because the day was so perfect they were having tea served in the garden.

"But, Constance, if I do not love him how can I marry him?" the girl cried impulsively.

Mrs. Ormsby waited for her maid to deposit a plate of thin bread and butter, some cream, sliced lemons and sugar on the little rustic table before she answered.

"Do you remember, Clare, when we were at Mme. Martin's school—dear me, it's eight years ago—an old soothsayer foretold that you'd marry a millionaire? Now, here's Mr. Stanley Hughes, who can give you houses, yachts, automobiles, and who, in the bargain, adores you. Why, to be sure, Clare, you must marry him. He's a good man, and love will come later."

The girl made no reply. She was looking dreamily at the robins and the pink orchard beyond, a mist in her lovely eyes.

"Of course," continued Mrs. Ormsby thoughtfully as she drew the tea, "I couldn't have married without love myself, but you see, my dear, Chester and I are so old fashioned anyhow."

At the mention of the man's name a quick wave of color surged over the girl's face and neck and brow. In the sunlight which came aslant from the west the gold of Mrs. Ormsby's wedding ring scintillated strangely. With a distinct effort Clare withdrew her gaze from its flashing.

"No," she said, pulling herself together, "not lemon, Catherine. Cream, please."

"To know what love is is a miracle, though, after all," pursued Mrs. Ormsby softly as she poured the cream. "Why, I was just a silly girl before I met Chester. Then—life became glorified; it became real!"

The catbird had flown to the cherry trees and had burst out into a passionate bubble of song. Clare's eyes suddenly brimmed with tears. Was it the bird's song or the spring's beauty or her friend's voice?

"Look here, dear," said her hostess impulsively. "I don't want to force your confidence, but I'm sure of one thing—there's been some heart affair in your life that's hurt deep and left you cynical. Tell me about it. Let's see if we can't straighten it out. Oh, Clare, pride is well enough—one can have a certain amount of it and be none the worse for it—but it's deadly to make a pet of it."

"But there's such a thing as righteous pride," flashed Clare. She bent her head and adjusted the emerald fleur-de-lis at her dainty waist; then, rising, she held out both hands to Mrs. Ormsby and laughed. It was her habitual light, pretty laugh.

"I really have to go now, Catherine. You know I told you I could only stay a half hour. But first I want you to promise to forget that I came perilously near being sentimental and old fashioned, forget that I seemed a bit sad. Why, I'm quite happy, on the contrary! I'm going to marry Mr. Stanley Hughes. My wedding 'll be a smart affair; my gown'll be a veritable dream, and my husband 'll be one of the most desirable gentlemen of the season. Humph! Why shouldn't I be happy?"

"Don't go just yet!" pleaded Mrs. Ormsby, not heeding the badinage, but looking straight into the girl's eyes. "Chester's train is due now, and he'll be here any moment. I want you to meet him."

Suddenly, even with the words of her friend, an impulse took possession of Clare. She deliberately seated herself again.

"Catherine," she said whimsically, "my mood's changed. I'll stay, and I'll give you a little of my confidence, if you care. I did love some one once, but—he's married now. It was something like this: Imagine a girl who knew scarcely anything of the world of men or of the things men do to be engaged to—to a man whose name spelled Paradise to her with a capital P. Imagine a friend of that man and of the girl passing a lot of his time with them both. Indeed, he chanced to be such a stanch friend to the girl that he refused to permit her to marry a man not worthy of her, though the man had been his bosom pal"— If that catbird would only stop singing! It made her want to cry.

"Well," continued Clare, "he proved certain things to the girl, and she wrote to the man she loved better than life and told him that really she did not care for him at all—that it had all been a mistake. It saved her pride, but it froze her heart, Catherine."

"Poor, dear Clare," answered Mrs. Ormsby, touching the lace on the girl's filmy sleeve in gentle, sympathetic fashion. "And the man—what did he say to the note?"

"Never answered it," contemptuously. "In fact, the girl never heard from him till she got his wedding cards. You see—why, don't, Catherine—not for me," as Mrs. Ormsby brushed a tear from her eye. "Was I talking like a tragedy queen?"

The maid came down the garden walk bearing a salver with a card on it. Mrs. Ormsby glanced at the pasteboard.

"Mrs. Brownsley, our neighbor across the road. How inconsiderate of her!" she exclaimed. "Wait for me here, will you, Clare? I must see her just for a moment or two."

From around the veranda, down the path that led by the tulip and jonquil beds, came the sound of a man's approaching footsteps.

"Beg pardon," he said, politely retreating as he became aware of the unfamiliar figure, but as the girl turned her face upon him:

"Clare—you! How did you come here?"

For a second Clare gauged him silently. Then, although the sound of his old, dear voice came near undoing her, she answered coldly enough:

"Not so strange as you'd think! Catherine and I went to school together. I'm visiting the Hayes, your neighbors down the road, so I made a point of coming to see her before I left. That's all, except that I once knew you also, and a sudden fancy came to me to stay and see you too."

"To see if the wound you gave my heart had healed?" broke in the man bitterly. "All these years I've suffered—as only a man can suffer who scorns explanations to those whom he feels should be above suspicion. I swore not to ask what you meant by that letter"—

"Tom Bronner can tell you," threw in the girl icily. "For myself, I do not care to discuss the matter."

"Bronner!" The man drew up his hand before his eye, palm outward, as one who has unexpectedly been shot. When he dropped it he spoke unsteadily:

"So it's all been a mistake, sweetheart. Bronner loved you himself. I—I thought he was my friend." As his voice broke he caught the old, tender love in the girl's eyes.

"But, dear," he cried, "of course it was all a lie. And it isn't too late"—

"How do you dare?" cried she, rising in hot anger as he made an impulsive forward movement. "Yes, it's too late—altogether too late. I am going to marry Stanley Hughes, and you—you must be loyal to your wife."

"My—Clare, are you mad?"

"Good!" cried Mrs. Ormsby, tripping blithely down the path. "You and Chester haven't waited for the conventional introduction. That's right, and I know you're going to be good friends. Clare, my husband's cousin, Chester Ormsby." And to her husband's cousin: "Miss Clare Clayton, a school friend of mine. Too bad my Chester hasn't come yet—train must be late. Chester's a family name with the Ormsbys, you know. It"—

Not much wonder she broke off suddenly in her sentence. Her husband's cousin had beseechingly opened his arms, and with a little inarticulate, happy cry Clare had flung herself into them.

The light had broken in.

Floating Homesteads.

On all the great lakes of China are found floating islands, which are enormous rafts of bamboo, overlaid with earth and upholding above the surface of the water pretty houses and gardens. They are, in fact, aquatic farms, bearing crops of rice and vegetables. The rich bottom mud, utilized as an artificial soil, is extremely fertile and yields bountiful harvests, though on a small scale. In a country where there is such a lack of available land owing to the overplus of population these floating plantations are most serviceable, large sails being attached to the dwelling house as well as to each corner of the island whenever it is desired to move about. After gathering a crop of grain or garden truck from the surface of the lake the floating farmer casts his nets into the waters and from their depths brings up a supply of fish for his family.

Pets the Sailors' Joy.

Animal pets have ever been a great joy to the average sailor. There is hardly a ship afloat that does not carry one or more such little favorites to whom the crew are universally kind. More than this, there is frequently developed an attachment between men and animals that is seldom to be seen on shore, and the intelligence displayed by these animals often far exceeds the wonderful stories we sometimes see in print. On men-of-war there is probably more consideration shown the crew in this regard than on merchantmen; at all events you will find there many more ship's pets. It is by no means uncommon to see upon the same deck a dozen or more well trained animals of various kinds whose natural homes are separated by thousands of miles.—St. Nicholas.

Turning the Tables.

Pliny tells us that the phrase "turning the tables" arose from the extravagance of the Romans. In the time of Augustus men of wealth spent fabulous sums of money on tables of costly material, such as ivory, gold, silver, marble and highly prized woods, especially the citrus wood of Mount Atlas. These last were called tigrine, or pantherine, from the spotted appearance of the grain, as our birdseye maple takes its name. Cicero, a man of moderate means, gave nearly £9,000 for one. Hence when the gentlemen charged the ladies with extravagance in jewels, especially pearls, the ladies retorted on their lords by pointing to the vast sums spent on tables and thus literally "turned the tables" upon them.

How to Save The Drowning

Now that the bathing—for boys it is the "swimming"—season is here, a few practical suggestions about the rescuing of drowning persons may help to save lives.

If the rescuer be held by the wrists he must turn both of his arms simultaneously against the drowning person's thumbs and bring his arms at right angles to the body, thus dislocating the thumbs of the drowning person if he does not let go.

You can try this on land or in the water, and you will find it impossible for any one to hold you, but take care to learn it properly before you start challenging.

If the rescuer be clutched round the neck he should take a deep breath and lean well over the drowning person, at the same time place the left hand in the small part of his back, raise the right arm in line with the shoulder and pass it over his arms, then pinch the nostrils close with the fingers and at the same time place the palm of the hand on the chin and push away with all possible force.

The holding of the nose will make the drowning man open his mouth for breathing.

Being under water, choking will ensue, and the rescuer will gain complete control.

Should the rescuer be clutched round the body and arms or round the body only—a rather improbable position, but one which may occur—he should lean well over the drowning person, take a breath and either withdraw both arms in an upward direction in front of his body or act in accordance with the instructions for releasing oneself if held round the neck.

In either case the rescuer should place the one hand on the drowning man's shoulder and the palm of the other hand against his chin, at the same time bringing the knee up against the lower part of his chest, and then by means of a strong and sudden push stretch the arms and legs straight out and throw the whole weight of the body backward.

This action will break the clutch and leave the rescuer free.

Many a gallant person has lost his life through lack of knowledge of these simple and effective methods of releasing oneself from the drowning, yet with a little study and frequent practice in the water even a moderate swimmer can go out fearlessly to aid others.

With Bottle and Goblet.

Tell your company that you have a bottle and a goblet, both full to the brim of water, and that you are going to empty the goblet by means of the bottle without taking a drop of water from the latter.

This is the way to prepare for it. With a redhot wire bore two holes through a cork and into them insert two straws, one of them extending above the corks as high as the goblet is deep, the other about twice as high.

Now, with a little kneaded bread or wax close the upper end of the shorter straw and then force the cork into the mouth of the bottle until the water spurts out through the longer straw.

Meanwhile you have the goblet of water on the table near you, and also a basin or bowl and a pair of scissors. Hold the goblet over the basin with your left hand and with your right turn the bottle upside down, putting the shorter straw inside the goblet. As you do this have some one take the scissors and cut off the closed end of the shorter straw. Water will at once begin to run out of the longer straw into the basin, and will continue to run until the goblet is empty. You must, of course, hold the bottle so that the short straw will reach down to the bottom of the goblet. This is simply the operation of a siphon.

Gun Language.

The old buffalo hunters had an established signal that is yet used by the mountain guides, says Ernest Thompson Seton in Country Life In America. It is as follows:

Two shots in rapid succession, an interval of five seconds by the watch, then one shot—this means, "Where are you?" The answer, given at once and exactly the same, means, "Here I am; what do you want?" The reply to this may be one shot, which means, "All right; I only wanted to know where you were." But if the reply repeats the first it means, "I am in serious trouble; come as fast as you can."

Two Sisters In a Garden

Alice and Bertha played in the same garden because they were little sisters.

They were always playing in the garden, and everybody who passed by would say "Hello, Alice!" and "Hello, Bertha!" and the little sisters would run to the fence and say "Good morning! Good morning!"

But one day a very sad thing happened. Alice and Bertha had a quarrel.

Alice wanted to play that her house was under the pink rose bush by the fountain. But Bertha wanted to play that her house was under the pink rose bush by the fountain. So Alice said that she wouldn't play at all. And Bertha said neither would she. They each walked around the garden alone. It was sad.

They thought the sun did not seem bright, and they thought the flowers were not pretty, and they did not like the little fountain, and they were very miserable and did not know what to do.

So Alice walked back to see what Bertha was doing. And what do you suppose that was?

Why, Bertha was walking back to see what Alice was doing.

Just then a little bird flew down and took a bath in the fountain. He splashed and splashed and splashed. Alice clapped her hands and laughed. And Bertha did too.

Alice and Bertha looked at each other and kept right on laughing and laughing.

"You may have your house by the pink rose bush, Bertha," said Alice.

"Oh, no! You have yours there," said Bertha.

"I tell you what," Alice said. "We will have our house there together."

The dreadful quarrel was over at last, and the two little sisters were happy again.—St. Nicholas.

Spool of Cotton Tells a Story.

Some silk and linen were one day lying in a beautiful workbasket. Among them was a spool of cotton. Some one asked for a story. The spool of cotton was asked to tell one. This is the story the spool of cotton told:

"I was once growing in the fields of the sunny south. The house I lived in was brown and very pleasant. One day the windows of my house opened, and I was in the bright sunshine, a ball of white fluffy cotton. I was soon after picked and sent to the cotton gin. There I was pressed and pressed and then sent away. Before I knew it I was in a noisy factory, being spun around and around. I was then wound on a spool. A man put pieces of paper at both ends of my spool. I was then sent to a store where I did not see daylight for many days. One day a lady came and asked for No. 80 cotton, and I was given to her and put among other spools in this workbasket. I am now waiting for the lady to use me, to keep the lace in place on her little girl's party dress. At the same time I am looking forth to see what the rest of the world looks like."—Brooklyn Eagle.

John's Troublesome Feet.

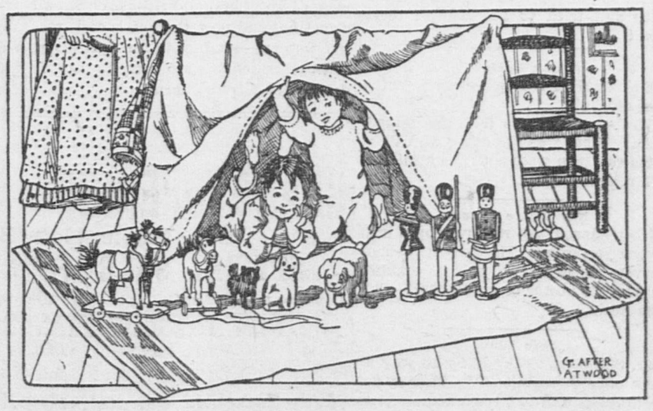
This is how John's feet feel on the way to school.

And on the way home.

A Riddle.

My breath is black, and everywhere
I cast the impure on the air;
I'm made of steel, of stone, of clay;
You see me somewhere every day.
(Answer.—A chimney.)

IN AMBUSH



Within our cozy tent we hide,
And we have naught to fear;
We leave our guards to watch outside
When danger's lurking near.
There's Captain Brown, so straight and tall,
And Ensign Pob Magee
And Marshal Pike, with bugle call
To wake our watchdogs three.
Our horses, saddled, waiting stand,
If we should care to roam;
The enemy? It's only nurse—
She comes with brush and comb.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The indignation shown over the Equitable scandal, the wide interest in the "frenzied finance" exposure and the strong popular sympathy shown with President Roosevelt's efforts to bring the big trusts into subjection to the government, all flow from a common source and all alike show the trend of a tremendous public feeling regarding graft in all its forms. The graft hunt is on, indeed. The time is ripe for a great political reform revival. The air is humid with the spirit of protest against political and financial corruption.—Beverly Times.

☞When we read that Schidlofski married his wife for the sake of her little bank account, we are visibly shocked by the utter depravity of the thing. And yet when the same ignoble elements enter into the nuptial contract in a much more elaborate way, the newspapers are prone to designate the ceremony as a brilliant marriage. The man who angles for a woman's modest bank account of a few hundred dollars is little more reprehensible than the blase maiden who contracts an unnatural alliance for the sake of the luxuries which her guileless victim is able to provide her. He merely sells himself a little cheaper.—Lowell Mail.

☞Young Mr. Hyde, of unsavory reputation in connection with the Equitable scandal, wanted to be Ambassador to France. Just think of it. The young fellow who squandered a fortune on a banquet to a French actress, to represent the United States in the gay capital of France. And he had a strong and influential backing. Perhaps the Equitable managers desired to be rid of him, and conceived the plan as a most feasible one. At any rate the big financial interests of New York took the matter up, and other influences were brought to bear, and finally the President concluded to look him over. One interview was sufficient, and the President told the backers, "This man will not do." The President's judgment was quite correct as subsequent events have amply shown. A more complacent President might have made the appointment on the recommendations, and the escape from a bad mistake was a narrow one. Happily Roosevelt's sense of proportion saved the situation, and his verdict stands.—Lynn Item.

Don't Grumble.

It is useless to complain of things for which there is no cure.
We had better bear with patience most our greivance, and make sure—
Ere our pent-up spirit rises, (like the mercury in the glass)
And condemns that that's a blessing, and will only too soon pass.

Calenders give us the seasons—there are four in every year;
Spring and Summer; Fall and Winter. Nature gives us weather,—queer.
The first is cold and late in coming; cannot get our Spring-work in!
Thus we grumble; growl and worry! Why not something else begin.

We, too, criticise society, since in the world's wealth we've no share,—
It is folly to thus worry, it is but a golden snare,—
That will strangle the possessor; who by hook or crook and stealth—
At expense of poor and needy has amassed enormous wealth.

We are told of restitution, by some prophet
grand and wise
Well learned in the art of stealing, even with one's open eyes.
Practice—Preaching. Preaching—Practice—
these are surely not awake;
And, by little sense and reason we may find t'is all a fake.

Let us therefore cease to grumble; get whatever comes our way,
So we get it straight and honest; be it beef;
pork, corn or hay.
It is useless to be worried—for these traps should make us wise
So the Sharper can not rob us; even though we shut our eyes.

The Dance of the Gods.

At the great festival of the New Year held in Lassa the "dance of the gods" is performed in the presence of the grand lama. A long cable of twisted leather thongs is stretched from a high point in the battlements of the lama's palace to the plain below, and two men slide from top to bottom, lying on their chests and spreading out their arms as if to swim. The tremendous rapidity of the descent is frequently fatal to the dancers, but there are never wanting fanatics who will undertake it in the hope of a happy transmigration or adventurers attracted by the value of the reward offered by the court.

Father of Electric Railways.

The honor of first suggesting an electric railway must be accorded to Thomas Davenport of Brandon, Vt., blacksmith and electrician, inventor and scientist. In 1834 he ran a toy motor mounted on wheels on a small circular railway, and a year later he exhibited it at Springfield and at Boston. Then it gave up the ghost, and for more than twoscore years various inventors, in utter ignorance of the principles of the modern dynamo and with no source of power except the zinc burning primary battery, labored with small reward.—Century.

Proving His Love.

Bride—I know you don't l-love me! Groom—Why, child, what makes you say that? Bride—Because you're not jealous. Why, Mayme Gray's been married nearly a year, and her husband's so jealous that he's shot at her twice and tried to kill himself three times!

Poor Polish.

"So he said I was a polished gentleman, did he?"

"Well—yes. It was the same thing."

"Ah! What was the exact word?"

"He said you were a slippery fellow."—Cleveland Leader.

Not Quite Clear.

Green—Jones was run over by a trolley car yesterday. They say he cannot recover. Brown—Who said he couldn't recover, his doctor or his lawyer?—Chicago News.

Her Idea.

Mr. Settledown—I'd prefer to stay at home once in awhile. My idea of domestic bliss was to have a home of our own. Mrs. Settledown—Exactly, and some place else to go to.

Admiration is the daughter of ignorance.—Franklin.

OBJECT LESSON.

Malden Man Suggest Annual Parade of Drunkards.

Editor The Traveler:

An editorial in The Traveler a few days ago regarding the wisdom of sending children maimed by Fourth of July foolishness to the hospital, led the writer to think that perhaps an object lesson was, after all, the wisest way to impress lessons of value upon an otherwise unappreciative public. Single figures often convey but a very vague notion of the greatness of the subject to which they relate. This same thought prompted the writer to imagine what would be a powerful object lesson could it be carried out, as after reading the report of the Massachusetts prison commissioners for the year ending Sept. 30, 1904, he learned therefrom that for that year there had been arrested for drunkenness 72,853 persons, of which number 6,360 were females. Further, this fearful showing is but little above the average for the last 11 years, both as regards the total arrests, as also the arrests of females, which arrests in the average would be as follows, viz.: 70,725 and 5,985.

What a grand exhibit for our noble old Commonwealth as a result of its high license and local option law! The total number of officers and men at the present time constituting the army of the United States is but 64,336. Therefore, so far as numbers are concerned, our whole army might be wiped out of existence and again recruited from Massachusetts drunk arrests, with 8517 to spare!

To this number of drunkards arrested should be added those engaged either directly or indirectly in their production, as brewers, distillers, saloon keepers, rumsellers and the whole craft responsible for the nefarious business. This would swell the number to 78,055 thus over-numbering the U. S. army by 13,719.

Now, to give these figures concrete significance and have them serve as an object lesson, let us imagine a procession on next Labor day. This procession should be formed thus: First division to consist of brewers, distillers, saloon keepers and all engaged in the drunkard manufacturing business. Second division, all the males arrested as above related. These two divisions should be on foot. Third division, the female arrests; these should occupy carriages, four in each, thus requiring 1590 vehicles. I would suggest that this procession thus constituted should pass in review before the governor and council and the assembled Legislature in front of the State House.

Now this procession would be some 22 1-4 miles long and passing at same rate of travel as did the G. A. R. parade last August it would require some 13 1-2 hours' continuous time for the review. I submit, Mr. Editor, that to those of your readers who might witness the whole review it would prove an object lesson which should be somewhat more lasting than the mere recital of the figures related herein.

Yours truly,
William F. Merrill.

Old Home Week.

Lysander S. Richards, formerly of Quincy, was chairman of the "Old Home Week" celebration of the Marshfield Hills Improvement Association this week.

Last evening the three-act drama "Willowdale" was presented in G. A. R. hall. This morning there were sports, and this afternoon there will be exercises, including addresses by ex-Gov. Long, ex-Senator Harvell of Rockland and others.

This evening there will be a banquet and on Sunday the observance will be brought to a close with exercises at the First Congregational church in connection with the 70th anniversary of that society. The Rev. David J. Hatch, a former resident, will preach. Many residences are decorated for the occasion, and summer residents show enthusiasm.

—It is quite evident that Revere beach is not giving satisfaction to a large class of good patrons. The amusements are harshly criticised in all directions and now the hotels and restaurants are coming in for criticism, some of which we are sorry to say is deserved.—Revere Journal.

PUBLIC FUNERAL

For Quincy Victim on the Gunboat Bennington.

The body of Joseph Newcomb, one of the crew of the gunboat Bennington, who was killed in the explosion on that vessel at San Diego, is to be brought to Quincy for burial. It is planned when the body arrives to have a public funeral.

It has been discovered that after the blowing up of the Maine in Havana harbor, Congress enacted a law providing for the transmission of the bodies of dead sailors, at government expense, to their homes. It is probable that many of the victims of the Bennington who were buried in the Military cemetery at Point Lima will be exhumed and sent to their relatives in different parts of the country.

EUGENE C. HULTMAN

Also a Candidate for the Legislature This Fall.

Ward Two has a promising candidate for the Legislature this fall in the person of ex-councilman Eugene C. Hultman who at their solicitation has consented to allow his name to be used at the coming caucuses in September. Although born in Boston, he has resided in Quincy, since nine years of age, and is thoroughly conversant with the needs of the city, and his many friends believe that he can win out.

He was educated in the public schools of Quincy, Adams Academy and the Institute of Technology. He now holds the position of auditing engineer for the West End street railway as well as auditor of the Fitchburg railroad. He has taken a prominent part in the political affairs of Ward Two having served several years as a member of the Republican Ward, and City Committee as in the fall of 1900 he was prevailed upon to permit the use of his name for councilman from that ward. He was elected by a handsome vote.

He served on the standing committee on Finance and Fire Department. He is now serving as secretary of the Technology league which is opposing the alliance of the Institute of Technology and Harvard.

STORE BURGLARIZED

Only Pennies, Tobacco and Cigarettes Taken.

The variety store of John A. Johnson in the Wood, Harmon block at 397 Hancock street, was entered by burglars sometime last night. Lieut. McKay, who made an investigation, found that entrance had been gained by means of a bulkhead door.

The parties carried off a small cash register containing somewhere about $7 in pennies, 15 packages of tobacco, 50 bunches of cigarettes and some other small articles.

—If you think it would comfort you any, you might shake your fist at the sun and exclaim: "Shine away, confound you! You're going to be eclipsed next month!"—Somerville Journal.

STRUCK BY ELECTRIC

Driver of Henry L. Kincaide & Co. Hurt---Wagon Damaged.

A furniture wagon of Henry L. Kincaide & Co. was run into by an electric car on Hancock street, near the corner of Beale street, yesterday afternoon.

It appears that the wagon which was driven by James A. Harding was going along Hancock street when a Nantasket car came up behind him.

In attempting to pass the team the car struck the wheels. The wagon was overturned and considerably smashed. The driver was thrown some distance, but held on to the reins and stopped the horse.

Harding the driver was severely bruised and shaken up but escaped without any broken bones. The wagon was badly damaged.

Houghs Neck Party.

The second pound party of the season given by the members of the "Four Hundred" of Houghs Neck, was held on Thursday evening, at the home of Mrs. F. Mowry, Bell street, and was attended by sixty. Everything that could be, was done for the entertainment and pleasure of all, even to the late arrival of one lone man who appeared upon the scene just as the gathering was about to break up, almost starved. But there was plenty of good eatables left and justice was done to all that was set before him. The house inside and out, also the lawn was beautifully decorated, the evening was one to be long remembered, and Mrs. Mowry proved herself to be a bright, young and interesting entertainer.

The Dog Has No Mechanics.

In no well attested case has a dog shown any sense as to the nature of any mechanical contrivance. Dogs will learn which way a door opens, and rarely if ever do they undiscerningly close it when it is slightly ajar when they wish to pass through the opening, but I have never been able to observe or obtain evidence to show that they would pull down the latch in the way in which a cat readily learns to do. Much as dogs have had to do with guns, they display no kind of interest in the arms except so far as they are tokens of sport to come. They connect the explosion with the capture of the game and will search for it in the direction in which the barrel was pointed. I have not, however, been able to find that they know, as they might readily do, when the weapon was loaded and when empty. They show no interest in it, such as monkeys readily display toward any mechanical contrivance to which their attention has been directed. All these negative features indicate that the mechanical side of the canine mind is entirely undeveloped.—London Standard.

Men Who Make Clubs.

As to social clubs of men, there are two classes of members—the positive and the negative. In an organization of a thousand members you will find, probably, nine hundred and ninety-nine negatives and one positive. This one positive is seldom the president, but nearly always the treasurer or secretary. It is he who regards the club as his home, his family, his wife and children. His whole heart is wrapped up in its success. He brings in the new members and is always on hand to shoulder burdens which the negatives willingly impose upon him. He never rebels, never protests, never complains. A club is a community of selfish interests, as a rule, and every selfish negative agrees with every other selfish negative that such and such a man is the ideal secretary, treasurer or manager. A good secretary or treasurer is seldom promoted; he is too useful.—New York Press.

One of the Cluster.

A man is but a cluster on the great human grapevine. He begins to dry up the moment he is cut off from his fellows. There is something in the solidarity of the human race which cannot be accounted for in the sum total of all the individuals. Separation from the mass involves a mighty loss of power in the individual, just as there is a loss of cohesion and adhesion involved in the separation of the molecules and atoms of the diamond. The value of the gem is in the close contact, the compactness and the concentration of the particles which compose it. The moment they are separated its value is gone. So a strong, effective man gets a large part of his strength from the vital connection with his fellows.—Success Magazine.

Founded on Herring Bones.

Dutch monopoly of the North sea fishing grounds during the seventeenth century brought such wealth and prosperity to Amsterdam that the capital of Holland was popularly said to be founded on herring bones. No less than 50,000 Hollanders were directly engaged in fishing the coasts from near Yarmouth to as far north as the Shetlands, and 150,000 more were employed, indirectly, in the distribution and sale of the fish. Sir Walter Raleigh pointed out to James I. how the Dutch sold to the Yarmouth herring mongers fish caught in their own seas for English gold, with which they built annually a thousand ships and fishing boats.

The Voice of Sincerity.

Children are said to be good, although unconscious, judges of human nature, and most of them do at least recognize sincerity and detect pretense.

"Come here, my little darling," said the book agent. She had a face which belied her words, but she was trying to cultivate the little daughter of the woman who had not yet come downstairs. "I do so love children," she added, in a clear tone, as she heard footsteps on the stairs, "but you seem to like the kitty better than me. Why are you so fond of her?"

"'Cause she purs as if she meant it," said the little girl calmly.

Where He Drew the Line.

M. de Sainte-Beuve, the popular French writer, once fought a duel. When the principals took their positions, it was raining hard. Sainte-Beuve had his pistol in one hand; with his other hand he held up his umbrella The seconds protested.

"I have no objection to being killed," said he, "but as to being wet—no, no!"

No Plagiarism There.

"I challenge you," said the young poet, "to find a single line that I have borrowed or stolen from any one."

"There's no doubt," replied the critic, "that it's all yours. But if I were you I wouldn't let it happen in my next book."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Perfect Gentleman.

Little Elmer—Papa, what is a perfect gentleman? Mr. Broadhead—A perfect gentleman, my son, is a man who, when you start to tell him your troubles, does not break in and try to tell you his.

A Little Ambiguous.

"Beg pardon," said the missionary, "but will you translate his majesty's remarks again? Did he tell his daughter that he was to have guests to dinner or for dinner?"

—Unlike 1857, the country has no "red dog" currency today. Its banking system, state as well as national, is sound, as a whole. On the currency of the national banks nobody has ever yet lost a cent since the establishment of the system forty-two years ago. Every dollar of that currency is worth its face in gold. Unlike the situation in 1873, there is no inflamed and irredeemable national currency afloat. The resumption act which went into effect in 1879 removed that menace forever by raising all the country's circulating medium to the gold level. Unlike the condition in 1893 at the time of the country's latest panic, there is no silver peril, and the empty treasury of those days has more gold now than can be profitably utilized.—Milford Journal.

W. R. C. Day.

W. R. C. Day was observed by Corps 103, Thursday, by exercises conducted by the patriotic instructor as follows: Singing of Star-Spangled Banner; devotional exercises by Chaplain; readings giving a history of the corps since first organized by members; a poem read entitled "Grandmother's story," by the secretary. This poem was dedicated to Sarah E. Fuller, Department Treasurer; also Past National President, and her little grandson George Prescott Fuller, by John E. Gilman, Past Department Commander of the G. A. R. The exercises closed with flag salute, and singing of America.

Paragon Park.

The free open air circus bill at Paragon park this week is one of the best that has so far been offered. Heading the list is the Duffin Redcay Troup in a sensational casting act; the St. Belmos in which the sensational feature is a leap for life; and Pero and Wilson the barrel jumpers and comedy jugglers.

The concerts afternoon and evening by the Martland band and the singing of H. F. Blaney continue to be features. Mr. Blaney is making a hit with Luther and Cosby's new waltz song, "Just We Two."

But the greatest of all attractions is the Palm Garden. No city hotel offers a better or more varied cuisine. The prices are right too and one may enjoy himself at a perfect meal at a small cost.

Grocers' Day.

Next Wednesday, Aug. 2, a special train will leave Quincy at 8.23 A. M; Quincy Adams, 8.26; Braintree, 8.30; South Braintree, 8.35 and express from Whitman to Fall River to convey the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers on their thirteenth annual outing. The large steamer Warwick will steam down Mount Hope bay and after a two hours stop at Crescent park will proceed down Narraganset bay as far as Newport. The party will return to Braintree about nine in the evening.

Last year the party consisted of about 1000 people and the union invite all their friends again this year to enjoy the trip. Where can you travel so many miles by rail and boat for $1.50? If you are not fond of "Rhode Island fish dinners carry your lunch with you.

—We are continually receiving little local items for publication and are always pleased to receive them. Now if those who send them will enclose a card or put their names to them somewhere, they will usually be printed. We do not want the name for publication, but we must have some evidence that the item comes from a reliable source. In the absence of the name, we are obliged to throw the item into the waste basket.

—Hume, the historian, found himself one day at a social dinner, next to Lord John Russell. In the course of conversation his lordship said: "What do you consider the object of legislation?" "The greatest good to the greatest number," was Hume's answer. "And what do you consider the greatest number?" continued Lord John Russell. "No. 1, my lord," was the historian's reply.

—It is said that certain animals often pretend to be ill so that they will not have to do things that are distasteful to to them. This is particularly true of cavalry horses. Often they will pretend to be lame so as to get out of attending drill.

—It is estimated that the population of Pittsfield will reach the 25,000 limit. The tax rate has been set by the assessors at $18.50 which is ten cents less than last year.

—Sidney M. Towle of Malden, a railway mail clerk, pitched headlong from a train near Danvers last evening. He was slightly scratched but suffered no serious injuries.

Ducks.

It is a common thing for ducks to lay their eggs while in the water, and it is related as a fact that a duck once laid an egg on a brick walk that it happened to be crossing and kept on without concern. But when a duck has an incubation in view it carefully selects a nest for its eggs in some remote and secret corner, and it is very shy while the young are hatching.

Land In New Zealand.

No person in New Zealand may hold more than 640 acres of first class farming land.

The School Age.

In Switzerland, which shares with Scotland the distinction of being the best educated country in the world, the earliest school age is seven.

Colors and Heat.

It is a well known scientific fact that dark colors absorb heat and part with it much more rapidly than light ones, a truth that we are constantly proving in domestic matters, for if hot water be poured into two vessels, the one white and the other black, the water in the latter will cool before the other.

Hard on the Witnesses.

Whenever a murder is committed in Argentine it is customary to put every possible witness in prison and keep him there until the real culprit is convicted.

Cotton and Wool.

Cloth manufacturers have learned to mix cotton and wool so thoroughly that mere feeling will not detect the presence of cotton. The only sure method in such cases is to boil a piece of the goods in a solution of caustic potash, which will eat up the wool and leave the vegetable fiber intact.

Paper.

Paper was first made from cotton rags in 1002. The invention is claimed by Moors and Germans.

Italian Nurses.

In Italian families children's nurses are considered the most important members of the household. They are well paid, petted, finely clothed, and all the other servants are expected to wait upon them.

Fox and Squire.

John Burroughs, the famous naturalist, was condemning the cruel sport of fox hunting. "A red faced English squire, galloping after a fox," he said; "that, to my mind, makes neither an edifying nor a pleasant picture. A red faced squire chasing a fox. The unspeakable in pursuit of the uneatable."

Logographic Printing.

Logographic printing, the most common words being cast in one piece, was attempted for books in 1783, but soon abandoned, not being so convenient as the single letters.

Odd Translation.

A missionary says that a native of India having translated the hymn, "Rock of ages, cleft for me, let me hide myself in thee," the version proved to be literally as follows, "Very old stone, split for my benefit, let me absent myself under one of your fragments."

Oddities of Color.

One would scarcely imagine black to be more visible in the darkness than white, yet the discolored sails of the fishing smack are seen at a greater distance than the snowy spread of the yacht, and the darker the color the more distinctly are the sails to be seen.

Eastern Pennsylvania.

The deed for what is now eastern Pennsylvania, given by the Duke of York to William Penn, is for the term of 10,000 years at 5 shillings rent.

An Organ Grinder Law.

Organ grinders in Verviers, Belgium, are by law compelled to appear every morning before the police superintendent and play their instruments. The organs which chance to be out of tune must be set in order before a license to play on the streets will be granted.

Britain's Oldest Postoffice.

The oldest postoffice in Great Britain is to be seen in the little Cheshire village of Motham. The building dates back to the sixteenth century and has the figures 1594 over the doorway.

Salt Fish In Naples.

Salt fish that has been well soaked is carried through the streets of Naples on little donkey drays, each piece of perhaps twelve inches long and four wide, doubled together, and in the fold is stuck a spray of bright gilliflowers. Each piece is entirely separated from any other.

Tired Sentries.

In the army of the Haitian republic chairs are provided for the use of sentries when on duty.

The Lime.

The lime is the product of the Citrus limetta tree. The juice is used in cooling beverages in the tropics and is especially in demand in summer in higher latitudes. It is also boiled and used in flavors.

Some African Cattle.

The native cattle of the Hereros, in southwest Africa, are tall, lean, long horned and of little value for beef or milk, but they are excellent for riding or drawing loads and, like camels, can travel for days without water and with little food. They are guided by reins attached to a stick through the nose.

Dews.

Dews are least abundant on islands and on ships in midocean. Seamen nearing land can tell that fact by reason of deposits of dew on the vessel.

A HAZING TRAGEDY.

Origin of the Slang Phrase "Who Struck Billy Patterson?"

"It's many years now since the slang expression, 'Who struck Billy Patterson?' was heard all over New York and Brooklyn," said a veteran of the metropolis. "Few people remember the origin of the expression, which was really the killing of a young man by sheer fright. Hazing at colleges was as rough then as now, and a common plan was to capture a new student, try him for some imaginary offense, condemn him to execution, and then hold his head on a block while a blow was struck on the ground with the dull side of a hatchet. A student named William Patterson was caught and tried in this way and was led weeping and shouting to the block. He was then blindfolded and held down, told that his last day had come, and then the bogus blow was struck with the hatchet. His cries ceased instantly, and when the students in alarm tore off his eye bandages and felt his pulse they discovered that he was dead. Several investigations were held to ascertain who struck the fatal blow, and it was because it was finally ascertained that no one ever struck Billy Patterson at all that the aggravating question referred to was shouted at every stranger by street boys, bootblacks and other juvenile nuisances."

OVEREXERTION.

It Leads to Weakness of Heart and Early Death.

A prominent university professor says that an investigation of some years has convinced him that much evil has resulted from college athletics.

College athletics, he finds, bring on by overexertion a number of ills, of which the worst and most common is weakness of the heart, that, developing with maturity, unfits the victim for continued efficient effort in business and eventually carries him off before his time.

Sprinting and tennis he believes to be the two sports which work the most havoc with the heart.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said that a condition which often promoted long life was prudently poor health at an early age. He meant by this that a man who in his youth had to husband his strength and by slow and careful process develop the good health that he lacked would be more likely to escape the dangers of overexertion in which the careless giant was tempted to indulge.

Still, given strength and good health in the beginning, moderate exercise of one's powers cannot fail to be a source of renewed strength as well as of healthful enjoyment.—Boston Globe.

THE FINDING OF MOSES.

A Famous Artist Says There Were No Bulrushes In Egypt.

Bulrushes are so inseparably associated in the mind with the finding of Moses that it is difficult to imagine a painting of the incident in which the picturesque reeds do not figure.

But there is a beautiful painting by Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema of the finding of Moses, and the bulrushes are entirely omitted. The great painter gave the following explanation of the fact.

He ascribes the presence of the word "bulrushes" in the authorized version as being due to faulty translation, for there are no such things as bulrushes on the Nile. The word in the original means papyrus, and it seems that in the absence of some equivalent in English the word was used as being the nearest which the translators had at their command.

According to Alma-Tadema's reading, the mother of Moses fashioned a cradle or ark of papyrus and smeared it over with the white Nile mud, and it is according to this rendering that he has painted his picture.—Chambers' Journal.

Like Many a Man.

A horse was entered in a trotting race. When he was put on the track to be warmed up he seemed to move with great energy, and a number of inexperienced persons put up their money on him, but when the actual race came off a rawboned, yew necked animal that had no style about him passed the showy horse with great ease and on the home stretch distanced him.

"That horse," said an experienced race track man who had been wise enough to back the rawboned steed, "which lost out is like a good many people. He spends too much time and energy going up in the air instead of getting over the earth."—Missouri Valley Farmer.

Self Respect.

It is a mistake to associate pride or foppishness with self respect. The one rises from a judicious consideration of what we are, the other from an extravagant notion of what something extraneous has made us. The one is true, the other is false, and both cannot exist together. A man that respects himself cannot be proud, and a proud man does not respect himself.

Ability.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Hoch Avoids Hangman's Noose at the Last Moment

FOUR WEEKS' REPRIEVE

Condemned Man Had About Abandoned Hope When He Received Good News--Supreme Court to Review the Case

Chicago, July 29.—Johann Hoch, confessed bigamist and sentenced to be hanged yesterday for poisoning one of his wives, has been granted a reprieve until Aug. 25 by Governor Deneen. The stay of execution followed hours of anxiety on the part of Hoch, who had never given up hope, and was allowed by the governor only after the latter had been assured that the necessary sum to appeal the case had been raised. The amount, $500, was given by an attorney and friend of Hoch's counsel. The attorney declared that he was actuated purely by humanitarian motives.

An incident at the jail during the preparations for the execution was the appearance of a physician and a woman who told Jailer Whitman that they wanted to help Hoch's battle for life. They said they wished to raise funds for the condemned man and asked Whitman to delay the hanging as long as possible. Hoch's attorney, however, had already been in communication with the authorities respecting the stay of sentence.

All arrangements had been made for the execution and in view of the action of Governor Deneen Thursday in refusing a stay of execution and similar action by the state board of pardon, Hoch's chance for life was considered slight.

About the time set for the execution the attorney who furnished the money appeared in the case for the first time. This attorney, it was said, telephoned Hoch's lawyer that the former had $500 to give toward aiding to appeal the case. The two lawyers hastened to the jail, told Jailer Whitman of the money secured and arranged with the jailer to postpone as long as possible the execution of Hoch.

Meanwhile they sought State Attorney Healey and had him arrange a conference with Governor Deneen over the long distance telephone. Hoch's counsel told the governor that there was lacking only a small sum of the amount necessary for a review of the case. After discussing the matter with the state attorney, the governor finally consented to a stay for the condemned man and so notified Hoch's counsel.

Hoch, even within a few hours of the time set for the hanging, was quite confident of executive clemency, although at times he seemed to despair of receiving a reprieve. He had retired early in the night and awoke at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, cordially greeted his death watch of two guards and talked with them for some time. He changed his clothes and seemed resigned to the fate that awaited him, but he assured his few visitors that there might be a chance for him yet.

He received his attorney, two ministers, Jailer Whitman and Dr. McNamara, the jail physician. Hoch discussed with them his prospects for a stay and reiterated his innocence of the charge of murder. He read the Bible and said his prayers.

Meanwhile, unknown to Hoch, the negotiations for the reprieve were progressing. It was noon and the delay up to this time inspired Hoch with renewed hope. He ate dinner, smoked a cigar and read. Half an hour later, through the window of his quarters, he having been removed from the cell he had occupied, he received the news of his reprieve. It was conveyed to him by spectators of the proceedings in the state attorney's office, which adjoins that of the jail building.

He was disinclined to believe the news at first, but when it was brought to him also by the ministers he was overjoyed. He clasped their hands and declared that he was the happiest man alive. The crowd about the jail sent up a shout that was heard for blocks. The prisoners joined in the demonstration and Hoch was almost overcome.

Hoch said: "If the supreme court decides against me, I am willing to die. I ask no mercy and no favor. I believe in the law, but I feel that if the supreme court has a chance to review the case it will result favorably to me."

Hoch's attorney announced that he would at once prepare to appeal the case.

Treasury Officials Seize Wool

Boston, July 29.—Officials of the United States treasury department seized 25 bales of wool which were brought to this port on the steamer St. Croix, from St. John and Eastport, Me. The wool was consigned to a Boston firm which, however, declared that it knew nothing of the consignment. The ground of the seizure was that the requirements of the customs laws had not been fulfilled.

New York, July 29.—The policyholders of the Mutual Reserve Life insurance company have received a statement from the board of directors of the company, declaring that there is not a single fact to support the allegations of the insurance department that payments are delayed by the company, and giving a table of figures to show the financial standing of the company.

Lowell to Lose Baseball Team

Lowell, Mass., July 29.—It is expected that the local team of the New England Baseball league will be transferred from Lowell to some other city at an early date. The games here have not been a financial success. It is not known definitely what will be done with the franchise, but it is practically assured that this city will not be represented in the league much longer.

Knew When to Leave the Market

New York, July 29.—Theodore H. Price, according to the nearly unanimous opinion of the cotton trade, has made close to $1,000,000 in the market in the last month. Price has been carrying from 200,000 to 400,000 bales of cotton, and on Wednesday it is believed he sold about 150,000 bales. "Price has done what practically no other cotton leader has ever done," said one cotton man; "he hasn't overstayed his market. Hardly anyone has ever made so much money in so short a time and got away with it."

Sandbag Story to Cover Theft

New York, July 29.—William E. Lisende, postmaster of Mariners' Harbor, S. I., was arrested, charged with being short in his accounts. On July 5 Lisende reported that he had been sandbagged and robbed of a large amount of money and stamps. The story was investigated and an inspector reported that Lisende had systematically entered on his books as being in his possession stamps that he had sold, thus taking a large amount of money. Lisende was admitted to bail.

Mann Removes Editor Swayne

New York, July 29.—Charles S. Wayne, managing editor of Town Topics, has been removed by W. D. Mann, owner of the publication. Mann says that Wayne had been, without Mann's knowledge, a promoter of "America's Smart Set." Charles H. Ahle, said to be an agent for "America's Smart Set," is under arrest, charged with attempted blackmail. Wayne on Thursday resigned his connection with "America's Smart Set."

Would Cut Into American Ports

St. John, July 29.—President Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific railway is inspecting the Atlantic coast terminals of the road in this city. He says that he will use his best offices to secure the western export trade for St. John rather than have the wealth of the Canadian west find the world's markets through Boston, Portland and other American ports.

Tangier, July 29.—The Moroccan foreign office has been informed that Germany stipulates that the program of the proposed international conference be communicated to her in advance as a condition of her acceptance of the invitation. France, Great Britain and Spain already have made a similar reservation.

Madison, Wis., July 29.—Wisconsin Democrats to the number of 500 last night gave a banquet to W. J. Bryan. Mr. Bryan said it was too early to discuss the standard bearer of the party for 1908. He said that he was going on a long foreign trip to bring back what he could to promote good government.

Fatally Assaulted by Thieves

Detroit, July 29.—Joseph Moyer, a pawnbroker, was attacked last evening and fatally injured by thieves who caught him alone in his office. The thieves got away with about $600 in money and probably $1000 worth of diamonds. Moyer died without regaining consciousness.

A FAMOUS OLD BRIDGE.

It Is Curiously Decorated With Historic Pictures.

Few places in Switzerland are more interesting than the historic old city of Lucerne, at the junction of the river Reuss and Lake Lucerne, memorable for its historic associations with the heroic legends of William Tell.

Across the river are two wonderful wooden bridges, the Muehlenbruecke, or "Mill bridge," with its quaint pictures of the "Dance of death," and the Kapellbruecke, or "Chapel bridge." This chapel bridge was constructed as long ago as 1333 and for nearly 600 years formed the chief avenue of traffic across the broad but sluggish stream. Anciently the bridge extended its zigzag shape to nearly twice its present length and reached as far as the Hofkirche, or cathedral, whence its name, the Chapel bridge.

In the center of this covered wooden bridge stands the famous octagonal Wasserthurm, or water tower, where in olden times the municipal treasure was stored. For ages it was also used as a prison and among the dungeons as a torture chamber.

But the most unique feature of all consists of the curious pictures in the roof of the bridge. These old pictures—sixty-nine of them—are painted on triangular wooden panels which fit into the pitched roof of the bridge. One after another they tell the most salient facts of Swiss history or portray events in the life of the tutelar saints of the town, St. Leodegar and St. Maurice.—New York Tribune.

TAFFY CANDY.

Why It Becomes White Through Pulling and Working.

You have often wondered and have even gone so far perhaps as to ask your scientifically inclined friend why candy or taffy made from brown sugar or even molasses becomes white by pulling and working. The question is not a hard one to find an answer for, provided you look in the right place, but it is ten chances to one that you have never seen a solution of the enigma in print.

First, the exposure to the air and the friction evaporate the sirup, which contains most of the coloring matter, and facilitate the oxidization of the carbon in the sugar, which is always white. Sugar contains eleven atoms of oxygen to twelve of carbon and eleven of hydrogen. The sirup drained from this same sugar in the refining process not only contains more or less of coloring matter, but has a smaller proportion of oxygen to the amount of carbon.

Still another reason why taffy is whitened by the pulling process is because it is in effect similar to crushing. Pure, clear rock candy, when crushed, has its powers of absorbing light destroyed or greatly impaired, the pulverized portions reflecting all the elementary colors in each ray, which, of course, results in the eye receiving the impression of white light.

Humanity In Prison.

It is true there are peculiar specimens of humanity in prisons—cranks, freaks, degenerates and hardened and vicious characters—but so are there all these outside the prisons mixed in with the other people of the world in the different grades of society. The deliberate professional criminal, with peculiar and pronounced characteristics and forming a different type of man and woman, is too infrequent to constitute a definite class unless he, with many others not in prison, be considered as a member of a diseased class in humanity. Those who do not agree with this impression and persist in believing that there is a distinct, typical criminal class must, if they study society and also become familiar with the inmates of our penal institutions, admit that only a small portion of the class are confined therein.—C. E. Ordway in Atlantic.

Human Nature.

"We tried a new experiment in our town," said the man with silver rimmed spectacles. "We thought that the tendency to vanity was so great that there ought to be some reward for people who were capable of standing aside and rejoicing in the success of others. So we organized a society and arranged for the presentation of modesty medals."

"How did it work?"

"Badly. As soon as a man won one of the medals he would swell up and get so proud that we'd have to take it away from him."—Washington Star.

The Turkish Postman.

Postal conditions in the interior of Turkey are still in a patriarchal stage of evolution. When a postman arrives in a village on muleback he distributes the letters in a public place, giving each his own, and then putting the undelivered ones into the hands of relatives or acquaintances of those to whom they are addressed. Yet it is said that 99 per cent reach their destination.

Descriptive.

Mabel, who was visiting in the country, was sent to the barn, where the hired man was shearing sheep, to look for her grandpa. She soon returned and said, "Him ain't out there; ain't nobody there but a man peelin' sheeps."—Chicago News.

An Expensive Present.

Young Wife—Yes, father always gives expensive things when he makes presents. Husband—So I discovered when he gave you away. And then he went into the library to write a check for the monthly millinery bill.

The Reason.

Stella—Mabel says she doesn't believe everything in the Bible. Bella—Well, you see, her own age is in it.

An International Complication

[Original.]

Emily Thorburn and Emily Kent were two Americans of the new woman type. Being bosom friends and each possessed of a good income, they joined the "innumerable caravan" that in the spring traverses the desert of water between Europe and America, unattended by any escort whatever. In Egypt they fell in with two young Russian noblemen who were finishing their education by travel. Dimitri Maragoff devoted himself to Miss Thorburn. Peter Nevanski was happy when in the society of Miss Kent. When the two young couples parted the men urged the girls to visit St. Petersburg, promising to give them an opportunity to see the inner side of Russian high life. The girls declined the invitation, but the next spring found them at the Russian capital.

They sent their cards to the address given them and waited. A week passed, and no answer came. Then one morning a note was found slipped under the door of their apartments. It was from Nevanski and said he and his friend had been active in the revolution. Maragoff was in prison, awaiting transportation to Siberia, and he (Nevanski) was hunted by the police. It would be impossible for him to call upon them without great risk of implicating them.

Nothing could be more effective in arousing the sympathy of these two girls, who were heart and soul with the Russian revolution. The ancestors of both had more than a hundred years before acted in a revolution of their own, and the girls had inherited the sterling qualities evolved in the struggle for American liberty. Nevanski in his note named an address where a reply might be left (not sent by mail), and the girls, not heeding his warning, wrote him to come and see them, even if he must come in disguise. He came as a peddler.

Now, these two American girls of the new woman type, finding that the young Russians were not in a position to introduce them, as they had promised, to Russian society, laid plans to take the unfortunates to the land of liberty and introduce them to American society. Both women were strong characters and weighed well what they proposed to do. They were sensible of the fact that they were risking a residence in Siberia and that they had but one advantage—that of being American citizens. They acted, not on impulse, but on the generosity of their American natures.

Nevanski had bribed one of Maragoff's keepers to pass communications between them and had made some effort to secure his friend's freedom by the same means. What the girls could not obtain through the American minister, a permit to visit the prison where Maragoff was confined, they obtained by the method most effective in Russia, bribery. They bribed a keeper, and when his superior was absent he took them through as a party of tourists, all they pretended to be. They were on the lookout for Maragoff, and when they saw him a frown from Miss Thorburn checked an expression of pleasurable recognition. As they passed she lagged and slipped into his hand a code (composed of commonplace sentences) pertaining to a matter of escape.

Maragoff's cell overlooked the prison wall. One day the official Nevanski had bribed handed Maragoff a note. Since the messenger had only agreed to transmit noncompromising messages, this one was in the code. It admonished the prisoner to obtain a string and throw it the next night over the wall. He did so and drew up a bundle of clothes, which proved to be the uniform of a prison official. There were also "making up" material and instructions to make himself like his keeper. A knife and some rope completed the outfit. When the keeper came round for the last time during the night Maragoff, who was in bed, feigned illness and called the man in. Then he threw off the bedclothes, pushed the astonished keeper in his bed, covered him with the bedclothes and after getting a gag in his mouth bound him. Taking the keys, he locked the cell and walked down and out of the prison. A carriage was in waiting. He stepped in and was driven away, changing his outer garments and his "makeup" by the way, to the apartments of the American girls.

The next move must be to get the men out of Russia. The question of their using the girls' passports, in disguise, was considered, but the passports would not fit them, even with the best feminine makeup. At any rate, it was thought best for them to run the gantlet to the border, and, after making Berlin a rendezvous at which all were to meet, the quartet separated.

The place of meeting was in an apartment house in which the girls had already spent some time. On the morning of the appointed meeting they stationed themselves at a window where they could see any one coming. At the appointed hour the two friends, arm in arm, came down the avenue, and as soon as the girls caught sight of them they threw up the sash and waved their handkerchiefs, a welcome that was answered in kind by the Russians. In another minute there was a joyous reunion.

Police and prisons being dispensed with, the girls extended a cordial invitation to the men they had rescued to visit America and become acquainted with American ways. But they were both too much interested in the liberty struggle in Russia to go on a pleasure tour.

The reports of a coming double wedding have not thus far been confirmed.

MOORE STEPS OUT

No Longer Employed In the Agricultural Department

JOBBERY IS NOT SERIOUS

Secretary Wilson Has Eliminated 300 Employes For Dishonesty During His Term of Office --Disadvantages of His Labors

Washington, July 29.—George T. Moore, physiologist and algologist of the department of agriculture, tendered his resignation to Secretary Wilson, and it has been accepted. This action is the culmination of a hearing at the department at which it was represented by two representatives of an agricultural publication that Moore's wife held stock in a company manufacturing culture for soil inoculation, while Moore, who had charge of the preparation and revision of bulletins regarding the enrichment of farms, directed farmers to the concern in question for their supplies of the culture.

The resignation under fire of Moore and its prompt acceptance by Secretary Wilson must not be regarded as indicating a change in belief on the part of Wilson. He still holds that his department is essentially sound, and that grafting is not nearly so widespread as the present disclosures would indicate. The secretary, while he is not inclined to minimize the evils that have been discovered, nor shield the guilty, feels that he can bear philosophically what is being made public. Mr. Wilson is the sort of a man who does not talk about his own achievements, and it is not commonly known that in the eight years and five months which he has held his present office he has discharged or allowed to resign 300 of his subordinates, detected in wrongdoing. None of the cases were grave.

By the exercise of vigilance and an alert supervision, nearly all of the various grafting enterprises were nipped in the bud. Holmes was trusted. That is how he escaped detection for so long. In a department with over 4000 employes, including 2100 scientific specialists, no one man can exercise personal and intelligent watch over all of them. That Wilson has detected on an average of one a week in the beginnings of wrongdoing is a record not to be despised. Of these who were found out in their misdeeds, 107 were dismissed and the others whose offences were smaller were allowed to resign. It is felt here that not so much attention would be paid to the present dismissals in the department of agriculture had it not been conducted for eight years without a touch of public scandal.

It may be pointed out that the war department is not free from courts-martial, that the state department has its Bowen and Loomis, that Mr. Hitchcock, in the interior department, has been kept busy with land office and Indian frauds, and that the navy department is even now engaged in the investigation of an unfortunate disaster that may be chargeable to dereliction from duty. In the present state of an imperfect world these outcroppings of dishonesty, grafting and fraud are unavoidable incidents of such a great wholesale business as the government does.

A curious disadvantage that the department of agriculture labors under is a plethora of public money. Nearly every winter congress makes appropriations in the agricultural bill for moneys not included in the secretary's estimate. At every session Mr. Wilson is asked by congress to take money which he does not see his way clear to use.

The agricultural appropriation bill is one of the great "trading" measures. A congressman in a farming district, prompted by his constituents, will discover work in his region which the agricultural department had not found time to consider. He comes to Washington and gets an appropriation inserted. The bill is passed and the secretary finds that money is appropriated to do certain work which he has not the available force to accomplish. But the law is plain, and he must institute the required experiments and expend the money. Mr. Wilson constantly finds himself urging congressmen not to have money appropriated.

Going Before Criminal Court

Washington, July 29.—The refusal of F. A. Peckham, a New York broker, to answer questions before the grand jury engaged in the investigation of irregularities connected with the cotton crop report of the department of agriculture, was brought to the attention of Judge Wright of the criminal court, but the hearing in the case was postponed. Similar action was taken in the case of Moses Haas, who was also before the jury as a witness and refused to testify.

AN ALLEGED FIREBUG

Arrest of Head of the Massachusetts Signal Corps

Boston, July 29.—Captain W. C. Stevens, the prominent militiaman who was arrested yesterday on the charge of setting fire to his house in West Peabody on the night of the 21st was bailed out last night, the securities, amounting to $500, being furnished by a Stoneham man, whose name the police refuse to give out.

Captain Stevens is the head of the Massachusetts signal corps. The house which was burned is a small wooden building owned by him and insured for $1450 in the Royal Insurance company of London.

According to the terms of the policy a man shall always sleep on the premises. Eben A. Larrabee, who was employed as caretaker, says that on the night of the fire Stevens visited the place and sent him on an errand to procure some food. On his return the two men went about the property and then Stevens left. After he had gone Larrabee saw a light in the furnace pipe. He threw a bucket of water down the register, but this did not quench the flames. He took the register off, and inside he found a candle burning in a pile of rags and papers. He extinguished the blaze without assistance.

The next day Larrabee told of the fire to neighbors. They told the police and thus it reached the ears of the state officers, who immediately began an investigation. Stevens was taken into custody at his office.

Sought Revenge In Murder

Waterbury, Conn., July 29.—As the result of a quarrel of nearly a month ago over a game of cards, Samuel E. Capabinco lay in wait last night for Antonio and Angelo Soliminti and attacked them as they were emerging from a crowd at the railroad station. Rushing up to Antonio, Capabinco fired three shots in rapid succession at him and he died instantly, with a bullet in his heart. Capabinco then opened fire on Angelo and before he was frightened off one bullet had pierced his cheek and another his head. He is in a dangerous condition, but may recover, it is thought. Capabinco will be held for murder.

Injuries Result In Death

Damariscotta, Me., July 29.—Dr. George B. Woodside died at New Harbor, where he was shot in the head by Arthur McFarland of Boston, 15 years old. McFarland was held on the charge of assault with intent to kill for the October term of the supreme court and liberated upon bail in the sum of $1000.

Practice Torpedo Went Astray

Newport, R. I., July 29.—Steamer Nashua, lying at the Old Colony dock for repairs, was hit by a torpedo. Gunners at the torpedo station were firing a Whitehead torpedo with a practice head. Drowned In Sailboat Cabin

Boston, July 29.—A squall struck a small sailboat in Dorchester bay, off Savin Hill, and Joseph Cavanaugh, 38 years old, who was asleep in the cabin when the boat was overturned, was drowned. Insurance Agent Under Arrest

Needham, Mass., July 29.—Timothy Alman, formerly employed as the local agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, was arrested here last night on a warrant specifying several counts of larceny from the insurance company.

I GOT THE FIRST PLATE.

Johnny Had It Clutched, but He Had to Let Go.

President Roosevelt, on one of his hunting tours in the Adirondacks, spent a very long day in restless pursuit of big game. At his urgent request the guide conducted the party to the nearest inn the wilderness afforded.

Amusement was created in the presidential party when the chief executive, whose identity had been kept a secret, was given a seat at the family board. It was increased when huge portions of corned beef and cabbage were passed from the head of the table, where sat the host. The first plate to make its appearance was heaped very high. It reached a small boy and got no further. The president sighed to express his envy and disappointment.

"Johnny," exclaimed the host sharply, "that ben't fer you; thet be fer the stranger."

Much to the amusement of all, the president seized the rim of the plate on one side, while Johnny held the other.

There was a moment of doubt.

Then the president, softly and with a twinkle in his eye, but with inexorable decision, leaned over and spoke into the red, resentful face of the hungry boy:

"Johnny," he said, "let go."

Johnny let go.—Success.

THE MILKY WAY.

One of the Great Problems of the Science of Astronomy.

Some of the streams of fainter stars in the Milky Way are very striking and must convince the most skeptical of their reality, says a scientist.

It is possible to draw an arc of a circle through any three stars and a conic section through any five, but where we find ten or twenty stars falling into line not once, but in many cases, and that there is a curious similarity between the strange curves and branching streams which these phalanges of stars mark out on the heavens, there is no room left for doubt that the mind is not being led away by a tendency of the imagination similar to that which finds faces in the fire or sees a man carrying sticks on the face of the moon.

If it is proved that a group of stars is arranged in line or marshaled in any order it would follow that the individuals of the group must be actually as well as apparently close to one another and that they form some kind of system, having all of them had a common origin or been subject to some common influence. What these streams and curves of stars mean and what forces have marshaled them in lines form one of the grandest problems of the future, one that I trust I may live to see unraveled.

CHINESE NEATNESS.

The Man Is Clean Even If His Surroundings Are Dirty.

Next time you are in Chinatown notice the finger nails of the inhabitants. You will be surprised possibly to find that they are generally as clean and bright as though they had just come from the manicure.

As are his finger nails so is the rest of the Chinaman's body. It is one of the queer contradictions about this contradictory people that, although their houses are usually surrounded by a fringe of dirt and although they don't take to modern sanitation a bit, they are very cleanly in their personal habits.

The daily bath is an institution. A bathtub is not necessary. Your Chinaman manages very well with a few cupfuls of water and a wash rag.

He completes his toilet by polishing his long nails, and every day or so he visits the barber, who shaves not only the scanty hair on his face, but also his head and the inside of his ears. If he can afford it, the Chinaman puts on a clean blouse every day or two. It is no accident that these people are a nation of laundrymen. It comes to them naturally.—Washington Post.

Vegetable Ivory.

The vegetable ivory of commerce is an albuminous substance formed from a milky fluid in the fruit of a species of palm indigenous to several parts of Central and South America, but which seems to flourish best in New Granada and Peru. It corresponds to the meat of the cocoanut, which latter is the fruit of another species of palm. When vegetable ivory nuts are ripe they are covered with a brown skin and are bean shaped, the interior being perfectly white and very hard.

Not Sufficiently Definite.

Mother—I told you to give your sister half of that apple, and you have eaten it all yourself. Small Son—I offered it to her and she sucked it a little and then pushed it away.

"She says you didn't."

"Oh, you mean that sister. I thought you meant the baby."

Nothing Articulate.

"You never hear of the Scadwells' family skeleton nowadays," observed Rivers.

"No," said Brooks. "They have accumulated so many bones that everybody has forgotten its existence."—Chicago Tribune.

What It Costs

... AND ...

What It Pays

are two values of newspaper advertising that the merchan has to consider. But the most important thing is

WHAT IT PAYS.

The merchant can get space in papers of small circulation and little influence for a little less money than the same size space would cost in the DAILY LEDGER and the QUINCY PATRIOT.

DOES IT PAY

to throw away the certainty of the profitable returns which are sure to LEDGER and PATRIOT advertisers, because it costs less to advertise in cheaper paper?

World Organization.

We have received from the author, Raymond L. Bridgman, an interesting book of 172 pages, giving an exposition of the marked tendency of the times toward the organization of the entire civilized world into one political body. The author shows that genuine world legislation has already occurred in repeated instances, and that the germs of a world judiciary and of a world executive have begun to grow. He points out the present lines of development toward the formal political unity of the world, and explains the reasonableness of working directly, even now, for the coming world unity.

The world is now without a head and without concert of action. World organization, it is held, will bring order out of chaos, will secure permanent world peace, and will bring so much prosperity that all which has been enjoyed before will seem small in comparison. Recognition of the rights of small nations, justice to the weak as well as the strong, and the development of universal benefits on a large scale are shown to be accompaniments of this new movement which will break down race and class prejudice and establish a permanent condition of society on a far larger plane than the present. Price 50 cents.

EMPIRE THEATRE.

The Empire Theatre dramatic stock company has already gained an established position in the public favor and the remaining weeks of the summer season at this theatre may be counted a success in advance. For next week the Empire Theatre management announces a revival of Bronson Howard's ever enjoyable comedy drama "The Banker's Daughter," a play that has held favor with American audiences for the best part of the present generation. Despite the many years since its first production the interest in its scenes and incidents is as great to-day as ever and the story it tells is full of strong dramatic interest. The staging of this revival will be most elaborate, the ladies of the company will display many elegant toilettes and all the accessories will be of the best and most artistic sort.

Performances are given every evening, with Saturday matinees. The Boston daily newspapers are devoting whole columns to the wonders and glories of "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," which is emphatically declared the best show ever seen there. The Herald says: "The production is simply wonderful. It is a bewildering spectacle of beauty and splendor—a marvel." The Globe says: "It is beyond anything previously seen in Boston." The American says: 'It is a magnificent disregard of money."

Miss Harrison will be supported by a company of three people. Wood, "the somewhat different comedian," with a new line of material; World's Comedy Four, comedians and vocalists; the Mevarros, a trio of skilful equilibrists and acrobats; La Petite Adelaide, a pretty dancer. Why the Mystery Tale Succeeds.

The mystery element enters to a greater or less degree into fiction of every kind. Indeed, it is the base of all literary interest. Primarily we read a story "to see how it comes out," and, other things being equal, the story in which the element of suspense by deft construction and subtle shaping is most successfully maintained will be the most universally satisfying and popular. The mystery tale of today is a story in which the element of suspense is deliberately enlarged and emphasized until it dominates every other consideration in the story. Characterization, atmosphere, emotional values—all become subordinated to the great business of plot development. The marshaling of incident, the succession of climaxes in crescendo order, the cumulative sweep of the narrative while the secret of the outcome is carefully withheld, is the affair here. Like a periodic sentence of titanic size, the tale is unrolled until with the concluding paragraphs the meaning of all that has gone before is made clear.—Lee F. Hartman in Harper's Weekly.

Facts About Bananas.

Under very favorable circumstances a banana plant may give a stem of fruit in nine months, but it generally takes from fifteen to eighteen months for the average plantations to be in full bearing. The life of a plantation varies according to the fertility of its soil and topographical situation. Some soils may need a rest in six or seven years, while others may last practically forever, as in cases where periodically enriched by alluvial deposits. Sandy loam, through which water or rain will freely percolate, is the best soil for bananas. The stalk needs a large amount of rainfall for its successful development, but water must not be allowed to remain on the surface or immediately under the surface of the soil surrounding it, lest the water be heated by the tropical sun and become stagnant, in which case it will kill the plant.—Chicago Journal.

Toothbrushes.

"In the straight toothbrush one thigh bone of a beef twelve inches long and four in diameter will cut four perfect blanks. The same bone will cut only two of these fancy curved pieces. That's one thing that makes the difference in cost between plain and fancy," said a manufacturer. "When the bone is cut to length and shaped, bristles are hand drawn by wire or thread through the brush part, each group of bristles having its own leader. Then they are securely fastened, and the work is finished. When the bristles first go in they are fully three inches long. After being firmly secured they are cut down to the size required. What bristle is best? Well, in some respects that's a matter of taste. It is all hog bristle, but whether soft or hard depends on the user."

Diplomat and Philosopher.

A story is told in Paris of a diplomatist who represented a South American republic a few years ago. There had been so many revolutions at home that the financiers there had no time to send him his salary, but he took this misfortune philosophically, sold all the furniture of the legation except a bed, a table and some chairs and occupied one room with his principal attache, who cooked the meals. Any one who called early on the minister would probably find him cleaning the boots. "What would you have?" he would say, waving a boot expressively. "My poor country is in another crisis and has forgotten us again, but when I go back I shall make a revolution and appoint myself president. Then we shall have our reward for all this self denial."

A Domestic Tragedy.

Divorces are frequently pronounced in America on the ground of incompatibility of temper. In England we do not go so far as that, but I have just heard of a case where an old family servant who married the gardener separated from her husband on exceedingly slight grounds. She said that he would insist on the glasses being turned upside down on the sideboard and that there should be antimacassars on the dining room chairs. And so, as they could not agree, the unhappy pair separated. — London News.

A Friendly Suggestion.

An old man in a Scotch village had a big eight day clock which needed repair, so he took it on his back to carry it to the watchmaker's. As he went along the village street an acquaintance met him, glanced at him and passed on. After he had got about fifty yards away his friend called out to him, "Hi!" Back went the old man laboriously to where the other stood. "Man," said his friend, "would it not be far handier if ye carried a watch?"

A Little Tale From Fairyland.

"Just by way of experiment," said the first fairy, "I appeared to ten men at random and asked them to make a wish, and seven of them wanted to know how to play the races."

"Ah!" said the other elf. "Only seven? But, I presume, the others thought they knew."—Punch.

His Weak Point.

A man was killed by a circular saw, and in his obituary notice it was stated that he was "a good citizen, an upright man, and an ardent patriot, but of limited information regarding circular saws."

Gave the Bride Away.

GRAND CLAMBAKE

Enjoyed at Granite Men's Outing.

An Interesting List of Sports.

Many Attractions of Crescent Park Enjoyed.

The Granite Manufacturers' Association of this city went on their annual excursion on Saturday to Crescent Park, R. I., accompanied by the Granite Association of Barre, Vermont, and a few prominent granite dealers from other places, making a very large and enthusiastic party.

Before leaving Boston the members and guests were each presented, by Geo. F. Elcock with a handsome dahlia raised at his residence on Copeland street, West Quincy. Some of the flowers were very large and beautiful and made a very attractive buttonhole bouquet. Mr. Elcock takes great pleasure in raising beautiful dahlias, and imports the bulbs from Europe, and the granite men were much pleased with his gift.

They left Boston at 8.25, three hundred strong, in a special train and after a pleasant ride of fifty miles, in seventy-five minutes, arrived at Crescent park, one of the most attractive summer resorts along the Rhode Island shore.

The company were met at the Park station by the Banda Napoli band, and marched to the field inside the grounds, where arrangements were made for a grand base ball game, between the Barre boys and the Quincy boys.

Before the game commenced, however, it was decided that there must be some large photographs taken for mementoes of the day, and W. W. Perry of the firm of Perry & Jones of Barre, Vermont, was called upon to do his best. He succeeded in taking a number of large fine views of the company, and some smaller ones of groups.

Then the exciting base ball game commenced. The Barre boys had come prepared to give Quincy a good beating; but unfortunately the rain prevented. After only a few innings the rain drove all from the field; the score being 5 to 1 in favor of Quincy.

There were numerous showers during the day, some quite heavy, but no thunder or lightning to frighten the timid ones, and as there were numerous buildings where there were entertainments going on all the time, all had a chance to get under cover and enjoy the indoor attractions. As there is a great variety all spent the day very pleasantly.

There are a very few places in New England, if any, where there are more attractions to delight and please the visitor than at Crescent Park. One day is not long enough to visit all the shows gathered at this point to amuse the thousands who go there for health and recreation.

Between the showers the various games were indulged in by members of the associations.

In the 200-yard dash William Prout was awarded the prize—a scrubbing brush.

In the tug of war the Quincy team took the prize—a gingham apron.

In the 150-yard dash between Frank Morrison, Patrick Mannock and George Clark the latter took the prize,—a Zolo doll.

In the 100-yard dash Eddie Martin was awarded the first prize,—a lady's black belt, and Fred E. Goss the second prize,—a black baby.

In the 50-yard dash Richard Prout was awarded the prize,—pair of corsets.

In the three legged race George Clark took the prize; a child's unmentionables.

As the prizes were given out they occasioned much merriment.

At 1 o'clock the party were summoned to the large dining hall of J. E. Lewis, where one of his excellent shore dinners were served.

About 350 hungry granite men were soon at the tables, and you cannot estimate the amount of attractive food furnished by the caterer, that was disposed of during the next hour. To help the party do justice to the menu, a band discoursed music and was frequently encored.

Tax Rate of Quincy IN THE Daily Ledger Tomorrow.

WELL ENDORSED.

New Master Mechanic at Fore River Yard is from Brooklyn.

John Nolan, the new master mechanic at the plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, comes well endorsed from long service in the Brooklyn navy yard. He arrived in Quincy about July 20 and with his wife and two children is stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Timothy O'Connell of Summer street previous to going to housekeeping.

The New York Journal reported his departure from Brooklyn as follows:

In the withdrawal from the government service of Mr. John Nolan, formerly of this city, master mechanic in the department of construction and repair at the Brooklyn navy yard, the government feels that it has lost a most valuable employe.

Mr. Nolan, who is well-known locally, where he has a large circle of friends, which he won during his connection with the department of construction and repair in the navy yard here, has resigned from the Brooklyn yard after twenty-five years' service in the construction and repair department.

He entered the employ of the government in the navy yard in this city, and during his connection with the construction and repair department he has introduced many improvements in the technical appliances of vessels of the cruiser and battleship class, as well as other craft, and has, in placing these inventions in operation, won high estimation of government officials.

Mr. Nolan was a favorite among his subordinates and fellow workmen at the Brooklyn yard, and won the title of "champion of fair play" among the mechanics, who feel, in the withdrawal of Mr. Nolan, that they are losing the best foreman that they have served in many years.

Last Saturday night a few minutes after 5 o'clock Mr. Nolan was tendered a reception in a hall convenient to the Brooklyn navy yard, and his subordinates toasted him to his future health and prosperity.

During his connection with the government service he has been very closely allied with his superior officers and had the confidence of them all, according to the statements of workmen coming from the Brooklyn yard to this city.

It is understood that Naval Constructor Baxter, head of the department of construction and repair in the New York yard, very reluctantly forwarded Mr. Nolan's resignation to the Secretary of the Navy, and in doing so endorsed it with his commendation of the retiring master mechanic's ability.

Mr. Nolan resigned from the government service to accept a position with the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, at Quincy, Mass., in the same capacity that he worked at Brooklyn.

THREE TO NOTHING.

Quincys Shut Out Holyokes at Association Foot Ball.

A grand association football game took place on Ward Three playground Saturday between the Holyokes, champions of Western New England league versus the Quincy.

The strangers kicked off the ball against the wind and after five minutes of some brilliant playing on the part of the Quincys, Tom Robertson scored from the 20-yard line. The Holyokes seeing they had a worthy foe, began to play desperate and but for the splendid defense of Quincy might have scored. By a piece of splendid play between John McDonald and Danny McDonald of the Quincys, passing the ball from one to the other the whole length of the field and finally to the right wing. Sam Wright, who scored number two with a beautiful shot which the goal keeper couldn't hold. David Arthur scored number three with a low shot. The game ended with the score 3 to 0 in favor of the Quincys.

The Quincy team lined up as follows:

Goal,—A. Collins.

Backs,—J. Cordiner and J. Fletcher.

Half backs,—J. Craik, W. Orme and T. Robertson.

Forwards,—J. McDonald, D. McDonald, D. Arthur, A. Craig and S. Wright.

John Pritchard made a splendid referee following the ball all the time.

Linesman,—A. Brown.

Attendance,—800.

Caught in Machinery.

Melville Woods, a machinist at the Fore River works, had his hand badly jammed on Sunday. He was working about a motor boat when his hand became caught in the machinery. He was removed to the hospital.

Sunday Fire.

The alarm from Box 74 at 12.43 Sunday was for a fire in the cellar in Edison street, probably caused by children playing with matches. There was no damage.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The weather of July suggests the small boy's definition of our temperate climate as one that is too hot to live in when it is summer and too cold in winter. Surely such a climate ought to produce cranks—in the good sense of the word, of course—and it does. Doubtless such extremes keep us on the move and so we are stimulated to greater exertion; whereas in a long continued "spell of weather" we should become so accustomed to the conditions that we should sleep mentally as well as physically.—Sciolus in Milford Gazette.

☞That is a hard situation in certain towns on the Vermont border, which are now supposed to be over the line in Canada. It will not be an easy affair to straighten out, if the surveyors are right in their location of the line. The people who have been considering themselves Yankees now find they are Canucks. What will they say—what will they do? Can a treaty be made with Great Britain for the cession of the territory that is now found to be a part of the Dominion of King Edward? If so, it will be at the expense of some of the territory of the United States in another place. It is intimated that a condemned murderer will go free if the new boundary stands. It is a curious condition that the surveyors have created.—Lynn Item.

Flood Sweeps Down Upon Connecticut Towns

RESERVOIRS GAVE WAY

Two Houses, a Bridge and Several Vessels Carried Off by Rushing Waters--Explosion Adds to Confusion--Lives Lost

Bridgeport, Conn., July 31.—Loss of life and immense damage to property followed the brusting of reservoirs north of this city as a result of an unprecedented fall of rain. The precipitation in a series of showers which struck acrosss Connecticut reached a total of seven inches in this section, a downfall which overtaxed the city sewers and caused the flooding of cellars of business buildings in down town streets.

North of here, in the towns of Easton and Trumbull, the rainfall was even heavier, and so quickly did the water rise at the dam at Ward's mill at Easton that the dam went out at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, sending a great body of water down through the town of Trumbull. In a short time the dam at the paper mill reservoir broke and the body of water swept down into Berkshire pond. There was no warning to the people who lived on the banks of what is usually a small watercourse.

The house occupied by John Lesco, his wife and several children was picked up by the flood and carried a mile below. The Lesco family were asleep at the time, but all were rescued after a perilous journey. A house occupied by Michael Moran was hurled against the Berkshire bridge and smashed into kindling wood and it is believed that Moran was drowned. Police and firemen went to the rescue and saved several lives.

Inside of an hour the great body of water which had been sweeping down from Easton had reached North Bridgeport and was pouring down under the Berkshire bridge. It caught the harbor craft which was moored just below the bridge unprepared and several hawsers gave way under the strain. The barge Clara was torn away from a dock and carried against a bridge and later under it. Captain Keneally of the barge and his family were rescued. While the Clara was down stream schooner Hope Haynes, from Bangor, Me., was torn from her mooring and was being driven down stream in the wake of the Clara. She brought up against a bridge and drove her jibboom through the structural work and tore down the electric light wires. The escape of current from the wires and the flashes, as the live ends touched the pavement, set fire to the gas which was escaping from a broken main. This brought an explosion which shook up the entire neighborhood and brought out the fire company. The fire communicated to the barge and the Hope Haynes, but was soon extinguished.

Several schooners and barges were torn from their moorings and drifted down stream.

At the time that the reservoirs at Easton and Trumbull were emptying themselves the flood had caused the overflow of Pembroke lake, in another part of North Bridgeport. The water swept against the Barnum avenue bridge and wrecked it just when an icewagon was crossing it. In the wagon were William Kowzeski and John Starkin. The wagon and horses were swept away and Kowzeski was drowned. Starkin was swept out of the wagon and was able to swim ashore.

The trolley service in the city proper for a number of hours was almost at a standstill and the telephone and telegraph service was impaired greatly.

Tried to Cover Robbery by Fire

Boston, July 31.—About 11 o'clock last evening, while Jacob Wallman, 15 Oakdale street, Jamaica Plain, was away visiting with his family, his house was entered by thieves, who, to cover up their work, it is believed, set fire to the house. William Miller, who lives next door, claims he saw a lantern passing back and forth through the rooms.

Turkish Procrastination

Boston, July 31.—The annual report of the American Bible society's agency in the Levant states that the vexations of the censorship by the Turkish central government still continue. Despite the understanding with the American government, the agency has been waiting more than six months for the approval of an Armeno-Turkish Bible.

Discontent In Russian Army

St. Petersburg, July 31.—The Novoe Vremya publishes a report from Khersu that there is great discontent among the reservists in Manchuria at the distress inflicted on their families because the authorities have failed to provide proper support for them. This outspoken admission from a Russian source is looked upon as significant.

Parliament Will Not Dissolve

London, July 31.—The Daily Telegraph makes the authoritative announcement that parliament will not be dissolved this year unless the government is again defeated before prorogation.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—General Stoessel has been relieved of command of the Third Siberian army corps.

IS NOT TO RESIGN

Wilson Will Remain In Agricultural Department

THE WAR ON GRAFTERS

Every Bureau Will Be Inquired Into With View of Ascertaining Whether Any Taint Exists --President Is Not Interfering

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 31.—Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture is expected at Sagamore Hill today. His visit will enable him to discuss with the president the situation in the department as it relates to the investigation now in progress. All rumors of the intention of Secretary Wilson to resign may be put aside as merely conjectural. The secretary has no present intention of leaving the cabinet and the president knows of no reason why he should resign.

The president, it may be said, reposes implicit confidence in Secretary Wilson and is thoroughly satisfied that he will solve the difficulties now presented to the entire satisfaction of the chief executive and of the country.

It is probable that Secretary Wilson would have come to Oyster Bay before had it not been for the unsettled condition in his department, which rendered it practically impossible for him to leave Washington. He is pressing every phase of the investigations now in progress and will develop every fact which the country ought to know. That the president is confident the secretary will purge the department of any scandal that may attach to it is evidenced by the fact that he has not interfered with the pending investigations. All matter brought to his attention has been turned over to Secretary Wilson, with instructions to inquire into them. This the secretary has done and his work has the approval of the president.

It is the determination of both the president and Secretary Wilson to clear the department of agriculture of every form of "grafter." To this end the likelihood is that every bureau of the department will be inquired into carefully with a view to ascertaining whether any such condition exists as was developed in the bureau of statistics. Quietly, but effectively, Secretary Wilson has been working to this end for many months. Many employes of the department have been dropped from the rolls, practically without the knowledge of the general public. Some have been dismissed outright, while others have been permitted to resign. Assurance is given that no stone will be left unturned to eliminate every taint of scandal on the department of agriculture.

Still For Municipal Ownership

Boston, July 31.—Several thousand persons heard Mayor E. F. Dunne of Chicago deliver an address on "Municipal ownership" at the annual outing of the Tammany club, a local Democratic organization. Mayor Dunne dwelt particularly on the Chicago campaign in the direction of municipal ownership and said that the movement is advancing with tremendous strides all over the United States. He declared that the time of municipal ownership is not very far off.

Sequel to a Christening

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 31.—Bloodshed was the wind-up of a christening at Georgetown, a foreign settlement, last evening. During a scuffle in the street, John Muscavage ran into his house, procured a shotgun and fired into the crowd. A woman and her infant, which she was carrying, were seriously wounded. Muscavage was arrested. Two unknown men were also shot and clubbed, one fatally.

Killed by Fall Down Stairs

Fall River, Mass., July 31.—The body of Ellen Monahan was found at the foot of a flight of stairs at 144 Spring street. The head and face were badly bruised, but the police are satisfied that the woman met her death by accidentally falling down stairs. An autopsy will be held.

Threatened Strike of 60,000

London, July 31.—A strike of 60,000 Lancashire cotton operatives is threatened, owing to the masters' refusal of a 5 percent advance in wages. A ballot on the question of strike was taken, but the result of this ballot will not be made known until tonight. The indications are, however, that a majority favor a strike.

Fatal Fall Into Bulkhead

Spencer, Mass., July 31.—Peter Harper, 59 years old, fell into a bulkhead in the rear of a block on Main street and his body was found there some hours later. Medical Examiner Norwood says death resulted from hemorrhage of the brain and that the man was instantly killed.

Off For Cooler Clime

Utica, N. Y., July 31.—Secretary of State Root and Colonel Sanger, former assistant secretary of war, accompanied by Mr. Root's two sons, have left Utica for St. Johns, and from there will sail for Labrador. They expect to be absent a month.

Sand Bar Held Up Steamer

Boston, July 31.—A dense fog and high sea put the steamer Prince George ashore on a sand bar in the lower bay. No damage was done to the steamer, which brought 100 passengers in a rough passage from Yarmouth, N. S., and landed them a few hours late.

HUB GAMBLING RAID

Society Leaders and Two Wagon Loads of Outfit Taken

Boston, July 31.—Two fashionably clad society women and seven well known professional and business men of the Back Bay were surprised in the house, 26 Bickerstaff street, shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday morning in a spectacular gambling raid by officers from station 16. The women were not in the room where the gambling was going on when the officers entered, and were allowed to depart.

A carriage was telephoned for and the two women were driven to their homes in a hysterical condition. The seven men were all taken to the station, where they gave various addresses and were promptly bailed out.

The room where the game was in progress was divested of its luxurious furnishings, two wagon loads being taken away. The furniture and fittings in the other rooms of the house were not disturbed.

The police gained entrance to the place by a second story window, using a ladder for the purpose.

Profane Parrots Locked Up

Boston, July 31.—Charged with profanity, six Brazilian parrots are locked up at station 4. The officers of that station were tempted many times last evening to charge them with murder and break their necks without trial. Held captives in three cages, the six parrots had a fine time yelling pet names. The parrots were well educated, as they had a wonderfully choice flow of Spanish and English swear words. Officers arrested two Greek sailors on the charge of pedling on the Lord's day. The two sailors were trying to sell the parrots.

Murderous Assault Charged

Rumford Falls, Me., July 31.—Salvadore Crecadio and Antonio Smodelo are under arrest here, charged with murderous assault upon Francisco Drucisco and his wife, Josephine. It is alleged that Smodelo stabbed Drucisco about the neck and shoulders, while Credadio is charged with having fired several shots at the woman. The woman escaped injury, and it is believed that Drucisco will survive his wounds. The alleged assault is said to have been the result of jealousy.

White Figures Startled People

West Newton, Mass., July 31.—The police are endeavoring to learn the identity of the boys who, near the River street cemetery last night, darted out from behind trees and scared horses, automobilists and pedestrians. The boys were draped in white sheets and wore masks which were later found in the cemetery, where they had been abandoned when the boys were pursued. The masks and sheets were taken to the station.

Fire In Abandoned Citadel

Boston, July 31.—The harbor police were called upon to extinguish a fire in the old citadel building on Governor's island, in Boston harbor. The fire was started in some empty packing cases and lumber in the "keep," and was restricted to the rubbish, the roof and inside portions of the citadel being saved. Governor's island was at one time Fort Winthrop, once a notable point of defense, but it has long since been abandoned.

Suicide of Woman Physician

Boston, July 31.—Despondent because of the failure of a business venture and disconsolate because of the loss of near relatives by death, Dr. Melva F. Longfellow, a nerve specialist, committed suicide at her office, 172 West Brookline street. She had attached a rubber tube to a gas jet and inhaled the poison. She was 44 years of age and a duly registered physician.

A Schoolteacher Astray

Wolfboro, N. H., July 31.—For six days campers at Lake Winnepesaukee and inhabitants of this town have conducted an unsuccessful search for Miss Mary A. Tucker, who disappeared from her cottage at Camp Ossipee. Miss Tucker is a high school teacher in Providence and overwork had once made it necessary for her to go to a sanitarium.

Killed by His Young Son

Lee, Mass., July 31.—John Benedict was shot and instantly killed by the accidental discharge of a revolver in the hands of his 10-year-old son. The two were hunting when the accident happened. Benedict was formerly a paper manufacturer, but had recently conducted a poultry farm here. He was 40 years old.

Grocer Relieved of $830

Lynn, Mass., July 31.—While T. D. Arcangelo, a grocer, peacefully slept a robber entered the house by picking the rear door lock, and departed with a pair of trousers which hung over a chair, containing $830 in one of the pockets. The trousers were found on the front lawn.

Strangled by Piece of Tripe

Fall River, Mass., July 31.—A piece of tripe which lodged in the windpipe caused the death of Martin Traverse, aged 23. His body was found in the rooms of the Priscilla club by one of the club members. An autopsy disclosed the cause of death.

Derelict Blown Up

Chatham, Mass., July 31.—The derelict schooner Nimrod was dynamited by members of the United States engineer corps from Newport, and it is thought that they were successful in removing her as a menace to navigation in Pollock Rip slue.

Schooner Waterlogged

New London, Conn., July 31.—Schooner Nevinger went ashore on the east end of Gull island during a heavy fog. She is full of water, but it is believed she will be pulled off.

WASHING WITHOUT WATER

Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.

Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?

If you did what would you say of him?

It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of Dandruff and to prevent Baldness by feeding the germs which cause it, with Canthrarides, Vaseline, Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so-called Hair Vigors.

Newbro's Herpicide is successful because it attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots.

It is the original and only genuine scalp germicide manufactured.

STANDS BY JAPAN

England Will Endorse Any Action by Her Ally

IN NO HURRY FOR TRUCE

Neither Will She Take Any Action Looking Toward Moderation of Japan's Peace Conditions--Sakhalin May Prove to Be Serious Stumbling Block

Washington, July 31.—Japan comes to the Washington conference assured that, whatever her peace terms, they will have the sympathetic approval of Great Britain. Several suggestions from Washington to London that the cause of peace would be served by an expression to Japan from her ally favoring moderation in her demands upon Russia have not availed to change the British government in its apparently unalterable determination to stand by Japan, however severe she makes her condition of peace.

Nor has the British government seen its way clear to render assistance to Washington in the efforts which this government is making to obtain an armistice. Advices reaching here show that London is opposed to an armistice until Japan has been satisfied that Russia's plenipotentiaries are prepared to do more than discuss means of ending the war; if Russia is ready to conclude peace and has so empowered her plenipotentiaries. Great Britain, it is believed, might favor an armistice, but even in such event it is said she would not be willing to offer Japan advice upon the subject.

As understood in Washington, Lord Lansdowne's position is that as the loyal ally of Japan Great Britain can afford to take no step or assume any attitude that would in the remotest degree redound to the advantage of Japan's enemy. However much London may wish peace for humanitarian reasons, her loyalty to Japan, whose pledged ally she is, prevents her from even indirectly bringing pressure to bear by suggestions, advice or otherwise at Tokio regarding the negotiations, the effect of which might serve to moderate Japan's peace conditions or hasten a truce. When Japan asks her ally for advice the London government, it is said, is prepared immediately to give it, but this advice will be based on Japan's interest as a primary consideration.

Nor is this attitude on the part of the London government misinterpreted in Washington as indicating that its officials do not share in the wish of the neutral powers for peace. It has been made plain that the activity of the president has the full sympathy of the British people, although their first thought, it is declared, must be in the interest of their ally.

At the same time, the London government in its exchange with the American embassy in London has not hesitated to declare its confidence that Japan's terms will not be unreasonable, viewed in the light of the results of the war.

Believing, as official Washington does, that Japan will not insist on the dismantlement of Vladivostok, should Russia fail to agree to it in return for the neutralization of Port Arthur, the cession of Sakhalin, which, it is understood, will be among the essential conditions, will, the officials here believe, prove the most serious obstacle to peace in the Far East. Sakhalin had not been captured when the president initiated his efforts to bring the belligerents together. The fact that up to that time Japan had not taken a foot of Russian territory simplified, in the opinion of Washington and Berlin, the problem of bringing about peace negotiations. It is understood from a source which is well informed that Russia will vigorously oppose the cession of Sakhalin.

Keen interest is felt here in the negotiations between Japan and England looking to the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. The scope of the alliance, it is known, will considerably exceed the present union.

Japs Kill Over 200 Russians

Tokio, July 31.—The following dispatch has been received from the Japanese army headquarters:

"Our independent cavalry which entered Rykoff (on Sakhalin island, 45 miles northeast of Port Due) July 27 withdrew on finding order in the city unfavorable to its occupation. Our army, intending to crush the enemy's forces before they retreated from the eminence west of Rykoff, commenced to advance at 3 a. m. of July 28. The van, together with an independent body of cavalry, advanced by forced march, attacking and dislodging the enemy holding the northern extremity of Rykoff and rushed into the town. Confused street fighting ensued, but the town was completely taken at 8:30 o'clock in the morning.

"The enemy's main strength, which opposed our right column, fled in disorder southward, taking the short route leading to Pareono.

"On July 28 a detachment which was sent south in pursuit of the enemy met the enemy's infantry, some 800 strong, at a point six miles south of Rykoff and killed over 200 and captured 500.

The enemy's strength opposed to our right column was of some 3000 infantry and four guns and four machine guns, and that opposed to our left column some 2000 infantry and four guns.

"The enemy's loss in trophies is under investigation."

HAVOC BY LIGHTING

Strikes In Midst of a Crowd, Killing Five Persons

New York, July 31.—During a thunderstorm of terrific intensity which passed over New York, five persons were struck by lightning and instantly killed and nine others seriously injured at the Parkway baths at Coney Island. At the same time one man was killed and three were prostrated at Gravesend beach.

The intense heat of the morning attracted a great multitude to the shore resorts and late in the afternoon, when the storm blew up from the westward, the Parkway beach was thronged with bathers and spectators. When the rain descended in torrents hundreds of men, women and children sought shelter under the big bath house, which is elevated above the sand on piles. Lightning and terrific thunder claps were incessant. A few minutes before 5 o'clock a bolt struck the flagstaff of the bath house and grounded in the very thickest of the crowd. Nearly 50 persons were prostrated and the rest, screaming with terror, rushed out into the storm. Those who had remained in the water were also panic-stricken and fled in all directions, not daring to enter the bathhouse, which appeared to be on fire.

Ambulances were summoned from all the nearest hospitals, and on their arrival five persons were found to be dead and nine unconscious under the bath house. The bodies of all were scorched by the electricity. The nine injured were removed to a hospital, where it is said that some probably will die. Many persons less seriously hurt were taken home by friends. A slight fire in the bath house was quickly extinguished by the rain.

During the same storm Henry Rensweiler was struck and killed while standing under a tree at Gravesend bay and three men were rendered unconscious.

Highland Light, Mass., July 31.—Two fishing schooners, the Livonia of Boston and the Northern Eagle of Gloucester, ran ashore on the back side of Cape Cod at about the same time, but at points 15 miles apart. The Northern Eagle, however, was freed by the crew of another fisherman.

The Rev. William Barney

[Original.]

At a table made of rough boards fixed between two trees, on seats of the same construction, sat a party of miners at the national game, poker. The coolest man at the table was a sleek looking person of about forty, and the most agitated was a young fellow scarcely twenty-one, with light hair and blue eyes. He had been losing heavily, nearly all his losses passing into the pile of the sleek man.

A ministerial looking man approached the table and invited the players to stop their unholy game and join in religious exercises he was to conduct in a grove up on the hillside. The gamblers paid no attention to the invitation, and the parson, making a virtue of necessity, stood looking on at the game.

A woman—she was not more than nineteen—came hurrying toward the table, leaned anxiously over the blue eyed fellow and whispered something in his ear. His reply brought tears to her eyes. From this time she watched his little pile of chips dwindle and the pile before the sleek man grow.

"Sonny," said the parson, "you ain't up to that. Let me work the rest o' your pile for you."

Every one at the table looked astonished. The youngster glanced up at the speaker and was about to proceed in the management of his own affairs when the woman took a hand in the argument and persuaded him to intrust them to the parson. The surprise at the turn affairs had taken was not unmixed with contempt at the idea of a parson attempting to buck against regulars at the game. Without noticing it he took a seat behind the young man's chips, representing some ten or twelve dollars, and began to play.

It was noticeable that all the large hands were played when the sleek man dealt. At such times the parson kept out. He would bet occasionally, and the pile before him slowly increased. The sleek man watched him for a time, then made up his mind that he would make an easy prey.

It was the sleek man's turn to deal. There was a jack pot to be opened, and it was opened with a big bet. Both the parson and the sleek man came in. When the parson looked at his hand he started. Everybody knew that he had a remarkable hand or was preparing for a bluff. The sleek man knew what cards he held, for he had given him those he wanted him to have. The parson before betting laid his hand face down on the table and said:

"Gents, this yere game is not for one o' my persuasion. I wants y' to understand that I plays for this boy and his wife, who can't afford to lose. I got a hand that ought to help him out—that is, if none o' you have got a bigger one. Suppose we take off the limit."

After this voluntary information every one passed out except the sleek man, who made no objection to raising the limit, and the pile in the center of the table grew rapidly. Something seemed to be wrong with the button that held the parson's back right hand suspender, for he was absentmindedly hitching at it. When he and his opponent were tired of raising each other the sleek man "called." Throwing his hand on the table face up, the parson called "Four jacks," at the same time taking his right hand away from toying with his suspender button and with it a six shooter, which he thrust under the nose of the sleek man. Fixing his steel gray eye on his opponent, he continued:

"It ain't usual for two hands of four of a kind to happen in the same game, and it would be very unusual for two in the four highest hands that can be held to fall in the same deal. If you got four aces or kings or queens I wouldn't recommend you to turn your cards over, for if you got one of them three hands I shall consider it my duty in maintainin' a fair game to shoot."

As the parson spoke he drew the pile on the table toward him and told the young woman to gather it in. She scraped it into her apron and made off with it as fast as she could run.

"I don't play cards and bullets at the same time," said the sleek man, "especially when I hain't been given no time to draw. But I'll go up on the hill with you, and if you'll play a fair game with guns we'll settle it that-away. I didn't reckon on a parson playin' the two games at once. Who air y' anyway?"

"I was Bill Barney before I saw the error of my ways and got converted. Now I'm the Rev. William Barney, at your service."

A scarcely perceptible shudder passed over the sleek man. "Very well," he said; "I'll fight you on the hill, and I'll be there tomorrow morning at the rise o' the sun."

With that he rose from his seat and walked away, the parson keeping an eye on him till he was out of sight. Every one present knew that he had gone for good. Bill Barney before his conversion had been the worst man in the territory to tackle, and no one had ever tackled him successfully.

After the sleek man's departure the parson turned to the man whose money he had saved and said:

"Young feller, don't make a fool of yourself again with card sharpers, but give your money to your wife to keep. Now come up to the meetin' and return thanks for the kindness the Lord has sent you. Come, gents."

Although the invitation was given simply as such, every one present obeyed it as an order. One man of a curious mind lagged behind and turned over the sleek man's cards. He had held four queens.

The Rev. William Barney remained a week at the camp, holding meetings every day. The sleek man did not appear.

THE NEXT TIME

He Rides to a Fire in Quincy He Will Walk.

Mayor William Barclay of Barre, Vt. who came to Quincy with the visiting granite men, had the experience of his life on Sunday.

He now knows how it feels to ride to a fire at break-neck speed. He has felt the sensation of rounding sharp corners on two wheels while going at full speed, and had his heart leap into his mouth as a collision with another team was narrowly averted.

His Honor was being entertained by Chief Engineer Williams. Just as they were about to be called to dinner an alarm sounded from Box 74.

"Want to go," said the Chief?

"Yes," replied the Mayor.

"Jump in," said the Chief.

And the next instant they were speeding down Franklin street. They turned the corner into School street, and then the Chief let his horse out. They went down School and through Elm street at railroad train speed.

The Mayor jammed his hat down over his ears and hung on for dear life.

There was not more than one wheel under them as they turned the corner into Washington street, and the Mayor thought his time had come, and it would be all over.

The carriage righted itself, however, and away they sped down Washington street dodging carriages and automobiles.

Not once did they hit anything, but he considered it miraculous that he got to the fire with a whole skin.

The Mayor says the next time he rides to a fire he will walk.

Firemen's Muster.

The Hancock veterans of Brockton took the first prize at the hand engine muster at South Boston on Saturday, and the Protector of the same city was second. Cochato of Braintree was third. Seventeen engines competed, the Union of Braintree and the three Weymouth tubs being near the bottom of the list.

NOT FORLORN HOPE.

Ex-City Solicitor of Quincy Will Defend Schidlofski.

Schidlofski, the Braintree barber, who it is alleged murdered his wife in the woods at Belmont, arrived back from Colorado on Saturday, and is now confined in the Dedham jail.

Able counsel has been secured to represent him, when the case comes to trial, in the person of John W. McAnarney, ex-City Solicitor of Quincy.

Lawyer McAnarney had a conference with his client on Saturday and will have another today.

He will have the assistance in the case, of his brothers, J. J. and Thomas, both well known Norfolk County attorneys.

A Boston paper quotes Mr. McAnarney as saying in an interview:

"I had not wished to take the case, in fact, from the newspaper reports I had decided to have nothing to do with it until I had a talk with the man. He has told me a marvellously interesting story, and I have decided to take the case. It is by no means a forlorn hope, though the published reports have all but placed the man in the chair. I consider that he stands a very good chance of better than a first degree verdict."

THEY LANDED HIM.

Through Quincy Twice But Unable to Stop.

Edward Murray, alias Ford was arrested Saturday night after a series of incidents charged with the larceny of $225 from the family of Dennis Ford.

Murray, who is 19 years of age, came from a Boston institution, and had been a number of the family of Mr. Ford for several years.

It is alleged that the boy repaid the kindness shown him by taking $225 of Mr. Ford's money last Thursday and disappearing.

Saturday evening Joseph Buckley and William Kiley, two Quincy young men, saw Edward at the South terminal station.

They took him to the Lagrange street police station. The officers there refused to place the boy under arrest, as they had no complaint against him.

His captors then started for Quincy with him. By mistake they boarded an express train and were landed in Braintree.

While at Braintree Murray got away form his captors and gave them a lively chase but was recaptured.

Again they made a mistake and got onto an express train and were landed in Boston.

They then sought out an officer and told him their story. He took them to station 4, where the situation was explained. The Quincy police were called up by telephone and Lieut McKay went to Boston and brought Murray to Quincy.

Girl Swimmer.

Miss Anna Schillander, the 15-year-old girl who performed the remarkable feat of swimming from Savin Hill beach to the Freeport street baths, on Friday of last week, learned to swim at Wollaston about two years ago.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Schillander of 6 Blanche street, Savin Hill, and has lived in Dorchester but a short time. She takes naturally to the water, and her advance has been rapid, so that she is now looked upon as not only the best swimmer of her age patronizing the Freeport street baths, but there are few of more mature years that can equal her in a swim of any distance under a mile.

The distance of over a mile was accomplished in 36 minutes and 30 seconds, and was witnessed by several hundred bathers at both places. The young woman was showered with congratulations at the finish of her swim. Considering the fact that the world's amateur record for a mile is 24m. 36 1-5s., accomplished by B. Keran, in Australia, the work of Miss Schillander is considered little short of remarkable for a girl of her age. Miss Kellerman, the crack Australian swimmer, has made a mile in baths in 33m. 49s.

Assault with Knife.

There was a stabbing affray at the Casino dance hall at Houghs Neck Saturday night, William H. McPherson, an employe of the dance hall, receiving two cuts with a knife at the hands of Robert Barton.

It is alleged that Barton, who is 21 years of age and resides on Phipps street, Quincy, went to the dance hall and persisted in cutting holes in the canvas which separates the dance hall from the other part of the building.

McPherson remonstrated and finally put Barton out of the building. He immediately came back and struck McPherson in the face. The two clenched and went down. While on the floor it is alleged that Barton drew a knife and cut McPherson in the right knee and in the back.

Barton was arrested by Officer Crooker and locked up. Dr. Jones attended McPherson. The wound in the knee is the most serious one the tendons having been severed.

Old Fire Horse Killed.

Owing to blood poisoning "Joe," one of the best known horses at the central fire station, was ordered to be killed on Saturday night, by the veterinary surgeon connected with the fire department. "Joe" had been in service eight years, and was the center horse of the three-horse hitch of engine No. 1. His last run was made on Wednesday night responding to Box 442 and that night was taken ill. To prevent further sufferings he was shot on Saturday night. He will be greatly missed by the men at the station.
